STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—A Girl Redeemed from Sin has attracted large audiences here this week. Mr. Clinton Baddeley acts with dignity and power as Ernest Sylveston; Mr. Walle Spinner impersonates the character of Will May in manly style; Mr. Victor Knight is highly amusing as Jim Jakes, capitally supported by Mr. Max Dooley as the Hon. Bertie Boyes and Miss Ada Oxley as Peggy Grey. The Prison Governor has a capable representative in Mr. John Turpin; and Nancy Lee is charmingly played by Miss Olive Fulton.

EMPIRE. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—The Venetians, in a vocal act with dioramic effects, give a pleasing entertainment, and meet with much appreciation; in The Crazy Cook Picitt and Lizette perform magical feats in amusing style; a gratifying reception is accorded Claude Feldman's troupe of prize juveniles; Leah Arden's songs are applauded; Doyle and Gibson are amusing patter vocalists; a laughable sketch is The Doctor and the Patient, presented by Helm and Cozens; the Walonells are smart comedy acrobats; and J. C. Scatter, comedian, is successful.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's company presents here this week a stirring drama entitled A Beautiful Criminal. The play, which is full of exciting incidents, appeals strongly to the sympathies of audiences. A number of the latest pictures are shown by means of Payne's Bio-photoscope.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—This week we have Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company in the sensational drama A Master of Millions. The portrayal of the blunt American who has amassed millions is most ably undertaken by Mr. Grant; the part of Lucy Manners is played in a most feeling manner by Miss Dorothy Wilkinson; Isaacs, the Jewish proprietor of the Garden of Pleasure, is capably presented by Mr. Charlie Clarke; Miss Phyllis Elton is good in her line as the Vampire. Other characters are ably supported by the various members of the company.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Grieveson.—After a lapse of some fifteen years, we have a representation of Dion Boucicault's famous Irish drama, The Shaughraun, a play that is almost unknown to the present generation, and, as put on by Mr. Frank M. Thorne, cannot fail to be appreciated. The good-natured, easy-going Irishman, Conn, in the capital hands of Mr. Frank M. Thorne, is full of racy humour; Mr. James Skea as Corry Kinchela is equal to all demands; Mr. Phil Harper is smartly military as Captain Molineux; Mr. Alexander J. Haviland is excellent as Robert Ffolliott; Mr. Dunlop Stewart submits a dignified portrayal of Father Dolan; Miss Maud Russell is smart and energetic as Claire Flolliott; Miss Phyllis Vaughan's impersonation of Arte O'Neal is exceedingly pleasing; Miss Florence Thorne renders excellent service as Mrs. O'Kelly; and Miss Winifred Burton leaves nothing to be desired in her interpretation of Moya. The remaining parts are all adequately filled, and a special word of praise is due for the excellent scenic and other effects.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Excellent variety is being offered to the habitués of this commodious house, which is enjoying a monopoly of providing this class of entertainment at the present time, the week's bill being headed by Alice Raymond and company, in A Night in Egypt, where opportunity is given for Miss Raymond exhibiting her skill as the champion lady cornet player of the world amidst unique surroundings and effects. A hearty reception is given to Verno and Voyce, who are paying a return visit in their novel aeroplane craze, The Fly-far Man, that provides openings for some musical numbers that receive generous applause; Theresa Ada Silva proves a sweet and talented singer of better-class songs; the Northern Troupe of International dancers contribute some excellent terpsichorean items; Billy McClain and company, with Mlle. Cordelia, appear in the Southern scena, entitled Parson Johnson, in which there are three acts that are well taken; Hall and Earle are an amusing couple of acrobatic comedians; and Carl Lynn is decidedly clever in his mimicry of animal life. There is in addition an excellent show of the most up-to-date films procurable.

OLYMPIA.—Lessees, The Skating Rink Co., Ltd.—Roller skating still continues most popular here, and the last carnival was such a thorough success that the management have arranged for a "Cinderella on the rollers," to take place on the 30th inst.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Dean.—Closed for summer season.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. Evelyn A'Dell and company give a thrilling performance of that domestic drama His Sister's Honour at the Star this week. Mr. Arthur Chisholm, Mr. Walter Steele, Mr. Fred Garrett, and Mr. Willie Barrett were all excellent in their respective rôles, and Miss Lilian Rose, Miss Maude Vincent, and Mrs. E. A'Dell were admirable.

THE EMPIRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—Those princes of humorists, Sam and Will Poluski, head an excellent all-round programme at the Empire this week, and the famous brothers are at the top of their form. Harry Rogers and company appear in a striking dramatic sketch, Told in a Flat, in which the acting is excellent. Mason and Bart are bar performers whose gymnastic display is far above the ordinary; a bright and pleasing turn is given by Nell Emerald; Harry Tate's company in Motoring meet with instant approval; Fred King and Marie Queen are a couple of versatile artists; and Nellie Martell is a comedienne of undoubted talent. The New York Nippers' dancing makes them big favourites, and the local views on the Bioscope are excellent.

TON-Y-PANDY.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—Mr. Carr Loates's company is presenting At the World's Mercy here. Captain Frank Manley is well portrayed by Mr. Terry Davies; the villainies of Jabez Barber are ably exploited by Mr. Carr Loates; Charley Smart, in the hands of Mr. Jess Boxer, is highly diverting; Miss Mollie Bee wins admiration for her sympathetic interpretation of Alice Lloyd; and in the dual rôle of the stowaway and Kitty Knott Miss Cissie Milford is a success.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Stone.—Another good programme is provided here, and is worthily headed by Trick and Trixie. Happy Attwood creates plenty of humour; and Chas. Fields does some clever juggling. Lillian Neville has a well-trained voice; Frank Boyce and Will Evans add to the general success; and several good films are shown.

TORQUAY.—PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, The Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—The Dutch Drolls occupy the boards here this week, and a large audience was present at the opening performance on Monday evening. Miss Gertrude Simpson has a quaint and winsome manner, and is deservedly applauded; whilst Miss Dora Harrison has a rich soprano voice, and renders some original selections in pleasing style. Mr. Lester Carey is a capable tenor; and Mr. George Fox has a talented and extremely powerful voice, which he uses to the best advantage. Mr. Frank L. Hayter is the humorist, and Mr. J. B. Fox does well at the piano.

TYNEMOUTH. — PALACE-BY-THE-SEA.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—One of the best programmes of the present season is being submitted for approval here this week, and is meeting with a well-merited amount of success. The Columbia Comedy Trio are vastly entertaining in the operatic absurdity, Laughter and Song; Miss Katie Moss excels, not only as a vocalist, but as violinist and elocutionist, securing an enthusiastic reception; Musical Silvo is a clever manipulator of the musical glasses, ringing out many popular and well-known items; the Davison's conjuring is smart; and Marlo's juggling feats are warmly applauded; whilst the Stowe Bros. are experts amongst gymnasts. The Palace orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. W. A. Crosse, finds favour; and there is an interesting display of animated pictures.

WAKEFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—Mr. Charles Majilton and company present a diverting sketch, entitled Trippers; Everhart and troupe are wonderful hoop manipulators; the Fordyces are spirited dancers; Sandy and Carl, comedians, gain applause in their amusing turn; the Three Royal Temples, operatic vocalists, sing well; and Little Frankie, juvenile artist, is popular.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Ryder Boys' company is concluding its four weeks' season here this week with David Garrick, The Money Spinner, and Jane. On Monday night David Garrick attracted an appreciative house, and in the title-rôle Mr Leonard Mudie displayed talents of a very high order. As the bluff and hearty Alderman Gresham Mr. Ryder Boys gave a capital character-sketch; and excellently placed were Mr. Henry Worrall as Hon. Tom Tallyhaut, Mr. Harold Neville as Rumbelow, and Mr. Alan Mudie as Snowberry. Miss Elsie Vron was a charming Violet; and in the lighter rôles of Mrs. Rumbelow and Miss Selina Snowberry the Misses Florence Hicks and Ethel Norbury were very successful. The staging and dresses were effective. A pretty little curtain-raiser, On the River, with Mr. Harold Neville as He and Miss Betty Noll as She, was much enjoyed. On Wednesday The Money Spinner attracted a good house, and for Friday and Saturday Mr. Nicholls' farce, Jane, was announced.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Halma is the chief attraction here this week, and this clever juggler accomplishes some remarkable feats; Harry Wright is a smart comedian; and the pictures are all good.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—Another thoroughly versatile entertainment is the order here this week, and the business done is good. Richard Corbin has a remarkable troupe of performing dogs, and for canine sagacity they have not been excelled at this house. J. F. Ellerton provides much amusement with his sketch The Art of Deception; and Shaun Glenville as the Tramp has ample scope to develop his high abilities as a comedian and mimic. The Avolos are remarkable acrobats; Mayne Cannon is a charming comedienne; and Victor Travers' business is good and fresh. The quartette of Les Belles Americanes, vocalists and acrobatic dancers, score well; and Edie Casson and Alexander Wills submit a capital sketch, The Escapade. The Florias are smart equilibrists; and the pictures are not the least attractive of an enjoyable programme. A matinée in aid of the annual staff outing was attended by one of the largest audiences seen in the spacious place, 1963 paying for admission. The Mayor and Mayoress graced the performance with their presence, and the local amateur talent, including Mr. Clay, vocalist; Mr. Victor Roberts and Mr. W. W. Whittle, comedians; Miss Cissy Howard, comedienne; Miss A. Woodland and Mr. Clay, duettists; Mr. Peter Smith, vocalist; Miss C. Cook, clarionet soloist; assisted by professional artists from Blackburn and Liverpool, including Miss Florrie Forde and Mr. Ernest Rees, all assisted in making the initial venture the complete success it undoubtedly was.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Mr. F. B. Woulfe and his well-selected company are presenting here this week the drama The Bells. Mr. F. B. Woulfe acts brilliantly in the rôle of Mathias, his interpretation of the Jew evoking continuous applause; as Walter, Mr. William Meloynge submits a capital rendering; whilst the part of Hans is artistically played by Mr. Bob Anderson. Mr. Clifford Rean leaves nothing undone in his excellent portrayal of Christian; Miss Ethel Griffies makes a charming and clever Catherine; and as Anneti Miss Edith Lorraine scores successfully. Praise is also due to Miss Mildred Eversleigh for her able embodiment of Sozil. For Tuesday and Wednesday The King and the Miller is billed, and on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Robin Hood.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—The fare provided this week is of a capital all-round class. The Four Maisanos, in their manipulation of a multitude of instruments, have always been a great attraction here, and they are gaining fresh honours; David Poole's ventriloquism is indeed clever, his patter amusing, and his facial control wonderful; the Kurios are smart in a knock-about scene, which resolves itself into an interesting exhibition of lightning painting; Mackinnon's Scottish Meisters take well in an excellent vocal extravaganza, interspersed with wholesome comedy; Sam Lowenwirth and Chas. Cohan, the Hebrew comedians, successfully perpetrate a number of capital jokes, ancient and modern; Edie Anderson, a chic comedienne, excels in dancing; Geo. Reeve's eccentricities are distinctly amusing; and Hilda Playfair is attractive.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Miller.—A programme consisting entirely of pictures is being tried here this week. The list contains some excellent films, and those showing A Rogue's Redemption and The Brigands of Calabria are followed with keen interest. Intensely funny are A Catching Complaint, The Brown Family at the Seaside, Acrobats at Play, and a pretty attraction in colour is the film entitled The Flower of Youth.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Motlez are making their first appearance here this week, and were given a hearty reception on Monday. Miss Nora Ottoway's song, "Love's echo," was rendered with much expression; Miss Mabel May's song and dance, "Carriboo," gained a decided encore; very humorous was Mr. Sidney Leighton's sketch, Novelette; he excelled, too, as as a ventriloquist; Mr. Vere Matthews sang "Song of the sun" with dramatic fervour; Mr. Dan Dugarde's banjo solos were cleverly executed; and Mr. Harold Johnson convulsed his audience with laughter with his extremely humorous dissertation on "Mary had a little lamb." Excellent pictures by Pathé Frères are operated on the Bioscope by Mr. John Lambert.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Messrs. Kimberley, Green, and Hilton's capable company are paying a welcome visit here in The Power of the King. Mr. Arthur Hilton acts with consummate ability as Captain Rupert Langrage; Miss Leila Zillwood charmingly portrays Lady Anastasia; the King of Vallombrosa is played by Mr. Charles Whitlock in a dignified manner; Mr. Travis Green sustains the rôle of Crown Prince Oscar with distinction, and is ably assisted in his villainous schemes by Mr. John H. Firmin as General Stenovie. Mr. Milton Drury most amusingly takes the part of Fritz; Miss Georgina V. France is quite equal to the trying rôle of Lady Glorina; and Miss Grace Barton is sufficiently pert as Margot.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Hunt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Marco.—The pictures this week include The Opening of the Franco-British Exhibition, a sensational film entitled A Red Man's Justice, A Jealous Heroine, Storm and Sunshine, Bewitched Boots, Castle Ghosts, and many other beautiful and instructive coloured animated scenes. The programme is varied by Sharon, the famous street musician, whose character studies are greatly relished by the large audiences nightly.

WORTHING.—THEATRE.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. Ernest Benham's London company was here the first three nights with Saturday to Monday. As Lord Culvert Mr. Ernest Benham is excellent; Mr. Osborn Adair is very good as Probyn Dyke; Mr. Ernest Young is a typical clergyman as the Rev. Toop; Miss Frances Wetherall enacts the part of Mrs. Wendover to perfection. On Thursday Mr. Edwin F. Fysher's company appeared in Little Lord Fauntleroy.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jno. J. Scott.—This week the Lynches, American song illustrators, were retained for another week owing to their big success last week; the Bendons prove themselves smart comedy artists; while Miss Kate Don is a refined serio and coon songstress. The animated pictures still continue to be a huge success.

YORK.—OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—There is another very excellent company here this week headed by Frank and Jen Latona, who are repeating the wonderful success they attained on their previous visit, and have scored a veritable triumph. Minnie Hunt is a vocalist of much acknowledged ability, and in conjunction with Rhys Thomas contributes a very merry trifle entitled Her Birthday; Ida Kessanley's performing fox terriers give a neat and humane show; Salida and Vone are expert dancers, a remark which also refers to Ward and Davies; Selbo, the "King of Clubs," at once commands attention and applause for his extremely neat entertainment; Charles Ulrick as a barrel manipulator can have few equals; and a pleasing song and dance are given by Ena Correlli.

CHARLES MATHEWS ON TOUR.

I was sent on a short tour with Charles Mathews, writes Wybert Reeve in "From Life," by Mr. Knowles, of the Theatre Royal, Manchester. We had to play two nights each in Preston, Bolton, Oldham, Leicester, Doncaster, Derby, and Sheffield. In Preston he found his man had left his Sir Charles Coldstream coat behind in Lancaster or London. He was asking me if I had one that would do when a little bandy-legged amateur—by trade, I believe, a shoemaker—the manager had picked up cheap in Manchester, to play servants and messengers, came forward and said, "Don't be alarmed, Mr. Mathews, don't be alarmed, sir; I will lend you my Sir Charles Coldstream coat." His look as he took the measure of the queer-looking, seedy little fellow was something to remember. "Two Richmonds in the field, eh; I must be cautious. Would you oblige me by playing the part, too, sir?" "Certainly, Mr. Mathews, with pleasure; know every line." "Well," said Mathews, "that's more than I do. Send for the manager. You look it, sir—every inch Sir Charles." "And I play it, too, sir." After a little more joking, having worked the conceited amateur up to a pitch of great exultation, he said, patting him on the head, "Never mind, my boy, managers are so exacting, so are the audience. They might not think you quite as good, and might want their money back. I can't afford to give it up just now." And he walked away highly amused.

At Oldham we played in a large hall. There were no dressing-rooms; we all had to dress at the back of the stage, with an old scene stuck up to divide us from the ladies. A small broken screen was set in the middle of the space, as a compliment to Mr. Mathews, for his use, but it was too small and too ragged to be of the slightest use. "Really," he said, on seeing it, "such luxury, and in Oldham, too. Here"—calling to a dirty-looking stage-man—"will you kindly convey this elegant article of furniture to the seclusion from whence it came. Tell the gentleman who conceived the delicate attention to me his overpowering politeness will be ever remembered. Take it up, my good man, and depart." The man walked off with it, very confused as to whether Mathews was serious or not. He amused me with his Shakespearean quotations. Taking up a chair with a cane broken out of the seat, he said:—

"My mind is troubled like a fountain stirr'd,
And I myself see not the bottom of it."

The chair gave way I was sitting on, and down I fell with my legs in the air—

"And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer."

We could not get the jug replenished with water.

"How poor are they that have not patience!"

And so on, making fun out of our difficulties, and making me laugh when otherwise I should have been considerably out of temper. It was a very bad house, and the factory people who formed the audience could as easily have appreciated a Greek play and player as they could Mathews and his pieces, but he was full of fun about them.

We drove back to Manchester in a rickety omnibus, he having a cab to himself. This gave him the opportunity of occasionally chaffing us, as we bumped along on the road. On our arrival in Derby a letter was waiting for me from an eccentric Irish manager I had the misfortune to be under in my early career, a Mr. Huntley May. He had taken a public-house in Sheffield, and enclosed a bill of a free-and-easy twice a week. The bill announced the engagement of the celebrated Irish comedian, Mr. Macarthy, and of Mme. Castaglioni for the Saturday—the first was himself, the second his wife. I knew very little of him further than that he gave me, a young beginner, Iago, Cassius, Falconbridge, Pizarro, and the Prior in Bertram, with two farce parts to study and play in one week. How I got through them I cannot say. At the end of three weeks I left him. The letter I received was to this effect:—

"DEAR WYBERT REEVE,—I see you and Charley Mathews are announced. He knows me; bring him to my house, a first-rate pub. I will take you both in and do for you. A free-and-easy, with special talent engaged, twice a week. The boys will welcome you.—Yours truly,

"HUNTLEY MAY."

I gave the letter to Mathews, and we had a good laugh over the fellow's cool impudence. I said, "He knows you." "Yes," he replied, "and I know him. The old blackguard induced me to go to him, said he had a splendid company, fine theatre and scenery, and the only living successor to Madame Vestris, whom I was naturally very anxious to see. I found a barn of a place, rags of scenes, two old men, and a few grubby boys and girls as actors and actresses, and the only successor to Madame Vestris was the old rascal's wife." It is needless to say we did not patronise his pub.

We played in several wretched theatres during this tour, such as Oldham, Rochdale, Bolton, a theatre with a slaughter-house underneath, and a low concert-room, divided from the auditorium only by a lath and plaster or wooden partition, so that Sir Charles Coldstream was accompanied by distant murmurs of "The pretty barmaid" or "The rat-catcher's daughter." The audiences were not large, but he had the same unfailing good temper. At this time Mr. Knowles, lessee of the Theatre Royal, Manchester, having assisted him out of his difficulties, was "farming him" on a salary; his pockets, therefore, were not affected by the receipts.

No one knew better the secret of his success as an actor than himself. We were talking this over one night at Ryde in 1865, when he said, "I knew the folly of my attempting legitimate high comedy from the first. I was delighted the other night to see a worse Mercutio than myself at the St. James' Theatre, and I said to my wife, 'Well, thank heaven! I have at last seen someone worse than I am.' I never could play Charles Surface. The secret of my success is that I have stuck to original parts—written them myself, or had them written for me—so that people always got the first impression from me. There's a lot in that, Reeve. I never could manage pathos, and so I avoid it; Charles Mathews on the stage, my boy, is a good deal like Charles Mathews off."

I was in Paris at one time and saw him play Plumper in Cool as a Cucumber at the Variétés, Sept. 14, 1863. I had heard at the hotel previously it was not a success, and from what I saw it could not have been; the house was badly attended, and his reception exceedingly cool. He introduced a patter song they did not in the least appear to understand.

Speaking of Ryde, I find the following in my diary respecting one of his visits there:—"Walked out to Quarr Abbey and Woods with Charles Mathews; he was telling me about his management of Covent Garden and Lyceum. What a life!—excitement, poverty; it was debt-slavery and popularity; a character weak and unfitted for business—accomplished—and in the end more sinned against perhaps than sinning—a decidedly disappointed life. I did not give him credit for so much serious thought or feeling." One thing struck me as very singular, he not only told me then, but on several other occasions:—"Writs—I used to have them every day. I hardly ever read them or paid attention to them; but I assure you now, I seriously believe I should faint if one was put into my hand." What a change! and one that will hardly be believed by the world; but I am certain he was sincere.

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT AND THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS.

CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.

In some theatres the bars are sub-let, in which case a contract is entered into for a definite sum payable at certain periods.

It is, however, more usual for the bars to be under the control of the management, and, if this is the case, a proper system of check must be employed.

Waitresses, in addition to selling for the bars, usually show people to their seats and sell programmes. It is important to keep the programme receipts distinct from those of the bar.

Returns should be made by each waitress of her sales at each performance, and the Bar Manager should initial this return when the cash is given in.

Each bar attendant will make a return of sales, and from them the Bar Manager will make up the total return, which, with the other returns, will be handed to the Acting-Manager, together with the cash.

The latter must record the individual returns of the Bar staff if they are paid on commission, so that the amount due may readily be ascertained for entry into the Salaries Book, and be paid at the end of the week.

The waitresses' salaries should be apportioned between the two accounts.

The stock must be taken at frequent intervals by competent stock-takers. Their statement will show the actual consumed stock at cost and selling price, and the latter should agree within a little with the actual receipts. The gross profit, as shown by the books, should also agree approximately with the average gross profit shown by their returns.

Programme receipts are checked by the number of programmes printed and given out. It is advisable to have some form of pin or wrapper fastening the programme, which must be taken off to open the programme, so that it cannot be sold twice.

For cloak-room fees it is best to have numbered counterfoil books having the amount of the fee printed thereon, the counterfoil being given as a receipt for the fee and the article left. A return must be made by each cloak-room attendant, which should be checked with the counterfoil tickets.

CHAPTER III.

As a natural sequence to the successful run of a piece produced in London at the present day, one or more touring companies are sent into the provinces and abroad.

The heavy expenses of maintaining a London theatre often render a production unprofitable, although the piece is a success, but the advertisement thus received enables profitable tours to be made.

The first cost of fitting out a touring company is paid at the theatre. To record the transactions of a tour at the Head Office, a Tour Manager's Cash Account and a Tour Production Account must be opened in the General Ledger, and a Tour Book must be kept.

Special care should be taken to record the cost of the production accurately. For example, where, as often happens, scenery, dresses, and accessories which have been used in the original production are altered and used for the equipment of the tour, a transfer entry must be made, debiting the tour production and crediting the original production account with their estimated value.

On commencing the tour, the Tour Manager is given a round sum of money as a float, which is debited to his account.

There are two methods of dealing with the expenditure:

(1) All receipts are remitted to the Head Office, and the theatre refunds weekly the actual amount expended by the Tour Manager.

(2) The Tour Manager uses the receipts to defray his expenses, and only pays to the Head Office the balance, always retaining the original float. If the expenses exceed the receipts, the Head Office must remit sufficient to re-establish the float.

In both cases the Tour Manager is credited or debited with the sums paid to or received from the Head Office, and the balance of his account will show the profit or loss on the tour from week to week.

The Tour Manager must keep a cash book and make a return to the Head Office each week, showing all receipts and expenditure. Vouchers must be obtained for all payments and sent to the Head Office, as well as authenticated copies of the Box-office returns, to enable the receipts to be vouched.

Authors' fees, when payable, should be paid direct by the Tour Manager.

Advertising paid for by the Tour Manager will be recorded in the Tour Sheet. Where, however, the advertising matter is supplied by the Head Office from stock orders, entries should be passed in the Head Office books, debiting the tour with the proper amount.

SINGING once on behalf of a charity in the North of England, Henry Russell struck up the chorus of his popular song, "There's a good time coming, boys!" whereupon a thin, hungry man, suddenly rising, called out, "Mr. Roussell, can yer fix the toime?" Contretemps of this kind belong to the experiences of most performers. "The Gambler's Wife" was a great favourite with Mr. Russell's audiences. The story is simple. It tells of a woman who lies dying, with her baby at her breast, by the extinct embers in the grate; the husband is away at the gaming-tables. On his return he finds his wife and child dead. Mr. Russell had got to the most affecting portion of this song, and had worked the audience into the deepest silence, when a bony, red-faced woman, jumping up, shouted out, "Wouldn't I have fetched him home!" When such things happen before the scenes, the performer is at least secure in knowing that it is the audience who are in the wrong. But it is otherwise when the incident occurs behind the scenes. Mr. Russell's delivery of "The Maniac" always worked a spell upon his listeners; yet once, in singing this song, a drunken fellow who was at work on the top of the panorama missed his footing, fell on the stage, and rolled unharmed to the footlights, amid a scene of dismay and merriment no singing could control.

SHERIDAN once wrote to desire that Miss Harriet Mellon would call on him. With admirable coolness he told her that a young actress having seceded from his company, Miss Mellon had always been kept "in his mind," as he had formerly said, and had now a chance of taking the absent lady's place, and as a specimen of her declamation, he requested her to read the scenes of Lydia Languish and Mrs. Malaprop aloud from his own play of The Rivals. She felt greatly frightened, and answered, with the naïve, unaffected manner which she retained through life, "I dare not, sir, for my life! I would rather read it to all England. Suppose, sir, you did me the honour of reading it to me?" There was something so unassuming and child-like in the way she made this daring request that the manager entered into the oddity of the matter, and read nearly the whole play to his delighted young auditor. She became so identified with the drama that she forgot all dread of the author, and on his request she read the scenes of Lydia and her aunt with so much spirit that Mr. Sheridan "applauded repeatedly," told her she could play either character, and gave her an engagement.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

HAMON ON SHAW.

In certain recent articles on Mr. Bernard Shaw we have been more concerned to point out what we regard as his aberrations and his careless indifference to fact, than to emphasise those of his qualities which are obvious, i.e., his wit and humour, his observation, and his knowledge of certain phases of contemporary life. It is with pleasure that we print an article from the Nineteenth Century, which lays stress on them. The author, M. Augustine Hamon, says:—

The Frenchman who reads Bernard Shaw or sees him played is first of all surprised. He perceives, indeed, how greatly this drama differs from that to which he is accustomed, that is to say, from the contemporary French drama. On reflection, he perceives that the differentiation is none the less great, if the dramatic work of Bernard Shaw be compared with that of other contemporary dramatists, whether English, Scandinavian, Russian, German, Italian, or Spanish.

In Bernard Shaw's drama there is indeed something indefinably original and personal, which is not found in any other dramatist.

This originality is due to the fact that Bernard Shaw's drama is no offspring of the romantic drama of Scribe, Hugo, the two Dumas, Augier, or the vaudevillists of the same period—in a word, of the French school of the nineteenth century. On the other hand, all contemporary dramatists, both Scandinavian or French, Italian or English, German, or Spanish, are the faithful disciples of this school. Ibsen himself, whom many superficial critics have regarded as quite outside the French orbit, has written plays which may be regarded as models of well-constructed plays according to the formula of the Scribe school. This identity of structure or technique and even of matters causes a strong resemblance between French works whether they are the product of Hervieu, Donnay, Brieux, Fabre, or Bernstein. The spectator who has seen one has really seen all the others. When according to the happy phrase of G. Polti, l'adultère dans le mariage indissoluble, so dear to Dumas, was worn threadbare, the French dramatists threw themselves upon l'adultère dans le mariage dissoluble, and they will use this until it is worse than threadbare. Still it is always the same thing; a few happy hits here and there, sometimes more, sometimes less, a few slight variations in the plot, and the thing is done. In truth, the flavouring alone differs: in one there is a little more pepper, and in the other a little more salt, but it is always the same dish which French dramatists serve us up. Nevertheless, they arrange is so skilfully and so astutely, like past masters in cookery, that digestion alone discloses the fact that we have once more eaten of yesterday's dish.

Foreign dramatists have the same technique and the same manner, only the matter with which they deal is slightly different. This produces an illusion, and gives a certain foreign flavour which causes their work to pass as a real novelty. According to the nationality of the authors, the environment and the characters are Scandinavian, Russian, English, and so on. This difference of environment and nationality of the characters causes the French playgoer, somewhat out of his bearings, not to recognise at first the dish served up to him. But during digestion he perceives that it is still the same dish with Norwegian sauce, or Swedish, Danish, Italian, English, or Spanish sauce.

Nevertheless, among all these dramatic works there are many differences in the details of technique and material. The eternal duel of the sexes remains the corner-stone of the drama, but numerous are the variations which in the shape of diverse arabesques are woven with more or less lightness or heaviness by the authors on this apparently immovable basis. Some adopt the tragic, others the comic style. Others combine the two styles in various doses. In our days and for more than half a century, authors of serious plays are fond of the problem play, in whatever country they were born and live.

The problem play is the logical demonstration of a principle. It is the staging of a plea for or against a phenomenon which is rather social than individual. Our dramatist chooses a subject, and fits in characters to put forward their pleas and views on the subject chosen. Often all or almost all the plays of one and the same author relate to the same subject. Thus the drama of Dumas the younger is, so to speak, the drama of adultery. In the same way Ibsen, for the majority of the plays of his mature period (1868-1886), chose criticism of marriage and the family. But he rises much higher than Dumas, because he reaches a philosophic generalisation which the latter had not attained. Ibsen, a genius, sees in the intestinal struggles of families an antagonism between ideals and the actions of life, between our morals, our social institutions generally and our individual development. He is haunted by the problem of the will. He goes more to the bottom of things, and their very essence appears to him to be bad. Thus the principle of authority seems to him criminal. Society appears to him as restrictive of the individual. The State is the curse of the individual. The latter tends continuously towards his own development. This is the essential theme of all Ibsen's plays, and also of those of Björnstjerne Björnson. With these geniuses the problem play had acquired a social scope which it had previously not possessed and did not possess either with the other dramatists, whether French or other of our time, who are nearer the masters Augier and Dumas.

Side by side with the problem drama there is the drama the sole object of which is either to move the sentiment of the spectator or to excite his laughter. Sardou is a master in the former art with his inexhaustible fecundity, his skill in weaving and unweaving a plot and combining incidents. Labiche was the master of the second style with his vaudeville comedies, which, so to speak, mechanically aroused laughter. Now in this style we have Messrs. Courteline, Veber, and Tristan Bernard. This is all moving or amusing, but nearly always lacks depth. At the end of the play we are almost annoyed with ourselves for having been moved or for having wept, or laughed, so clearly do we perceive the superficiality of this puppet theatre.

Different entirely from these dramas is that of Bernard Shaw, and it is this difference which at first surprises, astounds, and shocks. Hence at the outset many a man among us, all being essentially haters of what is new, like the majority of humankind, will subscribe to the opinion of Monsieur Augustin Filon, who said, "Bernard Shaw serait peut-être un grand auteur dramatique, si ses pièces étaient . . . des pièces." For myself, being essentially a lover of the new, I have examined, scrutinised, and analysed the dramatic work of Bernard Shaw, and his artistic beauty and philosophic depth were thus brought home to me. It is quite evident that Shaw is not a playwright in the romantic style, which was followed by all the European dramatists of the nineteenth century as faithful disciples. He has created a work imbued with the originality of genius. He created it regardless of the so-called rules of the art, to the great discomfiture of professional critics and the public which follow them like sheep. All, on seeing his plays, might have said with Lysidas in La Critique de L'Ecole des Femmes, "Those who know their Aristotle and Horace see that in the first place this comedy sins against all the rules of Art." Perhaps he would answer them with Dorante: "You are amusing people with your rules, with which you bewilder the ignorant and which you din into our ears day by day. I should very much like to know whether to please is not the chief rule of all rules, and whether a play which has achieved its object has not chosen the right path."

SCENE PAINTERS OF THE PAST

BY GEORGE TWEDDELL.

III.

In the last article I left off with Wm. R. Beverly, by many considered as a scene painter (per se) in the front of all; and if we take into consideration his vast experience on the large stages of Drury Lane and Covent Garden, his inventive faculty, exquisite taste, and his great knowledge of all stage effects, combined with executive ability of the finest, and, above all, a master of what artists call "breadth" in painting, we shall find the statement correct. The larger the scale of the work the more important it becomes. Fine details are all very well in their place, but the audience in front do not, as a rule, put up opera glasses to look for fine lines; it is the general effect and colour that gain the applause of the public and where the greatest scenic artists score.

Another very fine scene-painter working at the same period was the late William Telbin, member of the old Water-colour Society, and he undoubtedly was one of the finest artists among scene-painters of the past, and justly divides honours with Mr. Beverly among our greatest masters of scenic painting. The fine scenes in Manfred at Drury Lane, the Steel Castle in the pantomime of The Yellow Dwarf at Covent Garden, and others live in our memory.

As a painter of act-drops and drapery Mr. Telbin has never been surpassed, and I, for one, think never equalled. The one in use so many years at Drury Lane, representing a mass of white satin with gold fringed embellishments and blue drapery, no one has ever surpassed—a work of art indeed; and, again, the act-drop painted for the Queen's Theatre, Long Acre—a charming landscape surrounded with amber satin curtains—the noble satin curtain at Covent Garden, and others spoke of the talent and industry of this accomplished artist.

Mr. Telbin did much panorama work at one time, and was assisted by the fine figure-painter John Absolon; in fact, at one time Grieve, Telbin, and Absolon were in partnership, and they built the painting-room in Charles-street, Drury-lane, now called Macklin-street, at a time this street was of evil repute and scarcely safe to pass through. It is the subject of a chapter in a book called "Gaslight and Daylight," by Sala, who calls it "Gibbet-street," and shows the den of thieves it harboured then; but the painting-room was held sacred, and no one molested the artists unless by mistake.

Here worked as a pupil that erratic genius Mat Morgan, illustrator of "The Tomahawk," afterwards scene-painter at Covent Garden, who went to America, and there became the first designer of the great pictorial posters now so common and so well done. He died in America in 1890. Ed. Dayes (long at Covent Garden), W. Mason, Edwin Yarnold, and others worked here about this time.

Mr. Telbin's son Henry was said to have had much talent, but met with a sad accident while sketching in Switzerland by falling down a ravine in the mountains. A stone marks the place of his untimely end. It proved a sad shock to his father.

One of Mr. Telbin's best assistants and an excellent scene-painter, for a long time at the Theatre Royal, Manchester—H. P. Hall—passed away in Lancashire this year. He was employed at the St. James's Theatre a few years ago. I have had the pleasure of working with him at the Manchester Theatre, and he was certainly an extraordinary worker, so rapid yet so good—breadth and colour excellent—in fact, my ideal of a scene-painter, and in many ways resembling Mr. Beverly in his way of throwing out the "non-essentials." Mr. Hall's brother, Thomas Hall, was also a well-known scenic artist.

Of Charles Marshall I don't know much, except that he was a celebrated scene-painter at Her Majesty's, and his fine work used to be noticed in the Art Journal in the forties. Mr. William Calcott, another well-known painter of scenery, was playing the violoncello in the orchestra at Drury Lane in 1841 when Macready produced Handel's Acis and Galatea, continuing to do so till 1846. He tells us he was so impressed by the fine scenery of Stanfield, which he saw nightly, that he ultimately became a scene-painter, and, as we know, rose to a big position at one time in our profession. His brother, Albert Calcott, was also a scene-painter.

There have been many other very able men. I can do no more than mention in a slight and, I am afraid, very incomplete sketch, some, remembered for a time, we trust—at least in our own profession—like Fred Lloyd, John O'Connor, George Gordon, William Cuthbert, Julian Hicks, John Roberts, John Gray, Charles Smithers, and William Pike (who died recently while engaged with Mr. Ryan painting an act-drop for the Alhambra, in front of his work)—all first-rate scene-painters. Poor Billy Pike! good at everything—black and white artist on the Graphic, oil and water-colour painter, and scene-painter (which, he told me, had taught him most, and which he loved best).

In these little articles I have, I trust, interested some in this branch of fine art, showing artists who rank among our best that have had much practice in scene-painting, and others that have been purely scene-painters to the end and can leave little but a short remembrance behind. Many fine scenic artists are forgotten, and also many excellent actors; and, like the actor, the scene-painter does not always get his chance. If he is compelled to work in a minor theatre and has nothing to work with and nobody of any consequence sees it, then it matters little what ability he may possess. Such has been the fate of many, no doubt. I do not wish to convey that the army of uneducated handy men who call themselves "scenic artists" have any place here, but unfortunately they drag our art down among a certain class, and vile daubing and "Hogarth's perspective" outdone have been placed before people, who I have actually heard remark "It will look well from the front." But there are some who have never been properly recognised, like one I will mention in concluding this little sketch, one John Crawford, a fine artist all round but as a painter of trees and foliage I have never seen surpassed. He was a J. D. Harding in scene-painting in this, yet I suppose few now remember him. Like others, we may say of him—

"Praise he may win; on the keenest inspection
Critics may rave of his touch and his tone.
Still of his name there is no recollection."

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, July 13, the Drama,
"A WOMAN'S PAST."

An excellent attraction is provided by Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Chas. Sandford's company in A Woman's Past. It is evident no pains have been spared in the production, the acting being of the best, and the scenery and mounting much above the average. Miss Maisie Hanbury is very convincing in the part of Bessie, the woman with a past, who is blackmailed by her former lover; Mr. Jerrold Heather well sustains the rôle of David Heath; Mr. Charles V. Sandford is very humorous as Frank Dellannoy; while Miss Mary Mallalieu plays up well to him as Dorothy Heath. Mr. Oswald Craig as Uriah Craven is a villain of the deepest dye, and fully merits the chorus of condemnation he gets; Miss Gertrude Harrison as Clara Darrell is equally despicable; Mr. A. Hamilton Warden makes the most of the part of the cheery Clement Harper. The drama is well received by good audiences.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

MISS HAIDEE GUNN'S MARRIAGE.

Miss Haidee Gunn, who was married on Saturday last to Mr. Frank Royde, made her first appearance on the stage at a matinée given by the late Mr. Michael Gunn at the Gaiety, Dublin, as Iolanthe in King René's Daughter, and as Portia in the Trial scene of The Merchant of Venice, in which she was supported by the Benson company, with Mr. F. R. Benson as Shylock. The late Mr. Macklin then engaged her to play Juliet in the suburbs of London in the Elizabethan style, with Mr. Gerald Lawrence as Romeo. When Mrs. Michael Gunn started a company, which opened at Eastbourne, Miss Haidee Gunn had opportunities of appearing in many parts in the Shakespearian and classical répertory; and she was engaged by Mr. Compton as leading lady, to enact Lady Teazle, Lydia Languish, and other important characters. Mr. Royde, who is the son of Mr. Joseph Howroyd, of Bradford, was a prominent member of the company which Mr. Ian Maclaren and Miss Gunn brought to the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, last season in a Shakespearean repertory.

The wedding took place at Keighley, near Bradford, Yorks, and was a quiet one. The nuptials were celebrated in the parish church of St. Anne, Keighley, from the residence of the bridegroom's father, The High Hall, Steeton, Yorks. The officiating clergy were Rev. Fr. Joseph Russell, P.P., assisted by Rev. Fr. J. O'Connor, of Heckmondwike.

The bride wore a Directoire gown of white chiffon cloth, with a chiffon drapery. The chemisette was made of fine lace with tiny gold bows introduced. A Directoire hat with large white plumes completed the costume, and a white prayer-book was carried instead of a bouquet. There was one bridesmaid, Miss Agnes Gunn, only sister of the bride. She was dressed in a cream lace Princesse robe and crushed strawberry pink hat with long streamers. She carried flowers, and wore an enamel and turquoise brooch, gift of the bridegroom. The best man was Mr. Frank Briggs, of Bradford. The bride was given away by her elder brother, Mr. Brendan Gunn, who journeyed over from Ireland for the purpose.

As the bridal party left the church the organist played a wedding march composed specially for the occasion by Mr. Nabarro, the chef d'orchestre of the Gaiety Theatre.

The happy pair left soon afterwards for Scarborough. The bride's going-away dress was of pale biscuit-coloured cloth, and she wore a Directoire coat and leghorn hat, with chine ribbon and bunches of small velvet cherries.

Amongst those present were Mrs. Michael Gunn, mother of the bride, who was beautifully gowned in pale grey crêpe de chine, and grey crinoline hat, with Bird of Paradise and osprey plumes. Mrs. Howroyd, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in brown cloth, with touches of blue and gold, and lace sleeves. The toque was to match. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Keighley, the latter wearing a champagne-colour gauze Directoire dress, and white lace beehive hat, with gold-coloured roses and nattier blue ribbons. Mr. and Mrs. Palliser, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom, Mr. Lossel, and Mr. Sharpe were also present.

The presents and their givers were:—Mrs. Michael Gunn, gold links and dressing bag; Miss Agnes and Mr. Brendan Gunn, silver cigarette case; Mr. Beresford Gunn, hat-box and cheque; Mrs. Howroyd, cheque; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Keighley, cheque; Sir Charles and Lady Wyndham, hand-pierced silver slippers; Mr. Rupert and Lady Dorothy D'Oyly Carte, ostrich feather fan, tortoiseshell sticks; Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, amethyst necklace; Miss Mary Moore, engraved silver toilet set (six pieces); Miss Violet Vanbrugh, gold and white inkstand; Mr. and Mrs. Weedon Grossmith, pearl and amethyst bracelet; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Compton, silver gilt vanity case; Miss Laird, blue mother-of-pearl fan; Mr. James Lowry, gold mosaic locket; Miss White, silver photograph frame; Miss Finnegan, leather hand-bag; Miss Nellie Manning, silver frame; Mrs. St John Kearney, Mrs. and Miss Egan, gold curb bracelet; Mrs. Leslie, crushed crocodile attache case; Miss Josephine O'Grady, silver pen and travelling inkpot; Mr. and Mrs. Brindley, diamond and sapphire half-hoop ring; Mr., Mrs., and Miss Wisdom-Hely, silver puff box and scent bottle; Mrs. Richard Kavanagh, Irish lace scarf; Mr. and Miss Jury, pearl and enamel brooch; Mr. Willie Sugden, portmanteau; Sir Theo. and Lady Angier, silver travelling clock; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hemsley, silver serviette rings; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wan, leather-fitted wrist bag; Dr. Waterhouse, golf bag and clubs; Mrs. Graham, lace teacloth; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Phillipson, enamel pendant; Mr. Raymond Stephenson, lace collar; Mr. and Mrs. Davis, fitted tea basket; A. A. Harris, "Stratford-on-Avon," edition de Luxe; Miss Nora Lancaster, two silver egg stands; Major Edwardes, cheque; Sir Francis and Lady Brady, silver hatpin stand; Mrs. James Redmond, silver shoe; Mr. and Mrs. David Allen, silver and tortoiseshell trinket box; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Craig, silver trinket box; Mr. W. H. Collongham, cheque; Mrs. Beatty Kingston, large silver smelling bottle; Mr. and Mrs. Palliser, cheque and writing-case; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Villiers, silver casket; Dr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, silver tea caddy; Sergeant and Mrs. O'Connor, sunshade; Mr. Bronson Albany, manicure set; Mrs. Robert Mitchell, handkerchiefs; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Naylor, travelling rug; the maid at the High Hall, silver-mounted walking-stick; Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Gill, Irish lace collar; Miss Cotton, Irish crochet collar and cuffs; Mr. and Mrs. Martin (Belfast), pearl and turquoise necklet and pendant; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Handcock, silver toast rack; Miss Olive Pringle, paste buckle; Judge and Mrs. Bodkin, silver card case; Dr. Alfred Callaghan, two silver jam spoons; Mr. Fred. Callaghan, large silver photo frame; Miss Florrie Kavanagh, lace teacloth; Miss Lottie Power, embroidered satin sachet; Miss Agatha Irelande, three lace handkerchiefs; Mrs. Herbert Clifford, embroidered satin sachet, old lace berthe (Bruxelles); Alderman Cotton, cheque; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lynch, cheque; Staff of Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, two trunks, two Thermos flasks in cases; Mr. Charles Hyland, travelling clock; Mr. and Mrs. W. Mead, silver engraved perfume holder; Mrs. Prost, bottle of perfume and perfume bottle; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Birch, hand-painted fan, mother of pearl sticks, inlaid silver and gold; Mrs. Herbert Robinson, Irish lace berths; Miss Mary Anne Rogers, notebook; Miss Ellen Kelly, silver-handled umbrella; Miss Bridget Kelly, set of combs; Mrs. and Miss Newcombe, silver button-hook and shoe-horn; Mrs. Waters and Mrs. Tyson, hair ornament; Mr. W. S. Nabarro, special wedding march composed and dedicated to Miss Haidee Gunn; Miss Kate Hodges, earrings; Mrs. Margaret Ryan, embroidered teacloth; Colonel and Mrs. Wellsted, silver purse; Mrs. Quinston Rosse, silver purse; Mr. and Mrs. Macready Chute, crushed morocco attache case; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cotton, cut-glass ink bottle and silver stand; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Allen, Sèvres coffee cups and saucers, silver mounts and spoons; Mrs. J. Rodgers, Liberty enamel buckles; Mrs. Ludlow and Mrs. Wynne, Liberty enamel pendant, silver chain; Miss Nancibel and Mr. Stead Rodgers, Liberty enamel brooch, pair Liberty enamel hatpins; Mrs. Hudson, cheque; Dr. Frank Seymour, stylographic pen in chased silver case; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fitzgerald, pierced silver bon-bon stand; Captain Woodroffe, R.E., silver and tortoiseshell box; Mrs. Power O'Donoughue, Russian boots; Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Brunner, antique Sheffield plate tea urn; the Misses Maguire, Limerick lace; Mrs. Henry Webb, two volumes of Swinburne; Mr. Frank Briggs, gold sovereign purse; Mr. Fred. Sharp, triple mirror; Mr. Lossel, Moulton's "Shakespeare"; Mr. and Mrs. J. Metcalfe, silver fountain pen.

MISS HAIDEE GUNN.

MR. PAUL GILMORE.

THE AMERICAN COMEDIAN.

Mr. Paul Gilmore, who is to star next season in The Boys of Company B, has developed into the foremost of legitimate comedians. Born in the States, where his father owned and managed theatres, he early assimilated a taste for the stage that ever since has held him in thrall. His parents destined him for the law, and packed him off to college as soon as he could pass the entrance examinations. But even there the allurements of the stage beckoned, and the young collegian left his classics and trudged over to Chicago looking for a position in some theatrical company. Fortune favoured him, and he was given a small part in The Ensign, and was further appointed assistant stage-manager. He evinced such ability in the direction of stage-management that he was promoted to chief director. The manager, the late Mr. Jacob Litt, saw such marked ability in the young man as an actor that he gave him the leading rôle in In Old Kentucky the following season. His good work here brought him to the favourable notice of the Frohmans, who, billing him as the youngest leading man on the stage, presented him in The Wife, Americans Abroad, Charity Ball, and other kindred pieces. After this good training, he was called to the famous old stock company in Minneapolis known as Litt's Players, and appeared there with Louis James, Julia Arthur, and others equally well known. Again he starred, appearing in The Three Musketeers and Under the Red Robe, and was selected by Henrietta Crossman as her leading man in Mistress Nell. It was during this engagement that Mr. Jules Murry saw him and, recognising the future before him, offered him a long term starring engagement, which he accepted. During the five years already spent under Mr. Murry's management, Mr. Gilmore has starred in The Tyranny of Tears, The Mummy and the Humming Bird, Captain Debonaire, At Yale, and The Wheel of Love, and this season is appearing in the new comedy, written expressly for him by Ride Johnson Young, entitled Boys of Company B. Mr. Gilmore's errand here is to arrange for a London production of Boys of Company B.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, July 13, the Military Drama,
"IN THE RANKS."

For the last week of the present dramatic season the well-known Adelphi play In the Ranks has been chosen by the management, and that no better selection could have been made was evidenced by the fact that on Monday night the theatre was packed by a large and demonstrative audience, who enjoyed the humour and applauded the heroics. Mr. Ashley Page, looking well in his uniform and using his fine voice to advantage, was a manly and vigorous Ned Drayton, bringing out with effect the many strong passages with which the part abounds. Miss Marion Denvil was womanly and duly pathetic as Ruth Herrick, although we should like to see this brilliant actress in another line of parts. The scheming Gideon Blake found a life-like representation in Mr. Raymond Wood; and Mr. Herbert Goddard was a passable Farmer Herrick. The bluff Colonel Wynter was made presentable by Mr. Bert Lloyd; and Mr. Walter Thornton, forsaking wickedness for the nonce, was a straightforward and upright Captain Holcroft. Richard Belton, who is the cause of so much misery, was quietly played by Mr. T. Weldon Atherstone; and Mr. Ern Carlton extracted much fun as Joe Buzzard. A natural portrayal of Sergeant Searle was given by Mr. Frederick Biron; and Miss Nell Gillmore was a motherly Mrs. Buzzard. Miss Mabel Lowe looked well and enacted Barbara Herrick with much charm; and Miss Alice Moss was a pert Polly Timmins. The remaining parts in a long cast were adequately performed, and the scenery and mounting were excellent. Commencing on Monday next, for seven weeks, a short Yiddish season will be given, and for the autumn a fine English programme has been prepared.

MRS. ALFRED MELLON.

ONE OF THE OLDEST LIVING ACTRESSES.

The engraving below is from a photograph of Mrs. Alfred Mellon. The old lady attained the great age of 84 on Wednesday, July 8. She was then in capital health and able to entertain her family and a few old friends. She was the happy recipient of many flowers, telegrams, cards, and congratulations from her brother and sister artists. Mrs. Alfred Mellon was born in 1824, and made her professional début in London in September, 1843, at the old Adelphi Theatre, in a duologue entitled Antony and Cleopatra. At the beginning of her career Miss Woolgar's versatile talents were generally employed in burlesque, in which she attained great repute. Her name will, however, be more generally and favourably known in connection with the series of domestic dramas for which the old Adelphi, under Mr. Benjamin Webster's management, and during Madame Celeste's popularity, became famous. Among the more important of those in which Miss Woolgar played on the occasion of their first performance may be noted the following:—The Flowers of the Forest (Lemuel), The Marble Heart (Marie), The Willow Copse (Meg), The Dead Heart (Catherine Duval), &c. Besides the foregoing plays in which Miss Woolgar's acting invariably commanded praise, the following characters and pieces in which she has also appeared on the London stage are entitled to mention, viz., on April 9, 1853, at the Adelphi Theatre, the Widow Somerton, in a farce of more than ordinary merit, by Mr. M. Morton, entitled A Desperate Game; on Wednesday, July 20 of the same year, the leading rôle in Mark Lemon's burlesque of Sardanapalus; on Monday, March 30, 1854, Anne Musgrave, first performance of Messrs. Tom Taylor and Charles Reade's drama, Two Loves and a Life. At Easter, 1854, at the Adelphi Theatre, she played Lord Bateman in Brough's Overland Journey to Constantinople, &c. Of this the Athenæum said: "The most marked performance in the piece is that of Miss Woolgar as the famous Lord Bateman; particularly in the second part of the drama, where, after an absence from his Sophia for 'seven long years and fourteen days,' his mind reverts to its first love while on the point of contracting a marriage with a new bride, and manifests a state of abstraction and uneasiness peculiarly dramatic. Mr. Brough's burlesques often become serious verities, and for a while sink the fun and bustle in real pathos, with which what is called humour, as distinct from wit, readily coalesces. The scene to which we allude is an instance in point, and was acted by Miss Woolgar with truth and effect. Such painting is like Nature's own, and we were struck with it in the situation we have described as something worthy of being included with efforts of art."

In the same year, on Monday, Dec. 11, she played the part of Marie Blanche in Pierre, the Foundling, at the Adelphi. Monday, Sept. 15, 1856, the opening night of the Lyceum Theatre, under Mr. Charles Dillon's management, Miss Woolgar played Florizel in a burlesque by William Brough, entitled Perdita; or, the Royal Milkmaid. The same year, Tuesday, Oct. 16, first performance at the Lyceum of The Three Musketeers, she sustained the part of Constance; and on Saturday, Dec. 6, Eugénie (of Beaumanoir), first performance of Ed. Falconer's drama The Cagot; or, Heart for Heart. In March 1857, at the same theatre, she appeared as Ophelia; Mr. Charles Dillon performing the part of Hamlet. Miss Woolgar's Ophelia was one of the finest performances of the character ever seen. It was full of genius, and the pathos of the mad scene was irresistible.

On Wednesday, Jan. 20, 1858, at the same theatre, first performance of a play of Leigh Hunt's, entitled Love's Amazements, she played the part of the Countess de Montelais; and in the same year (September) succeeded Mrs. Charles Young as Miss Vavasour in Falconer's play Extremes; or, Men of the Day. The following year she returned to the Adelphi Theatre, and in January appeared there as Dorine in Tartuffe. The following month, in a "revival" of Masks and Faces, she played the character of Peg Woffington. During the same year, at the Adelphi, she played the following characters, viz., Don Cleophas Zambullo, in the burlesque of Asmodeus; Sir Rowland Macassar, in a burlesque The Babes in the Wood; and Catherine Duval (November), first performance of Mr. Watts Phillips' drama The Dead Heart.

MRS. ALFRED MELLON.

On Monday, Sept. 10, 1860, first performance at the Adelphi of The Colleen Bawn (Mr. and Mrs. Boucicault in the principal parts), Miss Woolgar sustained the character of Anne Chute. Monday, April 14, 1862, first performance of Boucicault's dramatised version of The Cricket on the Hearth, entitled Dot, she played the part of Tilly Slowboy. For downright grotesque yet still natural fun, Miss Woolgar's Tilly Slowboy could not be surpassed. The drollery of Tilley's position was greatly heightened by the perverse pleasure which the reckless Ned Plummer took in frightening her out of her wits—an exhibition of comic terror was constantly taking place in the background.

On Monday Aug. 8, 1864, in a new farce of some interest, by T. J. Williams, entitled My Wife's Maid, Miss Woolgar played the leading character, Barbara Perkins. In July, 1865, still at the Adelphi, first performance of Mr. Walter Gordon's play Through Fire and Water, she performed the part of Honnor Bright. Saturday, May 5, 1866, first performance at the same theatre of Mr. Benjamin Webster junior's version of Victorien Sardou's La Famille Benoiton, entitled The Fast Family, Miss Woolgar sustained the part of Clotilde. She managed the scene admirably, and to her vigorous performance throughout of this part of Clotilde, which was an exceedingly arduous one, the success of the drama was attributed.

In the following year, Thursday, Dec. 26, first performance at the Adelphi of No Thoroughfare (Messrs. Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins), Mr. Charles Fechter in the leading rôle, Miss Woolgar played Sally Goldstraw. From 1867 to 1875 she acted at various theatres in several revivals of plays of more or less interest. In March, 1875, first performance at the Adelphi of a dramatic version of Nicholas Nickleby, from the pen of the late Mr. Andrew Halliday, she undertook the part of Mrs. Squeers. The same year, in October, reappearance of Mr. Joseph Jefferson at the Princess's Theatre as Rip Van Winkle, she played Gretchen; and in 1877, at the same theatre, she performed her original character in Lost in London, produced at the Adelphi Theatre in 1867. On Wednesday, May 15, 1878, a performance was given at Drury-lane Theatre in aid of a testimonial benefit to Mrs. Alfred Mellon (Miss Woolgar), in which the principal members of the dramatic profession took part. The result was in every sense most gratifying, and bore ample testimony to her personal worth and considerable merits as an actress. In June, 1879, she appeared nightly at her old theatre, the Adelphi, as Mrs. Candour in a revival of The School for Scandal.

Miss Woolgar married the late Alfred Mellon, a gentleman well known in the musical world, and a composer of considerable ability, who inaugurated the series of promenade concerts at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SYDNEY, JUNE 2, 1908.—Mr. J. C. Williamson produced The Prince of Pilsen at the Theatre Royal on the 30th ult. to an overflowing house. Two new actors, Mr. Chas. A. Loder and Mr. George Whitehead, were engaged by Mr. Williamson during his recent trip, and they are welcome additions, the one as an extremely humorous dialect mock Prince of Pilsen, and the other as a manly, fine-voiced, good actor, who "presents" the real nobleman. Mr. Williamson is himself the best "Dutch" comedian heard here since Joseph Jefferson, and he set a high standard hard to follow by those who came after. But Mr. Loder satisfies the present generation; in fact, he is really good. Both gentlemen sing their allotted music with artistic care, and they are both heartily welcomed. Miss Olive Godwin made the widow, Mrs. Crocker, handsomely prominent, and she sang well; Miss Alma Barker as Sidonie was substituted for Miss Fanny Dango, whose doctor prohibited her from appearing; the electric Daisie Wallace gave Jimmy, the bell-boy, a spasmodically funny interpretation; the dude Earl of Shrimpton was capitaly depicted by Mr. Myles Clifton, who scored one of the hits of the performance; Mr. Edmund Sherras, tuneful and careful, made Lieut. Tom Wagner a manly singer; and Mr. Harold Parkes completed the cast as the French waiter, François, most creditably. One word more for Miss Amy Murphy, the New Zealand soprano, whose Nellie Wagner was vocally most enjoyable. The bâton of Mr. Alfred Moulton controlled an excellent chorus and full orchestra, and Coleman and Gordon's scenes backgrounded a very bright production.

MR. HERBERT FLEMMING and Miss Beatrice Day and company have come back to the Criterion, appearing in a well-staged production of The Mummy and the Humming Bird. The principal male rôle falls to Mr. Flemming, who depicts the elements of absorption in scientific hobbies, finesse in firmly dealing with the roué, and tender forgiveness with his usual culture. Mr. Flemming and Mr. Gaston Mervale are the truest representatives of English gentility on the Australian stage. Miss Beatrice Day made Lady Lumley winning, defiant, and repentant in turn, and most convincing all the time. The would-be seducer, D'Orelli, was in the conscientious care of Mr. A. S. Homewood, and he gave a good account of the wily Italian; Mr. H. W. Varna, besides staging the play, played Guiseppe, and all the vengeful nature of the man whose domestic peace had been wrecked by D'Orelli was forcefully depicted; Miss Elsie Clarens winningly and charmingly played Mrs. Thornton; Mr. Aubrey Mallalieu made Lord Ronald manly; and Mr. Winter Hall was a valuable Judson. The stars—Miss Day and Mr. Flemming—were warmly welcomed, and heaps of flowers greeted the lady.

THE Tivoli welcomed the Rigoletto Bros. on Saturday night, and gave the novel gymnastic ladder performance hearty recognition; Mr. John Higgins "jumped" into favour and astounded the large audience by his performance, so varied and clever; Little Josephine Johnson also "débuted," and was well received; Mr. Clarence Tisdale returned, and the remainder of Mr. Harry Rickards' large company—already noted—kept things merrily going.

THE National Amphitheatre keeps changing its vaudeville bill. West's Pictures are drawing crowded houses, and will migrate from the Town Hall to the Palace Theatre on the 6th, and a host of other picture shows draw money and people all the time.

IBSEN'S DEVELOPMENT.

"In consistency of style, and in architectural symmetry of construction, The Pillars of Society," writes Mr. William Archer, in his preface to the play, "marks a great advance upon The League of Youth. From the end of the first act to the middle of the last, it is a model of skilful plot-development. The exposition, which occupies so much of the first act, is carried out by means of a somewhat cumbrous mechanism. No doubt the 'Kaffee-Klatsch' is in great measure justified as a picture of the tattling society of the little town. It does not altogether ignore the principle of economy. But it is curious to note the rapid shrinkage in the poet's expositions. Here we have the necessary information conveyed by a whole party of subsidiary characters. In the next play, A Doll's House, we have still a set exposition, but two characters suffice for it, and one the heroine. In the next play again—that is to say, in Ghosts—the poet has arrived at his own peculiar formula, and the exposition is indistinguishably merged in the action. Still greater is the contrast between the conclusion of Pillars of Society and that of A Doll's House. It would be too much to call Bernick's conversion and promise to turn over a new leaf as conventional as the Chamberlain's right-about-face in The League of Youth. Bernick has passed through a terrible period of mental agony which may well have brought home to him a conviction of sin. Still, the way in which everything suddenly comes right, Olaf is recovered, the Indian Girl is stopped, Aune is reconciled to the use of the new machines, and even the weather improves, so as to promise Johan and Dina a prosperous voyage to America—all this is a manifest concession to popular optimism. We are not to conceive, of course, that the poet deliberately compromised with an artistic ideal for the sake of popularity, but rather that he had not yet arrived at the ideal of logical and moral consistency which he was soon afterwards to attain. To use his own metaphor, the ghost of the excellent Eugène Scribe still walked in him. He still instinctively thought of a play as a storm in a teacup, which must naturally blow over in the allotted two hours and a half. Even in his next play—so gradual is the process of evolution—he still makes the external storm, so to speak, blow over at the appointed time. But, instead of the general reconciliation and serenity upon which the curtain falls in The League of Youth and Pillars of Society—instead of the 'happy ending' which Helmer so confidently expects—he gives us that famous scene of Nora's revolt and departure, in which he himself may be said to have made his exit from the school of Scribe, banging the door behind him."

SIR JOHN HARE'S MEMORIES.

"My first substantial success at the old Court Theatre," writes Sir John Hare in his "Reminiscences and Reflections," "was New Men and Old Acres, by Tom Taylor and A. W. Dubourg, and produced on Dec. 2, 1876. The leading parts were admirably portrayed by Miss Ellen Terry and her then future husband, Charles Kelly. I played the small part of Mr. Vavasour, an old country squire. A somewhat funny incident occurred during the run of this play. In those days I was always accompanied by a favourite and beautiful old collie called Smut, which I took to rehearsals. It followed me everywhere—even on to the stage, and Tom Taylor begged that I would let it accompany me during the actual performance of the play. I demurred at first, having an objection to animals on the stage, but eventually gave way to the author's wishes.

"NIGHT after night Smut performed his part in an admirable and irreproachable manner, lying down at my feet while I sat under a tree taking part in a duologue with one of the characters. On a hot, sultry night in July, however (for the play enjoyed an exceptionally long run), Smut became bored, thinking, no doubt, that the play had had its day, and that it was now the dog's turn. He advanced quite quietly to the centre of the stage with an almost managerial sense of his own importance, sat down in a dignified manner on his haunches, and yawned in full view of the audience with the sublime indifference of a dramatic critic. The audience were naturally amused, and, encouraged by the success of his unconscious efforts, Smut went from bad to worse by snapping up a passing fly, which he swallowed with the enjoyment of a gourmet, inevitably spoiling the quiet scene on which we were engaged.

"THIS terminated his engagement as an actor (he didn't even get a fortnight's notice), though he soon succeeded in finding other employment as a model for Lord Leighton, the famous painter, who wrote me on his behalf as follows:—'My Dear Hare,—Will you do me a great favour? I want you very much to lend me for an hour (per bearer) your beautiful dog Smut. I have to make a pencil sketch of a dog for a design I have in hand, and it ought to be done now—this forenoon. With many anticipated thanks.—Yours sincerely, Fred Leighton.'

"ABOUT this time I received the following characteristic letter from Charles Mathews, which I have culled haphazard from my collection:—'Dublin, Nov. 1, 1877. My Dear Hare,—A young "gentleman," whose name is Conyers Fletcher Norton (age eighteen), wishes to "walk." If you can give him a short innings on your course, do. He is not a Gale, of course, but who knows what he may accomplish with a little practice on your ground?—Faithfully yours, C. J. Mathews.' (Gale was the famous 'walker' of his time.)

"I HAD suggested to W. G. Wills, a Bohemian of indisputable genius, that he should write me a version of 'The Vicar of Wakefield.' He jumped at the idea, and a few months after informed me that the play was finished. The manuscript—if I can so call it—was the most extraordinary thing of its kind I have seen. It was almost illegible, and many of the scenes were written on backs of envelopes, pieces of blotting-paper, and portions of old letters. I remember reading several pages, and then arriving at an obvious hiatus, which I pointed out to Wills, who replied, in a thick Irish accent: 'I've got it, dear boy, in my pocket, or, perhaps, on my shirt cuff,' and he would then produce a suspicious-looking fragment scintillating with literary gems and poetic thought, though the play in its original condition was chaotic in the extreme. It was altogether incoherent and impossible in its first state—a mere embryo of what afterwards appeared when we got it into shape.

"WILLS and I sat up night after night reconstructing the piece, and if I suggested a new scene or alteration to which he was agreeable he would reply, 'I accept that, dear boy.' He then proceeded to make a note on that useful shirt-cuff, underneath which slumbered the sleeves of three jerseys struggling to make their appearance, and perhaps jealous of their owner's partiality for that once white shirt. Eventually Wills wanted to sell me his work for two hundred pounds, as he was always hard up; but one could not take advantage of that ingenuous, big-souled Irishman, and I refused, preferring to give him something in advance of nightly royalties.

"THE production of The Vicar of Wakefield was notable not only for the author's success, but for the great achievements of Miss Ellen Terry and William Terriss. The latter made his first really great mark in London on that occasion. I received many letters from him, of which the following is one:—'Royal Adelphi Theatre, Sept. 23, 1887. My Dear Hare,—Your very kind letter has given me the greatest pleasure. It is scarcely necessary for me to remind you that it was to your able guidance that I am indebted for my first ideas in the art of acting, and, although still conscious of my faults, I cannot help feeling proud to read such kind and flattering words as you have thought fit to pen me. I hope to keep your letter as a mark of your esteem, which I assure you I value more than that of any living actor. Commend me to Mrs. Hare, and believe me always sincerely yours—Will Terriss.'

"THE finest stage-management is often unnoticed by the audience and critics. Its very perfection causes it to be accepted as a natural result which passes without comment—like a well-dressed woman, whose appearance should not dazzle the eye, but please it. Nothing should be overemphasised or exaggerated, so that it is only when your attention is drawn to some effect of the stage-management that you notice its existence. Many plays have been ruined through bad stage-management in the handling of duologues. Too much attention is paid to the mise en scène, which should only form an unobtrusive background, but one which is in perfect taste. The author's work and the actor's interpretation of it should form the centre from which the eye should never wander.

"I SHOULD like to acknowledge here how greatly the success of our management was due to the many magnificent performances Mrs. Kendal gave of the parts she undertook. She and Lady Bancroft were the most remarkable first-night actresses with whom I have ever been associated. They seemed to give performances which were absolutely inspired on the first nights. Once, I remember, when we were playing The Lady of Lyons, I, as Colonel Damas, was inclined to make fun of some of the old-fashioned ideas and high-falutin' sentiment of that play, and sometimes indulged in a little humorous aside or by-play while she was striking an heroic attitude. Mrs. Kendal said to me on one of these occasions: 'Hare, if you make me see the comic side of this play, I shall never be able to play the part again!'"

THE triennial Handel Festival is due at the Crystal Palace in June next. It happens that 1909 is also the centenary of the birth of Mendelssohn, and the directors of the Crystal Palace Co. have decided to celebrate the occasion by the inclusion of the best known of Mendelssohn's works. The festival will consequently be called the Handel-Mendelssohn Festival. It is probable that the dates fixed will be as follows:—Saturday, June 12, the General Rehearsal; Tuesday, June 15, Handel's "Messiah" or Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; Thursday, June 17, "Selection Day," when excerpts will be given from Handel's "Israel in Egypt" and Mendelssohn's Choral and Orchestral Works; and Saturday, June 19, Handel's "Messiah" or Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The Handel Festival Choir and Orchestra, numbering 4000 performers, will take part. The most eminent artists are being engaged.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. FRANK BERESFORD.

Mr. Frank Beresford, originally intended for the law, deserted the precincts of Gray's Inn one Saturday, and the following day started on tour with a répertoire company, playing small parts in Our Boys, Money, Married Life, East Lynne, &c. An engagement with Miss Maggie Morton followed, the young actor getting valuable experience in that lady's varied répertoire; also in Mr. Walter Bentley's company, playing De Mauprat, Horatio, Del Aquila, &c. Numerous engagements followed, including twelve weeks' stock season at Sadler's Wells Theatre, under the management of the late Miss Edith Russell. Here Mr. Beresford appeared as Claude Frollo (Notre Dame), Pierre (Two Orphans), Salem Scudder (The Octoroon), &c. A tour as Tom Cooper in Shadows of a Great City, under the management of the late A. E. Percival; then returning to London for a season at the New Novelty Theatre, Great Queen-street. Special engagements followed with the well-known play A Day Will Come, Bells of Fate, Lured to Ruin. Mr. Beresford was with the Criterion Comedy Company under the management of Miss Emma Hutchison for a considerable period, playing important parts in those old favourites Pink Dominoes, Betsy, Brighton, Hot Water, Great Divorce Case, Truth, &c. One of Mr. Beresford's happiest engagements was supporting the late Osmond Tearle, playing Laertes, Buckingham, Cassio, Gratiano, Beausant, Icilius, &c. Other engagements comprised tours with Messrs. Morell and Mouillot's My Friend the Prince and The Absent-Minded Beggar, under the management of Mr. J. F. Elliston.

Mr. Beresford is one of the most popular and well-known actors in South Africa, he having spent the greater part of eight years there, having had four long tours in that country under the banner of Mr. Leonard Rayne, playing a great number of the leading parts in that gentleman's extensive répertoire, comprising drama, comedy, Shakespeare. On his first visit to the Colonies, Mr. Beresford appeared as the Duke of Buckingham in The Three Musketeers, Mr. Osmond Tearle being the star. Another tour he supported that genial comedian Harry Nicholls. Amongst Mr. Beresford's successes in South Africa may be mention Rossi (The Eternal City), Oscar Stephenson (The Prodigal Son), Frank Thornhill (Golden Ladder), Jack Walton (Master and Man), Father Michael (The English Rose), George Thornton

MR. FRANK BERESFORD AS "JOHN STORM."

(Two Little Vagabonds), title-rôle Paul Kauvar, De Beaumont (Royal Divorce), Lord Woodstock (Sporting Life), Bertie Cecil (Under Two Flags), Harold Armytage (Lights o' London), Richard Blunt (Span of Life), Lord Desborough (The Derby Winner). In lighter vein Mr. Beresford appeared as Dr. Sheppard (Oh, Susannah), Jack Barrington (What The Butler Saw), Wibsey (Public Opinion), Charles Shackleton (Jane). Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Leonard Rayne, Mr. Beresford has had a benefit in nearly every town in the South African Colonies, and the packed houses and general enthusiasm testify to the great popularity of the young actor. On one occasion Mr. Beresford took up the part of D'Artagnan in The Three Musketeers at half-an-hour's notice, owing to Mr. Rayne's sudden indisposition. One of Mr. Beresford's greatest successes was as Marc Antony in Mr. Rayne's magnificent production of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy; he also made a very favourable impression as Laertes, Bassanio, Cassio, &c. During his travels in South Africa Mr. Beresford has had some exciting experiences, at one time being taken into Kimberley on an armoured train; and during a very enjoyable concert tour with that charming music hall artist Miss Billie Barlow (under Mr. Rayne's management) the company were playing at Steynsburg, in Cape Colony, and the guns were thundering away on the adjoining kopjes, and the next day the dead and wounded were brought in. On one occasion the company performed in a goods shed. It was a sight to see the place packed, the officers sitting comfortably on biscuit-boxes, which comprised the front seats, and the Tommies hanging on to rafters, window seats, &c. Mr. Beresford is very fond of South Africa, he having made some life-long friends there, and looks forward to a return visit some day. Mr. Beresford is brother to Mr. J. Cooke Beresford, Miss Alice Beresford, and Mrs. Tennyson Cole, the wife of that eminent artist whose portrait of the King has excited such admiration.

MR. AND MRS. NORMAN MACOWAN (MISS VIOLET STERNE).

Of the younger provincial stars there is a no more popular couple than Miss Violet Sterne and Mr. Norman MacOwan. Miss Sterne and Mr. MacOwan, who have made quite a name for themselves in the provinces, where for the last four years they have been touring Monsieur Beaucaire and a répertoire of costume plays, are comparatively young in stage experience, both having made their first appearance on the stage at the end of July, 1900, in the Compton Comedy Company. Miss Sterne and Mr. MacOwan, however, have both come very rapidly to the front, and we shall be much surprised if they do not continue to advance a great deal higher. Both are possessed of remarkably strong and very pleasing personalities, and although their most popular success has been made in Monsieur Beaucaire, those who have had the opportunities we have had of seeing their performances in a large répertoire cannot fail to have been struck by the excellence of their work in widely differing parts.

Mr. MacOwan, as his name indicates, is a Scotsman, being, as they say on the other side of the Tweed, a "son of the manse." He was born in St. Andrews thirty years ago on the second of January.

Miss Sterne and Mr. MacOwan had the advantage of playing, at the very commencement of their careers, a very varied assortment of parts. Joining Mr. Compton as junior members of his company, they were entrusted after a short period with more and still more important parts in the very extensive répertoire then being played by Mr. Compton. In the second year with Mr. Compton Miss Sterne and Mr. MacOwan were playing respectively such parts as Julia and Faulkland, Constance Neville and Hastings, Maria and Sir Benjamin Backbite.

In 1902 Mr. Compton retired from the stage for a year, and Miss Sterne and Mr. MacOwan, with the rest of the company, had to seek work elsewhere. It was at this time that Miss Sterne had what she describes as the "heart-breaking" experience of being out of work, and unable to secure anything better than a few engagements for "special weeks." One of these special weeks, by the way, was to support Mr. Mark Melford in a sketch at the Oxford Music Hall, this being Miss Sterne's only appearance in the "halls." Mr. MacOwan, in the meantime, was more successful, and was gaining still more experience in the provinces. Soon after leaving Mr. Compton he was engaged for Frank Frayne in a tour of The Night of the Party, and this was quickly followed by such parts as Captain Hawkesley in Still Waters Run Deep, Mark Denzil in Sunlight and Shadow, Henri de Flavigneul in The Ladies' Battle, and James Dalton in The Ticket-of-Leave Man.

In the first tour of Monsieur Beaucaire, in which Mr. Henry Renouf played the title-rôle and Miss Violet Sterne played Lady Mary Carlisle, Mr. MacOwan was playing the comparatively small part of Lord Townbrake, but after eight weeks he was engaged by Mr. Wilfrid Cotton for the heavy part of the Duke of Winterset. After playing this part with great success for one tour Mr. MacOwan was entrusted with the title-rôle and also with the general management of the company, and this tour, which was the third tour of the piece, was the most successful financially that the piece had yet had. At the conclusion of this tour Mr. MacOwan took over the company from Mr. Cotton, and entered into management for himself.

In June, 1904, he was married to Miss Violet Sterne, and since that date Mr. and Mrs. MacOwan have been touring their own company in Monsieur Beaucaire and a répertoire of plays with marked success up to the present time. Their répertoire on tour consists of Monsieur Beaucaire, School for Scandal, A Marriage of Convenience, David Garrick, Gringoire the Ballad Monger, and A Soldier of Fortune.

Mr. and Mrs. MacOwan prefer costume work as a rule, but they do not entirely devote themselves to it, and last summer they conducted a high-class répertoire season of eight weeks at the Grand Theatre, Swansea, during which the following plays were performed:—The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, The Profligate, The Glass of Fashion, Still Waters Run Deep, A Fool's Paradise, The Tyranny of Tears, Captain Swift, and A Bunch of Violets. This season created a great deal of interest in Swansea, and the business far exceeded that of any previous summer season in this theatre.

Mr. E. Oswald Brookes, the manager, was so delighted after the third week that he offered Mr. MacOwan contracts for a thirteen weeks' season this summer, but owing to other plans Mr. MacOwan was unable to accept. He, however, arranged for a four weeks' season in Swansea in March. Mr. MacOwan's rights in Monsieur Beaucaire terminated at the end of March. He and Miss Sterne hope shortly to have experience under a London management.

HARRY KILBURN.

Mr. Harry Kilburn has had a great deal of experience in both music halls and theatres, having been on the stage since he was eighteen, and of course has played many parts. His first venture was on the music halls (as a comic singer), where he achieved some considerable success, after which he toured the Continent, playing in all the principal towns of France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, and Spain, playing in sketches and also shining as a pantomimist and dancer, of which latter art he is very fond. He then returned to England to fulfil a pantomime engagement at the Tyne Theatre, Newcastle, under the management of the late Sir Augustus Harris, where he was fortunate enough to be so successful with the part entrusted to him that he was re-engaged for the two following Christmas pantomimes, making three consecutive seasons, the latter two years playing the parts made popular by the late Dan Leno at Drury Lane the preceding year under the same management. Other pantomime engagements include Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, Comedy, Manchester, Tyne, Newcastle (this time under the management of Messrs. Howard and Wyndham), two seasons Opera House, Leicester, then Empire, Edinburgh, Alexander, Sheffield, Gaiety Theatre, Dublin (with Mr. Robert Courtneidge), Grand Theatre, Leeds (with Mr. John Hart), and also three consecutive seasons with Mr. Fredk. Mouillot at Opera House, Belfast, Theatre Royal, Dublin, and King's Theatre, Hammersmith, W. Mr. Kilburn has also created several parts in musical comedy, prominent amongst them being Robert White (the policeman) in Mr. Arthur Roberts' Dandy Dan, and Samuel Peashooter in Mr. George Dance's Ladies' Paradise. Amongst other engagements was one of eighteen months at the Duke of York's Theatre in The Gay Parisienne and A Day in Paris (with Messrs. Frank Wheeler and W. J. Holloway). Then a season at the Lyric Theatre, playing Sancho Panza with Arthur Roberts in Don Quixote. Then came a long tour of the provinces with Hardie and Von Leer's Dandy Fifth, playing Sergeant-Major Milligan. He next joined Mr. Geofge Dance's company in A Chinese Honeymoon, playing Hi-Lung on the autumn tour and the following spring playing Mr. Pineapple in the same piece. In the autumn he was engaged by Mr. H. C. Beryl to play Major O'Neill in The Lady Slavey. Then followed a short tour of the music halls in conjunction with his wife (Miss Ruth Grosvenor). Then came an offer from Baron H. Harriss to play the part of Hans Wagner (the Dutchman) in The Prince of Pilsen, which part he has now been playing for eighteen months, and which, he declares, fits him like a glove. Owing to his success in the part, Mr. Harriss arranged with Mr. Kilburn to play the part through the Christmas seasons of 1906-7 and 1907-8, and he completed another tour in June.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, July 13, the Drama, entitled "AN ABANDONED WOMAN."

Keen appreciation is shown at the able efforts of Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in An Abandoned Woman, which is being presented here this week, and the authors, Messrs. Miles Wallerton and Francis Gilbert, may be complimented on their share of the work. The drama is well mounted and dressed, and offers a fine chance in the title-rôle to Miss Ruth Zillwood as Ninon Malvoisin to show her dramatic power. She takes every advantage of her opportunities, and gives a very clever impersonation; possessing also a well-modelled figure, she is able to show off to the best advantage a variety of smart gowns. Mr. A. C. Holmes fills the part of Captain Herbert Seaton with successful results; and Mr. Charles Grant does well as Sir Marmaduke Seaton. Robert Saunders, an artist, is ably performed by Mr. P. Morton-Wright; Mr. W. M. Fraser-Brunner portrays the character of Phillipe Malvoisin, a French villain, with skill and judgment; Mr. Teddy Miles is the cause of much laughter as Paddy Boyle, L99, and sings a capital Irish song with a catchy refrain for which he receives worthy recompense. Mr. Will Glaze works hard as Sammy Sharpe, and is amply rewarded by hilarity and applause; Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner makes an efficient Sally Sloper; while Miss Nellie Thorne-Hallam is suitably placed as Eleanor Deane. Minor rôles are undertaken by Mr. Arthur Abott, Mr. Harrison Forbes, Mr. George Gormby, little Frances Maddocks, and Miss Lily Addison.

THE NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 13,

Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company in "THE FACE AT THE WINDOW."

It is the usual thing now to find the Lyric, whenever we visit it, quite full, but this hardly describes the state of the house on Monday last. The place was crowded, and the above-named drama came in for a most appreciative reception. As the detective, Paul Gouffer, Mr. Scott Leighton gave a finished performance, and Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale as the Chevalier Lucio Delgado made as despicable a continental villain as could be desired. Mr. Alfred Warne was distinctly good as Henry de Brisson; Mr. Arthur Beverley played Lucian Cortier with excellent effect. As the mad Dr. Le Blanc, Mr. Gilbert Hall did well. On the head of Mr. Henri Stewart (Peter Pottleberry) rested the responsibility of creating mirth, and he was entirely successful. Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson, in the part of Marie de Brisson, showed ability and won sympathy. Miss Louie Loners was a particularly lively Babbette, and as La Pinau Miss Elaine Grant was quite satisfactory. On Friday evening a special attraction was provided, The Sleigh Bells, another version of The Polish Jew being given after the above play.

NEW THEATRE, CAMBRIDGE.

A dividend of 5 per cent. upon the ordinary share capital, in addition to a substantial sum being carried to the reserve fund, was declared at the annual meeting of the New Theatre, Cambridge, Ltd., held on the afternoon of the 10th inst. Mr. J. W. Clark (chairman of the board of directors) presided, and there were also present Messrs. W. B. Redfern (managing director), G. Swannell (director), W. F. Taylor, T. Coulson, W. Tyler, A. G. Swannell, A. F. Jackson (shareholders), H. Hall and H. Slater (secretaries).

The report of the directors for the year ending June 24, 1908, was as follows:

In presenting their thirteenth annual report the directors are in a position to congratulate the shareholders upon the continuance of the improvement shown last year. As will be seen from the accounts, the profit on the year's working, after allowing for depreciation of plant and furniture, and the payment of debenture interests, amounts to £1,009 18s. 1½d., which, with the amount brought forward from last year, makes a total amount of £1,075 9s. 11½d. available for dividend, &c. Your directors recommend the payment of preference dividend, and advise that a dividend of 5 per cent. free of income-tax be declared upon the ordinary share capital. These dividends will absorb the sum of £590, leaving a balance of £485 9s. 11½d. Of this sum your directors propose to carry £400 to the reserve fund, increasing that fund to £1,000, and to carry forward £85 9s. 11½d. to next year. Under the articles of association Mr. G. Swannell retires from the directorate, and being eligible offers himself for re-election. The auditor, Mr. C. F. Charlton, also offers himself for re-election.

Upon the proposition of Mr. W. F. Taylor, seconded by Mr. T. Coulson, Mr. A. G. Swannell was unanimously re-elected a director of the company.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, pointed out that last year had not been as good in point of money in hand as the previous year, but still they were in a position to pay their dividends. The causes of the diminution of the balance were somewhat curious. A difficult point was the new assessment, by which the assessment of the theatre had been increased from £550 to £800, which they thought excessive. The directors had the matter in hand. They had given notice of appeal, and the matter had been adjourned for the valuer for the corporation to meet the valuer or expert acting on behalf of the theatre company. He would like to draw attention to the extraordinary caprice of the public in allowing their receipts to drop a matter of £332. He did not think it would have been possible for anybody to have got together a better set of pieces than Mr. Redfern had set before the Cambridge public. The sum of a long story was that Cambridge was a most difficult public to cater for. They could not tell what they liked and what they did not like. They might be quite certain that undergraduates liked musical pieces, but that was the only thing of which they could be certain. In other respects they had had a very satisfactory year. The directors would do their best during the coming year. Mr. Redfern had done his best already.

Mr. A. G. Swannell seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Tyler proposed a vote of thanks to the managing-director for his services. He congratulated Mr. Redfern upon the excellent report and balance-sheet produced, and said he took a more hopeful view of the situation than the Chairman. To be able to pay 5 per cent. and carry £400 to the reserve fund was eminently satisfactory. To a great many of them Mr. Redfern embodied the life and soul of the drama in Cambridge. What they would do without him he did not know.

Mr. F. W. Taylor seconded. He did not think about Mr. Redfern's retirement, and hoped during the coming and other years the present managing-director would still be able to give his services to the theatre. He did not think Mr. Redfern's efforts were supported to the extent they deserved in the direction of public patronage, but that was a matter they could not control, and must endeavour to be content with the measure they received. The satisfaction of the shareholders at receiving a 5 per cent. dividend was in a great measure due to Mr. Redfern's efforts.

The vote was accorded unanimously.

Mr. W. B. Redfern proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding. Mr. Clark, he thought, had taken a rather pessimistic view of the affairs of the past year. It was very right that he should, because it caused them to look into the accounts without having too rosy a view before them. The extra expenses to which the chairman had referred had been incurred from one or two causes which were unavoidable. For instance, the ropes on the stage, or as they were technically called the "lines," had been in use for twelve years, and, like everything else, they decayed. They had all decayed together; that was to say, they had worn out, and had become more or less unsafe, and rather than risk an accident of any kind they were renewing them. In the next place, the wages had exceeded those of the previous year. As a rule that was caused by a larger staff being employed on such occasions as Mr. Benson's performance, the operatic company, and so on. The gas bill for light outside the house he did not think was money thrown away. It had been pointed out to him by visitors to Cambridge, "You don't make any show outside," and he believed an advertisement of that kind—there was nothing vulgar about it—brought in a certain amount of audience. They had advertised rather largely this year. When companies like that of Miss Ellen Terry or the opera companies were in the town, he advertised in more than one paper of the borough. His reason for doing that had been that it satisfied the touring company, though perhaps it might not bring in a very large amount of patronage. He had to thank the Press generally for their kindness to him and to the theatre; but there was one exception he must take, and that was the University Granta, which was not only unfair in its so-called criticisms, but was sometimes offensively cynical and almost insulting. It did not matter what piece they had, they never received anything like unqualified praise; however good the piece or the acting might be, there was always a "but." It was very disheartening when one had secured the very best touring companies on the road, and probably the leading actors. They generally got some vulgar abuse. He was quite aware these criticisms were written by young men with little or no experience of theatrical matters, who had probably never written for newspapers before, and indulged in what they called clever writing. Their judgments were entirely against the criticisms written by professional men who understood their business. He was very pleased they had had such a successful year, and saw no reason whatever why in the future they should not do even better. During the past year the chairman had been suffering from illness, and members of his family had also been ill, but he was happy to say there was an improvement in both directions. Although Mr. Clark had not been present at the theatre, he knew he had been with them in spirit, and whenever he (Mr. Redfern) was in the least difficulty he appealed to him, and had his immediate attention and his personal advice. The same applied to Mr. Swannell. He hoped Mr. Clark might live many years to preside over them, and do as useful work as he had done in the dramatic world in Cambridge.

Mr. Tyler seconded the vote, which was carried with acclamation.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Most of the London managers are out of town or shortly to leave. Sir John Hare is at Lower Hare Park, Mr. Tree is at Marienbad, and Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. George Edwardes, and Mr. George Alexander will soon be on the wing, if, at the time of writing, they have not already left London.

MR. LEWIS WALLER is fortunate in his tyre-maker. The front tyres of his Daimler car were driven over 9000 miles before he changed them, and the non-skids on the back wheels averaged a good 3000 miles per pair. We shall be pleased to receive data on the subject from other theatrical motorists.

MR. LEWIS WALLER was fined £9 on Thursday at St. Neots, Huntingdonshire, for driving a motor-car to the danger of the public on the North-road, through the village of Buckden. The police gave the speed as over twenty-six miles an hour, but Mr. Waller said his speed was well under twenty miles.

MISS MABEL LOVE will commence her tour on Monday, July 27, at Llandudno in that great success Lady Frederick, under the management of Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison. The tour will include Margate, Ramsgate, Kingston, Buxton, Nottingham, Scarborough, Yarmouth, Southport, Kennington, Fulham, Leicester, Croydon, and Manchester. Miss Love will be supported by Mr. Robert Minster, and a very powerful company.

THE annual match between London Actors and Provincial Actors for the benefit of the Actors' Benevolent and Orphanage Funds will be played at Kennington Oval on Tuesday next, the 21st inst. Tickets, price 1s. (including admission to ground and covered stand), may be obtained at any theatre, or at the Era Office, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The teams will be selected from the following:—London—H. H. Ainley, Oscar Asche, Ken. Douglas, B. Egerton, Horace Lane, Eric Maturin, H. Nye Chart, V. O'Connor, C. A. Smith, R. Selby, F. Pope Stamper, H. Wilde, and A. Whitby. Provinces—G. Hannam Clark, B. S. Foster, J. S. Foster, Leslie Holland, T. Homewood, P. F. Knox, S. Livesay, A. Metcalfe, W. P. Morgan, J. Rathbone, E. A. White, J. Wilson, and F. Worlock.

OVER ninety members of the staff of Daly's Theatre, London, paid a visit to Brighton on Sunday for their fourteenth annual outing. They arrived shortly after ten o'clock, and after sampling the attractions of sea and shore returned to the Unicorn Hotel, where they sat down to an excellent dinner. Among those present were Mr. George Graves, Mr. Aubrey Lowe, Mr. Charles Cannon (secretary for Mr. George Edwardes), Messrs. Jupp and King (box office), H. Hart (electrician), Wade (stage-manager), and Scott. The toasts honoured included that of "Success to Daly's Theatre," proposed by Mr. George Graves in a witty speech, and acknowledged by Mr. Charles Cannon. In the afternoon a good many of the party availed themselves of the kind invitation of Mr. Ben Hart to visit the Brighton Palace Pier Theatre; while others went for taxi-cab rides to Rottingdean, Newhaven, and the Dyke. The arrangements were ably carried out by the hon. secretary, Mr. Charles Richards (properties), assisted by Messrs. W. Curtin, C. Holman, W. Shaw, R. Buchanan, and A. Bartlett.

MISS JANETTE STEER is giving an "At Home" to the theatrical profession at 53, Sloane-square Gardens, on Tuesday, at 3.30, to meet Miss Pankhurst, who will give an address on "Woman's Franchise." She hopes those who attend will bring their friends with them.

THE death is announced of Mrs. Parker, widow of the late Captain J. Parker, R.A., and the mother of Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., author of The Seats of the Mighty. The deceased lady passed away at Montrose House, Belleville, Canada, in her seventy-fifth year.

THE Terry's Theatre staff held their annual outing last Sunday. They went to Littlehampton, and then by launch to Arundel, where a sumptuous repast was waiting at the Abercrombie Hotel. The health of the generous donors was drunk with enthusiasm, those toasted including Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. James Welch, Mr. Whittaker, and Miss Fannie Ward. The day passed off very pleasantly, but was marred by a slight shower of rain just before the departure home. The organisers of the delightful outing were Mr. Chris Porter, Mr. R. Carter, Mr. Beasely, and Mr. C. MacManus.

IT is often disagreeable to make an amende honorable, but to pen the following, which appeared in a Glasgow paper on Monday, must have been a pleasing task:—"An apology is tendered to the numerous Metropole Theatre patrons who were disappointed in gaining admittance on Saturday night. It may interest them to know that the same play is rebooked for next season.—ARTHUR JEFFERSON, Managing-Director."

MR. CHARLES MANNERS's season with the Moody-Manners company will open at the Lyric on Aug. 17. The répertoire will include Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, Die Meistersinger, Tristan, Aïda, Faust, Il Trovatore, Madame Butterfly, La Bohème, Pagliacci, and Cavalleria Rusticana. Mr. Manners and Madame Fanny Moody are at present on the Continent looking out for new operas and artists. Mr. Philip Brozel, a Russian artist who studied at the Royal Academy of Music, and has several times appeared with success at Covent Garden, will be the principal tenor of the company.

PLAYGOERS whose memories take them back a few years will recall with pleasure the performances of Miss Laura Graves (one of a family of talented sisters) at the St. James's, Haymarket, His Majesty's, and other West End houses. Miss Graves, who left the stage on her marriage, at the height of her success, has found the attraction of the footlights too strong for her, and will make her reappearance in August, under Mr. Frohman's management, as Mrs. Wilmore in Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's play The Hypocrites.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES will give his Girls of Gottenburg company a trial trip at the Adelphi Theatre for three weeks, commencing on Aug. 10. Miss Fanny Fields will undertake Miss Gertie Millar's rôle; and Mr. Payne will retain his irresistibly droll part in the musical play.

MISS DREVER toured as Amasis last spring with success, and has been playing the part of Natalie in the northern company of The Merry Widow. Miss Drever recently sang Marguerite in Gounod's Faust, at Queen's Hall, with the full orchestra and chorus, without rehearsal, the other soloists including Messrs. Joseph O'Mara and Harry Dearth. She is a pupil of Edwin Wareham, the well-known operatic tenor, and studied in France, where she was educated. She is an accomplished linguist, and excels at golf, yachting, fencing, swimming, and tennis. Her father was the late Colonel W. S. Drever, C.S.I., Commissioner of Police in Madras.

MR. FRED S. JENNINGS, the manager of the Lyric, Hammersmith, is, we are sorry to hear, in the doctor's hands, and has been ordered to abstain from work for a fortnight. He has gone to the seaside to recuperate. We wish him a speedy recovery.

MR. W. CLARKSON has just concluded the contract for supplying costumes, wigs, and staff of assistants for making-up at the Cheltenham Pageant, which, produced by Mr. Geo. P. Hawtrey, has been a great success. At the conclusion on Saturday the Mayor made a speech thanking all and sundry (Mr. Clarkson among the number) for the way in which the work had been done. Pageant work seems to be on the increase. Mr. Clarkson has had the honour of providing the whole of the costumes, wigs, and properties for that at Oxford; also the wigs, &c., at Sherborne, Warwick, Bury St. Edmunds, Liverpool, Romsey, and Coventry.

MISS MAY PALFREY'S tour of Mrs. Dot, which is one of the biggest comedy successes staged of recent times, will start the first week in September with an exceptionally strong cast—in fact, quite one of the most powerful that will be sent on the road this autumn—and the towns that Miss Palfrey will visit are the following:—Dublin, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Buxton, Birmingham, Plymouth, Bristol, Oxford, Cambridge, Cardiff, Manchester, Belfast, Cheltenham, Harrogate, and Brighton. Miss Palfrey will play Mrs. Dot, and a very interesting engagement is pending for the part of James Blenkinsop, now being played at the Comedy Theatre by Mr. Fred Kerr. Messrs. Walter Hann have been commissioned to supply a duplicate of the scenery now being used in the London production.

"THE LADY OF THE PAGEANT," the farcical comedy which will be presented by Mr. Louis Calvert at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Monday, is by Mr. Max Pemberton and Mr. Cyril Hogg. In the third act the personages of the drama appear in the ancient costumes of a "pageant," and much fun arises from the resulting incongruities. Mr. Louis Calvert, who is nothing if not versatile, plays an active and amorous Frenchman.

"KING HARRY'S REVEL" will be given by Viscountess Galway at Serlby Hall, Bawtry, Yorkshire, on Aug. 6, 7, and 8 in aid of the Retford Cottage Hospital. The "revel" is based upon a visit paid to Serlby in 1523 by King Henry VIII. during a hunting expedition. The King and Queen are on their way to the palace of Cardinal Wolsey near by. King and Cardinal meet at Serlby, and are there entertained right royally by the fair Lady Idonea, who holds a "revel"—a fascinating compound of song and dance and masquerade—in honour of her guests. A notable feature of the "revel" will be the characteristic music and dances. Many of the quaint and beautiful old English songs are introduced, and the services of the famous North Notts Choral Society of 130 voices have been called into requisition. There will be over 100 dancers. The book of King Harry's Revel, written by Viscountess Galway, is published by Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son.

AN "open night" recital was given on Monday evening at the Cripplegate Institute by students of the Carrington Willis Shakespearean Schools in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience. Miss Eva Davies opened the programme by delivering "The Curtain," Miss Isabelle Griffiths recited "The Butterfly," and Miss G. Methuen "The Sioux Chief's Daughter." Mr. Atholl Kirkpatrick gave a dramatic rendering of "The Portrait"; Miss Mabel Burrell was humorous in her treatment of "The 11.45 p.m." by Pett Ridge; and Mr. Angelo and Miss Winifred Creswell appeared in an extract from Measure for Measure. The judges, finding that Miss Mabel Burrell and Miss Winifred Creswell were equal in merit, allotted them both first prizes.

IN order to enable the French and German visitors to Wyndham's Theatre to follow more closely the story of When Knights Were Bold, the management have had inserted in the programmes a synopsis of the play in German and French. The expedient should be useful to many of the foreign visitors now in the Metropolis.

MR. CHAS. DENLEY and Mr. Herbert Taylor took their annual benefit at the Grand Theatre, Derby, on Wednesday last. Mr. Langley Wyatt, who had charge of the stage, dealt with a long programme, necessitating constant and quick changes of scenery, the two performances going through without wait or hitch. After the final performance Mr. T. Allan Edwardes, on behalf of the theatre and Palace staffs, presented Mr. Denley with a handsome Chippendale writing-table and Mr. Taylor with a gold-mounted umbrella.

THE committee of the Actors' Union desire us to state that any member who wishes for information on any matter connected with the Union can, on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope, have such information on application to the secretary.

MR. FRANK LINDO who for the past five years has successfully toured his drama Home, Sweet Home, will shortly produce at the Palace Theatre, Newcastle, his new romantic play entitled Love, the Conqueror.

MR. TOM B. DAVIS and Mr. Lewis Waller will close their season at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday. The Explorer, thanks probably to Mr. Waller's fine performance as the hero, has done good business. He will reopen the Lyric on Sept. 8 with Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy's version of The Duke's Motto.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES, having secured the English rights in the Viennese opera The Dollar Princess, which has been such a success on the Continent, will produce the piece at the Hicks Theatre at the end of the year, with Miss Constance Drever and Mr. Tailleur Andrews in leading parts. Mr. Basil Hood will adapt the book.

MR. JULIAN L'ESTRANGE was engaged for a part in Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's new drama at Drury Lane, but Mr. Arthur Collins obligingly released him to enable him to accept an offer made him by Miss Maxine Elliott to go to America as her leading man. Miss Constance Collier (Mrs. L'Estrange) will cross the Atlantic shortly, in order to appear in New York in Mr. William Gillette's version of Samson, under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman.

MR. ARTHUR COLLINS is vigorously carrying on the repairs to Drury Lane Theatre which were necessitated by the recent fire, and the house will be ready for reopening early in September. Mr. Cecil Raleigh and Mr. Henry Hamilton, who have been at Folkestone hard at work on the new play for the autumn, are progressing favourably, and have written that popular comedian Mr. Albert Chevalier an excellent part.

"COMUS," of which certain members of the University of Cambridge and others gave a performance in the New Theatre, Cambridge, upon the occasion of the Tercentenary of the poet's birth, was first printed in 1637. In 1634, the two sons and the daughter of the Earl of Bridgewater, returning to Ludlow Castle, were benighted in Haywood Forest, in whose "perplex'd paths" the Lady Alice was lost. John Milton, then a young man of twenty-six, who had recently quitted Cambridge, made of this incident the theme of the Mask of Comus, in whose first performance the three children themselves took part. It was presented at the Michaelmas festivities held at Ludlow Castle, where the Earl of Bridgewater, Lord President of Wales, kept his Court. Henry Lawes, afterwards Court Musician to Charles I., composed the music, and himself took the part of the Attendant Spirit.

MISS EVELYN MILLARD has taken the Garrick Theatre from Mr. Arthur Bourchier for five months, commencing on Sept. 1, when she will open with an adaptation by Mr. Roy Horniman of Mr. W. J. Locke's novel "Idols." The story is of a much more serious nature than that of "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," and there will be a strong part in Mr. Horniman's version for Miss Millard, whose deep and powerful art deserves an adequate vehicle for its expression. She will be supported by Mr. Allan Aynesworth, Mr. Herbert Waring, Miss Edyth Latimer, Mr. Charles Rock, Mr. Arthur Wontner, and Mr. Charles Somerset. It is some time since Miss Millard has been seen in a part quite worthy of her genius.

THE recent Charing Cross Hospital Fête at the Botanic Gardens, which the secretary and Miss Italia Conti organised in a month, and at the fag-end of the season, had most satisfactory results. Miss Conti received the following letter from the hospital:—

"DEAR MISS CONTI,—The council at their meeting to-day desired me to convey to you their most grateful thanks for your work in connection with the fête, which I was able to inform them has resulted (after paying all expenses) in an addition of about £200 to the funds of the hospital. The council think that, considering the difficulties with which we had to contend, this is a most satisfactory result, and they feel that, quite apart from its financial outcome, the function was a thorough success. I take this opportunity of saying what a pleasure it has been to me, in spite of the labour involved, to work with you in the organisation of this fête, and I hope that at some future time we may be again associated for some similar object.

"The council of the hospital wish me to thank very heartily all who so kindly gave their services yesterday, and I shall be much obliged if you can make this known to those who assisted you in the play. I am writing to Mr. Bernhardt in the same way with regard to the Café Chantant, and to the managers of the four theatre groups of helpers.—Yours sincerely, WALTER ALVEY, Secretary.

"Charing Cross Hospital, W.C., July 8."

"ROY," a lovely Newfoundland belonging to Dr. Barton, took £5 at the fête, the Princess Louise specially speaking to him and contributing to his collection. "Joe" Browne, Mr. Graham Browne's bull-terrier, also did well. He was in charge of the "Masculine Mysteries."

A MOVEMENT is on foot by the Actors' Church Union to institute residential clubs in the provincial towns, to be run on the lines of small hotels, for the benefit and convenience of ladies on tour. The Rev. Harold Davidson, who is actively working the scheme, has obtained favourable opinions on the project from many people, including Mr. Tree and Mr. George Alexander. A letter was also received from Mr. J. Maundy-Gregory, strongly advocating the idea.

THE usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union was held on Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Charles R. Stone presiding. Amongst others present were Messrs. T. W. Atherstone, J. H. Batson, Orlando Barnett, J. W. Braithwaite, W. R. Brown, Walter Clarke, Charles Calvert, George Goodwin, Jerrold Heather, Sydney N. Hallows, Frederick Jacques, Paul Lovett, Frederick F. Loyd, Arthur Machen, Norman A. Overton, Edward Y. Rae, and Clifford Rean; and Mesdames Bessie Armytage, Walter Bentley, Nancie Blair, Florence Creagh, May Conrade, Hylda Denison, Margaret Densmoy, Adelaide Gracey, Maud Henley, Maud Kirwan, Mary Lovett, Eva Lumley, Louise L'Estrange, Irene Moncrieff, Carina McAllister, Kitty Marion, Minnie Thurgate, and Millie Vere. The old questions of a minimum salary and the bogus theatre manager were discussed.

MR. WILLIAM GREET will produce Messrs. Edward and Harry Paulton's three-act farce, The Old Firm, at Newcastle, on Aug. 17, with Mr. Richard Golden, the well-known American comedian, in his original part of Daniel Hake. Mr. Clayton Greene, Miss Constance Hyem, Miss Alice Beet, and Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw will be in the cast.

MR. AND MRS. HOWARD L. TRACY (Miss Babs Stuart), who were with Mr. Lionel Rignold's répertoire of comedies, have been engaged by him and Miss Ada Blanche for the autumn tour of What the Butler Saw.

MR. PAUL GILMORE, who is starring in Boys of Company B in the States, is staying at the Hotel Russell, Russell-square. Mr. Gilmore is in London, to arrange for a London production of Company B.

MME. META ILLING has every reason to be highly satisfied with the results of her stay in what she pleases to call "your gigantic city." She has left greatly encouraged, and intends coming back to London in October next, to complete all the arrangements in connection with her projected "English Theatre" in Berlin.

MR. LINGFORD CARSON'S new play, The Great White Chief, will be produced at the Queen's Theatre, Keighley, on Saturday. An excellent company has been engaged, and a long tour booked. The staging is elaborate. Mr. Carson is also busily engaged rehearsing The Fight for a Throne company, The Power of the Cross, Lingford Carson's Répertoire company, and another new production, entitled My Mother, God Bless Her, a piece containing some striking situations and novel ideas.

THE theatre now being built at Aberaman will be lit up by electricity produced by its own suction gas plant. It is declared to be the finest hall in the Aberdare Valley, with admirable stage arrangements, that will fly all cloths, and large dressing-rooms and conveniences for artists. It is in the hands of a committee elected by public meetings and by the colliery workmen, who are determined to have the best management available to run first-class dramatic and variety entertainments. In addition to the hall is an institute, with baths, billiard rooms, &c., and a free library.

OWING to the success of The Gay Deceivers, it will be booked on until its London production in October, when two companies will be sent on tour. The piece, which abounds with screamingly funny situations and smart dialogue, to say nothing of bright numbers, has broken all musical comedy records in every town visited.

MISS ZOE DAVIS, who has been playing Kate in The Idler and Mabel in Captain Swift during Mr. Geo. E. Mudd's summer tour of those plays, has been courteously released by that gentleman to enable her to accept an engagement with Mr. Walter Melville for the autumn.

MR. R. A. ROBERTS, who is sending his drama, Straight from the Shoulder, on a tour, commencing on August Bank Holiday, has retained the services of that energetic young business manager Mr. Charles Boult as his sole responsible director.

MR. PERCY HUTCHISON starts his tour on Monday, July 27, at Bournemouth, with Brewster's Millions. Mr. Hutchison is taking the entire London production. Another of Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's companies will start at Llandudno on the 27th inst. Miss Mabel Love in Lady Frederick and that merry farce Mrs. Ponderbury's Past opened on Monday last at Blackpool. Other companies, including Mrs. Brown Potter in Lady Frederick, Miss Decima Moore in Mrs. Dot, will start on Aug. 3 and 10 at Brighton.

MISS EMMA HUTCHISON and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company will start on Monday, July 27, at Bournemouth in Brewster's Millions with a very powerful company and the original London production. Mr. Hutchison has been fortunate enough to secure Mr. Cyril Rawdon to produce the play and to remain with the company throughout the tour. Mr. Rawdon has a thorough knowledge of the piece, having been Mr. Frohman's stage-manager at the Hicks Theatre for the ten months of the London run, and many of the ship scene effects are his own invention. The cloud effects are supplied by Mr. Joseph Menchen, of New York. Mr. A. P. Kaye has been appointed general stage-manager. Over fifteen tons of scenery will be carried. The cast includes Messrs. Charles Esdale, Robert Forsythe, Henry Hampson, Aubrey Mather, Otho Hazlewood, Douglas Greet, Barnett Parker, Frank Hilton, and Percy Hutchison; and Miss Violet Ley, Miss Eva Stewart, Miss Sybil Walsh, and Miss Cicely Stuckey. Mr. Hutchison will visit Brighton, Hastings, Eastbourne, Yarmouth, Margate, Llandudno, Douglas, Harrogate, and Buxton in August and September, Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Newcastle, Oxford, Cambridge, Manchester, Cardiff, Plymouth, Coronet, and Kennington Theatres.

THE Portsmouth Watch Committee reported the receipt of the following letter from Mr. J. W. Boughton, of the New Theatre Royal. It read:—"As there is such a dearth of London successes this year, I have great difficulty in obtaining the class of productions suitable to the patrons of the King's Theatre. Under these circumstances, I am desirous of altering the character of the entertainment somewhat by giving high-class vaudeville performances occasionally, but before doing so think it only right to ask if there would be any objection on your part. For this purpose I wish to give the same comfort and indulgence to the patrons as is extended in Metropolitan theatres under the London County Council, as in many parts of the provinces, viz., the privilege of smoking."

THE committee reported having resolved that no objection be offered to smoking being allowed to take place in the King's Theatre. A councillor asked whether Mr. Boughton proposed to use the theatre for a music-hall performance without a music-hall licence. The Mayor: No, he cannot do that. Under this licence he is bound to give dramatic performances.

AN alderman pointed out that the Watch Committee had power to grant dramatic licences only. Music, singing and dancing licences had to be obtained from the Magisterial Bench. The Mayor added that all the Council was really concerned with was the proposal to allow smoking, and it was a matter of doubt whether that permission was necessary. If the character of the performance was not in keeping with the dramatic licence, then it would be for the police to act. The minute was adopted.

A PLEASING ceremony followed the matinée performance of Dear Old Charlie, at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, on Thursday afternoon last week. The curtain had rung down, and as the audience departed, the theatre staff assembled behind the scenes to make a presentation to Mr. Cecil Beryl, whose imminent departure from the Royal is a matter for sincere and widespread regret. Mr. Beryl, unaware of the purpose of the gathering, came down from his apartment in answer to the staff's petition, and was instantly received with a cordial burst of cheering.

MR. SOMMERLAD, the amiable conductor of the orchestra, made the presentation in a brief, but well-worded little speech, asking "the chief" to accept a little gift from those who had worked so long and harmoniously under his direction, as a token of the esteem and regard entertained for him, and as an earnest of the appreciation all the subscribers wished to express for the many kindnesses meted out to them by Mr. Beryl during his long reign at the Theatre Royal.

MR. BERYL, who was evidently deeply moved by this mark of loyalty and respect, in accepting the gift, a magnificent diamond ring, expressed his acknowledgments in feeling terms. He had never expected this. He regretted they had to part. They had been a happy family, but they had been disrupted, and he rather resented the fact that anyone should have interfered to break their little world of happy intimacy. He hoped their parting would be a short one. He would, therefore, only say "au revoir," but not good-bye. And with another burst of cheering the little ceremony ended.

"CONVICT 99," recently produced at the Crown, Peckham, will start a long tour on Sept. 14 at the Rotunda, Liverpool, with a strong company, new printing, and elaborate scenery.

MISS BEATRICE MARSDENE has been re-engaged by Mr. Reginald Dance for his autumn tour of Raffles, commencing July 30, to play Gwendoline Conran.

MR. FRED KNIGHT has, we regret to hear, been confined to the house with gout in both feet and an abscess under the left arm. He hopes, however, to be about again shortly.

THE Colchester Theatre Royal will be reopened by Mr. Charles Macdona on Monday next with Mr George Edwardes's company in The Merry Widow.

MISS DECIMA MOORE, whose stall at the Veterans' Relief Fête realised a large sum, will commence playing Mrs. Dot, at Brighton, on August Bank Holiday.

MESSRS. SMITH AND CARPENTER will produce the new play by Hall Caine and Louis N. Parker—the title of which has not yet been decided upon—at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday, Aug. 29.

"LADY FREDERICK" will be transferred from the New Theatre to the Haymarket on Aug. 1, a matinée being given on that date. This is the fifth theatre Lady Frederick has visited in London without a break in the run.

A CABLE has been received from Mr. J. C. Williamson, of Australia, reporting the great success of Miss Margaret Anglin in The Thief, and the prosperous visits of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch and The Red Mill.

AT the Comédie Française on Wednesday, in the course of the performance of Marion Delorme, Mlle. Delvair, who was playing Marion, a part she has acted more than 410 times, suddenly lost her memory in the very middle of the piece. The actress had played her part brilliantly throughout the first three acts. She had come to the scene where Marion entreats the King to pardon Didier. Suddenly she stammered and stopped. The prompter called out verse after verse, but the actress was totally unable to proceed.

M. MOUNET-SULLY played half the scene alone, while Mlle. Delvair made her exit. She had no sooner left the stage than she fainted. She would not, however, give up, but pluckily made her reappearance in the fifth act. It was in vain. She could not recall a word of her part, and M. Albert Lambert, who was playing Didier, had to sustain the whole of the dialogue. Mlle. Delvair, supported by three supers, succeeded in pronouncing the last apostrophe, "Regardez tous! Voilà l'homme rouge qui passe!" Dr. Valion, the brain specialist, says that the trouble was caused by irregular circulation of the blood in the region of the brain, and Mlle. Delvair needs rest.

AT the meeting of the council of the Actors' Association, held at 409, Strand, on Tuesday, with Mr. Lewis Casson in the chair, there were present Mr. H. W. Mote (honorary solicitor), Messrs. Clarence Derwent, Fred Grove, Chris Walker, E. Gurney, F. J. Arlton, Richard A. Greene, C. F. Collings, and F. Annerley; and Miss Agnes Imlay, Miss Lucy Sibley, and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary). The chairman read letters from Miss Rose Mathews, F. Llewellyn, and Mr. Topham, and the secretary received instructions to reply to Mr. Topham as per draft letter drawn up by the council.

THE secretary read the minutes of the council meeting held on Monday, July 6, and the meeting confirmed and the chairman signed same. The secretary read letters from Miss Rose Mathews, Mr. Kenneth Blackmore, and Mr. James Bennett, and received instructions to write to Miss Mathews that the council are unable to accept the proposal as to the song; to Mr. Blackmore agreeing with his letter; and to Mr. James Bennett to the effect that the council regret they are unable to take up his case owing to his not being a member, returning him his letter and suggesting that he should send it to the Touring Managers' Association, and to the theatrical press.

THE hon. solicitor reported that he had had interviews with eight members and advised them. The Finance Committee presented the report, which the council accepted. The council discussed at some length the question of a new typewriter, and on the proposal of Mr. Gurney, seconded by Mr. Grove, it was decided to ask Mr. Casson whether he would kindly consent to choose one, which he did. Miss C. Valetta, Mr. Douglas Cecil, and Mr. William Poel were elected as new members, and the secretary reported nine engagements, two being for a West-End theatre.

MR. LESLIE CARTER, who is concluding to-night his 387th performance as the Lion in The Lion and the Mouse, is terminating a two years and six months' engagement with Mr. Walter Maxwell, under whose management he has appeared in When It Was Dark, Little Mary, and Merely Mary Ann, and The Lion and the Mouse.

A CRICKET match between Harry Roxbury's Prince of Monte Carlo company and the Leeds Hippodrome (cupholders) was played last Saturday, at Leeds, and ended in a surprising victory for the Hippodrome eleven, this being the first defeat of the "Carlo" Boys. Going in first, the "Prince" were dismissed for the small total of 28 runs, when the cupholders reversed the score, and responded with 82. Many members of the profession were present.

THE Governors of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon have accepted Mr. Charles A. Buchel's fine portrait of Mr. Arthur Bourchier as Shylock, and it will be placed in their picture salon adjoining the theatre.

"THE present condition of the English stage is a subject upon which those most closely concerned with it are practically unanimous: they agree in describing it as deplorable," writes "A Spectator" in the Saturday Review. "Religious journals and Church congresses are in the habit of discussing earnestly the question, 'Why do we not go to church?' and with just the same accent and in almost the same words those interested in the stage inquire from time to time, 'Why do we not go to the theatre?' The excuses offered by the defaulters in both cases are practically the same. The non-churchgoer pleads that the church is too close or too draughty, that the music is unsatisfactory and so are the seat cushions, that he cannot pray and the preacher cannot preach; the fact being, briefly, that he believes he can spend his time more pleasantly or more profitably elsewhere. The non-playgoer's excuses may be summarised in the same way, and it is interesting to observe that in neither case is the explanation considered at all adequate.

"A LARGE number—probably much the largest number—of non-playgoers are not kept away either by artistic or religious scruples. They are to be accounted for by much more elementary reasons. The Frenchman goes habitually to the play not because he is an unusually good and gifted person, as those interested in the theatre are tempted to infer, but mainly because he is French; the Englishman does not stay away invariably because he is dull and narrow, but mainly because he is English. The one is born sociable, the other is not; the one considers nothing an amusement that he cannot share with his fellows, the other constantly selects a pleasure that he can enjoy almost alone.

"ROUSSEAU informs us, on the authority of St. John Chrysostom, that a certain barbarian visiting Rome was astonished at the number of theatres and public spectacles which the capital boasted. 'Have the Romans no wives and children,' said he, 'that they cannot spend their evenings at home?' This barbarian was evidently an Ancient Briton, a lineal ancestor of the innumerable men who come home after a day's work and settle down contentedly to a book or a hobby, a game or a talk with a friend. The young and restless may go out to join the throng of amusement seekers on whom Mr. Jones casts a disdainful eye, but the older man does not crave for any diversion that compels him to hurry over his dinner. If the theatre could be reached in five minutes by a subway from his house, he would probably go to it more often than he cares to do as things are, but grace has little and nature much to say in the matter.

"THIS, of course, is no answer to the accusation before us. It is vain for the Puritan to plead that as a mere question of inclination he would rather stay at home than go to the play. He is bound to do his duty at any sacrifice, and both writers, while holding out hopes that there is just a chance of his enjoying himself when he gets there, wisely throw all their strength into proving that it is his duty to go whether he enjoys it or not. The Puritan may be able to do without the theatre, but the theatre cannot do without the Puritan, who is, it seems, the only member of society who can be expected to insist upon a clean, sane, rational form of entertainment. Let him come to the theatre and the theatre is saved, and will save the nation in its turn. 'Set this supreme art upon the summit of your national esteem,' says its eloquent advocate, 'for it will draw all your national life and character to higher and more worthy levels, to starry heights of wisdom and beauty and resolve and aspiration.'

"THE Puritan is much disconcerted by these eloquent phrases; even if he happens to know something of the Greek drama, he has been wont to picture the modern playhouse as a place of amusement or would-be amusement, and is thus abruptly undeceived by Mr. Jones. A place of amusement? What an idea! On the contrary, it is a church—an improved, comfortable, airy, modernised kind of church. 'This, then, is the use of a theatre, that men may learn the great rules of life and conduct in the guise of a play; not formally, didactically, as they learn them at school and in church, but pleasantly, insensibly, spontaneously, and often with a more assured and lasting result in manners and conduct.' The Puritan is at liberty within limits to choose his own diversions, but if the stage is indeed a high moral agent, a teacher of vital truth, a powerful factor in our social redemption, he has no choice but to support it."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The Original Rackstraw.

SIR GEORGE POWER, the original Ralph Rackstraw of H.M.S. Pinafore, has been giving a Daily Chronicle representative some interesting recollections. "Well do I remember," he says, "the first production of the play at the Opera Comique. At that time, you must remember, Gilbert and Sullivan opera had not settled down into a series of assured successes. It was on its trial, and with H.M.S. Pinafore came the crisis—and the victory. Never shall I forget the labours and anxieties of the rehearsals.

"IT was a wonder some of us appeared 'on the night' at all. On the very day before the production, I remember, we rehearsed hard from 11 to 4. Then we had some food, and appeared in the last performance of The Sorcerer. Then, directly the curtain was down, we had a bite of supper, and began the full-dress rehearsal of H.M.S. Pinafore. This was over at about four o'clock in the morning. All the time the old directors were stamping up and down, utterly dissatisfied. 'Call this wit?' they exclaimed. 'Call this comic opera?' But Gilbert, who knew exactly what he was doing in those days as ever, pegged away. For myself, as you may imagine, I had precious little sleep even when I did get to bed, and I came to the first night as limp as a rag and overwhelmed with nervousness.

"PEOPLE have said," continued Sir George, "that H.M.S. Pinafore did not really go ahead until news came of the triumph of the juvenile production of it in America. This is not quite right. The piece was popular from the start. The real truth was that throughout the early days of the run there was a terrific managerial battle going on behind the scenes, which resulted in the victory of Mr. D'Oyly Carte as manager over the old directors, and the formation of the Savoy triumvirate of Carte and Gilbert and Sullivan.

"SULLIVAN was delightful—a real genius, and the kindest, gentlest of men. Although nearly always ill, even in those days, he never said a harsh word. He had a curious, wilful, irresistible sense of humour about him, too—partly due, perhaps, to the blending of Irish and Jewish blood in his veins. To my mind, much of the secret of the success of the Savoy operas is the way in which Sullivan entered into the spirit of Gilbert's topsy-turvy humours, and was pompous when Gilbert was sprightly, or, when Gilbert's satire was keenest and most acid, consciously wallowed in sentiment."

An Angel Unawares.

AT the Veterans' Fête, at Chelsea, last week, one of the gipsies, a popular London actor well disguised, was begging from two ladies. He assured them that the gipsies were almost at their last gip—in fact, hardly had a gip left in them. One of the ladies informed him that already amongst her contributions to the tribal funds she had given a French coin. "Oh, madam," said the Romany Rye, "you can hardly expect the poor gipsy to take a third-class return to France merely to cash it." "No, but it might take you there." "I see," was the reply, "sit on it and float over." When the fair ladies had departed, the Zingary learned that he had been talking to the Princess Louise.

An Unrehearsed Effect.

"AT the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Dublin," writes Mr. Butler Stanhope, "now turned into a factory, The Colleen Bawn was once produced, with real water effects. The manager had made and fixed a very large tank underneath the stage, and had filled it with water. The stage was so made to slide off, and show the element below. In the cave scene, Danny Mann, when shot, fell into the water, and Myles took his celebrated header into the tank, the water of which occasionally splashed up and drenched the orchestra. The revival was such a success that the manager determined to introduce the water scene into his production of The Lady of the Lake. All went well until the gallant FitzJames offered to guide the fair Ellen in her fairy frigate o'er the tide. He led her with all the grace imaginable to the boat, placed her carefully in it, leaped into the fragile bark, and seized the oar to push off, when lo! the boat gave a lurch on one side. The fair lady gave a scream, started up, and seized FitzJames round the neck; he lost his balance, and both fell headlong into the water, amidst the screams of the audience. The prompter rang down the act drop, which did not descend, for the flyman had witnessed the accident from aloft, and ran down to render assistance. He plunged in to rescue the lady, who came out dripping from head to foot, and in a most deplorable condition. Her white dress had changed to a very dark drapery, for the commotion had stirred up a considerable quantity of mud from the bottom of the tank, and the noble FitzJames was seen floundering about after his fair ringlet wig and his hat and feathers.

A Flat-faced Hen.

WHEN the company left Ireland, they brought the flyman to Liverpool as a sort of baggage-man, with his wife Nora to look after the wardrobe. It was their first journey across the channel, and next day Nora was suffering from mal-de-mer. Patsy set out to get a fowl to make some nice broth. Near the Court Theatre he saw a taxidermist's establishment. Something in the window caught his eye, and he went in and asked the shopman what he wanted for the flat-faced hen in the window. 'Flat-faced hen? We have no flat-faced hens here, sir.' 'Oh yes, you have one now in the window.' 'Oh,' said the shopkeeper, 'that's an owl.' 'I don't care how owld it is,' said Patsy, 'it's for boiling.' 'But, my dear sir,' said the man, 'that's a stuffed bird.' 'Stuffed, is it,' said Patsy. 'So much the better. 'Twill save Nora a lot of trouble.' 'But, don't you see, my fine fellow, that's a stuffed bird? I'm a taxidermist.' 'You're a what?' 'A taxidermist.' 'Oh, are you?' replied Patsy. 'Well, you may tax Macdermot as much as you like, but you don't tax me,' and he left the shop. He was wandering about, when he met one of the company, who saw Patsy, and said, 'Hallo, have you lost your way?' 'Not exactly,' said he, 'only a little mixed. If I was only ten minutes' walk from where I am, I'd know where I was.' The flat-faced hen was a standing joke in the company for some time."

Mr. Odell's Outing.

"Odell has often threatened to go to America," writes Mr. Brookfield in his "Random Reminiscences," "and on such occasions he has been fêted at farewell suppers by his myriads of friends, and has remained at home, to their great relief and delight. The only time he actually went to that interesting Transatlantic suburb he told no one. It so chanced that Pinero was going by the same boat. It was that brilliant playwright's first excursion of the kind, and he left this country with a good deal of ceremony. There was a special carriage full of correspondents, who travelled to Liverpool to see him off. They accompanied the illustrious author on board his vessel, and as the tender left the side of the Cunarder there was much cheering and waving of handkerchiefs, and even weeping. As the little boat faded out of sight in the direction of Liverpool, and the ocean greyhound bade her farewell through a hoarse steam-hooter, and dipped her nose into the waves, Pinero, himself a little overcome by emotion, turned from the taffrail, and suddenly saw, seated at his elbow, the quaint form of his old friend Odell, looking exactly as usual—the same coat, the same hat, the same locks. 'Odell!' cried Pinero, in astonishment. 'Why, what on earth are you doing here?' 'I'm—I'm seeing myself off,' replied Odell simply."

SAVOY THEATRE.

On Tuesday, July 14, Revival of
"H.M.S. PINAFORE."

Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B...MR. C. H. WORKMAN
Captain Corcoran ....MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
Ralph Rackstraw .....MR. HENRY HERBERT
Dick Deadeye .....MR. HENRY A. LYTTON
Bill Bobstay .....MR. LEICESTER TUNKS
Bob Becket .....MR. FRED HEWETT
Josephine .....MISS ELSIE SPAIN
Hebe .....MISS JESSIE ROSE
Little Buttercup.....MISS LOUIE RENE

The revival of H.M.S. Pinafore at the Savoy Theatre on Tuesday evening was one of those hearty, whole-souled successes that does a manager good to attain. One is always a little anxious, in the case of these revivals, lest the reproduction may not bear comparison with the original performance; but with the Opera Comique cast distinctly in one's memory, we may say with confidence that the performance of H.M.S. Pinafore at the Savoy is in every respect equal, and in some superior, to the 1878 one. It is satisfactory to find that few, if any, attempts have been made to improve on the original performance. Here and there a little new business has been introduced. Captain Corcoran's scorn for Sir Joseph Porter's tyranny and impudence is less carefully concealed than it was thirty years ago; and, if we mistake not, in 1878 Ralph Rackstraw did not offer to shake hands with the First Lord after his expression of equality. In consequence of his suffering from a cold, Mr. Barrington's song to the moon at the beginning of the second act was omitted; and the midshipmite does not suck his sugar-stick, but these are mere details.

There is little to be written at this date about H.M.S. Pinafore. At the time at which it was produced the English people were undergoing a reaction against melodramatic sentimentalism, and the cynical tone of the libretto was quite in sympathy with the general feeling. Apart from its derision of patriotism, naval heroism, love in a cottage, and civil treatment of sailors—some of the satire would have delighted Captain Kettle—there is a vast amount of fun and humour which is general, and not special or topical. The airs are so swinging and spirited that it is possible to enjoy "For he is an Englishman" without troubling about the sting of the sarcasm involved in the verses; and the burlesque of all the old-fashioned stilted dialogue and the stock situations of melodrama, though not as telling as it seemed to the last generation, is still productive of hearty merriment. The general treatment by the artists is freer and less sardonic, and the singing deserves the warmest and most enthusiastic praise.

A striking personal success must be recorded in the case of Miss Elsie Spain, the Josephine. Miss Spain is good all round. She is not only pretty, but dainty in style and carriage. She has a sweet and engaging expression, and dances lightly and neatly. She possesses an excellent voice, which she knows how to use, and there is an apparent artlessness about her which conceals a keen and alert intelligence. Even when not actively occupied she listens most expressively, and speaks her lines with all the seriousness which Sir W. S. Gilbert's dialogue demands. Her appearance as Josephine was a complete triumph. Her songs were encored again and again, and she attained an absolute and immediate success. Mr. Henry Herbert sings well as Ralph Rackstraw, and acts with all the necessary mock seriousness. Mr. C. H. Workman, while following Mr. George Grossmith's make-up as Sir Joseph Porter and keeping conscientiously to the old traditions of the character, strikes an individual note and gives a performance quite fresh and original in tone. As for Mr. Rutland Barrington, it can only be said that his Captain Corcoran has grown riper and rounder in years; otherwise it is the same inimitable performance as that of 1878. One could not wish it altered in the smallest degree. Mr. Henry A. Lytton's Dick Deadeye has all the necessary grotesque servility, and is a sound and careful performance; and Mr. Leicester Tunks makes a bold and breezy boatswain, and sings "For he is an Englishman" with all the necessary power and vigour. Miss Jessie Rose gives a very bright and piquant performance as Hebe, and Miss Louie René makes a comely Buttercup, and sings the music of the part particularly well. Mr. Fred Hewett does good work at Bob Becket. Mr. W. Raphael's Portsmouth Harbour scene is charmingly picturesque. The chorus is perfect in precision and attack, and is drilled and marshalled au merveille; and the opera went on Tuesday with wonderful spirit and zest, a result which was greatly due to the excellent stage management of Mr. Albert James, and the fine conducting of Mr. François Cellier, who, with Sir William Gilbert and Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, was called before the curtain at the conclusion, amidst a scene of enthusiasm which reminded one of the "palmy" days of Gilbert and Sullivan opera.

On Wednesday evening H.M.S. Pinafore was preceded by a new operetta, words by Frederick Fenn, and composed by Philip Michael Faraday, entitled—

"A WELSH SUNSET."

Jenny Jones .....MISS BEATRICE MEREDITH
Griffith David .....MR. STRAFFORD MOSS
Mrs. Jones .....MISS ETHEL MORRISON
Mary Fewlass .....MISS MABEL GRAHAM
Nancy Raine .....MISS BEATRICE BOARER
Gwenny Davis .....MISS BERTHA LEWIS
Owen Rhys .....MR. LEO SHEFFIELD
John Lloyd .....MR. SYDNEY GRANVILLE
Morgan LleweHyn .....MR. ALLAN MORRIS

First pieces at the Savoy have generally been in the vein of comedy; but a new departure has been made with the production of A Welsh Sunset, which is from the pens of Frederick Fenn and Philip Michael Faraday, who collaborated in the successful opera of Amasis. In a pretty village nestling at the foot of the Welsh hills the lads and lasses are rejoicing at the return of Griffith David, who has triumphed as a singer at the Bala Eistedfodd. Griffith's mind, naturally, is filled with ambitious hopes, which are by no means discouraged by his young friends and companions, Owen Rhys, John Lloyd, and Morgan Llewellyn. He speaks of his day-dreams to Jenny Jones, his betrothed, who, weak and ill, sits at her mother's door. If success comes she shall share it; she shall be a great lady. It was to her really that he had so fervently sung his romantic love-song at the competition, and she is ever in his thoughts. Jenny asks him to sing it again, that she may hear it. Her mother suggests that she is too tired, and that Griffith should put it off until to-morrow. But Jenny insists. To-morrow, she says, seems such a long time coming; and, humouring her, Griffith sings. When he has finished, he steals to her side, imagining her to be asleep, but Jenny is dead.

Miss Beatrice Meredith, a young actress and singer who should make her mark, is a pathetic Jenny; Mr. Strafford Moss, an excellent singer, acts with considerable feeling as Griffith David; Miss Ethel Morrison as Mrs. Jones is quaint in her dance; and Mr. Leo Sheffield, Mr. Sydney Granville, and Mr. Allan Morris share the success of the number, which foreshadows in verse the success of Griffith David in London. The four ladies, Miss Ethel Morrison, Miss Mabel Graham, Miss Beatrice Boarer, and Miss Bertha Lewis, add to the gaiety of the opening scene by their singing and dancing.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL MATINEE.

Close upon four thousand people attended the matinée given at the Lyceum Theatre (kindly lent for the occasion by Messrs. Smith and Carpenter) on Tuesday afternoon, in aid of the fund which has been founded for the removal of King's College Hospital to South London. The performance was honoured by the patronage of the Queen, the Duchess of Sparta, Princess Frederick Charles of Hesse, and Princess Victoria, who occupied a box. Her Majesty, on entering the theatre, was presented with a handsome bouquet of pink carnations by the youngest daughter of Mr. Henry R. Smith, one of the managing-directors of the Lyceum, and to Princess Victoria was handed a bouquet of white and pink roses. The box occupied by the Royal party was made beautiful by a pleasing arrangement of palms and pink hydrangeas, and it was draped by a white silk coverlet bordered with crimson.

The programme opened with an overture consisting of Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance," magnificently played by the Lyceum orchestra, augmented on this occasion by instrumentalists from the Palace Theatre and Holborn Empire. Mr. Herman Finck, the musical director of the Palace, Herr Raimund Pechotsch (Lyceum), Mr. James Sale, Mus. Doc. (Holborn Empire), Mr. Edmond Rickett, and Mr. Norman O'Neill, had kindly volunteered to conduct during the afternoon.

The dramatic portion of the entertainment began with

"A MATTER-OF-FACT HUSBAND,"

A Comedy, in One Act, by John Cutler, K.C.

Bella .....MISS ELLA DIXON
Henry .....MR. J. GELDERD

The gentleman named Henry in the piece possesses a most prosaic mind, and common sense has a stronger appeal for him than mere sentiment, however pretty. In this respect, Bella, his wife, offers a strange contrast. In her there is the spirit of romance—a lively little spirit not unknown to thousands of her sex. She gets tired of what she considers their humdrum, homely existence. She would even welcome such a peculiar diversion as that which might be afforded by a visit from a dangerous criminal—a celebrated housebreaker, for instance. Her husband evolves a plan which he hopes will cure her of her romantic ideas, at least in this direction. So he accoutres himself in ferocious-looking hood and mask and articles of dress, and breaks into his own house. What follows may be easily imagined. Bella discovers to her great discomfiture that such a "romantic" visitor as one who talke high-falutin' nonsense and impudently embraces her is not at all a nice companion, and — well, she learns her lesson. Miss Ella Dixon is quite charming as the wife, in spite of her demonstrably perturbed condition at the appearance of what, after all, she considers an unwelcome guest; and Mr. J. Gelderd gives an entertaining account of himself as the strange intruder.

The following item was Scene 2 of Mr. Walter Howard's successful romantic military drama,

"THE PRINCE AND THE BEGGAR MAID."

Prince Olaf of Sylvania .....MR. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Hildred .....MR. ERIC MAYNE
Michael .....MR. HALLIWELL HOBBES
Col. Wellenburg .....MR. S. MAJOR JONES
Capt. Karsburg .....MR. SIDNEY VAUTIER
Capt. Schwartz .....MR. ERNEST CRESPAN
Capt. Sudermann.....MR. ALEC WEATHERLEY
Lieut. Welder .....MR. WYNFRED WILLIAMS
Lieut. Schultz .....MR. HARRY HILLIARD
Nathan .....MR. HERBERT DANSEY
Princess Monica of Illyria....MISS NORA KERIN

Mr. Lauderdale Maitland was once more seen in his spirited characterisation of the gallant Prince Olaf, Mr. Eric Mayne in his convincing portrayal of the villainous Hildred, and Miss Nora Kerin in the pathetic part of the self-sacrificing Princess Monica. Mr. Halliwell Hobbes, in his effective delineation of the cripple Michael, and Mr. Herbert Dansey as the dumb servant, also did notable work, the remaining members of the cast rendering able support. The fine scene representing the Great Hall of Wellenberg Castle excited much admiration.

In the succeeding item Mr. Matheson Lang and Miss Hutin Britton appeared in the wooing scene from The Taming of the Shrew, Mr. Lang submitting his vigorous and breezy characterisation of Petruchio, and Miss Britton playing with much zest the rôle of the vixenish Katherine.

Among the single performances, Mme. Ethel Bevans won loud applause for her cultured vocalisation of "Softly awakes my heart"; and Mr. Henry Ainley thrilled his hearers with his recitation of Rudyard Kipling's "Gentleman Rankers" and "The Wee Cot." Mrs. Beerbohm Tree's elocutionary powers were heard to much advantage in the recitation "Lorraine, Lorraine, Loree"; and Miss Phyllis Lett sang in pleasing style "In my sad hours." Miss Marie Tempest and Mr. Graham Browne created huge merriment in the duologue The Impertinence of the Creature. Miss Ada Reeve gave an enjoyable selection from her répertoire, Mr. Pierre de Reeder accompanying at the piano, the song "I had to tell the girl she didn't suit" fairly bringing the house down. Miss Maggie Teyte gave evidence of her highly-trained voice in a song from La Tosca; and Miss Winifred Emery and Mr. Dawson Millward acted in finished style the love scene between the awkward student and his cousin in The Hunchback. Special interest was centred around the doings of Miss Maud Allan, who appeared by permission of Mr. Alfred Butt and the directors of the Palace Theatre Company. Miss Allan's exhibition of her wonderful classical dancing furnished one of the best-appreciated items in the programme. The beautiful orchestration of Chopin's "Mazurka" and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," played during the dances, gave an added delight to the motions of the graceful follower of Terpsichore, Mr. Hermann Finch conducting the while.

A melancholy Irish play "in two panels" was

"THE TRAGEDY OF TRUTH,"

by Rosamund Langbridge, with Special Music by Mr. Norman O'Neill.

Michael Hennessy .....MR. MARTIN HARVEY
Mrs. Riordan .....MISS MARY RORKE
Mary Riordan .....MISS N. DE SILVA

This piece was originally produced under the title of The Spell at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on Nov. 2, 1906, and revived by Mr. Martin Harvey at the Adelphi on June 17 last year. Miss N. de Silva enacted the pathetic rôle of the unfortunate girl, whose sense of honour compels her to tell the truth to her sweetheart concerning the spell which has been cast over him by her mother, with a skill which won for her the unstinted admiration of the audience. Mr. Martin Harvey as Michael once more gave us one of his virile portrayals; and Miss Mary Rorke furnished an interesting character-sketch of the old mother.

Mr. Cyril Maude and his company were seen in

"FRENCH AS HE IS SPOKE."

A Comedy, in One Act, adapted by Gaston Mayer from the French of Tristan Bernard.

Peter .....MR. CYRIL MAUDE
Monsieur Villiers .....MR. D. J. MCCARTHY
Charlie Lingarde .....MR. ERNEST MAINWARING
Police Inspector .....MR. JOHN HARWOOD
Waiter .....MR. A. G. ONSLOW
Policeman .....MR. C. HAMPDEN
Rosine .....MISS MADGE TITHERADGE
Hotel Manageress.....MISS EMMA CHAMBERS

Needless to say, the house keenly relished the intensely funny situations in which Peter finds himself as the result of his duplicity in regard to his knowledge of French, and Mr. Cyril Maude admirably brought out all the farcical possibilities of the character, and he received excellent assistance from the other members of his company.

A long afternoon's amusement concluded with

"ROSENCRANTZ AND GUILDENSTERN," an Original Play in Three Tableaux,
by Sir W. S. Gilbert.

King.....SIR WILLIAM GILBERT
Queen .....MISS MARION TERRY
Hamlet .....CAPTAIN MARSHALL
Rosencrantz .....MR. NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Guildenstern .....MR. JAMES HEARN
Polonius .....MR. A. E. BENEDICT
1st Player .....MR. G. SKILBERT
2nd Player .....MISS MAY MARTYN
Ophelia .....MISS ROSALIE TOLLER

Courtiers, Ladies-in-Waiting, &c.:—MR. A. B. HORNE, MR. W. S. BIRCH, MR. N. H. M. BURKE, MR. G. MATTHEWS, MR. R. H. HODGES, MR. E. T. H. LEA, MR. N. P. PRITCHARD, MISS FRANCES LEIGHTON, MISS SYBIL THORNDYKE, MISS SYLVIA DRYHURST, MRS. MARK BARR, MISS NELL TOLLER, MISS MARJORY MAUDE, and MISS DOROTHY FANE.

The scene was the Palace of Elsinore, and to "mak siccar," as the Scots say, that it was a regal abode, a sign was exhibited bearing the words: "This is a Palace." The first tableau consisted solely of this place of aristocratic resort, and after the audience had had just sufficient time to realise its dignified grandeur, the curtain was lowered. On being raised the same scene was exhibited to nearly four thousand admiring eyes, and in came the King and Queen. The former is sorrow-stricken at the reflection of one of his youthful indiscretions, the said indiscretion consisting of his having written a play which enjoyed a run of ten minutes. His Majesty had enacted that all who hissed or laughed at his dramatic effort should be put to death, and well and truly had his awful will been obeyed. Passing from his own theatrical worries, the King expresses himself as much concerned with the abyss of dreamy melancholy into which young Hamlet's mind seems to have become submerged. He therefore employs Rosencrantz and Guildenstern to divert the unhappy youth's attention from himself. Ophelia, we learn, is not in love with Hamlet but with Rosencrantz, and she and the two merry varlets who have been instructed to succour the Prince from the thrall of his absent-mindedness conceive the idea of bringing about his eternal disgrace. Therefore they induce Hamlet to produce the unfortunate play written by the King so many years before, and Ophelia obtains a copy of it from the archives of her father, who is Lord Chamberlain. The whole Court indulge in shrieks of ridicule as they hear the opening of the piece. Hamlet, who has been "rolling his glassy eyes" while reading the prologue, is banished to what the King considers a much more intelligent country than his own, and the Prince leaves for England to the strains of "Rule, Britannia." Sir William Gilbert proved a most droll person as the King, and the lines he spoke seemed scarcely in consonance with the majesty of his gorgeous regal robes. Captain Marshall was an exceedingly diverting personage as Hamlet, and he entered fully into the spirit of the part. Miss Marion Terry as the Queen looked not one whit less dignified in her robes than did her spouse in the play, and she spoke her lines well. Mr. Nigel Playfair as Rosencrantz and Mr. James Hearn as Guildenstern provoked a good deal of merriment; and Miss Rosalie Toller, with blanched cheeks and white hair, capitally burlesqued the tearful Ophelia. The music of the piece was arranged and conducted by Mr. Edmond Rickett.

The names of the programme sellers were given as Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Margaret Cooper, Miss Elfrida Clement, Miss Alice Crawford, Miss Maud Smith, Miss Beatrice Ferrar, Miss May Martyn, Miss Isabel Roland, Miss Olive Terry, Miss Madge Titheradge, Miss Sybil Thorndyke, Miss Rosalie Toller, Miss Nell Toller, Miss Brandon Thomas, Miss Dagmar Wiehe, Miss Dorothy Grimston, and Miss Ada Potter. Much good service was also rendered by the honorary secretary, Mr. George Heyer; the acting-manager and treasurer, Mr. W. F. Crowe; and the stage-managers, Mr. William Devereux, Mr. Henry Armstrong, and Mr. S. Major Jones.

ACTORS v. AUTHORS.

By kind permission of the Marylebone C.C., the annual cricket match between actors and authors had been arranged to take place at Lord's on Thursday afternoon, in aid of the Actors' Benevolent Fund and Actors' Orphanage. The hour fixed for the commencement of the game was eleven, but the start was considerably delayed owing to the late arrival of some of the players. The weather was very dull and threatening, and altogether the condition of affairs was the reverse of exhilarating when a start was made. It was not surprising that under the depressing circumstances the attendance was very poor—less than a hundred spectators being present when the first ball was bowled. The luncheon interval was taken an hour earlier than usual, to give the weather a chance of clearing up, but unfortunately it only grew gradually worse, compelling an early abandonment of the match, to the great disappointment of all interested both in the game and in the deserving institutions which were to be benefited.

The actors' team consisted of Messrs. Harold Wilde, J. Saville Foster, B. S. Foster, V. O'Connor, Leslie Holland, C. Aubrey Smith, R. Selby, B. Egerton, Talbot Homewood, P. F. Knox, and H. H. Ainley; while the authors included Major F. J. Guggisberg, Sir A. Conan Doyle, S. S. Pawling, Cecil Headlam, H. Carrick, A. Anderson, W. Rhoades, A. H. Wood, E. Cleveland Stevens, H. Bleakley, and P. G. Wodehouse. The umpires were Mycroft and Pougher.

The actors' captain won the toss, and the first pair of batsmen in the list were Mr. Harold Wilde and Mr. J. Saville Foster. The first-mentioned made five runs ere seeking the seclusion of the pavilion; and Mr. Foster shortly after was neatly stumped, his score being two. Mr. B. S. Foster, who followed, was out to a catch by Mr. Anderson.

In the meantime, however, the rain had been coming down with a steady persistency that foreboded a wet afternoon, and at half-past twelve, when the score had reached twenty-five for the loss of three wickets, the players made their way to the pavilion. "Why do they want to give over?" asked a jocular spectator who occupied a seat within the shelter of the reserved stand, "it don't rain in here." But by this time it was raining more steadily than ever in the open, and an official inspection of the condition of the wicket resulted in a declaration that no further play was probable. Patiently, however, the representatives of the stage and literature waited for the downpour to cease, but the Clerk of the Weather willed it otherwise, and ultimately it was announced that the match had been postponed until Sept. 3, when, it is hoped, the erratic gentleman just mentioned will be in a better frame of mind.

Trixie Armytage .....MISS GLADYS MASON
Chaplain O'Rafferty ....MR. CHARLES DANVERS
Nolan .....MR. VICTOR BROOK
James .....MR. FRANCIS DRAKE

The announcement of the production of a work by John Strange Winter drew a good house to the Scala on Friday evening, July 10, and there was much applause during the performance of Trixie, a comedy, in three acts. To the initiated, however, it speedily became evident that in its present shape there is no chance of a run for the piece at a London theatre. In these days, when an Archdeacon invites a dancer to tea, there can be nothing really outré in a music-hall star hob-robbing with a Bishop, and with the great improvement in the social status of the variety profession, one can easily understand her being on good terms with the officers of Blankhampton Barracks. As she is a "real good sort," and possesses an attractive personality, she is heartily welcomed when she comes into the lives of Captain Richard Vernon and Margaret Chatfield, the Bishop's daughter. The former's proposal for Margaret is unceremoniously refused. The Bishop has other intentions for his nineteen-year-old girl. She is to marry Lord St. Barbe, an objectionable peer, whose past is at least partly known to Trixie. She really acts as the fairy godmother of the piece, for in order to unite two loving hearts she enters into a plot with Wilfred Parker—the youngest subaltern of the regiment, who is called "Babe"—to mildly compromise the Bishop. His usual prudence deserts his lordship when he is the guest of the regiment. His heart is warmed by excellent wine, and a subtle liqueur is a little too much for him. In a moment of recklessness he promises to put up Trixie for the night. Of this incident the most is made by the artful minx, who promises to cease her pestering of the prelate with letters providing that he gives his consent to the love match which his daughter has mapped out for herself.

Mr. Fred Lewis, who appeared by the courtesy of Mr. Frederick Harrison, was responsible for an excellent character-sketch of the Bishop, whose complacent enjoyment of the good things of this world could not be doubted. Mr. Lewis kept the part in the key of high comedy, but never failed to be humorous when opportunity offered. Miss Gladys Mason submitted a more than usually refined study of Trixie, the music hall artist, about whom there was scarcely a particle of vulgarity. For the sake of theatrical contrast the part might have been played on broader lines—somewhat on those of the Kangaroo girl in The Arabian Nights. Miss Sylvia Morris made a girlish and attractive Margaret Chatfield; Miss Betty Stannard created a favourable impression as Mrs. Desmond; Mr. Laurence Leyton was a genial Captain Wilson-King; Mr. C. F. Collings evoked laughter in the rôle of the talkative and oppressive Lieut.-Colonel Tonkinson; Mr. Herbert H. Herbert was consistent in his portraiture of St. Barbe; Mr. Charles King scored a conspicuous success as Wilfred Parker; Mr. Gordon Bailey was a chivalrous and manly lover as Captain Richard Vernon; and Mr. Charles Danvers had a genially Irish manner as Chaplain O'Rafferty.

Trixie was preceded by a shadowy and stupid piece, by Isabel Alexander, entitled

"THE WHITE LADY."

Sir Francis Mavius .....MR. HENLEY ATTWATER
Jennings .....MR. FRANCIS DRAKE
Jessamine Hope .....MISS HELEN CHILD

Miss Jessamine Hope walks about the library at Oaklands, imagining that she is in a deserted house, but suddenly discovers Sir Francis Mavius fast asleep in an armchair. After a great deal of rhapsodical chatter to herself, she kisses the owner, who, on waking up, plays a bar or two of "The Moonlight Sonata." Eventually he sees a hand stealing from behind curtains to switch off the electric light. He threatens to shoot, and Jessamine comes forth to make an immediate conquest. The acting was as undistinguished as the piece.

MR. COMPTON AND THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Mr. Edward Compton concludes his golfing and "simple life" holiday at Sheringham to-day, and commences rehearsals for a long tour on Monday next.

The eminent comedian has been so pleased with his little outing that he has summed it up in a few stanzas, which we append:—

"THE SIMPLE LIFE."

I'm here alone on the Norfolk coast
With neither children nor wife,
But having a better time than most—
I'm living "the simple life."

Up in the morn with the tuneful lark,
I play a good fork and knife,
Then pure fresh air till the night shows dark—
That's part of "the simple life."

A meal or two of the plainest food,
Avoidance of care or strife,
Scarcely a taste of the liquor that's good—
It's bad for "the simple life."

A dip in the briny at eight or nine,
A whirl in the "Duke of Fife"
(A motor that's steered by a pal o' mine—
He's part of my "simple life").

Dinner done, we all sit in the gloaming,
The gramaphone's charms then rife;
Airs Italian to "Home-sweet-home"-ing
Give joy to "the simple life."

But the greatest charm is the game of golf,
Played where the fever is rife,
With a swinging drive for the hole you're off—
"What ho!" for "the simple life."

But another game they play down here—
Husband, bachelor, maid, and wife—
The game of Bridge; but it costs you dear,
And it spoils "the simple life."

EDWARD COMPTON.

Sheringham, July 14.

Not Exactly the Same.

"ONE Saturday morning, a few years ago," writes Mr. Harry Bristow, "I had left my copy of The Era at home, and wanted to refer to it while out walking; so I called at an hotel not a hundred yards from a well-known East-end theatre, and, after being served with some refreshment, asked for the loan of The Era. The barmaid, who was evidently a new hand, made a search for the paper, came back, and said she was very sorry she could not find The Era, but they had the Builder. Would that do?"

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE OXFORD.

Mr. George Leyton, no stranger to audiences at the Oxford, where he long since won popularity by the excellence of his dramatic work, is this week presenting his new military scena, The Last Muster, written by Mr. J. P. Harrington and composed by Mr. James W. Tate, with incidental music by Mr. Orlando Powell. In the opening scene, Outside Chelsea Hospital, Mr. Leyton, who introduces twelve genuine survivors of the Crimean War and Indian Mutiny, ranging in ages from seventy-two to eighty-one, sings of the gallant charge of the handful of heroes against overwhelming odds, a transparent cloth showing the Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The concluding picture represents the interior of Chelsea Church—"the last muster"—the dozen war-worn veterans seated in pews for the service and the boys of the Duke of York's School lining the aisles. Mr. Leyton addresses the veterans in stirring words, and both boys and veterans march off singing the inspiriting chorus "Fighting in the ranks of heroes." On Wednesday, the night of our visit,, the sketch was most enthusiastically cheered, Mr. Leyton being called several times. Mr. Leyton's fine voice and appearance were admirably employed in the song, which he rendered with all his well-known eloquence and earnestness. The singing of Mr. Philip Nolan's choristers in the church scene, Mr. Morris Angel's costumes, and the fine scenery and admirable effects of Mr. W. T. Hemsley all contributed towards the success of the scena. It may be mentioned that Mr. Leyton is continuing here his laudable practice of selling the words of the song for 1d. and handing the proceeds—which up to date have amounted to the handsome sum of £3020—to Crimean and Mutiny veterans throughout the kingdom.

One of the most mirth-provoking interludes in the Oxford bill is still Mr. Will Evans's impersonation of Miss Queenie Winterbottle, the coy damsel who discourses so amusingly of her breach-of-promise case; and the hilarity of the audience is also provoked by the comedian's extravagant burlesque of "pure art dancing to classical music." There is much appreciation for the expert juggling of Radford and Valentine, and the numberless ingenious devices they employ to create merriment never fail, their occupancy of the stage being greatly enjoyed. Mr. T. E. Dunville has a couple of funny songs in "Actions speak louder than words" and "The Postman"; and Mr. Sam Mayo is also well supplied with comic material, and secures a flattering reception. Mr. G. H. Elliott, the favourite chocolate-coloured coon, appears as a dandy darkey to sing of "Sue, Sue, Sue," a tuneful number, admirably rendered, the accompanying dance greatly adding to the attractiveness of the song.

That finished and versatile dancer My Fancy is presenting with much success her novel dancing scena "Winter, Spring, and Summer." In the Winter scene she executes a skilful skate dance; Spring discloses her as a dainty maiden who trips it lightly, fashioning the while an elaborate pattern from a large sheet of paper; and the concluding scene, Summer, represents the sea-shore, the dancer, who presents a charming picture in a dainty bathing costume, here giving an exhibition of her well-known ability as a sand-dancer. An appropriate and well-painted back-cloth illustrates each season, and the accomplished exponent of the "light fantastic" is loudly acclaimed at the conclusion of her arduous and attractive turn.

Miss Addie Dorina evinces much cleverness at character impersonations in her sketch Dr. Spot's Patients, an interlude that is greatly enjoyed; Mr. Randolph King is another accomplished protean actor, who changes in a brace of shakes from a burglar of the Bill Sikes pattern to an old miser, who croons over his gold; Dale and O'Malley are a really funny pair of cross-talk comedians who never fail to create merriment; and other enjoyable items in the alluring programme are Mr. John Le Hay in Poor Beggar; Mr. Louis A. Simon, Miss Grace Gardner and company, in The New Coachman; Miss Katie Marsh, comedienne; Chanti, in quick-change act; Miss Isabelle Dillon, Emil Solbrigg's Automatons, Miss Queenie Essex, and Miss Dorothy L. Clark.

THE BEDFORD.

Standing room only was all there was to be found when we visited this popular hall this week, and it speaks volumes for the success of Mr. B. Pearce Lucas's management to find such crowded houses at this season.

The top of the bill is filled by Sydney Mason and Theresa Moore, who present their society sketch, The Usurer, which is a very dramatic play and of intense interest—the story of the unfaithful wife, who, not knowing her husband to be a moneylender, visits his office with her lover. The final scene is especially striking, and the whole sketch is strongly written and holds the audience throughout. Mr. Sydney Mason as the husband presents a fine delineation of the character, and Miss Moore depicts the wife in a finished manner. Messrs. H. Russell and Syd Leslie also lend valuable assistance.

Morander and Darius present a clever gymnastic scene, and their simultaneous work on the bars is very smart and cleverly executed. Fred and Lulu Camplin appear in a very bright little interlude, and receive a terrific reception for their songs and clever patter and neat dancing. The Sisters Hall are a tuneful pair of singers, whose duet, "Sunshine," is very prettily rendered and wins great popularity for the singers. A very entertaining number is that of the Seven Spots, who sing and dance and give great delight by their bright and entertaining show, and they are the recipients of a very pleasing welcome. Lallie Brooke presents a novel scena entitled Girls Past and Present, in which she appears in several old-fashioned costumes and makes quite lightning changes to modern costumes à la Sandow Girl, Gibson Girl, and others that are so popular at the moment. Miss Brooke sings delightfully, and her quick changes are little short of marvellous. Her crinoline costume creates intense amusement. Eugene and Willie are an amusing couple, who seem to be able to play the violin in any position, even to waltzing; they also give a fine acrobatic display. The Eastern Nightingale, Princess Pokahuntas, sings very sweetly, and her song "The echo in the wood" was admirably rendered, while the singer also sang "Home, sweet home" in a most artistic manner which brought down the house. Mr. Harry Russon appears and sings a smart song, and also once again gives Kipling's "Gunga Dhin," which shows off his talent as a reciter, and the reception he received must have been most gratifying. The Six Idols appeared, and gave a very novel entertainment, The Dancing Academy, which is a very fresh idea and should make a big success. The dancing is of a very high order and very smart; also they introduce some distinctly pretty songs, and the whole turn is full of vivacity, and made a big success. Connie Mostyn, sério and dancer; and Leo Olrac, vocalist, also contributed to the programme, while the Bioscope, as ever, is up to date and interesting as usual. The orchestra, under Mr. George Hatley, adds much to the enjoyment of the performance. Mr. Donald Brown, the acting-manager, is unfailing in his courtesy.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

The Camberwell Empire holds the record of introducing a larger number of provincial artists than any house in the metropolitan area. In the current bill there are several that can be classed in this category. Foremost come Squire Wyndham and Tom Waters in a pantomimic musical mélange, The Professor and His Pupil, that is productive of uproarious merriment. Into the Professor's studio comes a quaint pupil—long, gaunt, and ugly—munching a huge slice of bread and jam, who informs the Professor that he has been sent by his mother to take singing lessons. Much of the fun that ensues is caused by the Professor's endeavours to teach his irrepressible pupil the first rudiments of bel canto, and after much merry fooling his final endeavour to induce his pupil to join him in a duet of "Sally in our alley" is productive of more discord than harmony. Sheila McNeil, a buxom Scottish comedienne, tells many funny little anecdotes à la Lauder, and is rewarded with ample applause; Mark Brae, in his song-scena On the Railway, hits off in a merry fashion the topics of the day, while his dancing is to be commended for its tireless activity. In a pretty garden scene the Roxbys indulge in a pot-pourri of song and dance. A pathetic ballad, "Come back home again," a sentimental ditty, "The moon between the trees," and a coon song and dance, "Looking for Liza"—the latter remarkable for the one-leg dance by the male performer—are among their numbers.

Harry Brayne and Bert Lloyd appear in that screaming absurdity The Tree of Truth, which they have brought fully up to date by their reference to the leading topics of the day; while their love-making sends their hearers into fits of uncontrollable laughter. Zenora, in a marvellous exhibition of hand-balancing and jumping, earns liberal applause, especially for his daring table jump. The Bennetts give a dainty and pleasing entertainment, their singing of "The Dandies" arousing well-merited enthusiasm, their dancing and clever jugglery also making a deep impression.

Amos Howard, a smart American coloured comedian, with his song "I ain't coming home" and buck sand-dancing, fairly brings down the house, and in response to an undeniable encore he gives a fine imitation of a railway train entering and leaving a tunnel. Will Harris as a grotesque female is funny in a well-written patter song "He must have changed his mind," and his second effort, "I planted in my garden," is equally good. Esme Delmar is very chic in her invitation song "I'm looking for a sweetheart." This dainty artist also gave a charming rendering of "The song that reached my heart." The Empire pictures are always a strong item, of which Camberwellites never tire. Mr. Percy Ford, the ever-courteous acting-manager, is loyally seconded by his smart and attentive staff.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

It seems almost unnecessary to remark that only a really good bill-of-fare can be relied on to secure even a fair audience at any house of indoor entertainment in the long evenings of our usually precarious summer. On this hypothesis the quality of the programme provided by the management of the Camberwell Palace can be estimated by the crowded audiences which have assembled here during the week. Miss Dora Healy is a sprightly young comedienne, with a very sweet, if not over strong, voice. Her lyrical description of her adventures "Down at Shepherd's Bush" seems thoroughly to appeal to the imagination of her hearers. The Three Sisters Jerome introduce a novel act, Aunty's Maid, which proves to be the medium of displaying the very highly finished step-dancing of the ladies. Carney and Armstrong are two comedians who possess a strong vein of originality. Nowadays it is probably easier to produce a Budget than to invent patter which is not reminiscent of some previous stage celebrity, but these two exponents of the art of harmless absurdity have apparently struck a vein of humour of a peculiarly risible character.

The Durham and Ernest company score a distinct success in their new production,

"AN UNINVITED GUEST."

Rev. Verdant Green..Mr. Harry Huntley Gifford
Jenkins .....Mr. Edwin. Christopher
Cabman .....Mr. Frank Ernest
Mrs. Jenkins .....Miss Helene Forest

The little plot may not be said to be strikingly original, but, at any rate, its handling is fresh and surcharged with fun and humour, which never becomes boisterous or suggestive. The Rev. Verdant Green—for the hero, or victim, rejoices in the patronymic of Cuthbert Bede's immortal Oxonian—comes to London to attend the May meetings. Avoiding the garish frivolity and dangerous worldliness to be encountered in a hotel, he engages private apartments in the establishment of an elderly lady, who, we are given to understand, is not of unblemished character and probity. Unfortunately the reverend sojourner mistakes the precise whereabouts of his temporary abode, and wanders into a closely adjacent house of a Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins. This worthy couple have been from home for a short period on divers missions—the lord and master to attend a brilliant tournament, and the lady to visit her mother. The wife arrives home first, and is temporarily disappointed at the failure of her husband to meet her. Then the clergyman comes on the scene, and the lady is, of course, utterly at a loss to account for his appearance. Anxiety lest her husband, who may at any moment arrive, should put some erroneous construction upon the sacerdotal intruder's presence, she hastily disguises him in the garments of a female, whose taste in dress must at least have been rather peculiar. The husband arrives in what, with sorrow, must be described as a state of alcoholic exaltation. Naturally his wife's female friend puzzles him, and his intellectual muddle does nothing to relieve the situation. Ultimately the masculinity of the visitor is revealed, and, of course, the inevitable outburst of marital indignation is only appeased by the explanation of the originally harmless error which has caused all the trouble.

Miss Hélène Forest plays the part of the much-perplexed Mrs. Jenkins with a most delightful amount of vivacity and charm. She seems to have fully realised what a lady placed under such awkward circumstances would feel and do, and this she thoroughly well portrays to her audience. Mr. Henry Huntley Gifford, in the rôle of the clerical blunderer, takes full advantage of the comic possibilities of the part, but all the while never abandons the refinement which is generally a characteristic of even the most verdant of pastoral divines. Mr. Edwin Christopher puts plenty of "go" into the part of the husband when he thinks he has detected the wickedness of his spouse, and, in fact, completes a very accomplished trio.

In Miss Daisy James the audience welcomes a young lady who has well established herself in the front rank of variety favourites. Her fresh, sweet voice is precisely what we expect from her charming appearance, and she does not leave the stage before she convinces her audience that to her other attributes she adds that of an unusually attractive dancer. In "Over the hills and far away" there is just that vein of pathos which an audience likes, and any inclination to solemnity Miss James soon laughs and dances away when she tells us of her festive adventures in "As we walked on the gay boulevard." Baker and Balfe are two expert xylophonists who give a complete and well-executed operatic selection on their difficult instruments, in place of the usual medley. Miss Mollie Devon is an engaging Irish comedienne, who once again proves the fact that whatever the grievances of the inhabitants of the Emerald Isle may be, its daughters are always sure of a hearty welcome on a London stage. Pathos and humour are well intermingled in her rendering of "Barney, why did you leave me?" and "Just stop your blarney." The Delevines are a troupe of really marvellously clever dancers. In their latest mélange, Flipp and Flopp, the members of the troupe find an excellent opening for their various talents, the two exponents of the "Scarecrow" dance displaying an almost superhuman amount of agility and endurance. Talbot and Pearce give their delightful Japanese duologue, Yo San. This is very prettily staged, and provides an opening for the tuneful rendering of "Somebody cares for you," "I will love you in December as I do in May," and "Ma cherie," in a thoroughly artistic fashion. Mr. Jack Roland as "the happy cowboy" is both amusing and instructive. It is an improving lesson to hear to what heights the imagination of the son of the pee-rai-ree can attain, and it is a pleasure to listen to Mr. Roland's rendering of such good old classics as "In cellar cool" and "Asleep in the deep."

Joe Peterman's company contribute an amusing operatic burlesque, The Singing Servants. Lord Aubrey is fortunate in possessing such a body of accomplished domestics, and he shows full appreciation of the fact by providing them with a Thespian professor to instruct them in his art during his lordship's absence. In the second scene there is some very clever acting and singing, and remarkably good orchestration is introduced. Vernon's Bioscope provides the indispensable animated picture display, and there is in addition a "snap-shot" competition.

THE CANTERBURY.

The Musician's Daughter, given at the Canterbury this week, is simply a reproduction of Monsieur Jacques. This old piece was taken from the French of Pauvre Jacques, vaudeville, in one act, by the Brothers Cogniard, was originally produced at the Théâtre Gymnase, Paris, Sept. 15, 1835, with the great Bouffé as Jacques. The piece in English form first drew its theatrical breath at the St. James's Theatre, then under the management of Braham, on Jan. 12, 1836, under the title of Monsieur Jacques, translated and arranged by Morris Barnett, who played the old Frenchman with marvellous success. The other parts were acted by Strickland as Sequence, Charles Selby as Vivid, Hollingsworth as Antonio, and Mrs. German Reed (then Miss Priscilla Horton) as Nina. There were sung in it three beautiful numbers. The first "To-morrow," by Mr. Barnett; the second "Palermo's Ball," by Miss P. Horton; and the third "A Noble's Daughter," a most charming dramatic duet by Mr. Barnett and Miss P. Horton. Monsieur Jacques was revived at the defunct Opéra Comique on Nov. 5, 1892. But little alteration to the old piece could be detected on Monday when it was produced by Mr. Doré Davidson under the title of—

"THE MUSICIAN'S DAUGHTER."

Monsieur Jacques .....Mr. Dore Davidson
Sequence .....Mr. Geo. Rowland
Vivid .....Mr. Robert Nobles
Nina .....Miss Olive Palmer

Mr. Davidson preserves even the names of the characters, which have an old-fashioned ring about them, and we hear such French words as affreux and malheureux, which the gods at the Canterbury are scarcely likely to understand. The mind of Monsieur Jacques has been affected by the tragedy of his youth, his separation from his beloved wife being brought about by the violent interference of her father who caused the young husband to be imprisoned, whence he escaped with her help. When the scene opens we find the old man in poor lodgings, earning a scanty subsistence by giving lessons. The merit of his compositions has not escaped the notice of his unscrupulous landlord, Sequence, who systematically issues the old man's works and keeps him destitute, in order the more easily to acquire the product of his brain. The old musician enjoys the friendship and devotion of a young poet, Vivid, who shares his common lot; mutual trials have bound them close to each other. With Monsieur Jacques debts are numerous, but the publisher is his only creditor, and to coerce the old man into a transfer of his last opera, Sequence threatens to dispose of all of his effects, including the piano. A young heiress becomes interested in the old man's story, and eventually discovers that she is his daughter. He willingly gives her to the poet Vivid, who had been his comrade in days of affliction. Mr. Doré Davidson is responsible for an interesting impersonation of Monsieur Jacques.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

Business at this hall continues excellent, last week constituting a record, a fact for which Harry Lauder is responsible. The bill for the current week is capitally varied, and contains two established favourites in George Lashwood and Chirgwin. The former gave no fewer than four songs, these comprising "Hang out the front-door key," "The Admiral," "In the twi-twi-twilight," and "He's proud to be a soldier." In each Mr. Lashwood has the house entirely with him, and the perfect manner in which he is attired adds a great deal to the interest of his turn. Chirgwin plays, sings, and gags to his heart's content, and in each item makes a distinct hit, the audience being loth to part with him. Mme. De Dio in a series of dances presented a remarkably beautiful act, the scenic effects developed by the agency of slides securing much applause. Anna Kenwick, in an imitation of a negro singing a coon song, and afterwards in a sand dance, proved herself a capable artist and secured a good reception. Charlene and Charlene presented a refined and clever act, the gentleman being a juggler of great ability and the lady being a xylophone soloist of skill, their call at the end being very hearty. C. J. Johnston, a coloured comedian, gives a smart turn, consisting of two good songs and an exhibition of cake-walking par excellence, the audience showing in no uncertain way their appreciation of his act. The Brothers Remond, acrobatic comedians, are conspicuously successful in their humour business, and their acrobatic business is beyond reproach. Others in the bill are the Crown Trio, speciality vocalists; Fred Lincoln, in a scena My Pal Jemmy; and Marion Scott, comedienne. Mr. Walter Greco's fine orchestra is invaluable, and Mr. Trussell is very courteous in the front of the house.

Pete Washington, of the Four Black Diamonds, has recently died of apoplexy at Berlin.

Mr. Ernie Mayne is again on the Stoll tour, and is meeting with great receptions. His services are retained by Mr. Stoll until 1914.

A syndicate headed by Mr. Geo. Conquest will take over the Hippodrome, Sheerness, on Saturday next.

Miss Gertie Gitana is playing her fifth month in London this year. This week she is motoring about fifty miles nightly. From South Tottenham to Putney, from Putney to the Tivoli and Paragon, from the Paragon to Putney, and from Putney to South Tottenham.

Miss Edie Casson (Mrs. Walter Casson), who appeared at the Pier Pavilion, Southport, last week, made an enormous success. She was the recipient of twelve handsome bouquets and presents, testifying to the respect in which she is held amongst her Southport friends.

The management of the Hippodrome have discovered an effectual means of ensuring the comfort of audiences during the summer. A few weeks ago a description was given in these columns of the system adopted at the Cranbourn-street establishment of generating ozone, and this has resulted in making the Hippodrome one of the coolest places of entertainment in London.

THE ACTOR AND HIS TRADE.

A short time ago, writes Mr. Arthur Applin, the Actors' Association at their general meeting passed a resolution agreeing that no actor or actress speaking more than three lines should accept a salary of less than £2 a week. It was pointed out at the time that this meant an income averaging about 26s. a week. It was reported that several actors present, members of the Association, voted against this resolution, thinking it unwise that actors should demand such an excessive wage from their employers.

Thus it would appear to the ordinary individual that the actor's trade is not generally a lucrative one, nor is the actor a person to be envied, though his picture fills the windows of the pictorial post-card emporiums, and provincial advertisement-hoardings are flooded with illustrations of what many are pleased to call his art.

At first it will appear to the uninitiated incomprehensible that actors themselves should be not only willing, but apparently anxious, to accept less than £2 a week salary, this to include an unlimited number of free rehearsals, private travelling expenses, and generally all the clothes required for the portrayal of the part they may be called upon to play in modern productions. The cause is not far to seek—though in this case the cause is as extraordinary as the effect. The phlegmatic Englishman is consumed with a desire to portray the emotions of his fellow-men upon the public stage, and therefore all day long men and women are knocking at the doors of managerial offices asking for work, offering to play any part for which they may be cast from James or Mary Ann to Othello or Desdemona, and to play these parts without any remuneration or reward whatever—save, of course, the plaudits of their friends in front.

It is strange that these budding Irvings and Mimi Aguglias never become obsessed with the idea that they are capable of painting great pictures, of building houses, or directing the affairs of their country in Parliament. If they attempted to do any of these things publicly they would be firmly requested to desist; of course, they would be at liberty to play with oils and canvas or bricks and mortar in the privacy of their own homes; but before the student is allowed to enter one of the art galleries or museums to try his 'prentice hand at copying the old masters he must give proof that he possesses in some degree the talents he would exploit. It would be the same with the builder who could not build, the singer who could not sing, and the musician who could not make music. One false note, one incompetent musician in an orchestra, and what a howl arises; but one bad actor in a play—what a matter for congratulation if there be only that one!

The actor's trade is fast becoming a sweated trade—and here the vexed question of union arises; for a genuine actor, a man who has learnt his business, refuses to acknowledge that he trades, and insists on calling himself an artist. But a cook is an artist for the matter of that; so is a builder and an engraver. At the same time they trade; that is to say, they follow a regular employment or way of life; each pursues a business which he carries on for procuring subsistence or for profit. A trade is an occupation, a mechanical employment or handiwork. Acting is—or was—an occupation, a means of subsistence, and the actor's employment is, up to a point, mechanical. There are certain emotions that can only be expressed in certain ways, and the formula, once learnt, has to be repeated day after day, night after night, and perhaps year after year.

So let it be granted that the actor's calling is technically a trade; he has goods to sell, and he sells them in the theatre over the footlights. He is not an artist, in that he cannot create—for he cannot create an emotion—he can only express it. A good actor does great work, and must possess the instincts of an artist; but when he dies his work dies with him; whereas a musician, a sculptor, a painter often only lives after his death.

Euripides is with us to-day. Only a short time ago he hailed us loudly from the noisy Strand, and those of us with eyes to see and ears to hear made the fine fellow's acquaintance again, and talked with him awhile. But his actors, where are they now? Who were they? What did they do?

An actor's life is a short one, his triumph momentary. He is a flame that springs up suddenly, illuminates the darkness of the soul, and is gone. He trades in emotions, but nevertheless he trades. Acting is a business, and he has to learn that business; broadly speaking, there is no school of acting, and so instead of climbing up into the profession, a man tumbles down into it. In the old days the actor learnt his trade in the stock companies. They have ceased to exist; now he pays a premium and walks on in London. It may be if he speaks two or three lines he will be taught intonations and turned into an automatic figure, acting on the principle of a penny-in-the-slot machine, by excitable authors and anxious stage-managers.

And so, to be successful at his trade, the actor must have one or two possessions, wealth or genius. wealth will give him opportunities, and if his wealth be sufficient he will, soon after walking on, build his own stage door, and blossom forth into an actor-manager.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

And hearts that touched our hearts long years before
Shall come to meet us in the morning land.

IN MEMORIAM.

THE LATE MARIE WALFORD
(Mystic Marie).

In loving and affectionate memory of our darling sister, Miss Marie Henry Walford (Mystic Marie), the real Trilby, who fell asleep July 19, 1906, age twenty-one. Gone, but never forgotten by her sorrowing brother and sister—

DR. and MRS. WALFORD BODIE.

The Manor House,
Macduff, N.B.

A ministering angel she had been;
Appeared with me in many a scene.
She was so humble midst it all,
And now has answered her last call.
Such talents as to you were sent
Filled all the world with wonderment,
As spellbound they would speak your praise,
And marvel at your mystic ways;
And now your soul is called above
To mansions of eternal love.
Why should we sorrow? You were good—
A type of perfect womanhood.

The Five Brewsters, after a successful seven months' engagement in England, returned to the Continent on the 6th inst., and made their début in Ostend, where they scored another grand success. They will return to England in November, to play four weeks on the Stoll tour, previous to their pantomime engagement with Messrs. Dottridge and Longden (Robinson Crusoe).

The Six Canadians, Mr. Brewster informs us, have achieved a "monumental success" in Madrid. After playing a month's engagement at the Circo, Paris, they were re-engaged until close of circus season, and were immediately engaged for two weeks at the Teatro Alfonso Principal, Madrid. On the 25th inst. they open at the Coliseo Recreios, Lisbon.

Mr. A. E. Pickard, of the Britannia Panoptico and Noah's Ark, Glasgow, is at present away on a holiday trip through the United States and Canada.

Mr. Russell Brandow, acrobatic dancer, was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Association on Sunday last. Terrier Griff, who was in the chair, performed the ceremony.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

JOHN THOMSON (Philadelphia).—See "Answers to Correspondents" in The Era of July 25.

MI NAROM.—We are making inquiries of our correspondents at Hoxton and Birmingham, and will let you know next week.

ARTHUR WILLIAMS.—(1) Apply to our publishing department for an answer to your first question; (2) The Prophet was produced on Sept. 15, 1849. It was taken from the opera and adapted by Mr. John Wilkins. Our columns do not give the complete cast, but Mr. Henry Howard, Mr. E. F. Saville, Mrs. Hugh Campbell, and Mrs. Saville were in it.

QUERIBUS.—The articles on Theatre Accounts have not appeared consecutively. They are copyright, and will shortly be published in book form from "The Era" publishing offices.

QUÆRENS.—Miss Constance Collier accompanied Mr. Tree to Berlin in April, 1907. She played in Antony and Cleopatra and in The Merry Wives of Windsor (Mrs. Ford). In the opening performance of Richard the Second Miss Viola Tree played the Queen.

F. JUSTICE.—We know nothing of the statement that you say has appeared in several theatrical papers concerning the ladies you name. We should be glad if you can point out the error in our columns if you are able, as we are quite unaware of it. It was Miss Kate Bateman (now Mrs. Crowe) who played Leah, the title-rôle, in Leah the Forsaken, which was adapted from the German dramatist Mosenthal's Deborah, and produced for the first time in London at the Adelphi on Oct. 1, 1865. The adaptation from the German was undertaken by the late Augustin Daly, and was brought out first at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Dec. 8, 1862, and then in New York, at Niblo's, Jan. 19, 1863. Miss Bateman appeared in both these productions. There were other adaptations of Deborah. The manager of the Adelphi at the time of the production of Leah was the late Ben Webster.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

THE whole autumn tour of Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's Flag Lieutenant company, three dates excepted, was booked by Mr. Cooper in a little over a week, and he has been obliged to refuse several offers, showing that playgoers in the provinces are as eager as the Londoners to see the successful drama.

WILLIAM HENRY WEST BETTY had some fantastic notions in dress, which he indulged despite the remonstrances of his friends. One summer he supported a pair of indescribables made of children's map-pocket-handkerchiefs—maps of London and its environs, &c.—marked up at haberdashers at a penny apiece. A gentleman suggested to the late young Roscius the singularity of such garments. "My good sir," replied Betty, "you don't perceive the convenience and utility they are of; for instance, as I am driving I may become doubtful as to my route; under the gig-apron there I have all the information I want upon my thigh." This Betty called his map-ography.

MRS. OLDFIELD wished that she should be well dressed in her coffin. Accordingly, "as the nicety of dress was her delight when living, she was as nicely dressed after her decease, being, by Mrs. Saunders's direction, thus laid in her coffin: she had on a very fine Brussels lace head; a holland shift, with tucker, and double ruffles of the same lace; a pair of new kid gloves; and her body wrapped up in a winding-sheet."

SHORTLY after Liston had made a popular hit in Fielding's Tom Thumb at the Haymarket Theatre, he dined one day in the City. After the dessert, and before the ladies had left the room, the whole party arose, and the tables, chairs, &c., were set back, and the guests left standing, in order, as the host explained, "to make room for Mr. Liston to favour the company, before the children went to bed, with Lord Grizzle's dancing song." As may be supposed, Liston danced off as soon as he was able from the house of his polite friend, never to return.

SATURDAY, JULY 18, 1908.

THE PAST DRAMATIC SEASON.

THE half-year dramatic season which has just concluded has been an eventful one. There has been nothing commonplace or stereotyped in its character. All sorts and conditions of art have been represented, and the menu offered to the playgoer has been varied, if not always attractive. Our London entrepreneurs cannot be accused of want of enterprise. Unaffected by comparative failures they have returned to the charge with unabated energy, and with increased earnestness of endeavour, and in the end success has been, in most cases, attained.

The season opened immediately after Christmas with the production of The Mystery of Edwin Drood at His Majesty's. As often happens in dramatising a novel, the obstacles and impediments were great. Mr. COMYNS CARR probably took the best way out of the difficulty; but the work had certain shortcomings as an acting play, which was a pity, as Mr. TREE'S performance of the principal part was one of his strongest and most telling creations. It is not easy to forget his performance. In the same month Mr. WALLER made a bold bid for success with a drama of romance and adventure, entitled A White Man, which had 175 performances at the Lyric before its popularity was exhausted. Mr. CYRIL MAUDE, who was experimenting with different types of entertainments at the Playhouse brought out The O'Grindles, in which Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE appeared with buoyant animation as an equestrian heroine; and at the Queen's a bushranging drama, called Stingaree was put on by Mr. HENRY AINLEY as the aristocratic highwayman. Neither of these pieces had a long run, but their productions involved some excellent acting. A remarkable play which followed in February was The Beloved Vagabond, in which Mr. TREE found a character of the class in which he has often triumphed—a dreamy, romantic, fascinating Bohemian. It was a memorable drama, and ran for nearly sixty nights. The importance of strong individuality in the cast of a new play was proved by the success of Diana of Dobson's at the Kingsway. The success achieved was greatly the result of Miss LENA ASHWELL being fitted with a rôle which employed her fine abilities to the full. Mr. FRED TERRY'S production of Matt of Merrymount at the New Theatre had all the ingredients of his previous romantic successes, and was played with absolute adequacy and effectiveness, securing a fair run. Miss MARIE TEMPEST'S Lady Barbarity at the Comedy was another piece of similar artistic calibre, enjoyable to witness, but not enthralling; and Mr. MAUDE also attempted a play of the last century in Marjory Strode. At the Vaudeville, the rather unsavoury Dear Old Charlie gave place to that entirely wholesome and very amusing comedy, Jack Straw, which is still drawing well at that theatre. Mrs. LANGTRY was rather unfortunate in her selection of A Fearful Joy at the Haymarket, especially as she acted with unusual vivacity and expressiveness. That fortune will come in time to the bold and persevering was shown by Miss MARIE TEMPEST and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE, who certainly had been very unfortunate, scoring tremendous successes with Mrs. Dot and The Flag Lieutenant—the one an exquisite comedy of modern life, the other a breezy, spirited nautical drama, with plenty of accurate detail and realistic comedy. The Thunderbolt, thanks greatly to the personal attraction and strong acting of Mr. ALEXANDER, had fifty-nine performances at the St. James's; and Mr. SHAW'S intensely humorous comedy, Getting Married, in spite of an irrelevant last act, had a very fair career at the Haymarket. The run of The Explorer at the Lyric stops for the present on Saturday next for holidays, but it was financially prosperous despite the hot weather. Undoubtedly the most memorable production of the season was Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER'S Thunderbolt at the St. James's. It was a credit to the English stage.

It is an axiom in theatrical business that one big triumph will pay for what is lost on several failures; and, slightly depressing as the above resumé may appear at first glance, it must be remembered that several successes of last autumn tapped over into the present year. Amongst these were that delightful comedy, The Mollusc, at the Criterion; and Lady Frederick, produced at the Court, and finally anchored at the New Theatre. Besides which there was The Education of Elizabeth last autumn, and The Thief, which ran for nearly 200 nights at the St. James's. Mr. OSCAR ASCHE'S revival of As You Like It had over one hundred performances at His Majesty's; and Peter Pan at the Duke of York's and The Admirable Crichton at the same theatre, both exceeded the "century." Then there were the still running attractions, When Knights Were Bold and The Merry Widow, which must have made thousands for their fortunate proprietors. Mr. SEYMOUR HICKS'S productions are always successful, as he and Miss ELLALINE TERRISS are perennially attractive.

On the whole, the financial results of the last twelve months may not be discouraging; what "gives one furiously to think" is that so many of this year's plays are adaptations of novels. It seems as if the cleverest brains in the country were drawn into the making of books rather than the preparation of plays. This is partly the result of the more exacting requirements of the stage; but it also comes, we believe, from the fact that it is so much more difficult to get a play accepted by a manager than to get a novel printed by a publisher. Take that great success The Scarlet Pimpernel. Here was money waiting for a manager for years; but no one seems to have realised that the material was capable of being utilised for stage purposes. But here again we are met with a difficulty. It is not only necessary that a play should be intrinsically good; it must contain a part or parts suitable for some particular leading actor or actress. It has often been pointed out that Jim the Penman went the rounds of the London managers without being accepted. The fact only proved that the London managers knew their business. It would be a misfortune to a new author if his piece were produced by a London management unless it contained leading characters adapted to the abilities of the manager or manageress who accepted it. Success is the result of the combination of writing and acting. The Walls of Jericho owed its good fortune a great deal to the exact fitness of the two leading characters to Mr. and Mrs. BOURCHIER; The Thief, at the St. James's, might have met a different fate but for the fact of Mr. ALEXANDER undertaking the rôle of the husband; and what would A White Man at the Lyric have been without Mr. LEWIS WALLER? We have passed from a time when the actor was a Proteus to that in which he is an individual. The old days when a company was composed of a dozen people—all with "lines" of their own—who were expected to "tackle" anything within those lines, to an epoch when an artist is chosen for each new part in each new piece. The result is a marvellously-finished and exquisite tout ensemble, and a realism quite incompatible with the old stock system. But the new régime leaves very little stability to the actor's life. When he has played one of the parts for which he is exactly fitted he often has to wait patiently until he is wanted for another part. In the end, however, it probably "comes to the same thing." The profession has always been a hazardous and a precarious one; and the courage with which the actor and actress take their chances is an example to those more anxious mortals who are never happy in the present because they are always worrying about the future.

THE VETERAN'S FETE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly correct a slight misstatement in your issue of the 11th inst. re the above Fête? You mention Paulo and Troupe in the Frattelini's harlequinade. With all due respect allow me to state that I alone was responsible for the Paulo's harlequinade, which was produced by—Yours sincerely,

HARRY PAULO (Clown).

THE Empire Theatre staff took their annual outing on Sunday at Hastings, and a thoroughly enjoyable day was spent. There was a muster of nearly 200, and Mr. A. Aldin, the acting-manager of the Empire, acted as master of the ceremonies. The arrangements were made and admirably carried out by Mr. A. J. Reynolds, a valued member of the staff.

"I HAVE acted Ophelia three times with my father," wrote Fanny Kemble, "and each time, in that beautiful scene where his madness and his love gush forth together like a torrent swollen with storms, that bears a thousand blossoms on its troubled waters, I have experienced such deep emotion as hardly to be able to speak. The exquisite tenderness of his voice, the wild compassion and forlorn pity of his looks, bestowing that on others which, above all others, he most needed; the melancholy restlessness, the bitter self-scorning; every shadow of expression and intonation was so full of all the mingled anguish that the human heart is capable of enduring, that my eyes scarce fixed on his ere they filled with tears; and long before the scene was over, the letters and jewel-cases I was tendering to him were wet with them. Oh, it made my heart sore to act it!"

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, July 16.—July 14, the great French national holiday, has often been described, and columns have been written on the crowd patiently waiting for the opening of the doors of the Opéra, Opéra-Comique, and Comédie-Française, anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity of witnessing a gratis performance. For many years I have had occasion to watch this picturesque street scene, but this time curiosity prompted me to become one of the mob and gather some impressions inside the house. Thanks to the courtesy of one of the Opéra managers I was allowed to take my seat before the spectators arrived, and, punctually at half-past twelve, the first batch marched in. The earliest arrivals of course took the best seats, and in less than half an hour the huge building was filled. I noticed that according to an unwritten law the ladies and gentlemen whose rig-out was somewhat shabby modestly retired to the higher regions, leaving the stalls, the dress circle, and the boxes to those whom heaven had blessed with better, and, above all, cleaner garments. For all that, there were exceptions to this rule of etiquette, for the long rows of artisans and their womankind, neatly dressed in their Sunday best, were occasionally broken by individuals of the loafer species, who, as well as their ladies, showed an utter disregard for toilette. Taken as a whole, the coup d'œil was pleasant. The white bodices—such as women of all classes wear to-day—some more elaborate than others, predominated. The ladies in the front rows had all removed their hats so as not to interfere with the comfort of those sitting behind them, and unconsciously added a special charm to the appearance of the house. For the Parisienne, even the humblest, has the gift of making her hair attractive. Beautifully brushed and waved, it is one of her chief ornaments, and she knows it.

BUT why did the Opéra management produce Hyppolite et Aricie? It was an unlucky choice. Rameau's antiquated music, with the feeble tinkle of the harpsichord, was too delicate a fare for such robust musical appetites as a Paris 14th of July audience. Faust or the Huguenots would have pleased them better. Before half an hour had passed I was on intimate terms with my right-hand neighbour, a gentleman in a somewhat faded coat. He emitted so strong a smell of Camembert that I guessed he was a cheesemonger's assistant, a guess that proved right in the end. From him I gathered much valuable information. Jupiter, Diana, and the other mythological personages in the work not only fogged him; they made him cross. He had never heard of them, and did not care to know who they were. In an outburst of patriotism he even described them in picturesque Montmartre parlance as what, freely translated into English, would mean, "blooming furriners"—an opinion in which my left-hand neighbour, breathing absinthe into my face, concurred. Before, however, the curtain had fallen on the first act I became aware of the fact that these men and women of the people behaved with more tact than those belonging to what we are pleased to call the "educated classes." When these humble spectators felt bored, they did not show it by yawning and indulging in conversation with their neighbours; and if the "stars" received an ovation, the house also applauded the minor artists who had contributed their share towards the afternoon's entertainment. Unfortunately this lesson in manners will be lost on those who, as a rule, ornament our boxes and stalls.

ON Tuesday next the case of Réjane v. Carlier will come on for hearing. When, in December last, Mme. Réjane brought out La Savelli she asked Mlle. Carlier to undertake a rôle in the scene at the Bal Mabille. Mlle. Carlier very properly refused to lend herself to an exhibition of a questionable order, and threw up her engagement. And the best proof that Mlle. Carlier was right in not lending herself to this choregraphic display is that Mlle. Grille d'Egout—who used to perform the can-can at the Martin-Rouge and the Jardin de-Paris—was thereupon engaged by Mme. Réjane. Curiously enough, Mlle. Carlier once had a similar trouble with M. Berny, manager of Les Mathurins, who insisted on that young artist impersonating an Annamite in a more than suggestive décolleté; and, by a singular chance, the same tribunal had to try the case. The judge then decided in favour of Mlle. Carlier, who, he said, could not be compelled to play a part in a masquerade unworthy of an actress.

THE French papers—and the English dailies as well—are full of the wonderful necklace affair, as mysterious as the one that cost poor Marie Antoinette her throne. But it has brought the fair Emilienne d'Alençon once more before the public, and that lady is not sorry for this, even at the cost of the loss of a valuable necklace. Emilienne's name evokes curious souvenirs. She first came out in 1889 at the Cirque d'Eté, but her début did not create any sensation. Then came 1893, the year of the precious stones, for it was at that period that Mme. Otero and Mme. Liane de Pougy began to dazzle the good Parisians by a display of their diamonds. Mlle. Emilienne, too, had beautiful stones, and she saw no reason why she should not join this wonderful competition. The difficulty, however, was to secure an engagement. Unlike her two rivals, who had joined the profession and had each a speciality, Mlle Emilienne had only her good looks to fall back upon. So one night she showed herself in public with half a dozen performing donkeys. But she was so frightened of her flock that she gave up that venture, and soon afterwards came out at the Folies-Bergère with a lot of performing geese. Emilienne certainly felt much safer with them than with her donkeys; but the public that night did not feel seriously inclined, and laughed so much at the lady and her birds that she gave up the "profession," and in time became the lawful wife of a well-known English jockey.

IF ever you come to Paris I advise you to go to the Jardin-de-Paris and look at the mechanical organ, which at intervals plays waltzes, polkas, &c. A couple of years ago when there was a general strike of musicians M. Oller, the enterprising manager of the Jardin-de-Paris, had it built to replace the absent gentlemen of the orchestra. To-day it has no longer a raison d'être, but M. Oller wants this organ to be heard every night; not with the object of giving his musicians a rest, but to remind them he can at all times dispense with their services. It is "Damocles' organ" hanging over their heads.

ABOUT the year 1778 Mrs. Robinson appeared on the stage, and gained from the character in which she charmed the named of Perdita. She then started in one of the new streets of Marylebone, and was in her altitude. Afterwards, when a little in the wane, she resided in Berkeley-square. She was fine and fashionable, and the men of the day in Bond-street still pirouetted as her carriage passed them. The next day the vehicle was reclaimed by the maker; the Adonis whom she courted fled her; she followed—all to no purpose. She then took up a new life in London, became literary. . . . What was the next glimpse? On a table in one of the waiting-rooms of the Opera House was seated a woman of fashionable appearance, still beautiful, "but not in the bloom of beauty's pride." She was not noticed except by the eye of pity. In a few minutes two liveried servants came to her, and they took from their pockets long white sleeves, which they drew on their arms; they then lifted her up and conveyed her to her carriage—it was the then helpless, paralytic Perdita.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, July 16.—This was a matinée performance, and the piece the work of a beginner, which latter fact was apparent at every turn. Some dramatic talent must be allowed the authoress, but the horrors are piled up with the too evident attempt at effect to appear natural, while the three acts are filled out with crude and uninteresting dialogue. Had the piece been concentrated and better developed it might have proved a successful curtain-raiser. The plot is as follows: A young man falls wildly in love with his foster sister; it is more passion than love, and the girl is repulsed. He endeavours to force her to his wishes, whereupon she snatches up a revolver, which was most conveniently at hand. In the struggle that ensues—he trying to get hold of the weapon—it very naturally goes off, and the youth falls dead. Horrified at the deed she has so innocently perpetrated, the maiden loses her reason—not all at once, but gradually, so that the nerves of the audience may be well strained. After we have been kept on tenter-hooks through a whole act the poor maniac expires, and nobody regrets the circumstance. The acting was good, and some attempt at applause brought out the authoress to bow her acknowledgments. With a temperature of over 80 in the shade, an afternoon passed in witnessing this style of piece is not exactly profitable to mind or body. The audience welcomed with evident relief the bright little farce Papa's Sommerreise, by MM. Kren and Schoenfeld, which closed the programme.

THE summer opera season at the New Royal Opera is running well. Tannhäuser, however, proved less successful than Lohengrin, so that the latter has taken up its earlier place again in the bill. Fräulein Burckhard, the clever young actress from the Court Theatre at Schwerin, takes the rôle of Elsa alternately with Frau Mahlendorff, both being eminently successful.

AT the Morwitz opera season at the Schiller O. a genuine novelty was produced on Saturday, in the form of a musical drama entitled Die Hoffnung auf Segen, adapted from Heijerman's tragic play of the same name. The composer is new to fame, Herr Charles Grelinger, and truth compels the record that his music is the opposite of original; it is, in fact, familiar to us throughout, notwithstanding the announcement that the work is produced for the first time on any stage. Neither can anything very favourable be said of the book, and, altogether, the opera will scarcely catch on on this or any other stage.

MLLE. AUSSENAC'S PIANOFORTE RECITAL.

At Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon Mlle. Marie Antoinette Aussenac, a native of Portugal, gave her first recital in the presence of a large audience. The young pianist, who was assisted by Mr. Mischa Elman, has studied under Mr. Duvernoy, and gained the first prize in the Paris Conservatoire, and although making her first appearance in London on Tuesday afternoon, has given several recitals on the Continent. At the beginning of her recital Mlle. Aussenac played two Choralvorspiele, "Now comes the Gentile's Saviour" and "Rejoice, beloved Christians," Busoni's arrangement of Bach's Choral Preludes, which proved very effective. Schumann's Etudes Symphoniques also showed that the young pianist had much technical ability, but it was in a group of Chopin's works that Mlle. Aussenac displayed her talents to the fullest advantage. The Etude (Chromatique) in A minor was played with delightful delicacy and finish, and Mlle. Aussenac well deserved the applause that followed her performance of this, and the charming Etude in G sharp minor. The Nocturne in E received expressive treatment, and Mlle. Aussenac was warmly applauded for her interpretation of the charming Impromptu in G flat. If the young artist was hardly so successful in the Ballade in G minor, the Valse in E flat was admirably played. Mlle. Aussenac also gave Mendelssohn's "La Fileuse," "In der Nacht" (Schumann), Henselt's "Si oiseau j'etais," and Saint-Saëns' Etude en forme de Valse, and it should be mentioned that after the group of Chopin's pieces Mlle. Aussenac received a hearty encore. Mr. Mischa Elman gave a masterly rendering of Paganini's violin Concerto in D major and Saint-Saëns' popular Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso (Op. 28). Mr. Waldemar Liachowsky ably performed the duties of the pianoforte accompanist.

PATRON'S FUND CONCERT.

The tenth concert of the Royal College of Music Patron's Fund was given at Queen's Hall on Tuesday night. At this a more cheerful spirit seemed to prevail in the various compositions than at any concert given since Mr. S. Ernest Palmer founded the fund in 1903 in aid of British art. By far the most ambitious of the six new works heard on Tuesday night was Mr. Montague F. Phillips' Concerto in F sharp minor for Piano and Orchestra, which, although far too long in the opening movement, Allegro Maestoso, contained a very pleasing and melodious Andante, only marred in its conclusion by Mr. Phillips' love of strong effects. A stirring finale brought the Concerto to an effective conclusion. Miss Irene Scharrer played the solo instrument with great brilliancy, and the composer and soloist, who have both received their training at the Royal Academy of Music, were recalled several times to the platform amidst most hearty applause. Dr. J. Lyon's Variations on a Sarabande of Handel proved a cleverly-written composition; but Mr. Paul Corder, a student of the Royal Academy of Music, has not produced a particularly interesting or original work in his Gaelic fantasia, "Morar." Mr. Corder in the programme says the fantasia received its name from a little-known spot in the Western Highlands of Scotland, where it was composed, and that a certain Scottish idiom in the subject matter justifies the title Gaelic. In the Scena for Soprano and Orchestra on Tennyson's "Maud," Miss Emily M. Lucas, a blind lady who has studied at the Royal Normal College, had her clever composition most ably sung by Miss Gladys Honey, of the Royal College of Music, both composer and vocalist having a very hearty reception from the large audience. Mr. John St. A. Johnson's Three Songs of Selma, sung by Mr. Albert Watson, showed talent, and were much applauded, the best of Mr. Johnson's songs being "The lament of Minona" and "Little charmer." The sixth and last composition given on Tuesday night was Mr. Fritz B. Hart's Fantasy Overture (from the West Country). Mr. Hart, who has studied at the Royal College, in his lively overture introduces very cleverly three folk songs from the West Country, the work being scored for full orchestra. Sir Charles V. Stanford and the composers conducted, and the London Symphony Orchestra did full justice to the various compositions.

IN a recent issue we described Mr. Montgomery Martin as secretary of the Actors' Association. Mr. Martin is, of course, the secretary of the Touring Managers' Association, Ltd.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

Meyerbeer's opera The Huguenots, performed in Italian, was revived on Saturday night, July 11, at Covent Garden in the presence of the Queen, Princess Henry of Battenberg, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and a large audience. Although three years have passed since Les Huguenots has been heard, the revival with a brilliant cast on Saturday proved very welcome. Mme. Tetrazzini sang the showy music of Margarita with the greatest brilliancy; while Miss Destinn, who was in excellent voice, gave a superb rendering of Valentina's part. Mr. Zanatello also was in splendid form as Raoul; and the great duet between Valentina and Raoul was so finely sung that the house was roused to a display of great enthusiasm. A newcomer, Mr. Nivette, who possesses an admirable voice, achieved a distinct success in the part of St. Bris both as an actor and vocalist; while that talented artist Mr. Scotti made a striking and picuresque De Nevers. As the page Urbano Miss Dereyne was successful, and although her voice is hardly powerful enough for the part, she sang "Nobil Signori" with considerable charm. Mr. Marcoux gave an artistic account of the staunch old soldier Marcello's music; and an excellent performance of the orchestral portions was secured under the bâton of Mr. Campanini. The opera was mounted handsomely, and the new scenery, particularly that of the Château de Chenonceaux, strikingly beautiful and picturesque.

La Bohème, which so faithfully reproduces the student life of the Quartier Latin, with its joys and sorrows, its failings and its sympathies, was reproduced at Covent Garden on Monday, being admirably interpreted under the guidance of Signor Campanini, who, however, allowed the orchestra occasionally to drown the singers—and such singers too! The central figure was again Madame Melba, who sang the music of Mimi with a wistful tenderness that was touching even in the gayest moments of the second act. The part must be accounted one of the most successful among the many in which the Australian diva appears. The music in itself is a wonderful reproduction of human emotion through the medium of orchestral and vocal tone, and Madame Melba's particular character of voice suits it perfectly. Her impersonation is always in keeping; the coyness and coquetry she shows in her first interview with Rodolfo, her unrestrained enjoyment of the Christmas feast at the café, her presentiment of her coming end, and the tragedy of her death-bed scene are all portrayed by her with intense realism.

Signor Bonci, who appeared as Rodolfo, the poet, for the first time this season, sang the music with dramatic impulse and great expressiveness. His grief at the death of Mimi had nothing conventional about it, and in this and in the other portions of the opera, his acting was sincere, earnest, and convincing.

A performance of Faust was given at Covent Garden on Wednesday night, an unusually late appearance this season for Gounod's popular masterpiece. Madame Edvina, who impersonated Margherita, is an English artist, with, so it appears, no operatic experience. Without doubt Madame Edvina has a beautiful voice, which only requires greater cultivation, while her acting clearly shows that more knowledge of the operatic stage is needed. In the simpler melody of the "King of Thule" song Madame Edvina was heard to far greater advantage than in the florid music of the "Jewel" song. The newcomer had a hearty reception from the audience, but it was evident that more study, both as singer and actress is necessary before Madame Edvina undertakes so difficult a rôle as Margherita. Owing to Mr. Marcoux being indisposed, Mephistopheles was undertaken by Mr. Nivette at very short notice, but with excellent artistic results. Admirably sung and acted, the part of Mephistopheles may be considered the best that Mr. Nivette has given us since his first appearance. The beautiful singing of Mr. Bonci as Faust, and the excellent Valentine of Mr. Sammarco were special features of the performance on Wednesday, while our English artists, Miss C. Hatchard, as Siebel, and Madame Edna Thornton, as Marta, completed an excellent cast. Mr. Panizza conducted.

SIR JOHN HARE'S FAREWELL.

Sir John Hare's many friends and admirers may congratulate themselves that his "farewell" to the stage is only a temporary one. The Garrick Theatre was crowded in every part on the 10th inst., when Sir John appeared with unabated effect and unimpaired art in his famous impersonations of Benjamin Goldfinch in A Pair of Spectacles and Lord Kildare in A Quiet Rubber. The audience was excitedly enthusiastic, and insisted on a speech from Sir John, who said:—"I have purposely avoided making anything in the nature of a formal farewell, and, therefore, I am sure you will forgive me for not making any formal speech. To-night I do not know whether my heart is more full of pain or pleasure—pain and distress at parting from you, my dear friends, pleasure and pride at your generous, affectionate reception. I feel in a rather difficult position. I have received a good deal of chaff lately as to my farewell, and feel like the boy who cried 'Wolf' once too often, till at last, when the wolf came, no one believed him. At all events, to-night I take a definite farewell in London of one very old friend—Benjamin Goldfinch.

"If I hesitate to take a definite farewell of you, it is because I feel that, though the final parting is imminent—for all I can tell it may be to-night—I cannot brace myself up to say good-bye without a hope that I may still find some valid excuse to return to you in a new part. It now only remains to me to express my thanks; thanks to Mr. Bourchier for having given me the opportunity to make my adieu in the play which began its existence here nineteen years ago, and for the courtesy and kindness he has shown me; and, above all, thanks to the public and the Press, who have been my life-long friends and supporters. They have both conspired to spoil me, but I think I may claim that I am so far unspoiled as to be deeply grateful. And now, my dear friends, I can say no more, save that when nothing remains to me but memory, none will be so lovingly, so gratefully, so proudly treasured as the recollection of your kindness to me to-night and always."

THE death is announced in New York of Julia Elmore, a famous actress of the old school. She was in her ninetieth year, having been born in London in 1819.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN has commissioned Mr. George Grossmith, jun., to translate and adapt the book of the Viennese opera The Dollar Princess, of which Mr. Frohman holds the American rights.

GOETHE'S Faust will be the opening play at the New Schauspielhaus, Berlin, after the holidays. A number of alterations are to be made in the cast, and the scenic decorations and arrangements will be on a very fine scale. Fräulein Maren—a clever young actress who has lately come much to the front—is cast for Gretchen, Herr Siebert for the name-part, while Herr Adolf Klein, one of Berlin's best character actors, takes the part of Mephisto.

THE centenary of the birth of Mendelssohn comes next year, and the directors of the Crystal Palace will accordingly include some of Mendelssohn's works in the programme of the Handel Festival, which will be called the Handel-Mendelssohn Festival. The Handel Festival Choir and Orchestra, of 4000 singers and instrumentalists, will take part in the concerts, and Dr. F. H. Cowen will conduct.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

MR. GEORGE LEYTON, by his splendid exertions, may be credited with the awakening of the public conscience in regard to our neglected heroes of the Crimea and the Mutiny, and the fund now being pioneered by Lord Roberts owes its initiation to this accomplished actor-vocalist. Mr. Leyton, by his own work up and down England, has raised now the sum of £3,032—a noble score indeed in the cause of charity. Many a tottering old fellow whose courage mounted high at Alma, Inkerman, or Balaclava, has cause to bless the name of George Leyton.

THE directors of the Oxford will have a grand military night on Friday, July 31, when they will give half the takings to the Veterans' Fund. Of special significance on this occasion will be the latest military sketch The Last Muster, presented with such dramatic force by Mr. George Leyton, who has done nothing better than this during his successful career as an actor-vocalist.

AFTER a continuous as well as phenomenally successful season of 420 consecutive weeks (or rather more than eight years) at the Alhambra Theatre—which surely constitutes a record in stage booking—the unrivalled exhibition of Urbanora animated pictures will, by virtue of a contract just signed by Mr. Alfred Butt with Mr. Charles Urban (on behalf of their respective companies) be, on and from Bank Holiday, Monday, Aug. 3 next, transferred to and exclusively shown at the Palace.

THAT the kinematograph now forms a staple item on the ideal variety programme Mr. Butt has long recognised, and Mr. Urban's supreme knowledge of kinematography and all that appertains to it has been universally attested by the Press. Henceforth, therefore, the Urbanora animated pictures at the Palace, with their practically illimitable range of subjects, will be kept upon the highest rung of the bioscope ladder.

MR. HARRY MASTERS, one of the late George Adney Payne's young men, now the general-manager of the Gibbons' Circuit, was presented on Friday, the 10th inst., by his former colleagues at the Syndicate offices, 1, Durham House-street, Strand, with an illuminated address. The presentation was made by Mr. Henri Gros.

MR. LEON ZEITLIN, on vacating the positions of private secretary to Mr. Henri Gros and that of acting-manager of the Metropolitan, has been the recipient of a handsome gold cigarette case from Mr. W. Collins, the general-manager of the Syndicate halls, and a crocodile and gold-mounted pocket-book from the staff at No. 1, Durham House-street.

MR. FREDERICK W. DOWSETT, son of the late Vernon Dowsett, manager of the Tivoli, and of the late Mrs. Vernon Dowsett, was married to Miss Elsie M. Jury at Crayford, Kent, on Saturday. The bride was attended by her sister Miss Katie Judy, and the bridegroom had as best man his cousin Frederick Martinetti. After the reception, which was held at the bride's house, the happy couple left for Folkestone.

IF you ask Datas, the walking chronologist, for dates, he doesn't hand you out "stone fruit," but just lets you know that he can tell you the exact year and day of the birth of Herodotus, as well as the name of all the Derby winners. He is just now making music hall audiences in the provinces positively sit up with astonishment when they are not standing.

THE Empire will present its new Guignol play, After the Opera, early next week. During the brief absence of Mr. Fred Farren, Mr. Alexander Genée—the uncle of Mlle. Adeline Genée—has been induced to take up the rôle of the eccentric toy-maker, Copelius. As Mr. Genée has produced the ballet in all parts of the world, a more fitting representative could scarcely have been found.

MISS MAUD ALLAN gave four matinées and six evening performances last week, and therefore found it a physical impossibility to sufficiently rehearse the new set of dances illustrative of Tschaikowsky's "Noisettes" suite which she proposed to give at the Palace Theatre last Monday evening. They will be submitted on Monday next.

MR. R. A. ROBERTS, protean actor, is the principal attraction on next week's bill at Hackney Empire. Mr. Roberts has had a most interesting career, and tells a good story of an experience just after he embarked on his present protean method. "I remember," he says, "once inviting a committee to watch my entertainment from the back of the stage. I could only persuade one member of the audience to accept my invitation, and a great hulking chap strolled on to the stage and, to my horror, he was a navvy and intoxicated. However, I had to go through with it.

"I SAID to him, 'You have never met me before?' He looked at me and said 'Neow.' I explained that he was to sit at the back of the stage, watch my work, and then duly report whether my assertion, that I, and I alone, played all the characters, was true. I steadied him through the scene to the back. When it was over the man came forward fairly sobered up, for I had made things particularly smart for him that night. To my request: 'Kindly tell the ladies and gentlemen whether I have spoken the truth or not,' he replied, 'Mates, 'e done it all 'isself.'"

THE Empire, Camberwell, staff outing took place on Sunday. The party of over sixty left Camberwell Green by special car for Waterloo, then by special corridor train to Windsor. On arriving light refreshments were served at the Royal Oak and Railway Hotel, and the picnickers proceeded by brakes to Monkey Island Hotel, Bray, where lunch was provided by George Hards. During the afternoon sports were arranged by Mr. G. P. R. Burgess, assisted by Dr. M. Frost. Several ladies competed, the most successful being Mrs. Percy Ford. Tom Arnold gave an exhibition of swimming.

THE party consisted of Harry Bawn, E. Marshal Frost, Percy Ford (Directors of the Empire), G. P. R. Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Thacker, Mrs. P. Ford, Mr. Redfern, Mr. Kolher, Mr. and Mrs. Wiltshire, Mr. and Mrs. Woodger, Mr. and Mrs. Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. W. Nutt, Mrs. and Hettie and Eva Shackleford, Mr. Douglas Holms, Mr. Robinson, Mrs. Taylor, Mr. Latham, Sam Goodworth, Edwin Rutland, Jack Norton, H. Smy, Mr. Cooper and friend, Ben Ballard, Bob Anderson, Tom Arnold, Harry and Miss Ella Heer, W. Aston, W. Noris, Masters Toms and Wilks, Mrs. Brooks, Dalton, and Batten, Miss Borne Smith, Hancock, Holick, Jack Healey, Tim, Dick, and W. Finney, G. and F. Cottingham, W. Few, T. Jesshope, E. Jones, W. Caley, T. Lee, Franks, Alexandre, Shenow, Gough, Collier, Frank Hurst, and several other friends.

CAPTAIN BEN WOODGER (on behalf of the committee who had the management) begs to thank the following ladies and gentlemen for their kind donations towards the fund:—Miss Vesta Victoria, Jesse Sparrow, E. C. Webb, Marshall E. Frost, Harry Bawn, Percy Ford, G. P. R. Burgess, Mr. Simmons, W. Jeapes, Messrs. Oldfield, Thomas Cross, and others, who will kindly accept the best thanks of the whole of the staff of the Empire, Camberwell.

THE Scarborough Hippodrome opens on the 27th inst. with a first-class company.

MR. CYRIL FIELDING SMITH, the popular and able lieutenant of Mr. Wm. Peacock, the managing-director of the Harrogate Opera House, has been appointed to control the front of the house at the handsome new Scarborough Hippodrome, of which Mr. Peacock is also managing-director. Mr. Cyril Fielding Smith has been succeeded at Harrogate by his brother, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.

A GENERAL meeting of shareholders of the Gaiety Theatre, Birmingham, was fixed for yesterday (Friday), when some highly interesting business was excepted to take place.

MR. STANLEY BASKERVILLE, late of the Maidstone Hippodrome, which was destroyed by fire the other day, has been appointed manager of the Maidstone Palace in place of Mr. Sylvester.

THE Huddersfield Hippodrome will be closed from to-day for decorations and repairs, and for the construction of cloak-room accommodation for stalls patrons. The reopening will take place on Monday, Aug. 3.

MEMBERS of the M.H.A.R.A. and the V.A.F. will regret to learn that Mr. Harry Pyrah, of the Imperial Hotel, Morecambe, this week lost his wife suddenly. Mr. Pyrah is the Morecambe agent of the organisations named, and is a justly popular man with variety artists.

MR. WALTER MOULD, the late resident-manager of the Hippodrome, Accrington, which was totally destroyed by fire three weeks ago, has taken over all the vacant dates of the Town Hall, Accrington, making it a temporary abode for variety until the erection of a new vaudeville house.

THIS will be built in stone, and Mr. Bertie Crewe, the well-known London architect, is busy with the plans for an imposing structure. The Council has granted a lease for the land of 999 years. An endeavour will be made to open the new house at Christmas.

MR. WILL WHITE, the popular manager of the New Alhambra Theatre, Belfast, is at present enjoying a well-earned holiday at Blackpool and Douglas. During his short term of office at Belfast Mr. White has by his untiring energy resuscitated the fortunes of this old-established theatre, which at the present moment is enjoying wonderful prosperity.

MR. SAMUEL LLOYD, manager of the Glasgow Pavilion, and Mr. Howard W. Galpin, conductor there, have just returned from a motor holiday to the South of England. Mr. Lloyd is proud of the fact that his car covered 1500 miles with only two tiny punctures, the first day's run being Glasgow to Manchester, and the last York to Glasgow, the latter run (250 miles of difficult country) being accomplished in ten hours.

MR. BERTIE RALLAND, the assistant-manager of the Palace Theatre, Leicester, has been promoted by Mr. Oswald Stoll to the management of the Holloway Empire, and will take up his duties there on Monday next. Mr. Ralland, who is a young man, leaves Leicester with the best wishes of his many friends for his future success in his new sphere of activity. His promotion has been quick, and will, no doubt, be fully warranted. He is a son of Mr. Herbert Ralland, the well-known theatrical manager.

MR. EDWARD FOSTER, the popular and smartly up-to-date resident-manager of the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, is taking a holiday with his equally popular and charming wife at Bridlington. Meanwhile Mr. Harry Lucas, Mr. Foster's apt understudy, acts in his stead, and though it is no child's play to cope unaided with the crowds that the Grand attracts, Mr. Lucas succeeds admirably.

MR. LUCAS, on Monday, at the second house, had to crave the indulgence of the audience for the absence of Happy Fanny Fields, who, after appearing at the first performance, was seized with sudden indisposition, Miss Nelly Wallace being called upon from the Empire to deputise. Miss Fields was still "off" on Wednesday, having had a relapse. Mr. John E. Coyle, at the Hippodrome, has also been absent for part of the week.

MR. A. E. NICHOLLS, the popular acting-manager at the Palace, Carlisle, has accepted an engagement as acting-manager of the New Hippodrome, Middlesbrough, which opens early in August. At Carlisle Mr. Nicholls has made hosts of friends, who, while they will regretfully miss his genial presence, heartily congratulate him on his important appointment. Mr. Nicholls will still be under his old chief, Signor Pepi, who is the managing-director of the new Middlesbrough house.

THE Grand Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate, opened for the season on Monday with a speciality variety show, well selected by its popular manager, Mr. Chas. Evans, the programme including the Avrignys, Barrington, the Charnleys, Effie White, Chas. Williams, Lord, Murray, and Lord, &c.

LORD GEORGE SANGER, the proprietor, has been staying at Margate for some weeks, and has been busily engaged in watching an extensive re-decoration of the hall, probably the largest in the provinces. The stage and proscenium have been enlarged, and several additional comforts provided for the public. The Mayor of Margate, Mr. D. T. Evans, J.P., and many of the principal residents were present on the opening night; Mr. Harry Rickards also put in an appearance.

THE ball, which always follows the entertainment, was the usual good feature, and when in full swing made a pretty scene with the soft light from the handsome chandeliers and the tasteful dress of the ladies. Mr. Chas. Evans, who has been fourteen years now with Lord George Sanger, is to be congratulated upon the continued success of his management. Mr. W. Harvey is again the musical director.

MR. NELSON BARRY, the manager of the Manchester Hippodrome, confesses to a desire to make patrons of that house feel at home, and he has to that end transformed the foyer above the vestibule into a place wherein those waiting for admission to the best parts of the house may entertain themselves. Books, magazines, newspapers, writing materials, and every convenience of the ordinary reading-room are provided.

MR. BARRY says:—"People often find when they get to the theatre they have forgotten in their hurry to write a note to a friend. They need not worry now. They can do all the writing they want at the theatre, and there is one the less excuse for absence."

MR. F. J. V. WELCHMAN, the secretary and treasurer of People's Palace, Bristol, has produced a Royal souvenir of the King and Queen's visit to Bristol July 9, 1908, on the occasion of His Majesty opening the King Edward Dock, Avonmouth. The souvenir is well got up, and contains pictorial illustrations of monarchs who have visited Bristol in the past, displaying the historical association of Royalty with that city from the period of Edward the Elder (son of King Alfred) to the present time, thus proving Bristol to have been the resort of monarchs for a thousand years. The proceeds of the sale of the souvenir will be devoted to Bristol charities. A copy of the souvenir has been graciously accepted by His Majesty.

THE new manager of the Canterbury is Mr. Chas. W. Adams, who, we stated in a previous issue, was returning to manage his old house, the Holloway Empire, over whose destinies he has reigned for eight years. He is resigning that position in order to take up his appointment with the Syndicate, which dates from July 27.

MISS VALENTINE (of Radford and Valentine) has had to undergo a nasal operation, and is at present in the hospital recuperating as well as can be expected. She expects, however, to be able to resume work with her partner at the Oxford and Euston next week.

MR. MALCOLM SCOTT last week at the Middlesbrough Empire gallantly came to the assistance of Miss Nellie Atherton in her sketch Wanted, a Partner, and without any rehearsal played the comedy part at five minutes' notice, thus extricating the fair artist from an awkward dilemma. Mr. Scott presented Miss Atherton on Saturday night with a charming bouquet, and his courtesy and kindness are highly appreciated by that lady.

BILLY MCCLAIN has been elected a member of the Royal Automobile Club, whose patrons are King Edward, Prince of Wales, and His Grace the Duke of Sutherland.

LITTLE ZOLA has been so successful that Mr. Oswald Stoll has engaged him up till 1912 for his tours. This contract will make up a total of fifteen years that he has been with the firm. Little Zola has not yet settled for pantomime.

MISS LIZZIE GLENROY, who is to open at the Palace Theatre on Monday, was a prominent member of the Glenroy Troupe, and has recently been scoring on her own on the Moss tour.

MISS DAISY DORMER is able to announce that she is fully booked with Mr. Oswald Stoll until 1917—a practical tribute this to this dainty artist's fast-growing popularity. She is to be principal girl in pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Leeds, at Christmas.

MR. MATT WILKINSON will produce on Monday next at the Queen's, Poplar, an up-to-date farcical item from his pen, entitled On the Flip-Flap. Smart dialogue interspersed with humorous situations, and an interesting plot, should combine to make this new venture an assured success.

WE regret to announce the death of the well-known musician Thomas Greaves, musical director at the Star Theatre, Wolverhampton (now Theatre Royal) for over thirty-three years, which took place on the 9th inst. at the residence of his son, 20, Victoria-terrace, Dudley. The deceased gentleman broke his arm last November, and never recovered from the effects. His death will cause great grief to many people connected with the theatrical and music hall professions, by whom he was highly respected and esteemed.

THE funeral took place on Tuesday at the New Cemetery, Dudley. Previous to the interment a memorial service was held in St. Luke's Church, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Downe, and attended by a large congregation of the deceased's colleagues and pupils. He leaves behind him two daughters and one son, his wife predeceasing him two years ago.

WE regret to announce the death of Charles Clifford, who was killed on Thursday near Budapest, being thrown from a horse he was riding. It is generally known that he was engaged to that bright and clever artist Miss Jennie Johns, and was to have been married to her in Newport on the 29th of this month. Mr. Clifford was well known in sporting circles both in England and Austria, and his untimely death will be mourned by all who knew him. Miss Johns will have widespread sympathy in her sad bereavement.

MISS MAUD ESMOND, the refined burlesque artist, who is appearing this week at the Empire, Croydon, established a firm reputation as a singer of good songs whilst engaged as principal boy at the Theatre Royal pantomime last Christmas, and her appearance this week at the Empire in the same town has been the signal for a rousing reception. She has received many offers for next Christmas.

MISS MAY AUDREY sails to-day for South Africa per the Kenilworth Castle from Southampton. She opens at Johannesburg on Aug. 10 for six weeks, then on to Cape Town for three weeks. Arriving home on Saturday Oct. 31, she opens on the Monday following at Grimsby, proceeding thence to the London Coliseum, Oxford, and other London halls. She has also signed for forty-six weeks of Stoll tours, which takes her up to Dec. 26, 1910. She is not returning to musical comedy.

"THE KING AND THE BEGGAR MAID" is the title of a new musical sketch, by Mary Righton, which will shortly be seen on the boards of the London variety stage. It is being rehearsed at the Putney Hippodrome, where a private dress rehearsal will be given to-day at 4.50. The action of the piece is set in mediæval times, and the music has been selected from the oldest composers. A love elixir is responsible for the romantic attachment set forth in the title.

MR. ALFRED BUTT has another recruit from the regular stage in the charming Miss Alice Elieson, who is to make her début at the Palace on Monday. She was recently with Mr. Tree at His Majesty's through the run of Hansel and Gretel and The Merchant of Venice. She also appeared with Coquelin the elder at the same house. Miss Elieson is an accomplished young lady, as in addition to acting and singing she is a solo performer on the 'cello, violin, and piano. Miss Elieson's voice is soprano, and it is intended that she shall sing to the accompaniment of Mr. Herman Finck's orchestra.

MR. FRANK MACNAGHTEN'S staff at the Leicester Pavilion Theatre of Varieties held their annual outing on Sunday last, the rendezvous selected this year being Skegness, a growing and popular seaside resort on the Lincolnshire coast. The merry party, numbering nearly fifty, left the Great Northern station at 8.30, and arrived at their destination at 11.30. The weather throughout the entire day was of the most delightful nature, and the outing was voted one of the best that has been held in connection with the employés of Mr. Macnaghten's pretty Leicester hall.

THE Pier Hotel was made the headquarters for the day, and at the dinner, which was of a most substantial nature, Mr. Joe Lawrence, in proposing the health of Mr. Macnaghten, remarked on the many ways in which that gentleman had endeared himself to his Leicester employés, and also thanked him on behalf of the staff for the generous contribution towards the funds for their outing.

THE afternoon was spent in drives to various places of interest in the neighbourhood, boating, and bathing, after which an adjournment was made for tea at 4.30, the party returning to Leicester at 6.25, arriving home at 9, all having thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Amongst the many present were Mrs. Lawrence, Mr. Britcher (the conductor), and a large number of the patrons motored over. We should not omit to mention that the arrangements were carried out in a satisfactory manner by Mr. Joe Lawrence, who was ably assisted by Mr. Frank Burdett.

THE Elliott Savonas are just able to take a week's holiday—a well-deserved rest, indeed—after a year of hard work. It is not much, but on account of bookings they are unable to extend it.

WHILE Bostock and Wombwell's Royal No. 1 Exhibition was journeying from Banchory to Stonehaven on Sunday the lioness Victoria gave birth to five male cubs. The litter is exceptionally large, and the fact that all the cubs are males is unique.

MR. H. A. JORDISON, of Manchester, has secured a musical comedy playlet for children, entitled The Coon's Restaurant, which is quite away from any children's performance on the music-hall stage. He is producing it at the Queen's Park, Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday. The playlet is from the pen of that well-known sketch writer, Jack Brownson.

THE first annual picnic of the staff of the Sunderland Empire took place on Sunday, the outing being to Seaton Sluice. The party, numbering nearly sixty, left the Empire Theatre stage door at 9.45 in several brakes, and, crossing from South Shields over the Tyne to North Shields, were met there by Mr. Richard Thornton, the managing-director, and Mrs. Thornton, who in their motor-car accompanied the party on their journey along the Northumberland coast past Tynemouth, Whitley Bay, and picturesque Cullercoats and St. Mary's Isle—a trip which was thoroughly appreciated. At the Waterford Arms Hotel at Seaton Sluice the party had dinner.

THE programme of sports resulted thus:—Three-legged Race—Robson and Patterson, 1; Brown and Dennison, 2. Ladies' Egg and Spoon Race—Miss Hanson, 1; Mrs. Brown, 2. 100 Yards Handicap—J. Tindle, 1; H. Brown, 2; Dennison, 3; Robson, 4. Ladies' 80 Yards Handicap—Miss Rutherford, 1; Miss Hanson, 2; Miss Kirk, 3. Muddle Boot Race—T. Dennison, 1; Tindle, 2. Boys' 100 Yards Handicap—Donaldson, 1; O'Connor, 2; Gallewski, 3; Young, 4. Consolation Scratch Race—Miss N. Rutherford, 1; Mrs. Tweddle, 2.

FOLLOWING the sports came a football match between teams captained by Mr. G. Marshall and Mr. W. E. Piercy, the secretary and treasurer respectively of the picnic, to whose efforts much of its success was due. After tea, which was thoroughly enjoyed, Mr. Piercy, the treasurer, proposed a resolution of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Thornton for their presence at the outing, and to Mrs. Thornton especially for her kindness in presenting the prizes won at the sports.

MR. HARRY ESDEN, the manager of the Empire, responded, and thanked Mr. Piercy and Mr. Marshall and their committee for the manner they had worked. The party drove back home, arriving at Sunderland at 10.45 p.m. after having had a fine and enjoyable day. Mr. W. F. Wells, the energetic manager of the Newcastle Empire, was one of the party.

DR. WALFORD BODIE commences a four months' tour of Scotland on Monday, opening at the Palace Theatre, Aberdeen, making his sixteenth annual visit. He hopes to beat all his previous records, the Palace having now resorted to the twice-nightly system. He will take a four weeks' rest in August, spending a few days at his Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, after which he will motor through the Highlands, accompanied by Mrs. Bodie and his daughter. He opens his Welsh halls in August. They are now closed for extensive and costly alterations by Dean and Sons, Birmingham. Dr. Bodie, sole proprietor of the Hippodrome and Opera House, Ferndale, and of the Hippodrome and Opera House, Pontycymmer, besides having a big interest in other Welsh halls. He will also open three other theatres at an early date. His new book, entitled "Stage Stories," will be published next week by Simpkin Marshall and Co.

OUR Paisley correspondent writes:—"In April an action was raised in Paisley Sheriff Court, at the instance of Moss' Empires, Limited, against Lady Mansel for interdict against her appearance at the Paisley Hippodrome. The case was concluded on Tuesday, when, on behalf of Moss' Empires, a minute of abandonment was lodged. Scots law allows of this on condition that the defender's expenses be paid, which in this case was agreed to.

"THE result is of importance to those artists engaged for the Paisley Hippodrome who could not appear owing to the fear of a warrant for interdict as well as to Mr. E. H. Bostock, who will now be enabled to book artists hitherto debarred, and those artists previously engaged will now be at liberty to appear at Mr. Bostock's Paisley establishment without the restriction being enforced.

THE eighth annual summer excursion of Barrasford's Birmingham Hippodrome took place on Sunday last. The party, numbering about seventy, journeyed to Worcester in saloon carriages, and at that ancient city embarked on the s.s. Avonmore Castle for Lower Lode, Tewkesbury. On arrival about one o'clock they were met by Mr. Lester Collingwood, who had motored down from the Midland city. An excellent dinner was served at 1.30 by Host Young, of the Lower Lode Hotel. Several short speeches were made, Mr. Harry Lyons, the manager, responding to the toast—given by Mr. Collingwood—wishing continued success to the Barrasford enterprises.

A FISHING competition was held in the afternoon under the guidance of Mr. A. W. Matcham, manager of the Empire, Birmingham, who acted as judge, the prizes having been given by Messrs. Lyons, Collingwood, Matcham, and Dr. Trout. The return water trip was made in a most pleasant manner, and Worcester was reached in time to catch the train landing the Hippodrome party and their friends at the New-street Station well before ten p.m. The entire day was very enjoyable. Manager Lyons was most ably assisted by Mr. T. Middleton, the assistant-manager, and Mr. Lax, the advertising-manager, of the Birmingham Hippodrome.

THE Hippodrome, Stockton-on-Tees, considered one of the finest equipped buildings in the North, and only recently built, has passed into the hands of that astute North agent Mr. Harry Burns, who will keep it open solely for variety. This being his latest venture, we feel sure the profession at large will wish him every success, which he richly deserves, speculating at this time of the year, especially in the North, where the shipbuilding strikes have cast a gloom upon trade in general.

BY the death of Mr. Arthur Barns in Birmingham we have lost the first man who turned a double somersault on the English stage, and who held the record by giving ninety-five somersaults in succession. Mr. Barns travelled with William Cooke's circus fifty-five years ago, and afterwards was a performer in all the circuses in Britain and on the Continent, having the honour of appearing before the Czar Nicholas, William I. of Germany, and Napoleon III. of France, who presented him with medals. Mr. Barns was not only a champion acrobat but a magnificent swimmer, attributing his vigour to the abstemious life which he led—drink in moderation, and tobacco not at all. Birmingham turned out in large numbers to pay a last tribute to his memory.

FOR many years past the anomalies, crudities, and absurdities of the present laws and bye-laws affecting places of entertainment have from time to time called forth the strongest condemnation in these columns. Sometimes it has been the manager of a theatre who has suffered through the present conditions under which he carries on his business, another time it has been the actor or the artist, and again it has been the music hall proprietor or the playwright. Societies have been formed, meetings have been held, agitation has been set going, to bring about a change; but nothing very material has so far happened.

WE have before us, however, a copy of a resolution which is to be moved at the next Trade Union Congress jointly by the Artists' Protection League and the Actors' Union, which, if adopted, should at least make the alteration of the present unsatisfactory state of affairs possible within a comparatively short space of time. The resolution reads as follows:—"That this Congress instructs the Parliamentary Committee to take steps to bring about a revision in the laws and regulations affecting (a) the licensing of theatres and music halls, (b) the licensing of plays, and (c) the censorship of plays."

WE congratulate the two societies mentioned upon the broad spirit in which their resolution has been framed, and it appears to us that all parties interested in the question should support the resolution in whatever way is practical. When an important industry—and there can be no question as to the importance of the theatre and the music hall of to-day as a great factor in our social system, whether looked upon as an educational force or as a means of healthy recreation and necessary amusement—has been so neglected by the Government of the country that there has been no legislation on its behalf for more than fifty years employer and employee must suffer through that neglect, the worker—that is, the actor and the artist—being, as must always be the case, the first to feel the shoe pinch.

THE present, however, seems to us to be a most favourable opportunity for combined action on the part of all concerned, and further, we think that possibly such unity of action in this matter might lead to unity of thought and purpose on other subjects which would be for the betterment and advancement of all whose livelihood is dependent upon the theatrical and music hall "industry."

MR. FRANK GERALD, the general secretary of the Artists' Protection League, informs us that the support of all other kindred societies is earnestly sought, in order that the resolution may carry as much weight with the Congress as possible. We trust such help will be forthcoming, because we think that it is high time that laws that speak of actors as strolling players, or rogues and vagabonds, and class the variety theatre of to-day with "the disorderly house," should be abolished in favour of legislation that will assist and protect all who earn their living by contributing to the "gaiety of nations."

THE first production of The New Clown sketch will take place next Monday evening and during the week at the Chelsea Palace. The performance will be given at 7.25 and 9.40. The cast includes Mr. Arthur Cornell, Mr. William Macready, and Miss Olive Wilton.

MME. HANAKO, the diminutive Japanese actress, who has been making such a name for herself on the Continent, is, says the Morning Leader, quite a famous actress in Japan, where she has attained a foremost position in a very few years. Mme. Hanako was born in a little village near Tokio.

SHE first appeared on the stage when she was eight, but it was not until two years later that she decided to take it up as a profession. She soon manifested the most unusual qualities, and rapidly became a much-talked-of little person in Japan. Then came the desire for fresh lands and stages new, and her first visit to Paris, where she was an entirely unheard-of celebrity.

AT a five o'clock tea given by the Figaro, she appeared before a distinguished audience in a little sketch. Loie Fuller, who was among the guests present, was at once struck by her genius and by the dramatic strength of the piece in which she appeared. So much so, indeed, that she adapted it into English, and it was produced at the Duke of York's on Aug. 26 last year, under the title of The Little Japanese Girl.

THE original is entitled Otâke, and in the title-rôle Mme. Hanako will appear on Monday at the Hippodrome. Otâke is the name of the little maid-servant who, finding her mistress, the Countess Yoshiko, out of the way, uses her toilet requisites, makes up her face, and arranges her hair, and, pleased with the result, finally dresses up as her mistress. She is thus discovered by a would-be lover of her mistress, Masou-o, who, mistaking her for the Countess, makes passionate love to her. As he can get no response to his pleadings, for Otâke is nearly paralysed with fright, he denounces her and departs in high dudgeon, leaving the little servant in a state of collapse. There was a tragic ending to the play in its English dress at the Duke of York's, where Miss Pauline Chase played "the little Japanese girl," but this is avoided in the version presented at the Hippodrome.

THE staff of the Walthamstow Palace celebrated their fifth outing on Sunday, the 12th. Leaving Walthamstow by four-horse brakes, they proceeded to Holborn Viaduct Station, where they continued their journey by reserved carriages to Herne Bay, where they enjoyed various delightful walks, sails, drives, &c., until 12.30, when dinner was served at the Albany Restaurant. The chair was taken by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, and the vice-chairmen were Mr. Lesley Gooch and Mr. H. Petersen. The toasts of "The King," "The Walthamstow Palace," and "The Directors" having been drunk with enthusiasm, the party broke up, to indulge in the varied pleasure of the seaside until 7.30, when they returned to town. Much credit is due to Mr. G. Parker, who was secretary to the outing fund, and the committee, who so ably supported him.

MESSRS. PORTER AND FERGUSSON, the genial proprietors of the Lancaster Hippodrome, entertained their staff to the number of twenty-six by giving them a trip to the Isle of Man last week-end. The boat train was stopped at the Midland station on Saturday evening last to take the party, which included both Mr. Porter, Mr. Fergusson, and Mr. Stebborn (theatrical agent) to Heysham, where they boarded the s.s. Duchess of Devonshire.

SUPPER was served on board, and the party arrived at Douglas about 4 a.m. After a walk round the party returned to the vessel for breakfast. They then proceeded via Laxey by the electric railway to the top of Snaefell, but were disappointed with the view, as it was hazy. Next they journeyed up to Ramsey, halting for dinner at the Prince of Wales's Hotel. Fairy Glen was visited, and on the return to Douglas tea was partaken of at the Alexandra Hotel. Mr. Chas. Fox, secretary of the Palace Gardens, kindly invited the company to the Sunday evening concert. Douglas was left behind at 11.30, and the party returned to Lancaster at 4.30 on Monday morning after a very fine excursion.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

QUITE a crowd assembled at Euston station on Thursday morning to bid farewell to Mr. Fred Day the manager of Messrs. Francis and Day's New York branch, who was returning to that city after a pleasant holiday sojourn in the old country. Among the gathering were Mr. and Mrs. David Day and their granddaughter, also Miss Beatie Day, Mrs. and Mr. J. Hutchens, Miss Sylvia Plucknett, Miss Edie Francis, Mr. William Francis, Miss Helen Trix, Mr. Bert Feldman, and Mr. Herbert Moccatta (of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.), Mr. John Smith (Messrs. Francis and Day's London manager), Mr. Lester Barrett, Mr. Charles Wilmott, Mr. Hermann E. Darewski, jun., Mr. Henry E. Pether, Mr. Leonard Bellamy, Mr. William Eyke, and other members of the staff from both London branches of the firm. A rousing cheer was given as the train steamed away. Mr. and Mrs. David Day accompanied the voyager to Liverpool, and later in the day he sailed, having as companion Mr. Louis Dreyfus, per White Star s.s. Celtic.

THAT great authority on the art of ballroom dancing, Mr. James Follitt, has dedicated by permission to the Mayor of Scarborough his latest creation, the "Valentine Veleta," and Messrs. Francis and Day have the charming composition in the press. The firm are also issuing "Rosemary," an exquisite ballad by George Fearnley and G. M. Saker.

FRANK LEO has written and composed for Mr. Wilkie Bard one of those characteristic comic songs that have helped to make famous the names of both the author-composer and the comedian. It is called "All day," and has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. G. H. ELLIOTT'S voice has never been heard to greater advantage than in his present chorus number, "Sue, Sue, Sue (I'm very much in love with you)," and it has proved nightly during the week one of the most enjoyable items in Mr. Blyth-Pratt's fine programme at the Oxford. Hermann Darewski's flowing melody fits Lester Barrett's lyric like the proverbial glove, and it is a moot point whether this number or the same author and composer's "A heart full of love and a pocket full of money" will be the greater favourite all over these islands when King Pantomime again holds his court. Messrs. Francis and Day publish both numbers.

MISS ELLA RETFORD'S "Take me on the flip-flap" has caught on tremendously at the Tivoli, and the lady's charming personality, ringing voice, and distinct enunciation go far to heighten the effect of one of the most tuneful songs of the day. It is from the practised pens of Chas. Wilmott and Hermann E. Darewski, and is enjoying considerable vogue as a "Sixpenny Pop," forming, as it does, No. 461 of the series issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. J. P. LONG is the author of all Mr. Ernie Mayne's latest hits, with which he is scoring so heavily on the Stoll tour.

MISS HETTY KING produced this week two new songs by E. W. Rogers, entitled "No wonder the hen can't sing" and "The last of the heroes." The latter refers to the Territorials and the Militia. Both were enormous successes.

MR. HERBERT MELVILLE has just secured for Miss Jean Macduff, Scotch comedienne, a song entitled "I'm getting married in the morning," from the pens of those clever writers Messrs. Harry and Chris Carlton.

FEDERATIONS AND FUNDS.

THE entry-forms for the sports can be obtained at 28, Wellington-street, or will be forwarded on receipt of stamped addressed envelope. They can also be had from any variety theatre, variety agent, or provincial agents of the M.H.A.R.A. The entry fee is 1s. for each event. There will be twenty-two events, and therefore an early commencement will have to be made on Aug. 12.

SATURDAY, Aug. 1, is the last day on which entries can be accepted for the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund's fête, gala, and sports at Herne Hill grounds on Wednesday, Aug. 12. The sports are open only to those who have been directly connected with the music hall, theatrical, and circus professions for the last twelve months, and no entry will be accepted unless accompanied with the entry fee (one shilling), and entries must be made and races run in the real name of competitor.

THE list of events includes 120 Yards Running Handicap, One Mile Walking Handicap (open), One Mile Ladies' Bicycle Race, 100 Yards Children's Handicap (boys), 100 Yards Children's Handicap (girls), 100 Yards Agents' Running Handicap, Half-mile Animal Bicycle Race (open), 50 Yards Flip-Flap Race, One Mile Running Race, 5 Miles Invitation Auto-cycle Exhibition Race, 5 Miles Motor Cycle Handicap (open), 120 Yards Hurdle Handicap, One Mile Bicycle Scratch Race (open), 100 Yards Sack Race (open), 360 Yards Steeplechase in Basket Horses; Comic Costume Scramble, 440 Yards Running Handicap, 60 Yards Vaulting Handicap, 440 Yards Johannesburg Cup Race, 100 Yards Wing Race, 360 Yards Henri Gros Cup Obstacle Race, 100 yards Consolation Race, and a special event—Running High Jump for the Vulcana Challenge Cup.

THE support given by the Federation Executive Committee to the Executive Committee of the I.A.L. in their conflict with the Continental managers was heartily supported by sixty members' meetings on Friday last. The meetings were unanimous in their decision not to accept engagements for the proscribed halls under any circumstances whatever, and a considerable number of meetings decided by resolution to submit all offers for Continental engagements to the Federation prior to signing contracts.

THE Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. held their 569th meeting on Wednesday, when Mr. G. H. Smythson took the chair. Messrs. W. H. Atlas, Hal Forde, Arthur Rigby (hon. treasurer), Ryder Slone, W. E. Gillin, F. W. Millis, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary) were also present. The secretary was instructed to send out notices especially requesting those committeemen in town to attend next Wednesday, in order to discuss important business. During the month of June the sum of £25 8s. has been collected for the Benevolent Fund through the extra 1s. charged on renewals; prior to June 1, a period of nearly five weeks, the amount of £30 12s. was collected from this source. It was decided that the Llandudno agency should remain at the Gresham Hotel. The weekly statement showed an increase of thirty-two new members, and receipts £19 12s. 9d.

THE financial statement for the month of June disclosed: Reserve fund, £532 7s. 3d.; deposit account, £158 7s.; current account, £109 15s. 1d.; petty cash, £45; total funds, £845 9s. 4d. Summary of membership:—New members, 1,623; renewals, 3,862; total, 5,485; against a corresponding period in 1907, 1,506 new members and 3,577 renewals.

BENSON and Rose, who have made a hit with their comedy duologue, Elizabeth and the Baby, written by Jack Brownson, have secured a new comedy act from the same author, entitled What did She Want?

DINNER AND PRESENTATIONS TO JOE O'GORMAN, W. H. CLEMART, AND WAL PINK.

"Old Joe's treble!" That was the title bestowed upon the three gentlemen mentioned above in a telegram sent to the chairman of Sunday's banquet at the Boulogne Hotel, Gerrard-street, by an absent V.A.F. No title could have been more happily chosen. It conveyed a significant and highly-appreciated compliment to the popular chairman of the dinner, Joe Elvin, whose splendid benevolence has won for him the gratitude of his poorer brother and sister artists. Indeed, the note of personal affection towards Mr. Elvin which dominated the attitude of almost every speaker was one of the pleasantest memories of the gathering, which numbered upwards of a hundred. Mr. Elvin, in presenting three medallions to Messrs. Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, and Wal Pink, made a speech that did credit both to heart and head. Sincerity and earnestness marked every phrase of it. He had travelled the "beaten way of friendship" with two of the trio whom the V.A.F. had chosen to honour, and the crisp, clear sentences, touching in their simplicity, and coming straight from the heart of a man who has always "played the game," made a deep impression. Mr. Joe O'Gorman was not quite at his best, adopting at times a somewhat querulous tone. He is a public man, or, at any rate, a quasi-public man, and calumny is part of their heritage. In the fierceness of controversy he has not escaped it. Criticism, too, if it be at times carping, is an excellent tonic, and loosens the rivets of the armour of self-complacency, hammered out by the too ready adulation of friends. The organisation, as was pointed out by Mr. C. J. Doughty, the excellent young advocate who so worthily fills the position of counsel to it, is in a very healthy condition, and the attitude of its chairman should be circumspect, diplomatic, progressive. At a time of congratulation there should have been an overruling instinct making for restraint and command of passion. Mr. O'Gorman was in happier mood when he spoke of the loyalty of the rank and file of the Federation, for which a big future was prophesied by Mr. Victor Niblo, the Big Chief of the White Rats of America, who spoke of the Federation becoming a gigantic organisation, uniting artists at the uttermost ends of the earth in a bond of unity. The value of Mr. W. H. Clemart and Mr. Wal Pink's work for the Federation in the Arbitration proceedings was mentioned in flattering terms, and a graceful reference was made to Mr. Fred Russell, who was absent from England during the days of Arbitration, but who raised the flag of the Federation in Australia.

Among the guests were many ladies, whose work in the stress of the days of the strike was lightly touched upon by Miss Marie Kendall, in her response to the toast of "The Ladies," wittily proposed by Mr. V. L. Granville. The gathering was larger than was expected, the space being too confined to hold all the guests, and the time was too limited to allow the later speakers to do justice to the toasts entrusted to them. But it was a joyous and exuberant crowd, and conviviality and confraternity reigned.

MR. JOE O'GORMAN.

The project of the testimonial was initiated at a small meeting at Bury, Lancashire, and the contributions, amounting to £215, might have been much larger had the original idea of collections at V.A.F. meetings not been nipped in the bud. The Testimonial Committee were most fortunate in their arrangements, and Mr. Edward Barry (hon. sec.) and Mr. W. H. McCarthy (hon. treas.) worked like Trojans. Other members were Messrs. G. H. Chirgwin, Bert Byrne, Edwin Adeler, Joe McConnell, Ernest Shand, Tony Iveson, G. B. Sinclair, Bert Williams, Billy Brown, Little Ganty, and J. G. Grahame, jun. The testimonial took the form of three medallion badges set in diamonds, the badge presented to Mr. O'Gorman being adorned also with emeralds, a felicitous allusion to his being a son of Erin; that presented to Mr. Clemart in rubies and sapphires—these, with the diamonds, making up the red, white, and blue; and the medallion presented to Mr. Pink was of diamonds and rubies—these last making a subtle allusion to Mr. Pink's name. The medallions are prettily designed and were supplied by Messrs. Rawson, Ward, and Gammage, of Clerkenwell-road, E.C.

Among the company were Fred Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Mr. and Mrs. Steve McCarthy (Marie Kendall), Chas. J. Doughty, Eugene Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tate, Florrie Kendall, Dick Kendall, Nellie McCarthy, Nan Farren, Fred Niblo, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hooper (Victoria Monks), Diana Hope, Monte Bayly, O'Gorman Bros., Dolly Golden, Daisy Dormer, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maple, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Nolan (Agnes Hazel), Aggie Nolan, James Allison, Gus Garrick, James Kellino, W. Kellino, Joe Tennyson, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Sinclair, Percy Yorks, Charles Austin, W. T. Ellwanger, Mr. and Mrs. Papa Brown, Jack and Evelyn, Mr. and Mrs. Syd Laurel, Maude Courtney, George Courtney, Richardson Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Morny Cash, Hanvarr and Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Motramo, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Dusty Rhodes, Billy Downes, Mena Brae, Horace Wheatley, Charles May, Jack Collinson, Dave Carter, Dave O'Toole, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Le Fre, Ryder Slone, Wal Grace, Arthur Reece, Jack Lotto, E. W. Manning, V. L. Granville, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Forde, Joe McConnell, Edwin Adeler, Tambo, M. E. Fitzgerald, J. E. Nightingale, Henry Prenton, Pat Redmond, Walter Curtis, Doody and Wright, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bartram, Mr. H. Hibbert, Harry Webber, Morris Hyman, M. P. Bentley, Atlas, Larola, Rose Cabani, Mr. and Mrs. Crook, Eddie Comet, Tom B. Conover, George Manton, Fred Mulvey, Victor Kelly, Bob Taylor, Irve Hayman, Pat Doherty, Mr. and Mrs. B. Barry, Mrs. Radford, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bartram, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McCarthy, Mr. Freeman, Mr. Purvis, Mr. H. Belcham, and Mr. E. N. Sansom.

MR. JOE ELVIN, on rising to propose "The King and Queen and Royal Family," had a reception that it did one good to hear. Then addressing the assembly as "Brother and Sister V.A.F.'s," he said it gave him very great pleasure to propose "the health of three of the very best of good men"; Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, and Wal Pink. He was more than delighted because two of them—Joe and Wal—were friends of a lifetime. Clemart he had not known so long, but he had found him the best of good fellows—a true friend to the Federation, and therefore a true friend of theirs and his. They were assembled that night to show these good men and true some mark of their esteem, respect, and appreciation for the fine work they had done. Some of them did not know the strenuous and continuous nature of their work. They were among the representatives at the conference of delegates from other music-hall societies in the early days of the movement towards organisation. At all the meetings they were there, always ready with good advice and sound judgment. When the Federation was founded they were there. Then came the Balaclava Charge of the movement—the strike. And O'Gorman, Clemart, and Pink were in the thick of it. When it came to the Conciliation Board, however, they were not all there; but dear old Wal Pink was there, and they knew how well he fought for their interests. When they got the Arbitration Board, and three representatives were sent from the V.A.F. to do battle for the artists, the same old three were there again. They did all that it was possible to do. Proceeding, Mr. Elvin told how the V.A.F. men were congratulated by Mr. Askwith, of the Board of Trade, when they presented the case for the artists, and Mr Clemart was highly complimented on his statement by the Official Arbitrator. Only a few weeks ago they met Mr. Oswald Stoll on the charity matinée question, and impressed on him the desirability that 2½ per cent. of the profits of such matinées should go to the music-hall charities. As President of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, he regretted, for charity's sake, that the proposals of the V.A.F. were not accepted by Mr. Stoll. The work of the trio demanded recognition, and as a tribute of esteem and admiration they had subscribed for three little medallions. Messrs. O'Gorman, Clemart, and Pink were proud of the work they had done, and the V.A.F. would be always proud of them.

MR, JOE ELVIN.

MR. CLEMART.

Turning to Mr. O'Gorman, and addressing him as "dear old Joe," Mr. Elvin said: "It gives me very great pleasure to give you this jewel. You have fought for us nobly and well, and we sincerely hope you will occupy the position of Chairman of the V.A.F. for many years, and go on fighting for us while there is any fighting to be done." At this point the company rose and cheered for a considerable time. "Joe," continued Mr. Elvin when the applause had subsided, "we love you and respect you; and I can only add, God bless your dear old Irish heart." Both Mr. O'Gorman and Mr. Elvin were visibly affected as Mr. Elvin said this and handed the medallion to the V.A.F. Chairman. Next addressing Mr. Clemart, in equally moving terms, Mr. Elvin said: "You have been always a good friend to the Federation, and your work will always be remembered, respected, and admired. We wish you all the good you can wish yourself; and as you go round the profession may you always be starred and never be barred." (Applause.) In presenting his medallion to "dear old Wal," Mr. Elvin said: "I have placed you third, but I have backed you for a place. It is the pleasure of my life to hand you this emblem of our respect and esteem. What a worker you have been! We admire you and thank you, and shall never forget you. You are good, and the little emblem is good, and if the next sketch you write for me is only as good as you are yourself, I shall be more than satisfied." In conclusion, Mr. Elvin said: "We are very proud of these three officers of ours—our representatives. While we have such loyal true hearts to speak and to fight for us in our profession, the Variety Artists' Federation will never die!" (Loud and prolonged cheers.) Mr. Elvin then proposed "Long life, prosperity, and every success to Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, and Wal Pink"; and it was drunk with three times three, the whole company rising and singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

MR. J. O'GORMAN was received with round after round of applause. Having thanked his lifelong friend, Mr. Elvin, and his other friends for their cordial expressions of goodwill, Mr. O'Gorman said he admitted that he had tried to do something for the Federation, but he thought Mr. Elvin had attributed too much to the officials of the organisation, and particularly to himself. He had been all too flattering in his remarks. At no time had the Federation been a matter of one or two or three or a dozen men doing all the work. At all events, the organisation now had grown too big for that. The work must be done, and was being well done, by the general body of members. He regretted from the bottom of his heart that some of their opponents could not see that gathering. No one of their critics would dare now to question the right of a gigantic profession like theirs to form themselves into a federation, and to run that organisation in the way laid down by its members. The profession had done this successfully, and now that it had been done it did not matter what the papers might say about those who in the process had gone—or been pushed—into the front of the fight. Whilst some of the critics of the V.A.F. said it was too extreme, others had attacked him because he advocated arbitration. He admitted it. They had a good case and were not afraid to put it before an impartial honest man. "Moreover," said Mr. O'Gorman, "we will accept and abide loyally by his decisions in the spirit and the letter. Messrs. Pink and Clemart agreed with me that arbitration was the only possible way out of an impasse. The strike may have been injudiciously called; we were certainly unprepared, and we had practically no funds at our command; but we went on with it, and we fought our way out. Whatever may be said to the contrary, the interests of the artists were not forgotten or neglected by the three men you chose to voice your views.

"Some people have said that you got nothing out of the arbitration. Certainly we did not get all we wanted, or tried for, or even anticipated. But we got something—in fact, we got a good deal. If all the managers were faithfully to carry out the rulings of Mr. Askwith, there would be a great gain to the comfort and advantage of the artists as a body. Mr. Oswald Stoll's name is mentioned frequently as one of the managers opposed to the V.A.F. Personally, I have nothing against Mr. Stoll as a man, and less against him as a manager than against some others. If all the proprietors in the country were abiding by the Award as faithfully as Mr. Stoll, then our profession would be much happier than it is, and you would realise more fully how much was won for the artists by the policy of arbitration.

"Every manager should fulfil the terms of the Award, not only in the letter, but in the spirit. (Cheers.) The time is coming when we may have to make an example of managers who will not do this. The velvet glove is all very well, but the steel fist hits harder." He was seriously of opinion that until they closed one or two of the offending halls they would never have that peace and tranquility in the business that were necessary to the prosperity of the industry they represented. In closing, Mr. O'Gorman thanked the members for the medallion presented to him that evening. Had others been lucky enough to be placed in the position that force of circumstances had placed him in they would have come out as well as he had, or better. ("No, no.") Anyhow, he would always be proud of the honour they had done him for the part he had been allowed by force of circumstances to play in developing the V.A.F. He would be proud to wear the medallion so long as he lived, and when his race was run he hoped to pass it on untarnished to one of his song and dance men—a reference to his two sons.

MR. WAL PINK.

MR. W. H. CLEMART had a fine reception. Having thanked the members for the honour done him in the past and that evening, he referred to the rapid march of events that had brought them to such a splendid meeting within about a year of the arbitration, and within two and a half years of the inauguration of the artists' movements. His work for the V.A.F., he said, had been a labour of love; neither his colleagues nor himself, despite the insinuations of adverse critics, had any thought of subsequent rewards. Had they been asked at the outset, they would have stopped the proposal to give them a testimonial; but by the time they had heard anything of it it was already well on the way to realisation. Then they felt that it would be an insult to their brother and sister artists to throw the generous offer back in their faces, and so the movement of the testimonial was allowed to go on. A certain portion of the Press had held up the officers of the V.A.F. to scorn as self-seekers, as men looking for glory or cash in return for their labours in the cause. At least Mr. O'Gorman and himself had been so slandered—Mr. Pink for some reason or other always escaped these attacks. (A Voice: "He's better looking," and laughter.) Perhaps that was it. Anyway, continued Mr. Clemart, Mr. Pink always succeeded in keeping out of these troubles. As a matter of fact, went on Mr. Clemart, with a smile, he's quite as big an Anarchist as the rest of us! However, none of the officials of the V.A.F. care at all what their enemies said of them so long as the members believed in them and trusted them. He had spent many happy days in connection with that organisation, and he hoped to spend many more; but he thought the function of that evening was the most pleasant he had ever known. (A voice: "Get married!" and another voice: "Don't do it, Bert!" and laughter.) Seeing so many bad examples before him, Mr. Clemart said he would not do it. He closed his remarks by again thanking the members for this latest sign of their faith and affection.

MR. WAL PINK, on rising, referred jocularly to the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow." He said he did not know why they pitched it two notes higher for him than for the others, but he supposed that it was some sort of compliment—a suggestion that he was higher, more angelic, than Mr. O'Gorman or Mr. Clemart. He was delighted to see Mr. Joe Elvin in the chair. Joe was the one man above all others from whom he would wish to receive his medallion. Mr. Elvin had spoken most kindly of him that evening, but this was no new experience, for he had known nothing but kindness from Joe Elvin all his professional life, which began about forty years after that of Mr. O'Gorman. (Laughter and "Oh, oh!") "There is the evidence," said Mr. Pink, with a pretence of dramatic gesture, pointing to the younger O'Gormans present. Mr. Pink endorsed the statements of his colleagues that the only criticisms with which they were concerned were those of their friends the members. Those who were of the Federation as well as in the Federation—those who had the Federation spirit—would not be troubled by interested attacks. He pointed out that the V.A.F. numbers were 1, 2, and 4. No. 3 was missing. They were not to forget No. 3. (A voice: "Fred Russell," and cheers.) It was merely the luck of the game that Fred was in Australia on the occasion we are now celebrating. Had he been in England there would have been a fourth worker for the V.A.F. honoured here this evening. In referring to the Arbitration, he said that in labour circles the name of the Arbitrator, George Ranken Askwith was a household word for honesty. The Award was an honest Award, given by an honest man, and both sides were expected to abide honestly by it. Four years hence it would come to an end unless both sides arranged for its continuance. The V.A.F. must be prepared. The managers might be (and he believed would be) as anxious to maintain the Award as the artists. Anyway, the artists must look ahead. Temporary hardships under the Award—the matinée clause, for example, might have been inconvenient to some of the smaller men—would right themselves in due course. The conditions of working had been systematised. The barring clause was very seldom mentioned, yet had the old barring arrangement not been modified by the Award the Coliseum, of whose new prosperity he was glad to hear, could not have remained open and given remunerative employment—London employment—to a large number of good artists and good V.A.F.'s well known in the country. In closing, Mr. Pink again acknowledged the kindness of brother and sister V.A.F.'s.

MR. V. L. GRANVILLE proposed "The Ladies." Incidentally, he accused Mr. Pink—who at another gathering recently had been entrusted with the same toast—of the possession of an all-embracing knowledge of the subject. Whatever their knowledge of the other sex, or lack of it, all the male members of the profession were agreed that they understood one branch of womankind most thoroughly—namely, the ladies of the V.A.F., who, in the days of the strike, in trying times and inclement weather, greeted their masculine comrades with cheery smiles and words, and who won so many converts by their persuasive eloquence.

MISS MARIE KENDALL'S rising to reply was the signal for a big demonstration, "For she's a jolly good fellow" being sung. The last speech she had made was when on picket duty outside the Oxford. Strange to say, she was never at a loss for a word there; to-night she was. No words of hers would express the pleasure she felt at being present, and her sisters all over the country felt the same as she did towards the recipients of the medallions—their noble leaders.

MR. CHARLES DOUGHTY gave the toast of "The V.A.F.," which he said was healthy in itself and had inspired a healthy respect in others. So long as the V.A.F. was managed by men of ability and character like those they were honouring that evening, so long would it continue to inspire confidence and maintain its strength.

In responding, MR. O'GORMAN said the profession would never know the value of the assistance rendered to the V.A.F. by Mr. Chas. Doughty, who, when they were in a very difficult position, came to them, and worked so hard at the data of their case that within two days he was absolutely saturated with it, and who used his legal knowledge and great judgment so ably on their behalf. (Cheers.) No other man in the profession of the law to-day knew so much about the technicalities of the music-hall profession as Mr. Doughty. Thanks to the support of Mr. Doughty and a large number of other able men—including the members who had assisted so strenuously in organising the provinces during two years and a half of turmoil and stress—the V.A.F. to-day could fairly claim to have weathered the storm. Now, like the Village Blacksmith, they owed not any man, and had a good banking account to their credit. In four years they would be in a position to enforce the Award to the very letter.

The toast of "Allied Organisations" was in the hands of MR. FRED RUSSELL, who received a rousing welcome. The organisations in question he enumerated as the "I.A.L.," the Australian society, and the White Rats of America. "The I.A.L.," said Mr. Russell, "is apparently on the verge of a serious struggle, and I hope that our members will give them all the support possible during the fight." The White Rats, he mentioned, was an offshoot of one of our English societies, the Water Rats, and was founded by a Water Rat, Mr. George Fuller Golden. When the V.A.F. was fighting for the artists' rights over here the White Rats cabled strong assurances of support if required.

The toast was coupled with the name of MR. FRED NIBLO, Big Chief of the White Rats, who in responding said that his presence there that evening was quite in accordance with the British traditions of hospitality and good cheer to the stranger. There were many ties between the English and the American artists, notably the derivation of the White Rats from the Water Rats. The White Rats were with the Federation heart and soul. He trusted these ties would be multiplied and strengthened; that they would become one big beneficent organisation—a huge brotherhood of artists that would cover the face of the civilised world.

The toast of the "Absent V.A.F.'s" was proposed by MR. MONTE BAYLY, who reminded those present that they were celebrating among other things that evening the anniversary of the Award. (Cheers.) Dealing with the causes of the rapid growth and success of the V.A.F., he said that much of this was due undoubtedly to the hard and conscientious work of the ordinary members all over the country. The loyalty and interest of the country members had worked wonders. If the members were proud of the leaders, so the leaders must be proud of the members. No movement, he thought, could show a more united front. He asked the gathering to drink to the absent members, scattered that night in various parts of the world—the men and women of the rank and file, whose courage and devotion had been weighed in the balance and had not been found wanting.

MR. G. B. SINCLAIR replied to the toast.

MR. EDWIN ADELER proposed "The Press," to which Mr. C. C. Bartram responded.

MR. EUGENE STRATTON, in a few heartfelt words, spoke affectionately of "The Chairman," and in a brief response MR. ELVIN recommended to the assembly the V.A.B.F. Sports on Aug. 12 at Herne Hill. He wanted them to be a grand success, and if the V.A.F. and its friends boomed them well they would be the most successful music-hall sports on record. In conclusion, said Mr. Elvin, "God bless you all!" The National Anthem then brought the proceedings to a close.

During the evening the chairman read telegrams from V.A.F.'s and other sympathisers. Among them were the Three Herberts, Little Ganty, Walter Munroe, Josey Mooney, Felix Le Marie, Jimmy Jee, the Brilliants, Fred Connor, Paul Martinetti, J. Grahame, Peggy Pryde, Howard and Sinclair, and Harry Lester, on behalf of the Terriers.

Guild Work at the Fairs.

Following on the interesting rally of the Scotch showmen for the work of trade defence, the organising chaplain will be busy on the fairgrounds of Lancashire and Yorkshire for the next three weeks. His itinerary as at present arranged includes Dewsbury Feast for next Sunday, Longsight Wakes (Manchester) for the following Sunday, and for the first Sunday in August, Hunslet and Manningham Feasts. In all probability the organising chaplain will attend Dartford Fair for the purpose of holding a meeting of metropolitan showpeople with reference to extremely urgent matters concerning London fairs.

Great Glasgow Fair.

In connection with the work of the Guild, the organising-chaplain paid a visit to Glasgow, and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Green at their permanent Scottish home, The Carnival, Gallowgate. He was able to see modern Glasgow Fair in the making. There is always a certain romance attached to the memories of the golden past. It is, however, the duty of the true historian to get away from this glamour of the past and to chronicle with strict impartiality things as he sees them, and not viewing through rose-coloured glasses, a glorious past to the detriment of a triumphant present. Great as the memories of Glasgow Fair on its ancient green must be to the patriarchs of the road (fortunately still with us), it must be recorded to the credit of modern enterprise that Glasgow Fair of to-day far exceeds in the number, importance, and attractiveness of its entertainments anything ever done or seen in the days of yore.

Past and Present.

For example, the smallest set of steam-driven hobby-horses on exhibition at the present fair had the honour of being the largest and most up-to-date steam-driven roundabout ever seen at Glasgow Fair when they were first exhibited many years ago. It is actually dwarfed by the side of George Green's magnificent set of switchback motors. The mechanical contrivances, thoroughly up-to-date, invented and exhibited by the proprietor of the carnival, fully attests the fact that we have already stated in our endeavours to honestly apportion the facts of to-day in regard to the show business, and the glories of an honourable yet somewhat overrated past.

Green's Glasgow Fair Carnival.

Inside the carnival grounds we noticed an army of workmen and show employees busily at work preparing for the opening day of the carnival, Thursday, July 16. The principal attractions of the carnival this year will be the great al fresco stage and open auditorium For the all-day-long programme at this great free sight show an excellent company of variety artists has been engaged. Another great free sight exhibit will be Chipperfield's American menager'e. The whole of the wild beast caravans will be ranged on convenient sites for the delight of the patrons of the carnival. The White Vale Theatre, with its excellent stock company, will give dramatic performances at convenient intervals throughout the days of the fair. Green's cinematograph theatre will exhibit an excellent range of up-to-date films; Green's helter-ske'ter promises to be a source of immense delight to all Alpine glissaders. The switchback and scenic railway will also give the delights of exhilarating motion to thousands of patrons. The magnificent motor-car set and the steam horses (to which we have already referred) will, as usual, be amongst the standard attractions of the carnival. There will be shooting galleries, throwing games, and variety stalls in well-ordered profusion, and Caddick and Sons' American photographic saloon will be seen on its well-known position. We hope in the second notice next week to give more exact details of the great attractions of this popular resort of the Glasgow Fair holidays. The grounds will be a blaze of electric light in the evening; hundreds of thousands of parti-coloured electric lamps will illuminate the fair and the vast crowds enjoying the carnival in a blaze of glorious light and colour. We sincerely congratulate Mr. George Green and his most able staff of managers and assistants on the manifest forward signs of a great triumph for their carnival of 1908.

The Vinegar Hill Fairground.

The large open space, Vinegar-hill, Gallowgate, adjoining George Green's Carnival Ground, is now the fairground for Glasgow's historic holiday fair. This ground is also under the control of George Green The following large concerns were already on the ground when we made our visit: Biddall's circus, Wm. Clark, jun.'s, cinematograph theatre and ghost illusion, Carter's coliseum of varieties, P. Swallow's four-abreast jumpers, and a large attendant throng of side-shows, shooting concerns, and throwing games. The fair, of course, as regards the concerns, was but in the making, and from what we were told every foot of available space would be fully occupied, and the very best traditions of Glasgow Fair would be maintained at Vinegar-hill.

The Late B. T. Burnett.

Mrs. Burnett desires us to thank the many friends who have expressed by letter their sympathy with her and her family in their great bereavement. She is particularly grateful to the Rev. T. Horne, Showmen's Chaplain, for all the kind interest and spiritual ministrations given to her late husband. Mrs. Burnett also wishes to thank Mr. Scott and the staff of the Alhambra who so very kindly came to her assistance in the darkest hour of her necessity. A reference to our advertisement columns will show that Mrs. Burnett is anxious to sell as a going concern the well-known "Burnett's Battery." The show pavilion in which the late Professor Burnett gave his unique entertainment—the military assault-at-arms—was thoroughly renovated, and was seen at Olympia this last New Year holiday. We draw attention to this sale in the sincere hope that someone needing a show booth will become its purchaser, and thus materially assist Mrs. Burnett.

A Remarkable Communication.

The Secretary of the Showmen's Guild has received the following letter from the Urban District Council of Buxton:—

"Town Hall, Buxton, July 11, 1908.

"Dear Sir,—I am directed by the Buxton Urban District Council to ask you to communicate with roundabout proprietors or others likely to attend the unauthorised Well-Dressing advertised to be held in Buxton on the 16th, 17th, and 18th insts.

"No festival of the kind has been arranged by the Council nor will be allowed to take place.—Yours truly,

"T. A. Croghan,
"Market Supt.

"The Secretary, Showmen's Guild,
"Strand, London, W.C."

The Guild Secretary has forwarded the following reply:—

"It is not usual for this Association to communicate to its members, without time to verify the authority claimed by corporations, such important matters as the one referred to in your letter. Granting for the moment that the Urban District Council of Buxton has power to prohibit the festivals not arranged by it, there still remains the extremely important fact that the Council has not taken action in time to prevent the arrival on the dates named of roundabouts or fairground amusements. It would have been only just to have given proprietors of such concerns at least two weeks' notice of the intention of the Council to prohibit the Well-dressing festival, and to have stated fully the authority under which the Council holds the right to prohibit. Such notice should have been sent to the trade newspapers read by showmen and itinerant amusement caterers,

"I very much fear that your communication of July 11 is too late to prevent the assembly of roundabout, shows, &c., on the 16th.—Very faithfully yours,

"The Guild Secretary.

"T. A. Croghan, Esq., Sanitary Inspector,
"Town Hall, Buxton, July 15, 1908."

Corporations and the Showmen's Guild.

It is a significant sign of the times that public bodies not only recognise that showmen and fairground traders are organised, and can deal with them effectively through the Guild, but that if public bodies wish to get in touch with showmen it is now good business to communicate officially with the Guild Executive. A few years ago it was the common policy of corporations to refuse recognition to the Guild or to accept its representatives officially. We very much fear that corporations to-day think they can use the Guild for ulterior purposes, and that the Society will be willing to become the subservient tool of public bodies who want to bluff the travelling showman.

It will be seen from the official reply to the letter of the Buxton Urban District Council that the Guild Executive (taught by past experience), is not so foolish as to lend itself to any such sharp practice It will be necessary in every case for public bodies to cite in full the Act of Parliament or the bye-law under which they claim to act.

The day is past and gone for travelling showpeople to be frightened by the autocratic statement, "We prohibit you holding a fair." Corporations would like to possess that power. A great number of important cities and towns have sought to obtain it, but one of the most important rights that showmen possess is the right at common law to exhibit their shows upon private land in England without having to ask permission from the public authority. Of course, we know that under certain old charters a monopoly of fairs exists in certain towns. On the other hand, it is important to remember that although many corporations have tried in recent years to obtain this monopoly, but on the petition of the Showmen's Guild Parliament has refused to give them such powers. This valuable right at common law to carry on the business of catering for the amusement of the public upon private land is one of the most important points in the charter of the showman's liberties secured to him by his own collective and organised work.

Parliamentary Opposition to the Movable Dwelling Bill.

We are informed that the Executive Committee of the Showmen's Guild will have further time granted them by the exigency of Parliamentary business to rally their friends and to perfect their plans to oppose the Movable Dwellings Bill. It is understood that the Movable Dwellings Bill will not be considered again until the Children's Bill of the Government comes up from the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister, in his statement as to the business of Parliament to the end of the present sitting, timed for Aug. 1, states that the Children's Bill will be the first measure sent from the Commons to the Lords when the House reassembles for the Autumn Session in October next. If the understanding holds good that the Movable Dwellings Bill will be considered when the Children's Bill reaches the Lords, this will give, as we have already intimated, a most useful period of time to strengthen the opposition to the Bill, and if necessary to continue the important negotiations of the Guild Executive with its promoters to secure effective amendments safeguarding the business of the fairground. We need hardly add that the Rev. T. Horne, Guild Organiser and Chaplain, and the Parliamentary Agent, Mr. F. Millar, are watching every development of the question in Parliament, and will take immediate steps to meet unexpected contingencies.

Briefly put, the present position is this—the Movable Dwellings Bill will not be considered until October next, unless some unforeseen contingency arises during the next fortnight, but if such does arise all necessary action will be taken to meet the emergency. Taking it for granted that showmen will have until October next to strengthen their opposition and to demonstrate their determination to throw out or to amend the Bill, it will be well for protest meetings to be organised at every fair, and for petitions to be signed and forwarded to the Guild Secretary to be added to those already sent in for presentation to the House of Lords. Will lessees of fairgrounds and showmen of all grades interested in the defence of their home life and business take part in this work by sending to The Era office for petition sheets and copies of the printed resolution against the Bill. They will be forwarded on application to the Guild Secretary, The Era, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

Notes from the Midland Round.

At Redditch Summer Carnival were P. Collins' three concerns, the Wonderland cinematograph theatre, the Gordon-Bennett motor-car track, and the helter-skelter tower or slippery slope; Birch's two ground booths (the midget marvels and the swimming exhibition); H. Hughes' two shows (the assault-at-arms military tournament and the fine art exhibition). The other concerns and amusements were the haunted house, W. Chaplain's and G. Ford's midget ponies and motor-cars; novelty frames, cokers, shooting galleries, and varieties by Messrs. Ford, Chaplain, Humphries, Stanley, Buckland, Butler, and others.

At Headless Cross Cherry Tree Wakes were Chipperfield's cinematograph exhibition; T. Clarke's superb motor-car set, and the No. 2 concern—the Canadian chute; Wilson's shooting galleries, and many other attractions of the usual kind.

At Astwood Bank the entertainers were H. Strickland, with motor-cars and galloping horses, park swings, shooting saloons, and throwing games, and Fletcher's varieties. These three fairs were held within a radius of three miles, and afforded great delight and amusement to the people of a thronged and important industrial district. To finish the story of this part of the Midland round, our correspondent informs us that Scott's steam gallopers are at Hanbury, and Herbert's amusements are located at Studley.

South Wales Echoes.

Mr. W. Haggar's No. 1 magnificent bioscope is at Neath for a week, some of the newest and best pictures are on exhibition, and together with excellent variety turns draws splendid houses. Ford's gondolas, &c., are stationed at Trehafris, and Mr. John Studt, with his fairground aggregation, together with Mrs. Scott's amusements and varieties, are still in the Rhondda Valley. Mr. H. Scard, managing-director of Wadbrooke's electrograph and coliseum of varieties, is busily engaged preparing his new monster programme for the Pontypridd August Bank Holidays.

Alexandra's Circus paid a visit to Hastings on Monday, and was located in the cricket ground. The versatile and talented company included the Motor and Mote Troupe of trick and comedy cyclists in their football match on bicycles; Professor Lorenzo's troupe of twenty educated dogs; the Raisuli troupe of Moorish acrobats; Bellonino, contortionist; the Alpine Bros., in pole-climbing; Traveller and Gardelle, gymnasts; the Altons, in their speciality act, "Demonic Gambols"; Millie Morris, in song, and Little May, a neat transformation dancer. The horses were much admired, and pleasing exhibitions of equestrian skill were shown by Miss Julian, Mme. Denny, the Sisters Merkel, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. J. Yelding. Hairpin, the clown, had some merry jests, and the visit proved a popular one.

Penzance and its Ancient Charter.

There is a good deal of popular feeling in favour of the show-people amongst the great body of the good burgesses of Penzance. Public feeling is much excited over the question of the large claims of the Corporation under their ancient Charter. The local Press on the powers claimed by the Corporation takes an extremely just and common-sense view.

The Cornishman, the best-read paper at the Land's End, with both a weekly and a daily issue at Penzance, expresses itself very frankly on the matter of the alleged Charter rights.

No Inherent Mystery about the Charter.

The Cornishman says:—"Some of the rumours in circulation about the Corporation Charter and the Corpus Christi Fair are quite incorrect, and no good purpose can be served by keeping the burgesses in ignorance of the facts. Fair rights are said not only to be granted by Charter, but are to be interpreted also under the common law of England. Many decisions have been given in the Courts as to commodity fairs, pleasure fairs, the setting up of opposition fairs, and the like, and some of these might influence a decision in any action brought under a Charter which does not specifically deal with certain points. There is, of course, no more mystery about the Penzance Charter than there is about the bye-laws of the Morrab Gardens; and there is no reason why the translated clauses of the Charter should not be posted side by side with these bye-laws, except that they would take up a good deal of room and would be very seldom referred to by the public. Our Town Council is a body of honourable men, and in any claim they may assert with regard to the transference of the shows to Heamoor, they will only desire their legal due, and not to extract money by sharp practice under a cloak of mystery. That being so, it may as well be said that their rights are contained in the Charter, plus any case which has decided points arising out of similar Charters. Not only is there no mystery about the Charter, as copies of translations are owned by various burgesses, but I am told that a translation was sold by auction at Penzance and was knocked down to the highest bidder."

The Fair Rights of the Charter.

Proceeding, the writer of the article pertinently remarks: "Well, what does the Charter say? We need not bother about minute legal wording, which only confuses the lay mind. I have gone through the 1825 translation, and I find that the fairs were granted to the 'vill of Penzance,' and the size of the vill of Penzance was laid down as half a mile in any direction from a central point. In actual practice, when some rating questions had to be settled which affected both Penzance and Madron, the central point was fixed as the Green Market, and a circle a mile in diameter was drawn around it, which constitutes the Borough of Penzance. The line cuts Prebendary Hedgeland's house in two. The Charter gave the town the right to hold the Corpus Christi Fair on the eve and on the day of the Feast, which would be the Wednesday and Thursday, and the Corporation were given power to make and collect stall charges, &c., during this two days' fair. It was stipulated that this and other Penzance fairs and markets were not to be carried on upon those days to the detriment of similar fairs held in neighbouring places. And as an acknowledgment of all the rights to markets, fairs, &c., granted under the Charter the borough agreed to pay for ever to the Exchequer the sum of five marks annually. A mark is an obsolete English coin of the value of 13s. 4d., so that Penzance was under an obligation from 1614 to pay the sum of £3 6s. 8d. per annum as an acknowledgment of the favour of King James in granting the Charter.

"It should be borne in mind that although the Charter says nothing about the distance within which no new opposition fair could be set up being six or seven miles or twenty miles, yet it is obvious that if Penzance had no Charter right to injure neighbouring fairs held on the same day, the inference is that people who have no Charter rights could not set up a fair within such a distance as would injure the Penzance Fair. And it is at this point that we are face to face with the array of fair cases tried in the Courts, and on which a layman has no right to speak with authority. When counsel's opinion is received it will doubtless be published, but enough is known to show that neither townspeople nor those outside the borough have been familiar even with the clauses of the Charter, much less have they known anything about the law cases which have dealt with rights acquired by usage or by the changes in the habits of the people. On the whole, the fair trouble may not be without good if it has the effect of clearing the air, defining the Council's powers, establishing their rights, and assisting in making such terms with the showmen in future as to give Corpus Christi Fair a fresh lease of life."

The Case for the Organised Showmen.

We do not think after the article we have quoted from the Cornishman that much more need be said to justify the action of the organised showmen. It cannot be too often repeated that showmen are entitled to receive at the hands of Corporations and their officials perfectly just and frank treatment. We can all be wise after the event—but it is in this case important to emphasise the fact that if the showpeople had been clearly told the full extent of the powers of the Corporation and if the Corporation officials had sought to justify the Corporation by giving evidence of the powers possessed by the authorities, a great deal of misunderstanding would have been avoided, and probably the present extremely critical state of affairs would not have happened.

We have already, in our reference to the extraordinary letter sent to the Guild secretary by the Buxton Urban District Council, referred to the very scant courtesy certain public bodies show towards the travelling showman. We venture to advise Corporations and their officials that in the future greater consideration will have to be paid to showmen, who, as an organised body of traders having business dealings with public bodies, are entitled to be shown the legal documents, charters, bye-laws, and extraordinary powers possessed by public bodies. We are sure that such fair dealing would prevent a great deal of the friction that unhappily occurs from time to time between showmen and Corporation officials.

Decay of an Ancient Fair.

As illustrating the depopulation of some of our agricultural counties, the last attempt to keep Stow Green Fair is an example in point. With a history extending back 800 years, Stow Green Fair, held on common land two miles out from Billingborough, Lincolnshire, was for hundreds of years one of the most important fairs in the Fen country. It originally lasted three weeks, but has dwindled down to two days, and when the fair opened a few days ago it was almost deserted by showpeople and fairground traders.

Popular Fête at Cardiff.

The fairground amusements controlled by Mr. John Studt were extremely attractive at the fête held in the Sophia Gardens, Cardiff. The occasion was the effort in the interests of sweet charity on the part of the United Kingdom Commercial Travellers' Association. Mr. John Studt had his two magnificent machines, and generously gave half the proceeds towards the fund. The opening ceremony was performed by Lord Ninian Stuart. The 1st Gordon Highlanders' band, with pipers and dancers, and the Gordon Boys' band played splendid selections of popular airs.

Messrs Manders' bioscope has had a most successful season of private business at Tenby.

Fête at Bedwellty Park.

A successful fête and gala was held at Bedwellty Park, Tredegar, under the auspices of the athletic club. Thousands visited the beautiful grounds during the day, and an excellent programme was gone through, including sensational feats on the high rope, 60ft. in the air, by Don Pedro; Fred Andyson, comic conjurer; Trillo, ventriloquist; the Jones-Hughes Gymnastic Troupe; Frank Hyett, juggler and balancer; and Les Blancs, horizontal bar experts. There were many other attractions, and a very fine display of fireworks took place at dusk. Music was rendered by the Tredegar Town Band.

Horwich Fair.

Here for the fair were J. Green's farmyard, Walton's shooting saloon and aerial swings, Chadwick's sheets and hammers, Taylor's dolly stalls, J. Grant's Emmas, John Hasting's midgets and giantess (Miss Lambert), Gardiner's palace of delight, Lenard's fisheries, and Johnson's silver cup and clock competitions.

AMUSEMENTS IN WHITLEY BAY.

The Spanish City, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles Elderton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jack Hastings.—The Spanish City, which has been built at an initial cost of £2,000, is quite an Earl's Court in miniature. The grounds are neatly laid out with raised flower-beds, and are now quite a mass of bloom. The main entrance, which faces the sea front at the north end of the magnificent and lengthy promenade, is in the form of a portcullis of a Spanish castle, with a noble arch in the centre, with smaller ones at each side. Leaving the turnstiles, there is a broad walk with a background representing an old garden wall and old dwellings. On the right there is erected a maze of fairly long proportions. Further on is the directors' and manager's offices in the form of an old château. On the north side there is a large "Mat" with a couple of spiral runs that are in constant demand. On the left we come to the pavilion in which the principal performances are given; it seats 1,100 people under cover. The stage is situated on the eastern portion, and provides ample room for almost any class of entertainment. The proscenium opening is of fairly wide proportions with plenty of height and handsomely decorated in the same style of Spanish grandeur. There is a promenade that provides accommodation for close upon another 4,000 people. Surrounding this promenade there are stalls for the sale of all manner of things found in resorts of this kind, all in the old Spanish style. This promenade, along with the whole of the grounds, is illuminated and lighted with brilliant electric lights. In addition there are several side-shows scattered about the grounds. The season's artists, numbering some twenty-six, give two performances daily, and include Courter Dutton, baritone; Percy Wright (late of The Earl and the Girl Co.); Teddy Worth, comedian; Jack Hastings, female impersonator; Alex. Alexander, Scotch comedian; the Cameron Quartette; Dora Woodhouse, soprano; Dolly Cusden, contralto; Francis Burton, comedienne; Nelly Stewart, comedienne; and Gertie Gavagham, comedienne, and a first-class orchestra. Each week special variety turns are being engaged in addition to the permanent company. This week the second part of the evening performance consists of a representation of the lively and popular old favourite musical comedy, Fun on the Bristol, with Mr. Edward Neville as the Widow O'Brian, played with great gusto by that capable artist; Miss Rosie Neville submits a pleasing rendition of Nora; and Miss Lole Esmond is especially good as Dora McAllister. Mr. Percy Wright is quite at home as Count Menagio; Mr. Jack Hastings merrily accounts for Jerry; and Miss Nellie Stewart is most amusing as Bella. Mr. Teddy Worth heartily impersonates Captain Cranberry; and commendable representations of Tom Cranberry and Richard Spooks are given by Mr. James Cameron and Mr. C. Dutton respectively. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Herbert Somerset. The venture has assuredly "caught on," and the Spanish City is already a rendezvous for the crowds who now frequent this popular North Country seaside resort.

The Band Pavilion.—Proprietor, Mr. Tom Catlin.—Excellent programmes are being submitted by a good all-round company of pierrots, including Ted Wootton, baritone vocalist; Frank Fox, humorist; Herbert Carrington, comedian; George Hirste, comedian; George Delamere, the languid dude; Robertson Keene, versatile artist; George Houghton, tenor vocalist; and Ernest Westley.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens.

EXIT DOORS.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that at recent inspections of the Britannia Theatre, High-street, Hoxton, it was found that certain of the exit doors had been fastened by means of a wooden bar placed across them, and at the Paragon Theatre of Varieties, Mile End-road, exit doors have recently been found to be chained and padlocked. The Committee were of opinion that notices under the 45th section of the Metropolitan Board of Works (Various Powers) Act, 1882, should be served on the persons keeping open these premises, so as to enable proceedings to be taken should the exit doors again be found to be improperly fastened.

The Committee recommended that the notices be served, and this was agreed to.

EXPLOSIVES.

The Committee reported that during the quarter ended June 30, 1908, explosives and dangerous substances were found to be in use in licensed premises on fifty-seven occasions. In no case were the arrangements found to be unsatisfactory.

INSPECTION.

The Committee reported that the expenditure incurred during the quarter ended June 30, 1908, in connection with visits to unlicensed premises to ascertain whether public music or dancing was given thereat, and in connection with reports upon the character of the performances at licensed premises, amounted to £4 7s. 6d.

CINEMATOGRAPH FIRES.

Mr. W. Reynolds asked the Chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee whether his attention had been called to a cinematograph fire which occurred in Leeds on the previous Thursday, and which had caused a panic, though fortunately no loss of life; and whether he knew of any way to induce the Government to proceed with their promised legislation with regard to cinematograph entertainments in unlicensed premises.

Mr. E. Wild (in the absence of the Chairman of the Committee) said he had no knowledge of this particular fire, and he knew of no way of inducing the Government to bring in a Bill dealing with the question.

THE NEW COUNTY HALL.

The Establishment Committee recommended that the design now submitted of the new County Hall be approved.

The Rev. F. Hastings moved as an amendment that the recommendation be referred back to the Committee for further consideration.

In the course of the discussion which followed,

Mr. George Alexander made an appeal to the Committee to protect the architect whose design had been selected and was now submitted for approval. The assessors had agreed that this design was the best of those sent in, and he hoped that members would not spoil the architect's work by suggesting alterations which would destroy the beauty of the original plan. It was impossible to get a number of people to agree on the question of architecture; some liked one form of work and some liked another. He thought that a very English-like argument had been brought forward. In England it was usual for a shopman to recommend a certain article to a customer because he had sold so many of them; but, on the other hand, the French shopkeeper would recommend an article because it was unique. And could it not be urged that the design of their architect was a unique one?

The amendment was defeated and the recommendation of the Committee eventually adopted.

The White City, Old Trafford.

Monday was a beautifully fine day, and this amusement park was crowded all the afternoon and evening. All the side shows did well, and testified to the growing popularity of this pleasure resort. The more the people see the Bontoc Igorrotes the better they are appreciated for their simple primitive customs in their native village. Princess Trixie, the educated mare, also gains in popularity. The scenic railway, the figure-8 railway, and the other outside amusements are kept going.

Hanley Hospital Saturday Fête.

The fairground was situated on the Crown Bank. The principal shows, &c., were E. Holland's racing motor-cars, park swings, electric jumping horse, and cocoanut saloon; J. Storey's fine art exhibition; F. Connor's Aunt Sallys and Winchester range; and E. Saunt's stick stall and bottle breaker, all of which handed one-half their takings to the local charities and hospitals during Friday, Saturday, and Monday.

Accident to Well-known Showman.

We regret to hear of a somewhat serious misfortune which befell Mr. H. Banford, of Ball and Sons' New Lyceum. Mr. Banford was working his turn at the first performance of the show, now located at Tilbury Docks, when he slipped off the stage and fractured his ankle. The mishap created great sympathetic concern amongst the audience. Dr. Rogers was immediately in attendance, and all that surgical skill could do was at once done. Mr. H. Banford, who is a great favourite with the patrons of the show, will be out of the bill for a week or two. He has been with Mr. Ball for the past twelve years. We trust that he will soon be able to resume his work.

The proprietors of Willson's Printing Works, Leicester, send us their new streamer list, just published. This enterprising firm has now one of the finest and largest assortment of streamer letters in the United Kingdom, and their lettering is extremely striking and attractive.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

A DRAMA IN THE TYROL is an absorbingly interesting tragedy. Karl Hauser comes to old Haffner to ask the hand of his daughter, Hathe, to whom he is engaged. Haffner indignantly refused his consent. Hathe weeps and Karl goes away feeling very angry, vindictive and violent, as the rest of his race, coming as they do from the mountains, and walking blindly along he swears to be revenged. Suddenly he perceives old Haffner walking along just above him on the hill, gun in hand, on the watch. He follows under cover of the bushes. The old man stops suddenly, aims and fires and brings down a bird, then pulling out a long cord, he ties it round himself and attaches it to a tree and lets himself down to fetch the bird. Overhead, Karl, watching him with a cruel look, takes out his knife and cuts the rope. A few hours later some men passing that way discover the crushed body of poor old Haffner. Hathe is brought to the spot, and weeps bitterly over her dead father, when she finds the knife which she had given to Karl a few days before as a present. She calls her lover, who is much overcome on seeing the victim of his cruelty, and taking the knife, she stabs him in the heart with it.

DAUBERS' WHIMS.—The painter in this little story has just finished the portrait of one of his clients, and is taking it home, much excited at the thought of the fee which will follow. En route, however, he, we naturally suppose, being somewhere in the clouds, as is natural to those of his class, sundry small boys, by means of pieces of coal, give his portrait a superb moustache. The painter arrives in the garden, where he finds the husband of his client lying full length on a long chair, to whom he shows the portrait. Great is the wrath of that gentleman on seeing the picture. Our painter promises to put matters right and turn out a splendid likeness, but the other refuses. On this the painter fetches a horse that happens to be near, harnesses him to the gentleman's chair, and away he goes, all through the village, with half the world and his wife following, amidst huge satisfaction from the onlookers and to the great delight of sundry and divers fellow painters.

VICTIM OF HIS PROBITY.—This is the title of a dramatic series. A lady, having lost her portfolio full of bank-notes, puts in her claim at the police-station. A penniless vagrant finds the case and takes it to the same police-station, where he is congratulated for his straightforwardness. Presently, however, the poor fellow is suspected of having stolen a few notes which the lady finds are missing from her pocket book. In spite of his denial he is locked up. Later on, a passer-by, having found the missing notes on the pavement, takes them to the police-station, and the officials go to the cell, where they find that the poor man has hanged himself.

TUNISIAN INDUSTRIES present in many open air scenes such phases of native work as rope making, bamboo basket manufacturing, sieve making, cheese making, and copper art.—THE GROTESQUE PEOPLE is a trick film. A series of grinning faces appear on the screen, followed by a troop of small actors, who disappear after performing all sorts of dances. Before retiring they all come back together and salute the audience.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

THE ROYAL VOYAGE TO CANADA.—The departure of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales from Portsmouth en route for the Quebec Tercentenary Celebrations is shown in a magnificent series of pictures secured by the Charles Urban Trading Co. The incidents depict the arrival of the Prince, the inspection of cadets under Admiral Fisher, scenes on the landing stage, farewells between the Prince and his son, the Royal salute by the "Victory," and a close view of the latter vessel.

LITTLE DROPS OF WATER; or Life in a Water Butt.—A further Urbanora micro-kinematograph series, in which are shown the various inhabitants of a water butt, in all stages of existence. Many of the species when thrown upon the screen are magnified millions of times, and the organisms displayed, living and moving in their own surroundings, present a triumph of scientific study and research never hitherto recorded. As, owing to their high transparency, the specimens of bacteria placed under the microscope must in the ordinary way be stained, and the operation of staining kills the germs, examination of typhoid and other disease bacilli is perforce a post-mortem study. By the Urban Micro-Kinematograph, however, this method is changed. The system adopted allows examination of living bacteria, which are shown in this series, for the first time in their history, in all stages of growth and movement.

THE SHIPWRECKERS.—This drama, full of strong situations, abounding in incident and thrilling adventure, with seascapes of wonderful beauty and charming effect, affords a peep into the past, and introduces some customs of the inhabitants of out-of-the-way coast districts. Ships were lured on to the rocks by means of false lights worked with a gentle motion. The method most commonly adopted was to fasten a lighted lantern on to the head of a cow, and the mariner, under the impression that the light was carried by another vessel, would conclude that his own was safe until, sailing unconscious of danger, his ship would dash upon the rocks and become a total wreck. On the principle that "dead men tell no tales," survivors from a wreck met with scant mercy at the hands of the wreckers, who often secured valuable hauls of merchandise and liquor on the break-up of the vessel they had lured to its destruction. The custom is fully and thrillingly illustrated in the present series, which forms a most interesting and enthralling picture story without words. Perfectly photographed, the rock-bound coast of Brittany forms a most picturesque setting for this cleverly enacted sensational drama, depicting one phase of marine life in a past generation.

THE STONE-BREAKER.—A stirring story of ruin, poverty after affluence, honest toil, temptation, fall, disappointment, remorse, and repentance, charmingly told in animated picture sequence. The photographic quality of the picturesque stereoscopic scenes is excellent, while the acting and setting are of a very high class.

NATIVE CUSTOMS IN THE TYROLEAN ALPS.—Taken by an operator with a quick eye for the essential and the picturesque, this splendid spectacular and historically interesting subject presents faithful views of Tyrolean life, character, customs and scenery. The religious beliefs of a simple people are reverently treated, and the illustrations unfold to the eye fresh charms the oftener they are regarded.

THE Urban Co. has just issued a handsome new binding case for the purpose of preserving the weekly circulars on film subjects published by the firm. Case and circulars will be sent to any applicant on receipt of postcard.

Gaumont Company.

THE HAND CHRONOMEGAPHONE.—At the Gaumont premises in Sherwood-street, Piccadilly-circus, our representative was shown a really practical singing machine which is likely to appeal very strongly to showmen and exhibitors. It is called the Hand Chronomegaphone. The Electric Chronomegaphone, which had such as astonishingly long run at the London Hippodrome, and was shown by Royal command before her Majesty the Queen and a distinguished party at Buckingham Palace last year, although a marvellous invention and quite worth the money asked for it, was, as far as price was concerned, a little out of the reach of many showmen and exhibitors. The Hand Chronomegaphone costs £150 only. Exactly the same results are obtained with it as with the more heavy and more elaborate Chronomegaphone. The synchronising devices are, like all great inventions, remarkably simple, thus lessening the likelihood of the machine getting out of order.

The projector and the talking machine are made to run at exactly the same speed, but we were shown that it is possible to increase or diminish the speed of the cinematograph in the event of the operator making a bad start. The apparatus is worked by hand, the only electricity employed being obtained from a small set of dry batteries. The Hand Chronomegaphone is light and portable, weighing only 4cwt. It is wired and fitted with a motor, so that it can be run by electricity should the purchaser so desire. Another great advantage is that the singing and synchronising portions of the machine can be attached to the "Professional Chrono." It is possible to run the projector quite independently of the singing machine, and vice-versa.

JANE SHORE.—The Gaumont Co. inform us that they are, in the course of a few days, producing a cinematograph version of that well-known drama, Jane Shore. With the knowledge of Gaumont's previous successes in Romeo and Juliet and Napoleon and the English Sailor, we can safely predict that Jane Shore will have a successful run. It is being produced on a magnificent scale.

THE KING AT BRISTOL is a fine topical film of the same firm. It is of excellent photographic quality, and gives a very comprehensive view of the Royal visit.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICER'S STICK is a very exciting drama. We see the smugglers crossing the frontier, and later the officer at home, making the mark on his official stick. He bids his wife goodbye, and goes off with his friend to duty. They come upon the smugglers and a fight ensues. The officer is killed and the other wounded. The smugglers decamp, taking with them the marked stick. At a halting place the rogues fall out, and the one that has the stick is thrown over the mountain side. The fall is not fatal, and with the aid of the stick he gradually makes his way to the very place where the widow of the dead officer resides. He begs for a drink, and it is given him. The widow presently notices the stick, and recognises the marks as those of her deceased husband. She calls the other officer, who is now convalescent, and he accuses the man. He would have had him handed over to the police, but the widow intercedes, saying that a higher power shall punish him. It is altogether a fine subject.

TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION is a fine Gaumont novelty. We see the police as they appear to be to some people, and then the police as they really are. The subject ends up with a pretty scene, with the presentation of a medal to a wounded but heroic police officer.

Nordisk Films Co.

BANKRUPT; OR, THE FAITHFUL CLERK.—This gives us a pretty little romance. A merchant, whose pretty daughter is engaged to an officer, becomes embarrassed in business and is in danger of bankruptcy. The officer, seeing that his bride is likely to be penniless, deserts her; but the merchant's clerk comes to his aid, pays the workmen with the money he has saved, and is rewarded with a partnership and the daughter's hand in marriage. The scenes are beautifully photographed.

HAPPY BOB'S ADVENTURES are continued in a further instalment this week, and this time they show our hero in an entertaining boxing exhibition, in which his skill with the gloves does not seem to be very pronounced.

HOLLOWAY HALL.—By the courtesy of Mr. F. R. Griffiths, a collection in this hall has been made on behalf of the London Hospital, resulting in a total of £6 6s. 2d.

MR. ANDREW PURCHASE'S menagerie and Mr. Tom Norman's Dahomey Warriors have been at Beach House Park, Worthing, this week.

THE AWARDS.—The three interim Awards and the final Award, corrected and revised by George Ranken Askwith, K.C., the official arbitrator appointed to the music hall dispute, may be had in pamphlet form at The Era Offices. Copy, including postage, three-halfpence. Address, The Publisher, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

29,001.—Optical projection apparatus. W. R. Sykes, of Bickley, Kent; C. J. Cooke, of Wood Green, London; and W. R. Sykes, of Swanley, Kent.

Relates to slide-changing apparatus for optical projection apparatus, which is controlled from a distance electrically. Fig. 1 is a diagram of the lantern apparatus, and Fig. 4 is an elevation of the distant controlling apparatus. The transparencies are mounted on an endless band, or on a disc (7), provided with laterally projecting pins (10), a crescent-shaped pawl (11), carried by the rotary oscillating armature (13) of an electro-magnet (12), engaging with these pins to turn the disc (7) step by step. A weighted shield (5), pivoted at 14, intercepts the path of the light during the slide-changing process, and is then withdrawn by an electro magnet (16). The controlling device consists mainly of three discs (18, 19, 20), mounted to rotate independently on the spindle (31), the disc (20) being provided with pins (38), corresponding to the pins (10) on the disc (7), and adapted to rock the lever (39) about its pivot (39a), to complete electric circuits alternately at the points (40, 41), and so energise the magnets (12, 16) alternately The disc (18) is turned by hand in one direction only, its backward movement being prevented by a pawl (26) and ratchet-teeth (25). The movement of the disc (19) is limited to one revolution by a stop (34), engaging with a pivoted arm (35), which can turn through a small angle between the stops (37a, 37b). The end of the arm (17), which is pivoted to the disc (18), and is pressed outwardly by a spring, is normally kept in engagement with a notch (27) in the disc (19) by a wedge on the arm (35). To set any slide in position, a peg is inserted in the corresponding hole (45), provided in the dial-plate (22), and the disc (18) is turned through a complete revolution, carrying the disc (19) with it, since the arm (17) is kept in engagement with the notch (27) by contact with the inner edge of a fixed ring (23). At the end of a revolution the pin (34) presses the arm (35) against the stop (37b), and allows the end of the arm (17) to rise into a notch in the ring (23); the spring (29), which has been wound up by the forward rotation of the disc (19), then returns the latter, until a projection (46) on it engages the adjusted peg. A projection (19a) on the disc (19) engages the pawl (20a) on the disc (20), and causes the discs to rotate together, the pins (38) rocking the lever (39) to make the contacts necessary to set the disc (7) in position. A roller (48) acts as a detent, and an escapement (51) limits the speed of rotation of the disc (20), under the influence of the spring (29). This device may be used as a departure and arrival indicator for trains, and may be interlocked with the signalling apparatus. It may also be used as a station indicator in trains, and may be operated automatically.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

"Standing room only" has been the rule at the rise of the curtain during this week at the Shepherd's Bush Empire. Doubtless Mr. George Robey is to a great extent responsible for this. "The Prime Minister of Mirth" is in very excellent form just now, and has been delivering three most humorous numbers at each performance. "Bang went the chance of a lifetime" is a typical George Robey appetiser, and also one of the best he has ever had. This he follows with his "Waggish Will of Avon," the now well-known and popular skit on Shakespeare; and he completes his contribution with a "dame" sketch, which, whilst being quite original, inevitably recalls some of the quaint old ladies that poor old Dan Leno used to introduce to us. Mr. George Robey is a wonderfully clever comedian, and at the same time the possessor of a powerful personality, which together have given him a place in the music-hall profession second to none. Apart from Mr. Robey, however, the programme this week is one of unusual excellence.

A turn which on the night of our call created a sensation was that given by the De Wynne Brothers, a couple of athletes. These two gentlemen went through a performance of great difficulty in the most unconcerned manner, with the assistance of scarcely any apparatus, and the rounds of applause which their feats drew forth were richly deserved. Ralph and Nellie Howard contribute a bright musical sketch entitled A Military Maid; and Helen Trix, who sings songs at the piano, quickly achieves considerable popularity.

Mr. Henry Coutts, billed as the great protean actor, appears in a spectacular and mystic production entitled Outflanked, in which he presents some seven or eight characters. Mr. Coutts' performance is remarkable for its rapidity, and his changes are certainly very well done. Spry and Austin achieve their usual big success, their turn causing much laughter. Bob Hamilton, a Scotch comedian, goes very well, some of his jokes being particularly smart; and on the Bioscope are shown an amusing series of pictures, entitled A Useful Coat. Ethel Haydon, looking more beautiful than ever, gives much delight with a couple of sentimental songs somewhat of the ballad type, one of which seemed to be entitled "The dear old home." The programme is completed by Edward Lauri and May Beatty and company in their very successful musical comedy mélange In Her Boudoir. May Beatty is a most charming artist and Edward Lauri a clever comedian, so that the great success of this item is not to be wondered at. Mention should be made of the excellent orchestra under Mr. Henry W. May, which has this week been playing the "Shepherd's Bush Two-step," founded on the famous song "Down at Shepherd's Bush."

BATTERSEA PALACE.

This week the management of the Battersea Palace present a really strong programme, appreciation of which is testified to by the excellent audiences nightly filling the house. Miss Winifred Norman is a vocalist of considerable charm and ability, while her dancing is characterised by novelty in execution. Henney and Blanche introduce a dancing duologue, which gives one of them an opportunity for a capitally-executed display of various forms of Continental dancing, while the other tunefully explains the reasons why she'd "Like to be a lady." Harry Village is a humorist of considerable talent, and meets with his audience's approval by his rendering of "He's deaf and dumb and silly" and "Stick to it, Jerry." Mr. Teddy Edmunds and company appear in an unusually mirth-provoking little sketch The Lady Jockey. The whole of the fun centres around a gentleman of sporting and theatrical proclivities, who at one and the same time wishes to engage a stable-boy and a lady to take the part of the jockey. The part of the stable-boy applicant is most humorously portrayed, and the little piece goes merrily from start to finish.

A great feature is the cakewalk competition, in which juveniles as well as adults take part. It is really amusing to watch the deadly earnestness of purpose expressed in the youthful faces, and the skill of execution betokens hard training. Whistler is a comedian of very considerable powers, and his labial efforts fully justify the assumption of his nom de théâtre. Guest and Newlyn give a comedy duologue, in which they display some marvellously accurate dancing. The Sisters Thorne adhere to the good old waltz-time melody, whose popularity seems never to fade, and to it they effectively render "Float me, Charlie," and "Down in my submarine." Miss Josephine Crook, a young lady possessed of an excellent voice, introduces two illustrated songs, "Take me on the Flip-flap" and "Oh, where is my boy tonight?" the humour and pathos of which are respectively fully welcomed by her hearers. Miss Esther Phillips appears in the serious little drama entitled The Sorceress. Miss Phillips is an actress of very considerable dramatic power, and she throws into her impersonation of the principal character a great deal of nervous intensity. She is very well supported by the members of her company. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux bring a capital programme to a close.

"DADDY'S BOY."

Dramatic Episode, by Dick Cruikshanks, produced at the Standard Music Hall on Monday, July 13.

Jack Carlton .....MR. H. W. HATCHMAN
Dr. Philip Harley ....MR. FREDERICK F. LLOYD
Ducie Cholmondeley .....MR. ESME ERSKINE
Nurse Edwards .....MISS EDITH VILLIS
Kate Carlton .....MISS FLORENCE CREAGH

Mr. T. S. Dickie staged yet another new sketch at the Standard on Monday—Daddy's Boy—from the pen of Mr. Dick Cruikshanks, a gloomy playlet that held the attention of the audience throughout, and met with a decidedly friendly reception. "Daddy's boy" is the twelve months old son of Jack and Kate Carlton—married, but evidently not mated, Jack spending his evenings in drinking bouts at the club, and his neglected wife finding some little consolation in the companionship of the family doctor, Philip Harley, with whom she contemplates an elopement. The infant is dangerously ill, but being its birthday, the father foolishly insists it should be brought into the dining-room, where the action takes place. Both Jack and his wife are attached to the little chap, and it is therefore somewhat strange that they should absent themselves from home when the child is in such a critical condition—the wife to go to a theatre, and Jack to spend the evening in the usual way, carousing at the club. Kate returns late from the play, from which she has derived no enjoyment, and after dismissing the nurse, reads a letter from Dr. Harley, in which he advises her to "seek a sunnier clime, accompanied by her medical adviser." Soon after, Harley makes his appearance, and again begs her to leave her husband and go abroad with him, but she refuses to leave the child in its present state. Going to the cot, she notices a change in the boy, and the doctor pronounces him dead. Eventually the voice of the tempter prevails, and as the couple are about to depart, the husband enters, slightly inebriated, accompanied by a drunken dude, Dick Cholmondeley. The guilty couple remark that they were going on the balcony, and Jack, not suspecting the child is dead, invites them all to drink "Many happy returns" to "Daddy's boy." Kate endeavours to restrain her husband's hilarity, and finally gets rid of Cholmondeley, and Jack then remembers that he has bought a present for the youngster. Taking the toy to the cot, he tries to wake the infant, and gradually perceives he is dead. He also soon realises the true state of affairs between Kate and Harley, and dismisses the doctor from the house. One would have thought that it was not too late, under the circumstances, to reclaim his wife, especially as she does not appear particularly eager to go with the doctor; but the author has preferred a tragic curtain, and Jack casts his wife aside, and, declaring that he will not be parted from "Daddy's boy," shoots himself.

The rôle of Kate Carlton was enacted by Miss Florence Creagh, who is to be complimented on an admirable performance throughout of a somewhat unthankful part. Excellent also was the Jack of Mr. W. W. Hatchman, particularly effective being the incident where Jack Carlton gradually awakens to the fact that his boy is dead. The other parts were all ably portrayed, and the playlet was adequately staged.

A BLACKPOOL ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. J. R. Huddlestone, the manager of the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, decided upon having a grand pageant in commemoration of the opening of the Winter Gardens (July 11, 1878), and this idea was excellently carried out on Saturday by everyone concerned. Blackpool has had many kinds of fêtes and celebrations, but that of a pageant has not been conspicuous in former programmes; in fact, this form of celebration is more in vogue in the Southern and Midland counties, where they are very popular at the present time.

Notwithstanding the additional attractions on Saturday night, the ordinary price of admission was observed, and thousands turned up to take part in the celebrations, which were held in the Empress Ballroom. Gaiety was the predominant feature of the evening. The programme was so arranged that the public were able to participate in the merry dances, which were freely interspersed with speciality turns by the artists from the Pavilion entertainments. Suspended in front of the balconies were national, colonial, and regimental flags, while the brilliancy of the scene in the ballroom was increased by the illuminated dances and the vari-coloured limelight effects.

The humorous vocalisations of "This Quartette" and Fraulein Katchen Loisset, the charming soubrette, with her performing pigeons, were greatly appreciated items in the first half of the programme, and the latter part of the proceedings was chiefly contributed to by the artists engaged in the Andalusia ballet. The musical virtuosi William and Wagner delighted the large audience first of all with their performance; then followed a minuet by the Tiller Troupe and the ladies of the ballet, prettily costumed, and representative of many historical characters.

The floor having been kept clear for these items, then came the piece of the evening—the grand pageant—the Lord Mayor's procession, the whole company taking part in a grand representation. Two trumpeters in regulation uniform heralded the Lord Mayor with a fanfare of trumpets, and the large audience—which packed the balconies and the promenade of the ballroom—cheered lustily as the Lord Mayor and the procession, headed by a page boy, appeared on the scene. The orchestra played an inspiriting march, and then followed in order—

Two Liveried Servants.
Sword Bearer.
Trumpeter. Trumpeter.
Beadle.
Mace Bearer.
LORD MAYOR.
Life Guardsman. Life Guardsman.
Two Sheriffs.
Two Judges.
City Marshal.
Beefeater. Ambassador. Beefeater.
Beefeater. Admiral. Beefeater.
Beefeater. Army Officer. Beefeater.
20 Postillions. Postillions.
Small Page.

Having marched round the room, the Lord Mayor took up a position on an improvised platform in front of the orchestra, where he was accompanied by the Sheriffs, the Judges, Ambassador, &c. Having witnessed the lively and beautiful tambourine dance by the lady members of the ballet, the Lord Mayor and his party reformed in processional order, and after another fanfare of trumpets, the retiring march was commenced, to the accompaniment of further cheering by the enthusiastic audience. The whole concluded with The Merry Widow waltz, and a petal shower, the public participating in the dance with great zest and pleasure. The orchestra rendered excellent service with choice selections, under Mr. J. H. Greenhalgh, and so enormous was the success that the pageant is to be repeated this evening.

THE excellent choir assisting Mr. George Leyton in his new production, The Last Muster, at the Oxford, was supplied by Mr. Philip Nolan, whose name is synonymous with thorough training.

MR. ARTHUR WOODVILLE, who is appearing at the Ealing Hippodrome this week, is scoring heavily with his two numbers, "In the time of Eve" and "The Ace of Spades." He is also very successful with his dancing, which is altogether a departure from that of the usual "mere male."

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

THE RAGE OF AMERICA! READ THIS!!

Extract from a Two-Column Notice, NEW YORK HERALD, June 11, '08.

I hope Miss Lily Lena is not making her "farewell" to America. I hope she stays till I know her and her songs by heart, that some day I may tell of her and teach them to somebody's children's children.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

that was the inquisitive title of her song. It will wander all over the land like the "Are-there-any-more-at-home-like-you" sextette. Its melody goes through you—positively! In at the ear and out by the mouth. Nobody asks you to join in the chorus (Miss Lena is far too clever for any device so trite), but nevertheless you do join in, and barely below your breath.

NOTE.—A limited number of permits will be granted for this GREAT CHORUS SONG.

CALL OR WRITE FOR FULL LIST OF SUCCESSES.

'Phone 8446 Gerrard. (Facing Garrick Theatre). Tels., "Songonia, London."

ARE YOU PREPARED?

Have you heard the popular Irish Tenor, Mr. DAVE CARTER, sing

"WHERE THE RIVER SHANNON FLOWS?"

Pronounced by Mr. Carter his most successful Song.

"IN THE SHADOW OF THE PYRAMID,"

Sung by Miss MAY MARS.

NOTE.—Artists and Managers will kindly take notice that Miss May Mars has the exclusive singing rights for our song, "In the Shadow of the Pyramid," for the Music Halls. Immediate action will be taken against anyone infringing her rights.

Two absolutely new songs by ERNEST R. BALL, the composer of "LOVE ME AND THE WORLD IS MINE? Note the titles:

"ALL FOR LOVE OF YOU" AND "SOME DAY YOU'LL COME BACK TO ME."

DO NOT OVERLOOK OUR GEMS OF SONG.

HARMONIZING NUMBERS.
"Sweet Jessie, dear."
"When sweet Marie was sweet sixteen."
"Katie, darling, I am waiting."
"When the birds in Georgia sing of Tennessee."
"I loved you then, I love you still."

BALLADS.
"I'd live or I would die for you."
"All the world loves a lover."
"As long as the world rolls on."
"Take me with you in your dreams."

ILL-ADVISED HOOLIGANS.

Code Word, "EMPLATRE."

These two hooligans did not think over the matter before assaulting the wrestler and his friend, the acrobat, for the first scoundrel is lifted into the air and made to revolve like the wings of a windmill, while the other is carried away to the police-station by the acrobat, who makes him use his hands as the wheel of a barrow, while his feet are the shafts in the hands of his adversary.

165ft. The Subject, £2 15s. 0d.

A DRAMA IN THE TYROL.

Code Word "ELAN."

Karl Hauser is furious now that Haffner has refused his consent to his marriage with dark-eyed Hathe, the old peasant's daughter. Suddenly he perceives old Haffner walking along just above him on the hill, gun in hand, on the watch. He follows under cover of the bushes. The old man aims, fires, and brings down a bird; then, pulling out a long cord, he ties it round himself, after attaching it round a tree, and lets himself down to fetch the bird. Overhead, Karl, watching him with a cruel look, takes out his knife, and cuts the rope. The body of poor Haffner having been discovered a few hours later, Hathe finds that the knife she had given Karl a few days before has been used for cutting the cord, and, calling in her lover, she stabs him in the chest with it.

TUNISIAN INDUSTRIES.

Code Word, "EPAULE."

Titles of the pictures: Rope-making, Bamboo Basket Manufacturers, Sieve-making, Cheese-making, Copper Art.

428ft. The Subject, £7 2s. 8d. Toning, 15s. 0d.

VICTIM OF HIS PROBITY.

Code Word, "EMERSION."

A lady, having lost her pocket-book full of bank-notes, puts in her claim at the police-station. A penniless vagrant finds it and takes it to the same police-station, where he is congratulated for his straightforwardness; but presently the poor fellow is suspected of having stolen a few notes, which the lady finds are missing, and, in spite of his denial, he is locked up. Later on, a passer-by having found the missing notes on the pavement, gives them back to the lady, and the officials go to the cell, where they find that the poor man has hanged himself.

379ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d.

THE WONDERFUL SCARF.

Code Word, "EMBRASSER."

This precious talisman, which comes from the East, enables those who know how to use it to disappear at once if they like. The lucky owner of this scarf is now disappearing instead of paying his bill. Then the people he assaults are terrified at the idea that it must be a spirit which has knocked them down, for he is rendered invisible as soon as he has played his trick.

478ft. The Subject, £7 19s. 4d.

THE GROTESQUE PEOPLE.

Code Word "ENJEU."

A series of grinning faces appears on the screen, followed by a bevy of small actors, who disappear after performing all sorts of dances. Before retiring, they all come back together and salute the audience.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s. 0d. Colouring, £2 15s. 0d.

DAUBER'S WHIMS.

Code Word "EMBUCHE."

The painter in this little story has just finished the portrait of his client, Mrs. Handsome, and is taking it home. En route, however, he, being somewhere in the clouds, small boys, by means of pieces of coal, make Mrs. Handsome a moustache. The painter arrives in the garden, where he finds Mr. Handsome, lying at full length on a long chair, to whom he shows the portrait. Great is the wrath of that gentleman on seeing the picture. Our painter promises to put matters right, and turn out a splendid likeness, but all to no purpose. Mr. Handsome will have none of him. On this the painter fetches a horse that happens to be near, harnesses him to Mr. Handsome's chair, and away he goes. All through the village, with half the world and his wife following, amidst huge satisfaction from the on-lookers, and to the great delight of sundry and divers fellow-painters.

445ft. The Subject, £7 8s. 4d.

A FORTUNATE ACCIDENT.

Code Word, "EAU."

A young man, in trying to stop a runaway horse, has been dragged a few yards by the animal, and he is slightly injured. A lady and gentleman step out of the carriage, and thank him profusely; their daughter joins in. Next morning Mr. Hill calls on their rescuer, a poor artist, who proudly refuses the money Mr. Hill offers him. Later on, according to Miss Daisy's entreaties, he asks her parents' consent to their marriage; but they are so shocked with the audacity of the proceeding that they show him the door, in spite of their daughter's tears and sobs. She is made desperate by her parents' refusal, and she writes to her lover that she is going to kill herself. Then she stretches herself on a bed of flowers, possessed of poisonous scents. Luckily, the young painter arrives just in time to save her again from death, and her parents have to yield to the young people's entreaties, and all ends happily.

478ft. The Subject, £7 19s. 4d. Toning, 16s. 0d.

Pathé's Films

UNEQUALLED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

LAST WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

The Squire's Right.

With this film we are taken back to mediæval times, where the squire was omnipotent. Sir Thomas being an overbearing man, his poor at last revolt against him and his harshness, and but for the lady of the castle would have torn him to pieces; but at last the serfs yield to her entreaties and Sir Thomas, after his release, promises to act more justly for the future.

A Day in the Life of a Sicilian Hermit.

This is a rather uncommon subject for a film, which gives a good idea of the picturesqueness of beautiful Sicily, at the same time a glimpse of the daily life of the Roman Catholic hermits there.

The Blue Bird.

Is another fairy tale well worth taking a prominent place among our fairy tales and pantomimes made specially for children, for no expense and trouble has been spared to make a success of same.

A Bailiff's Adventures.

This comical subject has been very much appreciated on account of the skilful way John Pill and Guy get rid of him who worries them for the payment of their rent, a thing which is quite out of the question for them, for they have not a penny to bless themselves with; and in any occurrence like this the audience is sure to side with the jokers.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Financial Times, Jan. 28:—
"The Era" Annual, 1908. This well-known almanac and annual is replete, as usual, with information of all sorts regarding the dramatic and theatrical world, and will be found not only useful to those directly connected with the stage, whether in a histrionic or literary capacity, but also interesting to the average member of the playgoing public, who is regaled with some forty pages of "Stories Told by Well-known People"—mostly actors and actresses. Dramatic authors will appreciate the importance of the very full list that is given of new plays and important revivals at the London and provincial, as well as Paris and Berlin theatres during the past year. The publication is well illustrated with portraits of theatrical and music-hall celebrities.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Automobile Club Journal, Jan. 23, 1908:—

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—H. M. THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The house was reopened for the season on Monday with Miss Ida Molesworth's and Mr. Mark Blow's company in Under Two Flags. The part of the hero is admirably played by Mr. Wernham S. Ryott; Miss Agnes Verity acts with much winsome vivacity and charm as Cigarette; Mr. Will Hook supplies the humorous relief effectively, and all the other parts are most capably filled.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, the United County Theatres, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—As usual, the appearance of Dr. Walford Bodie crowds the house in every part. The performance is as marvellous as ever, and he is supported by an excellent variety company which include the following clever artists:—Miss Lambert and Mr. Robertson in a humorous rural courtship sketch; Li-Chang-Hi, Chinese magician; Francisco, juggler; the Musical Palmers; the Dongor Trio of solo dancers; the Brothers Baxter, comedians; Miss Dolly Robson, vocalist; and Miss Bella Skene, burlesque actress.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. David Thomson.—Mr. Scott Skinner, the famous violinist, shows the same consummate mastery of his instrument as ever, and the other members of the company likewise receive an embarrassing number of encores. The list includes Miss Violet Davidson, soprano; Mr. Jack Marson, tenor; Mr. Dan Williams, comedian; Miss Daisy Taylor, comedienne and dancer; Vulcares, "the Scottish Grossmith"; Messrs. Chorley and Connor, comedians; Mr. G. W. Walker, baritone, and Mr. David Thomson, comedian.

ALHAMBRA MUSIC HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair; Manager, Mr. George B. Lee.—The variety part of the entertainment is sustained by Miss Nancy Harcourt, a vivacious comedienne; Miss Stephen and Miss Park, comediennes and dancers; Mr. Will Aitkin, comedian, and Mr. Will Sheridan, banjoist. Mr. Dave Paterson exhibits a series of excellent films, which are all thoroughly appreciated.

ABERTILLERY. — THEATRE METROPOLE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. J. Seaborne.—For the reopening of this popular theatre, the drama, entitled The Trail of the Serpent, is performed by Mr. A. Campbell Kelly's company, and an excellent house witnessed the first performance. Miss Nana Cameron is excellent as Rachel, a gipsy; and Ethel Maynard, by Miss Gladys Sylvester, is portrayed in a realistic way. Gipsy Jake (known as Tenderheart) is well sustained by Mr. A. Campbell Kelly. The efforts of Mr. Geo. Porteous as the Serpent is highly appreciated; and Sir Gerald Kingston, by Mr. Del Leone, is all that can be desired. The son, Gerald Kingston, is well acted by Mr. Fletcher. For the remaining three nights of the week the same company is producing A Gamble with Life.

PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—Although the weather has been most delightful, the patronage of this excellent music house has been well kept up. This week the historical drama, Lady Godiva, is successfully produced by Mr. John F. Preston's company. The title-rôle is excellently sustained by Miss Mabelle F. Barlow, and is highly appreciated. Mr. John F. Preston portrays the part of Tom o' Coventry in a pleasing and efficient manner; and Lady Aldyth is capitally played by Miss Hettie Gale. Robin Shacklebolt is amusingly enacted by Mr. Horace Custins; Mr. Leslie Hawkins's Leofric is a realistic assumption; and the Elfrida of Miss Ethel Rainsforth well deserves the appreciation obtained.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Closed for re-decorations.

TOWN HALL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—A strong programme is being presented here, the leading feature being a series of animated pictures, including The Brigands of Calabria; the great Halma, society juggler, also appears, and keeps the house thoroughly interested with his remarkable feats; Miss Cloe, a dainty vocalist, proves popular, and Wright and Lawson are clever acrobats and dancers; Ted Curtis and his picks are received with much favour, and Chas. Carr scores as a vocal comedian; Tripello provides a musical turn of exceptional merit, and Chas. Ulrick, the barrel king, wins great appreciation in the smart manner he manipulates the barrels with his feet.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—The programme presented here this week is again of all-round excellence. The famous Kellinos, in their speciality act, A Fête in Venice, at once arouse admiration; W. E. Gillin is a unique ventriloquial artist; the Polio Trio exhibit skill as musicians on the xylophone; Chas. Leighton makes a welcome reappearance; the Claymores are exceptionally fine in their club-swinging; Harry Bold sings two good songs, and the Bioscope brings an attractive programme to a finish.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—The Prodigal Parson is here this week. As the Rev. Tom Godley, Mr. Logan Darra invests the character with force and verisimilitude; Mr. Alfred Northway as Enoch Jaggins is sufficiently unscrupulous to merit the condemnation of the audience; Miss Violet Hammersley as the parson's wife has a trying part, but she accomplishes her task with skill; Mr. Chas. Ashwell as Enoch's dissolute brother, gives effect to the villain's varied inclinations; the battle between this scoundrel and Ned Kettlepin, by Mr. W. Vincent, is one of the startling features of the play; Mr. Owen Remonde is capital as Phil Drive. There are a number of minor parts in serviceable hands, including those of Mr. R. A. Bridge and Misses Enid Edoni, Carlene Yorrick, E. Vincent, Madge Gillard, and others.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son.—Zeta Grey and company give a musical act, called The Lancashire Lass, which is highly amusing; Scott, Scott, and company introduce a bit of good pantomime work; the Sprees (Dorothy and Joe) are most entertaining in the scena, Twickenham Ferry; Rousby and Rene (Harry and Nell) introduce a Lancashire comedy duologue, "Fine Feathers"; the Four Breens are clever jugglers; the Zedoras as gymnasts have a speciality act—a revolving apparatus; Yeager and Da Costa are really funny as a couple of Black Coons; the Farrows (Harry and Louie) are good sketch artists; and Martin Conway is a singing comedian of the eccentric order. Tommy and the Policeman's Whistle is subject of Bioscope illustration.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—A lengthy and diversified series of animated pictures, interspersed with finely illustrated songs, still continues to draw crowded houses here, despite the hot weather.

BARNSLEY.—NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Barnsley Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson.—Maurin's Marvellous Fountains, a spectacular water scene of much beauty, heads the bill; Picitt and Lizette contribute an original and highly humorous magical sketch, entitled The Crazy Cook; Alex Prince is a concertina soloist of much merit; Fred Cary is a funny comedian, with most diverting songs and patter; Stowe Bros. are smart acrobats and equilibrists; Pete is an exceptionally clever "man monkey"; Fred Herbert in songs introducing topics of the day is well received; Mallia and Bart, in an acrobatic absurdity, The Baggage Smashers, do well; and Chas. Coll, light comedian, and the Palascope, with new films, complete the bill.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—The Marriage of Kitty is being charmingly presented here this week. Miss Mary Thorne is really fine as Kitty, playing the part in a most natural and refreshing manner. As Madame de Gemiano Miss Kitty Lofting is delightfully versatile; Mr. Edgar Kent takes the part of Sir Reginald Belsize, Bart., in a taking and capable manner; as John Travers, the solicitor, Mr. Thomas Sidney is charming in his free and easy style; and the remainder of the cast is in excellent hands.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—Blake and Amber top the bill here with a laughter-provoking skit on the drama and opera, which was much enjoyed; George Brooks proves a very popular comedian; Master Day gives a marvellous diabolo entertainment; Yolande Dobel is a charming comedienne; Ethel Dunford furnishes some capital vocal numbers; and Lizzie Daniels is a comedienne with a pleasing manner. Vernon's Bioscope is still very popular.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—The pictures here are of an excellent standard, and are proving very popular. Miss Vena Valma intersperses the programme with some capital songs and dances.

BARRY DOCK. — THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—The Plucky Nipper is being presented by Miss Bonwin Carlton's company. Mr. Piercy Watson gave a fine representation of Captain Frank Leslie; the Polly Hithard of Miss Bonwin Carlton was excellent; Mr. Edward Surrey submitted a good study of Bill Burgess; and as Richard Vanborough Mr. J. P. Dryden displayed ability. Miss Kitty Maynard made a pathetic Daisy Paget; and the humour was provided by Mr. Tod Squires as Tommy Atkins.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—One of Mr. Fred Karno's troupes are appearing here this week in two of their well-known and hilarious pantomimical sketches, The Casuals and Mumming Birds, both of which are received with great enthusiasm and undoubted pleasure by the audience. The other turns comprise Lew Towers, a capital actor-vocalist; Rose Tilley, a charming burlesque actress; Dolly and Madge McCalla, juvenile artists, far above the average; and the Bros. Hamilton, comedians and simultaneous dancers. Raymond's Bio-tableaux always appeal to a large section of the audience.

SYDNEY GARDENS.—With the return of the warm weather Mr. Carl Fredericks and his nine merry-makers are once again attracting large audiences by the capital and varied entertainment they provide.

BEDFORD. — ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Variety is still the order at the above, Kennedy's Komiks playing to good houses each night. Mr. Natt Abott keeps the audience in roars of laughter with his jokes and funny ditties; Henriette and Selina dexterously manipulate numerous musical instruments; the Darnleys sing some good operatic airs; Mme. Bellamy is loudly applauded for her fine rendering of old ballads; Keane Harker brings down the house with his comic songs; the Miltons are well received in their unique and clever skating turn; Miss Winnie Wentworth appears in one of her characteristic songs; Miss Ella Vane also contributes to the vocalism, and the Komikoscope concludes an admirable entertainment with an exhibition of interesting pictures.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—The leading attraction is provided by Arthur Rigby and company, who produce with every element of success their Eastern episode, entitled The Isle of Ooma. This comic opera in miniature affords Mr. Rigby much scope for displaying his versatile humour, and he at once established himself a favourite. The acme of perfection is exhibited in the marvellous shooting act of the Three Royal Dreadnoughts; and a marked reception has been extended to Caryl Wilbur and company, who present their smart American comedy, 61, Prospect-street. Mr. Russell Carr is undoubtedly a clever ventriloquist; and the Lyons Trio, in their dancing act; Miss Florry Cooper, comedienne; Charles Austin, comedian; and the Palace Pictures, complete.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Will Sley and Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. T. Downs.—Mr. Arthur Prince, one of the best of ventriloquists, heads the bill, and his performance has been voted a great success; Curtis Leo, assisted by Little Noblesse, appears to much advantage in the mysterious speciality entitled Fun in a Drawing-room; Mr. John Donald presents his vocal scena, in which his fine voice is heard with infinite pleasure; Mr. Will Douglas's Troupe of Jolly Bakers submit their clever Risley act, some of their feats being quite extraordinary; and Miss Lucy Coventry is a charming comedienne and fine dancer. Also in the bill are Bugler Carr, equilibrist; Stacey and Williams, comedy duo; Beau and Belle, in a vocal scena; Sisters Cora, duettists and dancers; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Barton and Ashley top the bill, and this famous American comedy duo create much mirth with their new act, entitled Adam the Second; Signor and Mme. Borelli are compelled to respond to hearty encores for their realistic and humorous imitations; Mr. Ed. E. Ford, "the Australian sundowner," presents his remarkable facial imitations; and Miss Lena Verdi is a delightful comedienne and dancer. Aida Martine, comedienne, takes well; and a pleasing appearance has been made by Miss Rhoda Paul, one of the best male impersonators seen here for some time. Mr. Andie Burn, comedian, is a remarkably clever dancer. The Bioscope completes the bill.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Another fine exhibition of pictures has been presented here. This week's series comprises The Wreckers, Hurry Up, Please, The Lottery Ticket, Mr. Hayseed's Bargain, and many other beautiful films. In addition, Miss Daisy Devonport, an accomplished comedienne, appears with success; Mr. R. C. Note, a really clever comedian, made a big hit on Monday with his chorus songs.

BILSTON.—AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Battersby.—The Imperial Pierrots are giving a capital entertainment this week. The popular comedians, Alf. Brookes and Harry Plant, prove successful laugh-raisers; Miss Flo Holroyd, Mr. Fred Field, and Mr. Carl St. Clare render their songs in a pleasing manner.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Charles M. Bestie's company in the musical comedy of The Flower Girl is on an initial visit here and have deservedly scored an instantaneous success. In the course of a spirited performance Mr. Martin Adeson, in particular, is pre-eminently successful by his irresistibly humorous and clever assumption of Joe Wheeler; Mr. Edward Kipling as Reginald Rackit displays a vivacity and skill which is positively exhilarating, and Mr. Robert H. Howard plays the Honourable Billy Greenhill with considerable vocal and histrionic ability; as Lily, the flower girl, Miss Dorothy Firmin is admirably suited, singing her various numbers with exceptional skill and effect; the impersonation is a most charming one, abounding with chic and vim. Mr. Alfred Donohoe, as Johnny Wheeler, is first class, and special mention is due of Mr. Henry Adnes and Miss Florence Wilton as Alphonse and Lizzitté de Racquet; Miss Jeannie Holmes is efficient as Miss Greenhill. The chorus and supernumeraries are all that can be desired, and Mr. William T. Gliddon, the composer, personally conducts.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Kennedy's Kiddies form a leading attraction, and have caught on immensely; they are exceptionally good singers and dancers, and their entertainment is thoroughly successful; Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company in an interesting sketch, entitled Convict 99, is well received, and Velazzi's juggling feats are exceptionally smart; Miss Mabel Thorne, comedienne, and a general favourite; Barnard's mannikins in a cleverly-manipulated and effective show; Mr. Jack Dawe, a good comedian; Mr. Tatten Hall in some entertaining comic songs, and Brown's Royal Bioscope are all important items in an excellent programme. Mr. Ernest Denney is musical director.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Edwin Adeler.—An entire change of company introduces Morton and Bowman, duologue artists; Miss Betty Greene, comedienne; Mr. Frank Hook, comedian; Mr. Marriott Edgar, the man in red; and Mr. Bernard Knox, accompanist, all of whom are excellent in their respective lines of business.

BIRMINGHAM. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—Home, Sweet Home is the attraction this week, this being its second visit with Mr. Frank Lindo's company. Mr. Lindo's acting as the husband, Stephen Armitage, is always natural, and commands full sympathy with its earnest and vigorous tone; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle plays with clever, rugged force, as the foster-parent, David Armitage; Miss Marion Wakeford's acting is quite in keeping with the character of the high-born heroine, Joan; Mr. Helsby Wright is effective as Lucas Lyle; Mr. G. Rogers's conception of the rôle of Dick Redmayne is very successful; Mr. Archer Brown comes out well in the part of the Duke of Ancaster; and Mr. Horace Kenny, as the Hon. Percy, and Miss Maude Elliott as Sybil Fay are shining examples. The remaining parts are well played, and the piece is adequately staged.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Great Vaudeville and Universal Picture Company continues to run successfully here. The reappearance of Mr. Will Euston, coster comedian, has been attended with much enthusiasm; Mr. Freddy Butler, "Birmingham's own boy vocalist," has elicited much applause with his illustrated songs; and the McKinleys have done well in their clever song and dance specialities. The animated picture display is by that eminent firm, Pathé Freres, and comprises the latest films issued by them.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake.—The Corsican Brothers, finely acted and staged, is a big success here, with Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company. Mr. Sidney Bland differentiates the twin rôles, Fabien and Louis, admirably and subtly; Mr. G. Vane preserves the balance of the piece as Chateau Renard; Mr. J. O. Stewart gives an excellent rendering of the Baron de Montgiron; and Messrs. J. Hignett, J. W. Wilkinson, H. Marchmont, and Hugh Wallace, are very good in their rôles. Miss Cissie St. Elmo invests the character of Madame dei Franchi with fine grace and dignity; Miss Aimee Graltan Clyndes displays perfect sympathy with the rôle Emilie; and the subsidiary parts are made much of. The Holy War follows, and in which most of the above appear to advantage.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—The London Fireman held the stage here the first half of the week, since when Saved from the Sea has been the attraction. Both have been played by Messrs. Garside and Knowles' company, and in the former, Mr. J. Forbes Knowles has scored a big success in the titular rôle, Hal Curtis; Mr. Edwin J. Collins acts the despicable Viscount Fleming with a firm grip; Mr. William Burgess shows the brutalised nature of the elder Curtis admirably; Miss Grace Garside elicits praise and sympathy in the rôle of the unhappy wife, Grace; Mis Helena Walbran scores with her sweetness and sympathy as Ida Curtis; Miss Nellie Waddington acts with a proper show of feeling as the Countess; Miss Nina Harding is an entertaining Polly Bramble; and Mr. Geo. E. Scully acts well in concert as Nixey Stinger. In Saved from the Sea, Mr. Knowles, Mr. Collins, and Miss Walbran are also well cast as Dan, Fenton, and Nancy respectively.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—La Incognita is the possessor of a rich soprano voice; Walter Passmore and company delight the audience with the sketch The Constable and the Pictures. A musical sketch In Her Boudoir is ably presented by Edward Laurie and May Beatty; Elton and Edwin are clever banjoists; and Bob Hamilton, Ted E. Box, J. G. Aitken, and Vickey Delmar complete.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The Chas. Fisher Opera Co. appear here with their usual success in Il Trovatore; E. C. Gittings and company present a sketch The Daughter of the Regiment, the cast of which includes Mlle. Prescott, both sketches being highly appreciated. The Wille Bros. are exceedingly clever acrobats; Barry Lupino sings, dances, and turns somersaults in funny style; the Bandurria Troubadours entertain with the mandoline and guitar performances; Mr. Hymack is a clever comedian; Mazie Hibbs, Gipsy Woolf and her Six Sunbeams, and Lily Hayes are applauded for their singing and dancing.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—George Mozart, a popular comedian, is attracting large houses here; a musical mélange The Prince of Monte Carlo is presented by Harry Roxbury, who appears as P.C. Longfellow. The music, dancing, and scenery are up to the highest standard. Phil Rees' Stable Lads, Cumming and Seaham, acrobatic comedians, the Soho Trio in a vocal and terpsichorean novelty, the Musical Silvos, Botello and Virgina, Driscoll and Felino, and the Tafanos, are in the long and pleasing programme.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Miss Annie Hughes and company are paying a very welcome visit here this week with The Mollusc, and meeting with the most gratifying success. Miss Hughes submits an excellent portrayal of Mrs. Baxter, and brings out with telling effect all the idiosyncrasies of this complex character; no less successful is Miss Lilias Waldegrave as Miss Roberts; her naturalness is positively charming; Mr. Athol Stewart contributes a capital piece of acting as Tom Kemp, and Mr. Cecil Rose has a part that suits him in Mr. Baxter. A Bit of Old Chelsea is the curtain-raiser, and here again Miss Hughes scores another success as the flower girl.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—Mrs. Ponderbury's Past is being enacted here this week by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company. Mr. George Mudie very cleverly assumes the part of Mr. Ponderbury; whilst Miss Annie Stalman amply justifies her selection for the rôle of Mrs. Ponderbury; Mr. Drew Macintosh does well as Mervin Thorpe, and Mr. Geo. Child merits commendation as Captain Rumford; Miss Florence Wix as Mme. Modjeski, and Miss Florence Wellesley as Ethel Penniston are also good.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Tom Costello tops a big bill here this week. Other attractive turns are supplied by Dan Crawley, comedian; Will H. Fox, comedian and musician; May Moore Duprez, "the jolly Dutch girl"; Monie Emerald, comedienne and dancer; Trapnell Family, acrobats; Francis and Alfred, jugglers; Athas and Collins, comedians; and La Belle Flora, in an artistic mélange.

BOLTON.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.; Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Oswald Williams, versatile illusionist, is making his first appearance here in a series of astounding illusions, including "The Flying Chest." He is assisted by Winifred La Barte and company. Other turns are Jack Hayton, the Lancashire Lad; Violet Leslie and Jack Ford in The Billposter's Dilemma, in which they introduce comedy caricaturing and character mimicry of star artists; Aidee Mellor, vocalist; the Two Lauries, society acrobats; Will E. Stopit, eccentric comedian; Edie Tennis and Gertie Laune in their original vocal scena Chapters from Life; the Milfords, cross-talk comedians and dancers; the Five Musical Tritons, vocalists and instrumentalists; and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Wilmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The attraction this week is the drama, The Way of Transgressors, by Nita Rae, and played by the stock company. Mr. Albert Sember is exceedingly good as Cecil Kenmore; also Mr. Alfred D. Adams in the rôle of Harold Marchant. Mr. Stanley S. Gordon is well placed as Manuel; Miss Nina Vaughton plays Inez Saville in her usual pleasing manner, and Barbara has a good representative in Miss Kathleen Magee. The humour of the piece is well taken care of by Mr. Tom H. Solly and Miss Effie Macintosh.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—Phil Ray is paying a return visit, and with his songs and patter keeps the audience convulsed with laughter; Leo Tell, "the master of mimicry," rightly deserves this title, his imitations of musical instruments, &c., being most realistic; Kitty Colyer, American comedienne, contributes some "catchy" songs, whilst her dancing is clever; Will Van Allen renders an overture on the banjo in a masterly manner; Little Tichbourne, comedian, is successful in his "big boot" dancing; Louise Zetland's powerful voice is heard to advantage; the Alskarno Trio, comedy Risleyists, show remarkable dexterity; and the Bioscope pictures are very interesting.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—This theatre reopened on Monday, when Mr. Edward Marris's company presented The Gentleman Jockey to an appreciative house. Miss Ethel Ward as the heroine is admirably suited; Mr. Cecil W. Parke as Sir Francis Granmere is manly and convincing; a most capable study of a villain is submitted by Mr. W. B. Nugent as Snakeworth, who is foiled in his work by a village constable, excellently played by Mr. George Brentwood; Mr. Helier le Maistre as Grayson has a capital opportunity, and uses it well in the last act, when he sings "Chorus, Gentlemen"; Miss Gertie Ward as Pippin does well; while the Lottie Stone Quartette dance most delightfully; Mr. Leonard Dalrymple besides giving a finished performance of Fitzherbert, undertakes the duties of business manager. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. George Ess, who is responsible for many of the musical items introduced.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company is here for the week with The Shaughraun, and large audiences have heartily greeted the evergreen Irish drama. It is capitally staged, and the acting is good. Mr. Thorne's humour as the genial, sprightly Conn is prolific; Mr. Phil Harper is a manly Captain Molineux; Mr. Alexander J. Haviland is earnest and altogether excellent as Robert Ffolliott; as Father Dolan, Mr. Dunlop Stewart is good; Mr. J. Skea plays Corry Kinchela well; Mr. H. Macauley's Harvey Duff is a fine performance; Miss Phyllis Vaughan very charmingly fills the part of Arte O'Neal; Claire Ffolliott has a capital exponent in Miss Maud Russell; Miss Winifred Barton is good as Moya; and as Mrs. O'Kelly Miss Florence Thorne is diverting.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—The charming burlesque artist Winifred Hare is the bright particular star here this week, and her reception has been very cordial; Harry Weldon is on a return visit, and his eccentric style and songs elicit hearty laughter; Carl Howard's burlesque conjuring is amusing. On the triple bar the Vasilescu Troupe are clever and entertaining; Max Yorke, with his wonderfully trained fox terriers, furnishes a clever and novel turn; G. B. Reno and company as "An Odd Lot" are grotesque and amusing; the Sisters Allen are dainty duettists and dancers; Little Keeno is a boy comedian of some promise; Walter Bellonini juggles cleverly, and has a smart assistant in "Wal"; and there are some good pictures shown by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Those clever instrumentalists and funny comedians, the Leslie Brothers, have again met with an enthusiastic reception here; Norah Noble is a pretty comedienne and dancer; Mathews and Brown, coloured duettists, dance cleverly; an excellent imitation of a mechanical doll is the feature of the Forsyth's sketch, The Tramp in the Nursery; Maston, Yorkshire mimic, is clever and amusing; the Three Sisters Thurban are expert instrumentalists and good vocalists; excellent comedy juggling and clever balancing feats by the Gascoignes win hearty applause; Hal Godfrey and company are amusing in the sketch A Very Bad Boy, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux are very interesting.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL PRINCES' PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Promenade concerts given by the Municipal Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Norfolk Megone, are increasing in popularity. The vocalist this week is Mr. Harry Blackie, a pleasing baritone. In the Grand Pavilion the great attraction is Mr. Victor L'Estrange, an illusionist, whose tricks are smartly performed. The new series of pictures by the Loyal Dominion Animated Picture Company include a fine film of the procession during the King and Queen's visit to Leeds, taken specially for Mr. Will Emmerson, the enterprising manager of this up-to-date show. Mr. Flockton-Foster and his costume comedy company are frequently introducing new items in their programmes.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Herr Simon Wurm and his Viennese Band give some excellent programmes at their promenade concerts, the vocalist this week being Miss Katie Moss, soprano, who gives great satisfaction to the large audiences who assemble under the glass dome. Her playing of the violin obbligatos to her songs is a great treat, and her songs at the piano are always redemanded. The performances by the Lindons, entertainers, are very popular, Mr. Bob White being as great a favourite as ever in his humorous songs. The "Spaograph" pictures add to the attraction of the big programmes given each evening by the company in the Opera House.

THE PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Delmar.—That talented musical combination the Zerbinis are paying a welcome return visit to this popular place of entertainment, and their turn evokes great enthusiasm from large audiences. The Parisian Animated Pictures are always a source of delight, and Mr. Delmar is constantly adding new attractions.

SUMMER GARDENS. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—Mr. Harry Tomlin, a fine versatile vocalist, with a well-trained voice, is always heartily applauded among the items in the popular programmes given by the Waterloo Pierrots. Mme. Samuel's At Home is an amusing sketch given by the company this week.

BRIGHTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. Ernest Carpenter's stock company is performing It's Never Too Late to Mend here this week, and attracting large audiences. Mr. Edward McLean achieves distinct success as George Fielding; Mr. Ronald Adair gives an excellent portrayal of Tom Robinson; Miss Kathleen Russell makes a charming Susan Merton; Mr. A. Hallett, jun., is powerfully effective as Mr. Meadows; Mr. Ellis J. Preston's Rev. Mr. Eden, and Mr. Harry Oxley's Mr. Haws, are admirably played; Miss Amy Venimore is a capital Mrs. Merton; and others who render able support are Mr. Charles A. Preece and Mr. H. C. Lanceley.

ALHAMBRA.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—There is a capital company here this week. The Brothers Poluski are as clever and amusing as ever; Edie King is a dashing comedienne and pleasing dancer; the Five Whitelys are capital acrobats; Ryan and Hall's comedy wrestling is very diverting; Josh Dixon sings and patters in humorous style; Helen Forsyth is an excellent ballad singer; Anthony, the burlesque juggler, is cordially received; Steve Barlie is a gifted edeophone and concertina soloist; and the Alhambrascope pictures are excellent.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—An excellent programme is sustained here this week. Paul Cinquevalli wins enthusiastic applause with his marvellous juggling and balancing feats; Daisy Wood achieves great success in her song, "Splash me"; Evelyn Taylor's popular ditties are warmly appreciated; the Sisters Wingrove are dainty dancers; Ross and Grayson are an amusing comedy pair; Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford are highly successful in the farce, Getting Even; the Westwoods give a clever exhibition of acrobatics on cycles; the Five Juanitos give a capital display of gymnastics; Percy Farrimond, the Lancashire singing collier, is cordially received; and Satsuma is a smart conjuror.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Messrs. Frank G. Bayly and Arthur Eldred's company is here this week with When We Were Twenty-one. Mr. Frank G. Bayly is capitally suited as Richard Carewe; Mr. Arthur Eldred acquits himself admirably as the Imp; Miss Katie Johnson is a delightful Phyllis; the trio of Guardians are ably represented by Messrs. F. Rawson Buckley, Talbot Homewood, and P. L. Julian; Miss G. Bartle-Frere is amusing as Mrs. Ereison; and praise is due to Miss Violet Graham (Babette), and Miss Margaret Yarde ("Firefly").

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mr. Lionel Brough and Mr. Tom Craven's company is here this week, with a triple bill—The Lady in Red, The Yarn Spinner, and Milky White. In the first-named piece the parts are ably sustained by Mr. Stephen Adeson (Mr. Johnson), Mr. Tom Craven (William), Miss Clara Milvain (Mrs. Johnson), and Miss Isabel Collier (Cora). Mr. Lionel Brough is distinctly effective in The Yarn Spinner; while, in Milky White, excellent representations are submitted by Mr. Tom Craven (Milky White), Mr. Stephen Adeson (Dick Duggs), and Miss Mary Brough (Mrs. Sadrip).

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. M. Barrasford; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Fred Bauer.—The animated pictures are very attractive. A Mexican Love Story and A Gendarme's Honour convey interesting stories, and among the amusing films are Land of Nod, An Economical Overcoat, and The Little Motorist.

CONCERT HALL, WEST-STREET.—The Royal Italian Circus is still achieving well merited success here.

BRISTOL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Mr. James Hare and company are here with the romantic Servian drama A Destroyer of Men, the play being staged with liberality. Mr. Hare acts with considerable power as Karl Mischla; Miss Irene Clifford is effective as Olga Mischla; Miss Jessie Yatman presents a refined and sympathetic exposition of Vida Ravel; Mr. Frederick Harker is consistent as Count Starevitch; Mr. Leonard Clarke and Mr. James Duncan act carefully as the two sons Paul and Michael; the comic parts of Coco Tatchoski and Nina Pattakake are rendered in amusing style by Mr. Edmond O'Grady and Miss Bessie Frank; and the remaining characters are all carefully performed. The quick scenic change from the convict settlement on the island of Seavgorod to the open sea is effective.

PALACE — Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Interesting animated pictures are being shown here representing the Royal visit to Bristol on the recent opening of Avonmouth Dock, the films being photographed by Mr. Dunscome, a local optician. Cruikshank, "the fool of the family," presents a good turn; Richard Corbin's dogs are marvels of training—they do a clever performance all by themselves, Mr. Corbin only appearing at the end of the turn; Allsopp and Beckwith amuse as a comedy duo; Rose Sartella is a pleasing American comedienne; the Arthur Gallimore Trio do well as comedy artists; Jock Walker, Scotch comedian, is appreciated; and Harry Taft, comedian, whistles with much power. The performance concludes with The Magnetic Removal, depicted by Vernon's Bioscope.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—The Great McBanns, American club jugglers, are exceptionally clever in their line, and they are duly appreciated. Jack and Evelyn score with their speciality Act of the Period; Miss Beaumont Collins and company successfully present a fine dramatic sketch, The House of Terror, with special scenery effects by E. G. Banks, Imperial Theatre; the Chicago Gypsy Girls are decidedly effective in their harmony vocal scena; Marie Reeve, comedienne and dancer, does a pleasing turn; Karr and Kooney, comedians, are deservedly appreciated; and Connie Mostyn, serio and dancer, is successful. The performance concludes with a good display of animated pictures.

BURNLEY. — EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Another admirably diversified programme is given here this week. The Venetians please greatly with their singing and beautiful illustrations, the love song being loudly applauded. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde give a most interesting and clever shadowgraph performance; and Arthur Watson, Flo Stanley and company submit a bright musical sketch, The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory. The Sisters Jerome sing and dance acceptably, and Arthur Harris contributes songs with a swing. A pretty singer is Madoline Rees, and an exceptionally funny picture is shown by the Empire Theatroscope.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Paul Barnes, of New York, heads the bill here, and his string of jokes told in a droll manner quite convulses the audience. His singing, too, is most acceptable; another clever American is W. E. Whitlie, ventriloquist, whose resemblance to President Roosevelt is most striking; Miss Florence Esdaile in a medley of opera music is loudly encored; the Kirbys, in their duologue are funny; and Miss Nora Stockelle is up-to-date in her song about the "Flip-Flap." A laughable sketch, The Art of Deception, is presented by Mr. J. F. Elliston's company, the prominent comedy being created by Mr. Shaun Glenville as the tramp. Charles Resti is a smart conjurer; the Dancing Gilberts give a novel act; and The Architect's Apprentice is a humorous picture by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Gaumont's Chronophone concludes this week with a most interesting show. A speciality is a fine picture on the Bioscope, illustrating the local regatta, which is cheered again and again. Mr. Harry Lauder, Mr. Will Evans, and Miss Victoria Monks' voices are also heard and seen through the Chronomegaphone, and are heartily applauded. The living pictures are up to date, and Mr. H. Ellis, "who is in charge of the entertainment," is to be congratulated.

CARDIFF. — EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—The array of talent this week is headed by Mark Sheridan, who seems a greater favourite than ever. Lottie Lennox makes a hit with her vivaciously rendered numbers; Spry and Austin, two favourites with Cardiffians, are greeted with genuine applause; Charles Parker's Six Æolians provide a capital vocal and dancing entertainment; Harry Rogers and company prove particularly interesting in a dramatic sketch entitled Told in a Flat; the De Wynne Brothers gain considerable appreciation for their refined athletic act; Ralf and Nellie Howard are popular in a musical sketch, Military Mad; Adey Spencer is a charming comedienne; and Kisbey, described as "the call-boy," and a new series of Bioscopic pictures are also in the bill.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Miss Dolly Elsworthy and company are here in a stirring episode, entitled The Orange Girl. A unique turn is provided by Tokio, who as a mimic is really admirable; the Evalos are masters of jugglery; and Cedar and Elgar are smart comedians in their comedy act, Ye Dayes of Olde; Mr. E. is a clever patterer, his pictorial remarks being extremely humorous; Les Belles Americaine, vocalists and trick dancers; Alma Moller, ballad vocalist; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux complete a first-class entertainment.

CARLISLE.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—The first visit of Mr. Herbert Cottesmore's company in the Sicilian drama entitled Her Princely Betrayer created considerable interest on the opening night. Mr. Oscar Adye was the principal figure, and gave a sound performance; Miss Amber Wyville was sympathetic and interesting; and Miss Jessica Black and Messrs. Ivan Cleveland and William Black filled their respective parts adequately. The scenery and dressing were excellent. Estrella, a clever dancer, met with a favourable reception; Tony Iveson, the comedy tramp pianist, and the Villions, acrobatic cyclists, are on a return visit, and, with new business, are more popular than ever. Burley and Burley have a quaint and decidedly taking style as acrobatic comedians; and Otto and Olga contribute a smart musical comedy act, which was deservedly appreciated. George Acre, with capital character songs, and some fine pictures by the Pepiscope conclude.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—Another pleasing series of the Loyal Dominion Co.'s animated pictures forms the principal attraction again this week. By way of a change George Young, a blind musician, gives some pleasing selections on the concertina.

CHATHAM — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. Barnard.—After a brief interval we have another play from the pen of C. Watson Mill, entitled A Wrecker of Men. Miss Amy Ellam is powerful as Risca Mallison; Mr. Chas. E. Lovell appears successfully as Isaacs, a Jew, and as Karnaphus; Miss Gwendoline Talbot gains the sympathy of the house as Doris Melville; and other parts are in good hands.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—The Sisters Herbert are a dainty pair of juvenile singers and dancers; Wyndham and Waters create roars of laughter in The Professor and His Pupil; the Geni Family give a particularly smart acrobatic display; Harry Desmond scores with "Oh, what a comical thing!" A Separation Wanted and The Wonderful Scarf are amusing films realistically projected by means of Lacey's Erascope. Rosie Gaston, serio; Davis and Deane, comedians and patterers; and the Vallis in musical act complete the bill.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. E. G. Woodhouse.—Here we have Ida Brophy, who scores with "Only to call her Baby"; Delafiore, zylophone expert; the Sisters Grosvenor, a trio of pleasing vocalists; Cumminger and Colonna, in expert sand-dancing; Alice Maple, a neat little serio; Pat Rafferty, an old favourite here, who is enthusiastically recalled for "Paddy at Loch Lomond," "Where is my wandering boy?" and other ditties; and Mlle. Haydee's cleverly-manipulated miniature vaudeville theatre. A word of special mention must be accorded to The Phantom Artist, which is the title of a very novel film presented by means of the Edisonograph.

CLACTON-ON-SEA. — WESTCLIFF GARDENS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Graham Russell and Bentley.—In a capital programme here Mr. Bert Graham creates roars of laughter with his song, "If the Missus says"; Mr. Bert Russell is always amusing, his contributions bringing down the house; Mr. Will Bentley provides humour in his songs, "You needn't tell everybody" and "Is there a doctor about?"; Mr. Gorton Young is a basso vocalist of considerable ability, his handbell solos also being well received; Miss Dora Thorpe's songs with 'cello obbligato are finely rendered, and Mr. Bret Harden's whistling and imitations are extremely clever.

PALACE-BY-THE-SEA.—Managing-Director, Mr. P. W. Willard.—Some exceptionally clever performers are billed here this week. The Sisters Reno, transformation dancers, are a leading attraction; the Bros. Mills give a remarkably clever equilibristic turn; Miss Vera Patey charmingly renders some catchy chorus songs; Boyd and Gilfain are enthusiastically encored for their item, "Fifteen Minutes in Sunny Spain"; Montague Biggs is an entertaining mimic; Gus Hindell, in song and story, creates roars of laughter; Bessie Benson dances cleverly, and Mr. Fred Dornan scores with humorous songs. The Palascope shows some fine films.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. W. F. Jury; Manager, Mr. Dudley Harcourt.—The animated pictures this week include Romeo and Juliet, Each one in his turn, The way to get rid of Ma-in-law, and Thief by necessity. Mr. J. Horton's illustrated songs, and Miss Clairette Florence's excellent pianoforte selections complete the programme.

COLCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Charles Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—This historic house signalised its post-vacation opening in the happiest possible fashion, a crowded audience giving a hearty reception to Mr. George Edwardes's company in that most seductive of musical plays The Merry Widow on Monday evening. The dresses, which enhanced the beautiful effect of the scenery, are by Mrs. Patrick, Mme. Herbert, Mme. Field, and Morris Angel and Son; whilst the tour is under the direction of Mr. J. A. E. Malone. Miss Mysie Devine created a most favourable impression by her impersonation of the world-famous Widow, singing in capital form and acting some of the more tense moments with considerable feeling. Her success was aided by the powerful aid rendered by Mr. Frank Greene as Prince Danilo, a part to which he was eminently suited by reason of his pleasing baritone voice, and the ease and cleverness with which he turned from grave to gay and vice versa. Mr. Edward D'Arcy, perhaps at times apt to wander from the old-man dignity of Baron Popoff, was nevertheless a cause of much laughter, and, when in his lighter vein, was indeed an immense success; whilst the eleventh-hour morality of Natalie, his wife, was portrayed with unmistakable cleverness by Miss Ada Thomas, a lady who revelled in top notes, to the great delight of her auditors, who frequently applauded loudly; Mr. Ripley Evans, the possessor of a particularly sweet voice, gained many encores for his singing as Vicomte Camille de Jolidon; Mr. Fred Fowler was intensely funny as the pertinent, yet at times obsequious Nisch; whilst Mr. F. W. Pedgrift made quite the most of the part of M. de St. Brioche, one of the Parisian "widow" (with fortune) hunters, his pertinacity leading to many humorous situations. A trio who appeared well placed were Mr. William Allison as Marquis de Cascada, Mr. Clifford Soyler as General Novikovitch, and Mr. Robert Needham as M. Khadja. Miss Daphne Glenne, Miss Violet Hobson, and Miss Lucie Donati as Olga, Sylvanie, and Frascovia respectively, were each charming; whilst as Frou Frou, one of the Maxim Girls, Miss Katie May showed to advantage. The choruses were well rendered, though it was noticeable that the male voices showed the greater ability, and the tour should be an eminently successful one.

HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—This week Mr. Fred Lindsay, the Australian whip-wonder, in his thrilling exhibition, is thoroughly appreciated; his show is enhanced by some capital films portraying bush life, pastimes, and competitions. Les Cablacs, French acrobats and dancers, give a bright and clever entertainment; Sergt. J. P. Carroll, tambourine expert, is awarded tremendous applause for his really extraordinary show; Flo Cecil renews her acquaintance with the locals, and goes as well as of yore; Jenny Alexander proves herself a clever mimic; Rose and Challoner appeal strongly as a comedy duo with a taking show, and Archie Glen is a promising comedian and raconteur.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—An interesting melodrama, entitled A Sister's Sin, is being presented here by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company. Mr. T. Arthur Ellis is successful in the leading rôle of Harold Raymond; Mr. Hugh Carmichael is responsible for the villain, George Oakley; Miss Clara Santley so strikingly successful in the rôle of Charzel, is ably assisted as Redempta by Miss Patricia Conaughton; Miss Mabel Scudamore is responsible for Minnie Hastings; and some clever juvenile acting comes from Miss Violet Bales, and Miss Mabel Ray as Redempta's son, and May Raymond. Considerable humour is introduced by Mr. W. Percy, Miss E. Macklin, and Miss Lynn Darlington as Larry Murphy, Floss Perks, and Nell Stubbs respectively.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry.—First on the list this week is Mr. Tom Edwards, the huntsman ventriloquist, who causes roars of laughter; the Empire Comedy Four delight the audience with their funny quartettes; the Markies provide a capital turn, playing popular choruses on bottles, bells, glasses, &c.; the Brothers Ford, simultaneous dancers, meet with a good reception; Bonnetti and Corrie give a capital juggling act; Dean and Dover appear in an original comedy act, entitled The Typist and the Messenger Boy; other artists are Nellie Farrell, Frank C. Mason, John Henderson, and Lizzie Sinclair.

CROYDON.—HIPPODROME AND NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Jackson Hayes; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Samuel James and Newman Maurice.—The principal item on the programme this week is a sketch by Mr. Fred Sothern and company, entitled A Lucky Soldier. Mr. Harry Gilbey as Capt. Hamesley does well; Winnette is in the capable hands of Miss May Emery; and Mr. Fred Southern capably fulfils the rôle of Bob Sankey. Toby Cooper, a local favourite, renders some good songs; Rubie Parsonage is a good comedienne and dancer; Marie Leonard, in illustrated songs, is applauded; and the animated pictures shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux are interesting.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Langley Wyatt.—The head of an exceedingly good programme this week is Lydia Yeamans, a capable actress-vocalist, whose singing and imitations gain her unstinted approbation; another outstanding feature is a sensational sketch, entitled Blackmail, which is ably presented by Henry Herne, Ida Millais, and Harry Cullenford; Max Gruber and Miss Adelina, with their wonderfully-trained elephant, horse, and pony, should receive special mention, the performance being both clever and unique; Hinto and Wootton submit a capital football match on bicycles, which is watched with much interest; Horace Jones, Welsh comedian, is highly successful; Martell gives an excellent exhibition of hand-balancing; Dolly Ross is a pleasing comedienne and skilful dancer; and Benson and Rose appear to advantage in a diverting comedy duologue. The Bioscope is, as usual, interesting.

PALACE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—This week a musical drama, entitled In Old Madrid, is being produced by Mrs. Fred J. Kirke's company. Mr. Leslie Austin, who undertakes the dual rôle of Frank Lyndhurst, the hero, and Count Corregillo, should be complimented upon his success, and he is ably assisted by Miss Edna Clare, who appears to advantage as Violet Lyndhust; Mr. Franklyn Daly is good as Mendoza, a toreador; and the comedy element is supplied by Mr. Walter T. Hybert as Rodgers, and Miss

GIVEN AWAY.

ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE.

A WONDERFUL BOOK ON MONEY-MAKING.

Within the last few weeks there has been an overwhelming demand for a remarkable book dealing with a subject of absorbing interest, a subject that interests both young and old, rich and poor alike. This little volume does not ascend into the realms of visions; on the contrary, it tears aside the curtain that so often obscures our understanding of things, and it deals with plain, cold facts. It enlightens the man who is interested and instructs and informs the man who is ignorant.

This is not a book for the library shelf. It is a book to be read, and can be read by the young as well as the old. It will serve as a fund of information for the former and a source of inspiration to the latter. For every careful, thrifty man or woman it is one of the books that is essential. The subject of money-making by modern methods is fully explained, and, considering the invaluable nature of the information imparted, it is done in such a masterly manner that your interest is at its highest pitch from beginning to end.

This book, of which nearly two hundred thousand copies have already been distributed, will, for a limited period only, be sent free to all readers of this paper.

There is, of course, no telling how soon it may be impossible to procure further copies, and it would therefore be unwise to miss such an opportunity.

Write at once—to-day—and you will receive a copy by return post.

Simply send your full name and address (a postcard will do) to the publishers, Messrs. Arnold and Butler (Dept

Florrie Jackson, who cause much hearty laughter. Several good songs are given by Mr. Leslie Austin and Miss Florrie Jackson, which are cordially appreciated. The minor parts are well handled, and the play is well mounted.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—A musical comedy-drama, entitled At the World's Mercy, performed by Mr. Carr Loates' company, is meeting with a very favourable reception this week. The principal contributor is Miss Cissie Milford, a smart dancer and quick-change artist, who undertakes the dual rôle of Kitty Knott and Skittles the Stowaway with commendable ability. Mr. Jerry Davies is very smart as Captain Frank Manley; and Mr. Carr Loates is a conventional villain as Jules Barber. Other members of the company whose several accomplishments are noticeable are Messrs. Boxer, Rodway, and Knight, and the Misses Hill, Courtney, and Hunter.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—Little Tich, the well-known comedian, is starring here this week, and provokes the greatest hilarity with his quaint songs and funnisities. Viviana and company in their scena The Toy-Shop is an exceedingly smart and clever performance; a novel gymnastic display by Ajax and George is appreciated; Tiller's Palace Girls, vocalists and dancers, continue to give great satisfaction; Harry Merrylee's Scotch songs are applauded; the Six Albyns in their comedy act The Squire's Hunting Party provide a pretty and effective turn; and Mlle. du Roche, burlesque artist, and the Royal pictures also contribute to a capital programme.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. S. Pearse; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Hereford Jones.—The new pictures shown here this week are both interesting and amusing, and include The Last Cartridge, Long Jack of Texas, The Dog Detective, The Little Blind Girl, and The Drunken Mattress. In the variety programme are Sam Frisco, a smart and amusing comedian; Dolly Boston, a charming soubrette; the Two Sports in a laughable potpourri act; the Sisters Fagan, celebrated Irish jig and reel dancers; and the ever-popular humorist and guide, Bob Pearson.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The centre of attraction here is found in Miss Cissie Lawson and company in their sensational sketch The Devil's Sunday, which is well received. Maude Mortimer is most pleasing and agreeable as a comedienne; the King's College Boys in The Students' Concert are very good; and Stuart and Evans are a capital pair of comedians. Ray Maskell, comedienne and dancer; Hans and Lux, the argumentative college chums; Yorke Wilson, eccentric comedian; Lily Esplin, character comedienne; and the Empire pictures are also in the bill.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Leoni Clarke, with his well-trained cats, rats, canaries, monkeys, &c., heads the bill here, and is warmly appreciated. Howard and St. Clair in their sketch Do You Want Any Coke? cause roars of laughter; the Sisters Brenton score in pretty songs and dances; the Haverleys, song illustrators, are accorded a capital reception; Minnie D'Aubyn, burlesque artist, has many admirers; Ingham and Irving afford much amusement in their sketch The New Office Boy; and Tom Thumb, Continental comedian, makes a decided hit. Excellent turns are added by Flake White, lightning painter and cartoonist, and L. W. Harris, light comedian. The Bioscope, depicting Bobby's Fire Engine, completes.

PAVILION (KINGSTOWN).—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—The attraction here this week is Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's company in a new and original yachting episode entitled The Saucy Arethusa, which proves successful. As a lady impersonator Mr. Kemsley Scott Barrie excels; Mr. Norman Osborne is a most entertaining ventriloquist; Miss Elaine Reed, a pleasing soprano vocalist, is well received; Mr. Tubby Edlin, comedian, is exceptionally good; and some fine vocalism is contributed by Mr. Jack W. Hughes.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The following artists are appearing here:—Cave and Cave, song and patter artists; Bessie Bell, ballad vocalist; Pleasant Jack, quaint comedian; Belle and Bell, sketch artists; Bert Wright, comedian and dancer; Eric Thornber, the copper-coloured coon; and the Cinematograph.

DONCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—Variety entertainment is still in demand, and the supply is amply met by the combination here this week. Daisy Parkes, comedienne and dancer, is a sparkling turn; Arthur Wells, character comedian, delights; Elsie Le Var, dainty soubrette, is aptly described; Darwin, man monkey, is a refreshing number; the Harrolds, duettists and dancers, are exceedingly neat in footcraft; Edgar Cook, the conjuring chef, is dexterous and smart; and George Marquis and Grace Mignonette, comedy artists, are welcome.

EASTBOURNE.—PIER PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Milton Bode's capital company is here this week, appearing in A Chinese Honeymoon. Miss Veronica Brady is a pretty and clever representative of Mrs. Pineapple, and her singing and dancing are well received; Miss Gwennie Harcourt is again the Fi-Fi, and plays the part with great success, her songs gaining enthusiastic applause; Miss Elsie Skillings sings admirably, and is a dainty and refined Princess Soo-Soo; and Miss Maud Adams is a decided success as the prudish Mrs. Brown; Mr. Will Harman is an able comedian, and he arouses many hearty laughs by his funny work as Pineapple; Mr. Rudolph Kloss is again a dignified and imposing Emperor Hang-Chow; Mr. P. Allerton-Turner is cleverly made up, and does good work as Chippie Chop; Mr. Harry Jennings is a polished and effective Tom Hatherton; and Mr. Leonard May gives excellent help as Hi Lung. The dresses are very pretty, the performance crisp and bright, and the chorus and augmented orchestra are under the able conductorship of Mr. Knight Pearce.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray, King, and Clark.—Mr. Louis Calvert and his company are appearing here in a new farcical comedy, entitled The Lady of the Pageant, a full account of which is given on another page.

THE ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—At the top of the bill are Hooker and Davis, with their six attendant "cow-boy" girls. Miss Davis gives elaborate examples of toe-dancing, and the turn is well received. Elvio, Ross, and Elvio have a smart and bustling absurdity in Those Troublesome Slaveys; Mr. Joe Archer sings and patters glibly to the amusement of his hearers; Mr. and Mrs. F. Shelley have a very diverting sketch, Miss Summerson's Baby; Miss Sadie Seymour is a refined and pleasing comedienne; Mr. Cyril Carle sings dramatic songs realistically; the Sisters Clifton sing and dance neatly; and new Bioscope pictures complete the bill.

EDINBURGH. — ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—At a time of the year when Edinburgh is crowded with visitors from all parts of the world, no more suitable fare could well be provided than the favourite national drama of Rob Roy, and Mr. William Mollison's special production of the piece continues its successful run. Mr. Mollison does full justice to the dry humour of the Baillie; and the merits of Mr. Ben Davies as a singer make him a popular representative of Francis Osbaldistone. The Rob Roy of Mr. Wm. Calvert is a sterling and manly performance; Mr. E. B. Drysdale gives an exceedingly characteristic impersonation of the Dugal Crâtur; and Mr. Tom Walker's Major Galbraith is marked by the ease of familiarity. Among the ladies, Miss Evelyn McNay and Miss Kitty Brownlees deserve great commendation, the former for her spirited acting as Helen Macgregor, and the latter for her fine singing in the rôle of Diana Vernon; while both Miss Josephine Woodward and Miss Ethel Armit do good work as Jean McAlpine and Mattie. Other parts are all in capable hands, and the drama is staged with all the advantages of excellent music and picturesque scenery.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—A programme, with many brilliant artists and full of intense and sustained interest, is presented at the Empire this week. Miss Hetty King's refined, yet animated, style makes her male impersonations a complete success; Mr. Albert Whelan is admirable alike in the mimetic and musical parts of his entertainment, and his imitations of music hall favourites are given with rare fidelity; Mr. Whit Cunliffe, bright and spirited as ever, displays genuine humour in the rendering of several new songs, "Exercise" and "Nobody's satisfied," evoking much applause; and Miss May Mar's stately presence and expressive singing give full effect to her selections, "In the shadow of the Pyramids" being specially noticeable. There is much bustle and exhilaration in the performance of Billy McClain and company; Sahib Gustave Fasola proves himself to be an illusionist of the first class; the Great Northern Troupe of International Dancers dance with dash, neatness, and grace; Miss Cassie Walmer is a vivacious comedienne; Miss Cissie Curlette provides an excellent turn; and the Bioscope closes one of the best entertainments we have seen at this house.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Mr. Will Dennis's company, in Little Lord Fauntleroy, was here the first half of the week. Mr. Will Dennis as the Earl of Dorincourt gave a brilliant portrayal; Miss Gertrude Netterville made a dignified Mrs. Errol; Mr. Havisham was well presented by Mr. George Roberts; Miss Daisy May was a vivacious and charming Lord Fauntleroy; and Mr. William Lockhart caused some merriment as Mr. Hobbs. The latter part of the week Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company paid a return visit with The Belle of New York.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Royal Entertainers are here, under the direction of Mr. Hickman Smith. In concerted numbers they are particularly pleasing. Mr. Harry J. Rowland is a diverting humorist; Mr. Hickman Smith is heard to advantage; Miss Edith Cooper sings in a charming manner; Miss Marie Westcott contributes good songs; and Mr. Robert Tattersall performs some remarkably clever conjuring tricks, his ventriloquial turn also being applauded.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth.—Mme. Ghita Corri, the star turn here this week, is heard to great advantage; A. G. Spry is droll; Whit Acre appears in some new and excellent songs; Alfonza balances and turns barrels in a most amazing manner; and another speciality turn is Cavalli, the French athlete. The Sisters Gladwin appear in a pretty, graceful, and clever act; Miss Margaret Ogilvie, Australian comedienne, and Nita, in a mysterious levitaton act, and the interesting Hippodrome pictures, complete.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Dave Samuels, a genuinely funny Hebrew, has been amusing large audiences here this week; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto present an interesting and amusing cycle act; Sandy McNab and company have a laughable absurdity in The Egyptian Mummy; Harold Thorley is an entertaining baritone; Ward and Davis are seen to advantage in a comedy duologue; and the Monte Carlo Girls, dancers, and the usual pictures complete.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. France.—Mr. Fred Granville's clever company is appearing here in It's Never Too Late To Mend. Mr. Hugh Montgomery makes a praiseworthy Tom Robinson; and Miss Gertrude Entwhistle a creditable Susan Merton. Other parts are in capable hands.

GLASGOW. — METROPOLE LTD. — Managing Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—We have here this week Mr. Samuel James and company in Wanted by the Police. Mr. Samuel James gives a finished and artistic performance of Philip Stanhope; Miss Helen Vigors is pathetic and telling as Mary Stanhope; the exacting rôle of Fanny Fordyce is cleverly taken by Miss Eva Bertram; Mr. Ronald Grahame displays ability as Nunkey Snarl; Mr. Ernest Regent as Richard Crawford, and Mr. George Thorpe as Bertie Beresford do justice to their parts; and Mr. Willis Collins is successful as Silas Underwood. The Charley Sparrow of Mr. Fred W. Grahame and the Molly of Miss Ethel Bateman are amusing.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—George Robey heads the bill here, and his up-to-date patter and his comic songs keep the house in a continual roar; the Dunedin Troupe display wonderful skill in trick cycling; Hilda Jacobsen is a universal favourite; the Seven Wulfrunas, lady and gentlemen acrobats, are novel in their performance; Guyer and Chispi provoke much fun; and Ethel Haydon is a vocalist of ability. The cyclonic dancing of the Molasso Quartette is highly appreciated; the Two Anartos are quaint and humorous; and Margaret Radcliffe in illustrated song is successful.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Those cleverly trained sea lions and seals, originally toured by Capt. Woodward, and now under the direction of Cliff Berzac, are the principal turn here this week; the Hadji Mohamed Troupe of acrobats display wonderful agility in their tumbling feats; Oakden is a smart ventriloquist; the Three Pirmans take well in an acrobatic turn; and another clever acrobatic item is given by the Carpos Bros. Minnie Clive and Bob Owen repeat their enjoyable vocal act, The Roadside Tinkers. Little Eileen, comedienne and dancer, Ruby Dahl, with her "Merry Manikins," and Tom Verne, novelty skater, complete a good company.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—An excellent company here is headed by Victoria Monks, who is accorded a great reception, especially for her new song, "Take me back to my home"; Peter Bermingham is another strong favourite, and his quaint comicalities are heartily enjoyed; Will Godwan and company are given a most enthusiastic recall for the powerful sketch, Repentance; Grahame and Harrington also take well with their clever playlet, A Daughter of Pleasure. A turn of special interest this week is the violin playing of Mr. Howard W. Galpin, the conductor here; Daly and O'Brien, as singers and dancers; Ridiculous Rocco in his acrobatic feats; and the Austral Trio of musical artists complete a first-rate programme.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The Hebrew comedians, Lowenwirth and Cohan, are starring here this week, and singing "My Little Eva," the song with which they made such a hit in the Royal Princess's pantomime at Christmas. As a setting for the song, Mr. Waldon has staged the "Saloon of the Lusitania" scene, with the rocking stage movements, and some good rough and tumble fun is introduced, the Scotch comedy part being played by J. T. Macmillan. A clever, singing, dancing, and acrobatic act is given by the Szarvas-Ferencz Troupe of Hungarian artists in their picturesque costumes; Captain Ellis and Son, two smart coloured artists, give a clever musical and comedy turn. Roars of laughter greet the antics of the Wood-bee Wonders in their acrobatic business; Selbo is a most dexterous juggler with clubs, &c., and his neatness and cleverness elicit hearty applause; a good comedy turn is given by Ted Cowan; Pat Carey scores in a couple of Irish ditties; and Dolly Denton is a smart comedienne. The Bioscope concludes.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Ernest Shand's witty patter keeps the house convulsed here; George Gilbey continues to meet with undiminished popularity; Alexandre and Hughes secure unbounded success; the Barton and Franklin Trio are well applauded; and the Brothers Dean, whistlers and dancers; Carlotta Levey, with her songs, "He was one of the boys," and "A poor relation"; Lilian Lowe, vocalist; the Twin Andersons, dancers; Schiavony's Troupe of Acrobats; and Mike Nonon, dancer; all contribute to a good programme.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—The variety talent here this week includes that popular favourite, J. H. Harris, in his latest songs; Signor Bandoni, Millie Stratton, and Hetty Hunter. The Bioscope pictures are up-to-date, and are heartily enjoyed.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE. — Messrs Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—Harriet Vernon pays an initial visit, and is very sucessful; Massona is a clever comedy juggler, and Les Marbas are a graceful and agile pair of acrobatic dancers; Sydney Bach, as the Welshwoman at the piano, was accorded a hearty welcome; Akbar is a smart gymnast, and Rich and Radford in cross talk and dance, are well received; as are also the Elgonas in a neat gymnastic act; Miss Bella Leaburn has some good chorus songs. The Palascope interests all.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company in the late Wilson Barrett's play, Lucky Durham, is occupying the boards here this week. Mr. S. Herbert Humber gives a masterful rendering of John Durham; Mr. Arthur Leigh is excellent as the Hon. Reginald Steighton; Mr. Vallerton is well played by Mr. Henry Nunn; Mr. W. F. Clitherow gives a clever character sketch of the Moneylender; Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood is a dignified Lord Mountfallon; Mr. John Hart makes a typical Jasper; Mr. J. H. Gerald is good as Arthur Walcombe; Miss Frances Wolviston displays great ability as Mrs. Durham; Miss Elsie Mayne is charming as Miss Premore; Helen Vallerton has a clever exponent in Miss Alice Esther Belmore; and Miss Rosabel Dodd is good as Lady Mountfallon. The play is exceptionally well mounted.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—An excellent all-round company is appearing here this week in that sparkling comic opera, The Dandy Fifth. Miss Pauline Hague's fine presence, charming manner, and excellent singing as Kate Lorimer make her a big favourite; Mr. Jack Crichton is very funny as Trooper Brown; Mr. George Beverley makes a rollicking Sergeant-Major Milligan; Mr. J. Edward Fraser is a manly Dick Darville; Mr. Will Smith is good as the Colonel; and Miss Maud Nichols is a dignified Mrs. Von Blitzen. Excellent glees are rendered by the Blue Moon Quartette. Miss Sadie Thompson contributes a clever dance. The opera is conducted by the composer, Mr. Clarence C. Corri.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. George Gilbert.—Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls are an exceptionally clever turn; Learto introduces his clever dog "Babs"; the Bros. Valdam are smart acrobats; Bert Woodward repeats his success of last week; the Four Maisanos present a refined musical act; Leicester Cooke is a daring horseman; and Doodles introduces new absurdities. The Water Pantomime, Fun on the Broads, is causing much merriment. Excellent pictures are shown on the Royal Bioscope.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.—Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Joe Boganny and his troupe of Royal Lunatic Bakers are topping the bill, and proving a huge draw; Little Della is a clever vocalist and dancer; the Eeduns present a picturesque musical scena; Carl Fredericks is a smart entertainer; Arthur Blount is a good comedian; Mlle. Cordelia appears in a clever kaleidoscopic dance; Little Zola is creating unlimited fun with his smart patter and funny songs; and excellent pictures are exhibited on the Britanniscope.

THE GEM.—Proprietors, The Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.—Excellent films, including the Pierrot's Jealousy and Spanish Views of Postcards, are being exhibited here to large audiences. The front of the building is now electrically illuminated each night, and is greatly admired.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS. — Proprietress, Mrs. S. Lawton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Barker.—The new turns here this week are Lavelle Bros., clever acrobats, and Bernard and Weston, funny comedians.

MINSTREL ARENA.—The Black Diamond Minstrels are drawing large audiences here this week.

GUERNSEY. — THEATRE ST. JULIANS.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris.—A return to vaudeville entertainments is made this week and business is good. A hit is made by Will Van Allen, tramp musician and raconteur; Harry Taft excites surprise by his wonderful whistling; Bert Williams, ventriloquist, is exceptionally good; Johnny Fuller is agile on the wire; Burns and Bentley are comedians and dancers; Arthur Boyne proves a funny comedian, and last but not least is Miss Marie Wilton, a clever comedienne, who meets with much success.

CANDIE GARDENS.—The Galeties are here under the direction of Mr. Wilson James; their performance is well up to their standard of excellence. The troupe includes Miss Ruby Wilson, Miss Gertrude Hart, Messrs. Allan Stainer, Percy Watson, A. Coleman, and Wilson James.

HALIFAX.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Armour and Kirby's company are at this house in The Best of Her Sex. Mr. A. J. Hicks shows ability in the part of the Rev. Stephen Maxwell; the parts of Phillip Farringdon, Leslie Verney, and Vera Delorme are ably taken by Mr. E. E. Ashby, Mr. H. J. Kirby, and Miss Dora Price; Miss Alice Buckland makes a good housemaid as Polly Perkins; and as Ruth Raeburn Miss May Grayce gives a faithful and tender rendering of the devoted wife.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—The chief attraction at the Palace this week is Alice Raymond's Troupe of Musicians in an artistic scena, Egypt. The turn is much appreciated, and is very smart. Gracie Hunt is a ladylike young comedienne, with a tuneful voice; Billy French gains unstinted applause for a very clever wooden shoe dance; Bains and Reed are two clever acrobats; Ryder Slone is very popular, and sings three good character songs with marked success; the Varleys are two tuneful lady vocalists; Harry Nelson is a quaint comedian; and some good pictures are shown this week.

HAMILTON.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. René Clayton.—Miss Paula Peters with her troupe of trained animals, comprising a pony, dogs, and baboons, gives an exceptionally clever and dainty display of animal training; Daisy Morrell renders her various numbers, interpoiated with good-humoured chaff, in a breezy, vivacious manner, which makes her exceedingly popular; the Cataneo Troupe are good in an amusing comedy acrobatic sketch; Tom Price, assisted by Miss Price, is deservedly popular in The Dude's Wooing; a capital ventriloquial turn is submitted by Professor Dunning; Kahn and Kahn are entertaining in their conjuring and second sight business; Elton and Elma, in their amusing knockabout triple bar act, Dave Summerhill, Scotch comedian, and the Bioscope conclude a very excellent programme.

HANLEY. — GRAND. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand. — Mr. August Van Biene is here with The Master Musician, and his marvellous powers draw forth great applause. Kitts and Rhoda Windrum present The Cuckoo skilfully; the Tokio Troupe of Japanese acrobats win great favour; Miss Mollie Doon is a charming comedienne; Alec Kendall is a smart patterer; Victor Travers is a tumbling comedian of originality; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux shows a beautiful film of the Grand Prix Motor Race.

KING'S.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Manager and Operator, Capt. F. Shaw.—A fine series of pictures is shown this week, including A Would-be Hero, A Sailor's Romance, The Rivals, Miss Pimpernel's Gown, and All's Well that Ends Well. Little Hatch, dwarf comedian, makes a tremendous hit with songs and patter.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. Rider Boy's company appeared in an adaptation of Fielding's "Tom Jones," entitled Sophia. Mr. Alan Mudie as Tom Jones, gave a manly performance, and was seen to advantage in the part; Mr. Rider Boys was the Squire Western, and made a bluff and genial country gentleman; Mr. Harold Neville was excellent as the hypocritical Blifil, and Mr. George H. Pye made an amusing Partridge; Miss Ethel Norbury was a very handsome Lady Bellaston, and in her scenes with Tom Jones, played well; Miss Betty Noel was a smart and vivacious Honour, and Miss Elsie Vron was a pretty Molly Seagrin. For the remainder of the week, Mr. H. F. Maltby's company in Fraud by Mr. Maltby occupied the theatre.

THE KURSAAL.—General-Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—Mr. Thorpe Bates (baritone) and Miss Mabel Crow (contralto) are the vocalists here this week; Miss Crow is a great favourite, and her fine voice is heard to great advantage; Mr. Astley Weaver, the well-known entertainer, is also in the bill.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—A delightful change is introduced into the picture show this week by Mr. Chas. Ferrier, who renders the descriptive solo to the pictures illustrating the song, "I'm tying the leaves so they come down." The films shown are, many of them, above the usual standard.

THE spell of fine weather is bringing large audiences to the promenade to witness the performances given by the Premier Pierrots, who have now become very popular. A complimentary benefit to Miss May Thorn on Wednesday was a great success.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr Charles E. Scutt.—Messrs. E. Taylor Platt and Trevor Lowe's company is here with a dual bill for the week. On Monday Mr. George Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell was excellently played. Mr. F. Cremlin contributed an admirably-conceived impersonation of Fergus Crampton; Miss Katherine Stuart as Mrs. Clandon; Miss Gwladys Morris as Gloria; Miss Clara Earle as Dolly; and Mr. Donald Calthrop as Phillip, all contributed clever character portrayals. Mr. Charles Daly's acting of William was a salient feature of the performance; Mr. Leslie Hamer played Valentine with fine spirit; Mr. Trevor Lowe was seen to signal advantage as Finch McComas, and Mr. George Howard acted as Bohnn with conspicuous success. On Thursday Arms and the Man was played.

HIPPODROME. — General-Manager, Mr. H. V. Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—An excellent programme is opened by the droll comedian, Eugene Brant; some thrilling scenes are depicted on the new Hipposcope; the Sisters Delmore (Edie and Gertie) are dainty vocalists and step-dancers; an attractive programme of part songs, duets, and choruses is introduced by a bright and pleasing selection of juvenile vocalists, under the direction of W. D. Mackensie and company—the fifteen voices, male and female, harmonise very sweetly; Percy Johnson is very original as a comic comedian; in an episode, Athletes at Play, J. Agustin and Annie Hartley are remarkably smart; Miss Lily Black sings some pleasing songs; Mac Stuart and Tressie Stuart are eccentric comedy entertainers, and decidedly quaint dancers.

PROMENADE PIER.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Under the direction of T. H. Friend, the English Light Opera Company are giving the principal scenes from Faust, Il Trovatore, and The Marriage of Figaro. The operatic artists include Mme. Marie Titiens, Miss Edyth Alvord, and Miss Elizabeth Burgess, Mr. Fred J. Hargrave, Mr. Tom Griffith, and Mr. Arthur Winckworth, conducted by Mr. T. Lawton. The operas are handsomely mounted, and the scenery is picturesque. Large audiences are attracted, and the reappearance of these excellent artists has proved very welcome. The lady artists sing their parts with considerable charm, while the actors submit delightful renderings of the songs allotted to them.

ST. LEONARDS PIER PAVILION. — Entertainment Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—The National Ladies' Choir, conducted by Mr. Cyril Getliff, is providing the entertainment here this week. The ladies sing pleasingly, and have an attractive stage presence, and prove a high-class variety company. Animated photographs and pictorial songs are included in their extensive répertoire. Mr. Cyril Getliffe contributes a well-executed violin solo, and Mr. Fred Hill has a good ventriloquial turn in addition to character songs.

HULL.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. H. Dunford.—Adams and Ward top the bill in a funny acrobatic act; Cecile and Francois establish themselves big favourites; the Delia Sisters obtain much applause; and the antics of George Don create much amusement. Other good turns include Abale and Hurst, Joe Humphries, and J. C. Manley.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Stidder and Dunbar are a good principal turn, along with Blanche and Diacoff, who make a welcome re-appearance in their sensational cycle act. The Two St. Johns appear in a talented musical act. Bros. Brooks and Sisters Brand are also big favourites.

THE CIRCUS.—Resident-Manager, Mr. B. Emerson.—Animated pictures are drawing crowded houses.

ILKESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—A Prince of Rogues is the attraction this week, played by Miss Dora and Mr. Sidney Dench's company. Miss Dench herself secures much admiration for her rendering of Winnie Harwood; Mr. Tom Ronald gives a good reading of Frank Farrell; Mr. Newton Buckland's Richard Harwood is a praiseworthy performance; Mr. Sidney Dorey is a smart representative of Detective Kenry; and Mr. John Blake is successful as John Leyton. Miss Alice May is a lively Polly Dibbs, and Mr. Bert Dench's quaint impersonation of Josh Buggins creates much merriment. Miss Violet Lytton displays ability as Rita Congrieve, an adventuress, and Geoffrey Flint, the evil genius, is played with much cleverness by Mr. Edward Avinall.

IPSWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Stead.—Miss Marie Lloyd is the star engagement for the present week, and the house is packed at every performance. The brilliant comedienne sparkles as successfully as ever. Other items in the bill are the Eight 'Varsity Girls in an amusing musical and dancing turn; Mark Henton who calls himself the mirthful one; Farley, Rennie, and Farley in a busy comedy act, entitled Fun at a Railway Station; and Ella Lane in some catchy songs; the Gilberts, clever performers on the light wire; Harry Thurston, a burlesque comedian, and Selby and Myers with some amusing patter.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—Miss Adria Hill and Mr. Robert Ayrton's company is here this week with A Gambler's Daughter. Mr. Robert Ayrton is well placed as Desmond O'Dare, while Mr. H. Elliston causes much amusement as Solomon Solomons. Mr. H. C. Robinson plays with force the part of Stephen Brand, and Mr. E. Barham is well placed as Dick. Mr. Basil Mitchell makes the most of the part of Jack Grant. Miss Adria Hill gives a most excellent portrayal of the dual rôle of Mildred Grant and Miriam Grant. The other parts are in very good hands, and the mounting of the drama is most perfect.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—This week the one-house-a-night system has been adopted here. Miss Clarice Mayne is delightful, her demure singing charms the house, and her imitations are particularly good; Ivy Kildare's songs are well pictured; Ivy Proudfoot is a neat comedienne; Jessie Wilton is chic and vivacious; George A. Richins is a good mimic; Morny Cash gains kudos as a comedian; and an excellent programme is brought to a close by the well-known ventriloquist Fred W. Millis.

SPRINGFIELD PAVILION.—The Motlez opened here on Tuesday night. Mabel May is a neat dancer; Nora Ottoway is the soprano vocalist; Harold Johnson is an amusing humorist; Dan Dugard is the banjoist; Vere Matthews appears as a baritone; and Sydney Leighton is the able director and accompanist.

LANCASTER. — HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—The Gothams, vocalists and comedians, head the bill this week, and are well received; the Weldas are not only smart jugglers, but clever sand dancers; and Dunn and Reano, comedy gymnasts, cause roars of laughter; the Sisters Draycott sing nicely; Alpho, in a ventriloquial sketch, has a great following; and Harry and Elsie Mayville supply a pleasing turn. The Hippograph Pictures are not the least entertaining item on the programme.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—A Royal Divorce, always a strong attraction here, is again filling this theatre during the present week. Mr. W. W. Kelly's company includes that accomplished actress Miss Edith Cole, whose fine work as the Empress wins enthusiastic appreciation; Mr. Keith Fraser makes a powerful and convincing Napoleon; Miss Winnie Tempest is

About six weeks ago I was suffering with

PIMPLES

ALL OVER MY FACE,

brought on probably by painting my face for my eccentric business. I was also suffering with SCURF IN THE HAIR. Being rather alarmed, I asked a friend's advice, and he recommended me to take "Clarke's Blood Mixture." I purchased a 2/9 bottle, and within a week I found marked improvement. The pimples a charming and sympathetic Marie Louise; the Stephanie of Miss Maude Lacy is a most satisfactory effort; and Mr. Stanley Harrison is to the fore with a telling personation of the Marquis de Beaumont.

EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—Chas. T. Aldrich, the famous American comedian, tops the bill here, and his quick-change work and burlesque juggling is vastly popular; John Lawson is also a big attraction, his répertoire of dramatic sketches being received with much enthusiasm; Tom Woottwell is again a first favourite with vocal comedy; Fred Poplar and Frank Couch are other effective comedians. Peggy Pride's contributions prove most acceptable, as also does a capital turn by that accomplished musician Orpheus. Other clever and successful artists are Kitty Wager, comedienne; Boden and Bell; and Mitchell and Cain.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—Walter Ellis and company are here, presenting a farcical sketch The Sleepwalker in capital style, and the entertainment is much enjoyed; Frank Gala and May Norris score a success with a capital sketch Down South; May de Rouse finds a ready reception of her neat song and dance; a good turn is provided by the Fordyces, vocalists and clog-dancers; and a cordial reception is also awarded to Agnes and Arthur Lynch, Watson and Naylor, Hicks and Hunter, and the Phantos Troupe.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Julian Rose heads the bill here with a clever and amusing Jewish character study, and the turn is enthusiastically received; an uproarious comedy sketch, Ferdie's Ma-in-Law is cleverly done by a smart company; Hal Forde is a clever comedian; the Cheers introduce their trained cats with great success; an expert and graceful acrobatic act by Mlle. Edwin wins lavish applause; and Ethel Walker, the Mayos, Dorothy Gould, Herbert Rule, and Edith St. Clare are each very successful in their respective lines.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—The Waldrons are old favourites at this popular hall, and their clever comedy turn is enthusiastically applauded; Day Conroy, a popular comedian, again gets a rousing reception. The great Motor Race at Dieppe shown on the Bioscope is an interesting interlude, and very successful turns are subscribed by Fraser and French, a couple of clever dancers, and Queenie May, a favourite vocalist.

LEICESTER.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton.—Mike S. Whallen, who stars this week, displays his well-known versatility and smartness in a manner that delights all sections of the audience; the Boller Bros. are remarkably daring and clever cyclists, whose show is one of the best seen here; Arthur Jefferson, Ltd., present, to the accompaniment of hearty laughter, an original and well-played farcical comedy sketch, entitled Home from the Honeymoon; Stelling and Revell, a really funny pair, score their usual success; Nelson's Newsboys, comedians, singers, and dancers, provide a thoroughly enjoyable and popular turn; Rich and Rich are mirth-provoking comedians, whose diverting turn is greatly appreciated; Burnetti, the original character musician, is very good, his performances on various instruments deserving special praise; Elsie Roby, comedienne-pianiste, is entertaining in her novel act, The Slavey; the Simms, in their vocal and dancing scena, From School to Stage, submit a highly meritorious turn; and the Bioscope is also a feature in a good all-round and enjoyable entertainment.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—At the head of this week's bill are the Pasquali Brothers, who display wonderful smartness as equilibrists, their head and hand balancing evoking loud applause; Leo Sterling and Addie Love are very good in their comedy act, A Domestic Musical Squabble; Nathalia and Diana, aerial gymnasts, give a clean and clever performance; and other artists who submit entertaining turns are the Sisters Velma, vocalists and dancers; Ethel Schaffer, American picture songstress; Daisy Hicks, dainty comedienne; and Harry Bland, comedian. Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is a special feature with The Trollhatton Waterfalls, A Quiet Inn, and Organ Grinder's Daughter.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. A. Hurley.—Good business continues to rule here, the chief films this week being A Red Man's Justice, Castle Ghosts, A Jealous Heroine, Storm and Sunshine, and Bewitched Boots. An old Leicester favourite is appearing this week in W. H. Downs, the popular coloured vocalist, whose well-rendered songs are greatly appreciated; the Bros. Bathell shine with a good acrobatic performance. The sixth singing competition is taking place this week, and Bernard McDermott, the previous winner, is rewarded with a week's salaried engagement.

LIVERPOOL.—ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company, under the direction of Mr. Teddy Myles, paid a visit to this theatre during the week with An Abandoned Woman. Miss Ruth Zillwood, in the character of Ninon Malvoisin, played with much dramatic strength, and at times held her audience; Mr. Teddy Miles as the humorous Paddy Boyle made his audience shout with laughter; Mr. W. Fraser-Brunner displayed a deal of earnestness as the villainous Phillipe Malvoisin; Mr. George Gormley did well with the part of Sir Marmaduke Seaton; Mr. P. Morton-Wright deserved commendation for his Robert Saunders; Mr. A. C. Holmes was successful as Captain Seaton; Mr. Will Glaze was a lively Sammy Sharpe; as Sally Sloper Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner proved diverting, and Miss Nellie Thorne-Hallam afforded satisfaction as Eleanor Deane.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—The attraction here throughout the week has been I Defy the World, presented by Mr. Julian Malvern's company. Mr. Lewis Gilbert was a capable Leon Darville, and gained the sympathies of his audience; Mr. Oswald Douglas showed much dramatic power as the rascally Count Beaulieu; Miss Gladys Hastings-Walton, a popular Liverpool actress, played sweetly and tactfuly the rôle of Pauline Delaporte; the lighter parts were admirably presented by Miss Maud Lillian (Marie Wozzle) and Mr. Charles M. Julian (Samuel Wozzle); Mr. Alfred Denning was well placed as General Delaporte; Miss Mary Ainslie did excellently with the character of Blanche Darville; Miss Florrie Green acquitted herself as Fanchette, and valuable assistance also came from Messrs. Charles Conway (Laroche) and Frank Wheatley (Andre).

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Harry Tate headed the bill here with his fishing sketch; Hawthorn and Burt proved immensely funny as Hebrew character comedians; Weiland, assisted by Mlle. Carlotta, presented his smart comedy juggling show; Carney and Armstrong gave a bright all-round turn as vocalists, dancers, and whistlers; the able little artist, Nipper Lupino Lane, had a cordial reception; Harry Leybourne, as the "nervous lady," aroused much laughter; Olgar and Elgar were a couple of clever and refined lady musicians; Helen Trix, at the piano, gave a pleasing turn as vocalist and whistler, and contributions likewise came from Gracie Grahame, comedienne, and Mr. and Mrs. Finden, sketch artists.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Top of the programme here this week has been Mr. Harold Nuttall's company in The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, which proved highly amusing; the smart McConnell trio gave one of their capital musical comedy sketches; the Bros. Durant provided a pleasing turn with the burlesque aeroplane; a clever comedy tumbling act came from Gladys and Alber; Mollie Woolstenhulme sang operatic numbers in pleasing fashion; Bessie Travis had a neat ventriloquial show; Alfred Lawson and Frances Namon introduced some smart comedy cycling and ball punching; and Ely Adair, a dainty comedienne, also appeared.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager Mr. Walter Hassan.—The favourites, Horace Mills and W. H. Rawlins have topped the bill here his week with their comedy, Mashing the Missus, in which they were supported by a good company; some extraordinary work as equilibrists was performed by Marcel and Boris; Gus Harris, the Hebrew character delineator, was as funny as ever; sensational trick cycling was shown by the Derrington family; a much-appreciated comedy duologue came from Geoffreys and Benson; as a juggler young Gicardo displayed a deal of skill; the Three Sisters Silcott pleased immensely with their singing and dancing; J. W. Gallagher had some most amusing songs and patter; and others in the list were Harry Friskey, comedy juggler, and Gena Manon, vocalist.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock company here continues to afford every satisfaction. This week the drama given was A Fisherman's Daughter, from the pen of J. Russell Bogue, and included in the cast were Messrs. Cecil Ravenswood (Sir Victor), Harry Tresham (Dermott O'Sullivan), Sydney Grant (Victor Chepsley), Miss Florence Palmer and Miss Lilian Radbourne. Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed the latest films.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—In addition to the Bioscope here, the following artists appeared during the week:—Nancy Renshaw, comedienne, and Manson and West, with the sketch, Telling the Tale.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The sensational diving of Kearney P. Speedy has proved a big draw here this week; Edward Clark and his winning widows presented a neat miniature racing musical comedy, entitled The Piker, being a study of the American tout; the popular Russell Wallett had a hearty reception; as musical comedians the Warsaw Bros were delightful; Robb Gilmore caused endless laughter with his queer corkscrew dancing; the Kurios raised a deal of merriment; the Lupino Bros. had a humorous musical trifle; Leonie Dixon, soubrette and expert dancer, afforded general satisfaction, and Russell Brandow, coloured dancing comedian, also appeared.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Crowded houses is the general rule at this latest addition to local places of amusement. Here this week Edmund Bosanquet gave some skilfully-played selections on the violin, and also introduced the wonderful instrument, entitled the "Bosanquephone"; as exponents of ju-jitsu, the Imperials showed to great advantage; Fields and Lewis kept their audience in a merry mood with their burlesque novelty, picture postcards; Les Rallis had an interesting novelty, The Artist and His Monkey; the Foy Bros. and company submitted an amusing sketch, Pat in China; Phil Herman brought some of his funny songs; Victor Courtney, as boots at the piano, caused a deal of laughter; Helm and Cozens had a screaming absurdity, The Doctor and the Patient; and others who appeared included the Sisters Belmont, dancers, and the Onlaw trio of wire performers.

LLANDUDNO.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—For six nights Miss Horniman's company appeared here in Candida and Widower's Houses by Bernard Shaw. On Monday Candida was received by a large audience. Mr. Henry Austin does full credit to the part of the Rev. James Mavor Morell, Miss Ada King being natural as Proserpine Garnett; Mr. Basil Dean gives a good impersonation of the Rev. Alexander Mill, and Mr. Edward Landor is effective as Mr. Burgess; Miss Mary Price Owen, in the title-rôle, is all that could be desired; and Mr. Iden Payne as Eugene Marchbanks gives a most expressive rendering of a very difficult part. Candida is preceded by the comedy Woman's Rights, and Widower's Houses by A Question of Property.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Mr. Harold V. Neilson and company present The Light that Failed at this theatre. Torpenhow is capitally portrayed by Mr. John Stuart; Miss Lilian Kevil Davies gives a good rendering of Bessie Broke; Miss Ella Thornton as Maisie is natural and captivating; whilst Mr. Harold V. Neilson gives a powerful representation of Dick Heldar.

PIER HEAD VARIETIES.—Local Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's Pierrots continue to find great favour with the residents and visitors. This week the bill is headed by Mr. J. H. Scotland, whose bass solos appeal to all; Mr. Alf. Maynall and Mr. Douglas MacLaren are comedians above the average; Miss Dorrie Courtney is clever on the banjo; Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe is at home, as usual; Mr. Austin Mahoney has a good voice; and Miss Elsie Steadman an old favourite, is rapturously received.

LOWESTOFT.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—Large holiday crowds continue to patronise this popular resort, the excellence of the programmes being thoroughly maintained, and especially with regard to the fine pictorial exhibition of the British Biograph Company, under the experienced management of Mr. Fred Gilbert. The variety bill is of a very entertaining character, and include the Bohemians, a smart musical couple; J. H. McCann, a clever comedian and expert roller-skate dancer; and Mlle. Juliette's educated sealions, who go through a really wonderful performance. Of pictorial series special mention should be made of the recent Motor Race at Dieppe, with its attendant thrilling episodes.

LUTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—After six weeks of successful vaudeville, a commencement of drama is made this week with Mr. Junius Booth and his company in Monte Cristo. As Edmund Dantes Mr. Booth is in perfection; Mr. Shinton as Danglers is also excellent; Miss Violet Carter as Baron Danglers' daughter, and Miss Radcliffe as the Fisher Girl, and afterwards the Countess, are very good in their respective parts. The scenery is very good, especially the Balcony scene and the Prison scene, with tableaux.

MAIDENHEAD.—PAVILION PLEASURE GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. G. Grude.—The entertainments by the Cadets this week are of the usual excellent character. There is, however, special interest in the sketch with which the programme ends. It is an original piece in three scenes, written and worked up by the members themselves. As a result, each one is fitted with a part to suit his style. Under the title of The Runaway Schoolgirl is depicted the consequences of a wayward girl's infatuation for the stage, and scope is given for character impersonation of the showman (Mr. Leo Fallowfield), clown (Mr. Will Harris), strong man (Mr. Jack Anders), and fat man (Mr. Alec Tyson). Each enters well into his part, and makes good use of every opportunity. In the title-rôle Miss Florrie Delamere acts naturally; Miss Twort brings sufficient dignity to bear on the part of the mother; and Mr. Colin Gent is a capable and persuasive lover.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hardy.—Sexton Blake has been staged here this week. Mr. Horace Hunter admirably sustains the title-rôle; Mr. Algernon Syms is a dignified Squire Lovell; Mr. Charles East displays the villainies of Randolph Lovell with realism; and Mr. John M. East is effective as Simon Faggas, a burglar. Mr. Brian Daly's Farmer Blackburn and Mr. William Felton's Roger Blackburn merit praise; Mr. Billy Ross is funny as Tinker; and Miss Lily Hammersley unaffected as the heroine, Marjorie Lovell. Miss East Robertson makes a pleasing Philadelphia Kate, and Miss Alma Vincent does well as Euphemia Pattacake.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Joe Elvin and company head the bill this week with The King of the Castle, and the little sketch has provoked roars of laughter. Baby Vi Davis has scored a success; Charlie Deane is popular; and other contributors to an interesting programme include Lena Leslie, comedienne; Chas. Sloman, comedian; Charles F. Best as "McBunker, the mountebank"; and the usual Bioscope pictures.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Evans.—Extensive alterations have been made here. The stage has been brought out in a half-circle some distance in front of the existing proscenium, thus giving ample room for single turns in front of the first cloth. There are also other innovations which the visiting public will appreciate. This week's programme includes the Stavordale Quintette of banjo and harp specialists, who give a very clever performance; Nellie Lunelle, soubrette and expert dancer; Rose and Wold, acrobatic wire walkers, in their comedy sketch The Sentry and the Maid; Woodhouse and Wells, comedians and dancers; the Davenports, illusionists; and Billy Hobbs, coon delineator and dancer. The dance which follows each evening concert is attracting good numbers.

MANCHESTER. — EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—George Auger, the giant actor, with a Liliputian company, is seen here this week in Jack, the Giant Killer; the Five Mowatts are conspicuous in a rapid club-manipulating performance; Farr and Farland, aristocratic comedians, are well received; the Three Merrills give a good turn on cycles; Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery in The Would-Be Actors are entertaining; and other smart turns are Frank Hartley, the boy juggler; Florence Jaymen, a very good coon comedienne; Carl Lynn, imitator of animal sounds; and the Sisters Morgan, accomplished duettists and dancers.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Andrew.—Madge Grey, the popular comedienne, is very entertaining in song and patter, and, as usual, has a good reception. Margit and Lener do some clever acrobatic tumbling in an eccentric fashion; Rosie's Birthday Party, as presented by Dottridge and Instone's juvenile company, introduces some delightful songs and dances; the Musical Morrellis give a smart entertainment; Ted Waite, comedian, sings three comic songs, and more are demanded; whilst others who do well are the Lovelaces, in illustrated songs; W. G. Wesley, character comedian; and Will Owen, comedian, with smart patter. Enjoyable pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—The Curzon Sisters, who provide a beautiful and sensational aerial act, are the principal attraction here this week; a fine reception being given also to Leslie Harris, a musical entertainer of extraordinary talent; Terry and Lambert, American entertainers, are smart and popular; Jack Pleasants, comedian, scores as usual in his own quaint style; and a hearty reception is accorded to Cestria, comedy juggler and waiter; Roma and Romani, classical musicians; Kioto, the Japanese equilibrist; Jenny Hartley, comedienne and dancer; George C. Doughty and company, in a sketch noticed elsewhere; and Carl Lynn, mimic, who, on the occasion of our visit, deputised successfully for J. W. Rickaby.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—A popular attraction, Moths, is presented here twice nightly by Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's company. A clever and effective interpretation is given. Mr. Cecil Wynne is powerful as Sergius Zouroff; Mr. Conrad Heywood makes a heroic Correze; Mr. Raynor's Lord Jura is a smart and popular piece of work; while as Vere Miss Dorothy West Symes acts with great sincerity and charm, and Miss Nellie Statham makes a success of the rôle of Lady Dolly. The piece is well staged.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. Fred Leighton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Edward Marris and company are to the front here this week in an amusing sketch, The Dandy Millionaire, which goes with a rare swing. Willette Whitaker and F. Wilbur Hill are delightful singers and instrumentalists, and are highly successful; James Fawn, the popular comedian, is as droll as ever; Barney Armstrong, with his quaint assistant, makes a big hit; Rosie Bartlett, a very pleasing comedienne, is well received; Hayes and Merritt are exceedingly smart comedy trampolin artists; the Fitzroys are clever society gymnasts; and Lena Wylie, vocalist, sings nicely. The Palace pictures are capital.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Lily Burnand, the well-known burlesque artist, tops the bill here this week, and meets with a big reception; the Blessings go through an exceedingly clever head and hand balancing performance; Maude Elliston and company are seen to advantage in a capital farce, Dobson's Day Off; Enid Errol and company, in a fantastic dancing episode, The Magic Vase, are very good; Helen Charles is a delightful society entertainer; and Ena Compton is a pleasing comedienne. Other enjoyable items are those of Leonard Gale, comedian; Alexandra Royal, burlesque artist; and Harry Ray and Lillie Calden, comedy duo. As usual, Ruffell's pictures are excellent.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A capital programme here includes Henri Cazman, in a pot-pourri entertainment, entitled Le Café Chantant; the Milstead Bell Trio, in a go-ahead comedietta, Three Sharps in A Flat; Petro and Don, sensational comedy gymnasts; Denaro Bros., clever juvenile acrobatic performers; Elliott and Warne, comedy tumblers and dancers; Henry and Tyler, remarkably good trick cyclists; Marcus Boyle, a breezy comedian; and Ada Whitton, male impersonator. H. A. Jordison's sketch is noticed elsewhere.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—An excellent programme here this week is headed by Francis Gerard and his comedy assistants, who go through a remarkably clever performance; Ida Barr, a favourite vocalist, scores; the Olympians give an interesting and neat exhibition of ju-jitsu; the Ramsay Trio cause roars of laughter in a capital knockabout act; and Frank Sley and marvellous nipper make a big hit. Other smart turns are those of French and Fremel and Fremel, eccentrics; the Sisters Terry, duettists; Handel and Lee, in delightful musical act; and Moon and Morris, comedians and dancers. On the occasion of our visit Harry Goodburn, comedian, did not appear, a capital extra turn being provided. Romeo and Juliet on the Bioscope is a fine film.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Phillips.—Excellent turns are offered here this week by a first-rate company, including Edith Heron-Brown, entertainer; Winifred O'Connor, vocalist; C. D. Rukie, Lancashire comedian; Harold Browne, baritone; Donal McDougal, Scotch comedian; and J. A. Tunbridge at the piano. All the turns are deservedly well received.

MEXBOROUGH.—NEW PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—The programme here this week is especially good, and includes, amongst other pictures, The Devoted Governess, French Recruit, A Slave's Hate, Two Unlucky Thieves, and Institute of Beauty.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson. — The romantic play Robin Hood is being presented here this week by Mr. Lewis Waller's company. The cast is a talented one, and the piece is nicely staged. As Lady Marion de Vaux Miss Lillian Stennis meets with gratifying success, the audiences being quite carried away by her effective acting. As Robin Hood Mr. Ethelbert Edwards is responsible for a remarkably good interpretation; Mr. H. E. Ballably plays the part of Prince John with dramatic power and distinction; and as King Richard Mr. J. N. Briant gives great satisfaction. Mr. C. Bruce Winston gives an amusing impersonation of the rôle of Friar Tuck; and that of Adela is in the capable hands of Miss Laurie Flockton. Mr. Clive Ross is good as John Little; and other rôles are in the hands of capable artists.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—Clark and Hamilton deservedly occupy the top of the bill here this week, their "Song of Nations" and Japanese scena being highly appreciated. Ferguson and Mack, in an absurdity, The Dimple Sisters, greatly amuse the audiences; and some excellent singing and dancing is provided by the Society Quartette. The Carina Sisters prove themselves expert musicians; and Harry Catton, comedian, is very amusing. Hampton and Bauman are good; and Rose Cambray, burlesque artist, does well.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—The Last Command, the scene of which is laid in South Africa, is the title of a dramatic sketch presented here this week by Fred Maxwell and Miss Lois Du Cane, assisted by a strong company. The play is cleverly enacted, and is greatly appreciated. Lennie and Hast are good in a poetic fantasy, The Sea Nymph; and some excellent singing is done by W. G. Webber.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Mr. Charles Constant's company has been appearing in the ever-popular Florodora, and the production is a most creditable one. Mr. Gus Danby as Tweedlepunch, the genial fraud, causes endless amusement, and he is ably supported by Mr. Jack Parker as Gilfain, Messrs. Vernon Booth, Morrice Holmes, and Evilyn Davis. Miss Lillie Blythe makes a capital Lady Holyrood, doing all her business in the neatest manner. Miss Daisy Lake is the Dolores, and her fine voice is heard to great advantage. The chorus is good, and Mr. H. Hartman is the capable musical director. Special dances are provided by Daisy Wickenden and Florrie Weber.

WINTER GARDENS.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—Holiday-makers have been regaled with a smart bill during the week, in which Maud Rochez's monkey music hall has taken a foremost place. The monkeys are certainly well trained, and especially funny are those comprising the orchestra in the mimic music hall. Cullen and Carthy, with little Cluley, are as funny as ever, and the patter is first class; great fun has been caused by Conway and Leland, the clever monopedes, who have some original business; Thomas and Taylor have a neat quick-change act entitled Fun on the Midland, in which railway passengers are happily burlesqued; Nellie Walton, singing mill girl, has a fine voice, which she uses to great advantage; and Jack Rae, comedy gymnast, Mike Cray, "catch-as-catch-can" juggler, St. Ruth and Conyers, harmonising duettists, and Tom Moore, comedian, are also in the programme.

CENTRAL PIER.—Manager, Mr. Emilius Hill.—The casting and trampoline act of the Osnatos has topped the bill here very effectively, and it is certainly a very clever performance, the work on the trampoline being particularly good. Tudor's educated ponies are very smart, and obey the directions of their trainer with remarkable precision; Effie White's kaleidoscopic dance, "The Spirit of the Cave," is distinctly charming and quite a triumph in its way; the well-known whistler Mack Olive (who is assisted by Daisy Baldry) delights the audience with his scena "The Candy Store," as performed by him in The Belle of New York. Harry Vardon, ventriloquist, the Selwyns, vocalists and dancers, and Bert H. Delmar, with his Comets, are features in the entertainment. Some fine high-diving and ornamental swimming is done from the pier head by G. W. Houghton, the human torpedo.

ALHAMBRA PALACE.—Manager, Alderman John Gardner.—Here Miss Rose Atherton and company are seen to advantage in an amusing episode, Murphy's Affinity, the characters being sustained by Misses Audrey Canning and Cissie Kingsley, Messrs. E. Mullins, F. H. Parkinson, and Hugo Flowden. Langslow in his shooting act on the flexible wire is a taking turn; and Dan Robans, vocalist of repute, the Moxons, comedy acrobats, Zulyka, with her animals, Style and Wynch, comedy duo, and Dexter, illusionist, complete an acceptable bill.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. John Bastow.—The Dandies have greatly pleased their audiences during the week with very diversified programmes. The new pier-head has been opened, and has added greatly to the pleasure and comfort of patrons.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—Another first-rate programme is provided, and full houses are the rule. Mr. Henry Wright, the veteran extempore vocalist, is meeting with much enthusiasm, and Miss Joan Deering scores a success in her songs, in which she accompanies herself on the violin. Miss Flo Penley and Mr. G. English play a bright and rollicking sketch in good style, and Miss Dorothy Watson proves herself a clever and refined artist in her songs at the piano. Belford and Mars also give a humorous sketch, and Herr A. Spiegler is received with great applause, his violin solos being always masterly. The animated pictures are beyond reproach, being evidently selected with the greatest care and judgment.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. G. W. Sutton.—The star during the week is Mr. Malcolm Scott, who is received with great delight, and is always a favourite in New Brighton. Miss Mona Vivian, a charming pierrette, scores heavily; Miss L. Gillespie sings excellently; and Miss Margery More pleases the audience with her undoubted ability. Mr. Tubby Edlin is a good comedian, whilst Mr. Paddy Duprez also causes laughter. An admirable accompanist is found in Mr. Forshaw Kershaw.

PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Frank Nall.—Skating on Richardson's American roller skates is still going strong, the attendance being very satisfactory.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. F. W. Bolam.—Mr. Harry Tilbury and company present a new play here this week, under the title of A Dishonoured Wife, of which he is the author. It is a really dramatic play, well calculated to win the approval of any audience. As the hero Mr. Victor Rae acts in a quiet, forceful way that is very effective, and Miss Belle Tilbury plays the devoted wife with true sympathy; whilst the comedy business is in the capable hands of Mr. Tilbury himself.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—One of the best dramas dealing with Russian life is Mr. Fred Jarman's Under the Czar, which is presented here this week by Mr. Wilson Howard and company. Chief amongst Mr. Howard's supporters is Miss Carlotta Anson, who plays with true, artistic ability the character of Sonia Gregrovitch; as an English officer Mr. Gerald Smythe is equally successful; and other parts are all in capable hands. On Thursday and Friday At the Foot of the Altar were presented.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells.—The place of honour on a splendid programme is this week occupied by Neil Kenyon, who received a very gratifying reception on Monday evening. He appeared in his latest Scotch character study "The Poetie o' Dunrobin," in which his quaint humour has full scope; La Belle Titcomb and her trained Arabian horse provides another very entertaining turn. A good deal of amusement is caused by Tom Foy and company, in their little absurdity The Yorkshire Lad in London, and the laughter is further maintained by Mr. Ernie Mayne, a comedian of great originality; Gwennie Hasto was well received in a refined singing and dancing act; whilst Irene Rose, a young vocalist, shows great promise. A most clever and amusing cross-talking and dancing act is that of Sanford and Lyons, and a Russian dancing turn is also contributed by Wania; whilst Mlle. Eldee does some fine illuminated posing, the Bioscope completing.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—John Humphries, a popular pantomime favourite in Newcastle, heads the bill here this week, and causes much amusement in a farcical sketch Ancient Britons, in which he is capably supported; Walter Emerson, a comedian of marked ability, gives a lively and pleasing turn; and other artists appearing are Frank Elliston and company in My Lady Betty, George Antill, the Ellimans, Hayes and Watson, the Three Cunards, Frank Cass, Fyne and Hurley, and Ruby Bijou.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The Lizette Troupe, lady acrobats, singers, and dancers, are at the top of the bill here this week, and present a very enjoyable act; the Three Panamas, in their pot-pourri turn, are received with much favour; and the Sisters Ford, duettists, have many admirers. Mr. James Gradey, eccentric comedian, has made a great hit; Miss Molly Cingarde, vocalist, meets with a hearty reception; the Newbolds, speciality artists, have created a favourable impression; and the Mouldoscope exhibits some excellent pictures.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Sid Doody and Edie Wright, Australian comiques, are entertaining and humorous; and the same may be said of the Damerell and Rutland company in a farce entitled House Full. Richardson Taylor, the whistling ventriloquist, is good; Edie Verno, comedienne, is successful; and the other turns are Jack Neil, Scotch comedian; the Falcons, comedy equilibrists; Fred Keeton, comedian; and Frank Maura, juggler; together with the Hippo.-Bio.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Crowded houses have nightly cheered to the echo the songs and artistic methods of Harry Lauder, and his visit will long be remembered. The Provcanies are an excellent troupe of lady cyclists whose daring deeds a-wheel bring forth the highest expessions of admiration. The songs of Ian Colquhoun are heartily appreciated; while a comedy sketch by Wm. Lee and Helen Bentley elicits uproarious laughter. Ouida Macdermott is deservedly applauded for her vocal contribution entitled "Redwing"; and the Four Figaros contribute a charming instrumental and dancing item. Bessie Butt, soubrette; Will Musgrave, comedian; and Bert Weston, comedian, add to the pleasure of the audience; and the usual pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

OLDHAM.—ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kilrow.—Tschernoff's animals head the bill, and they give a marvellous performance. Le Silvas, in an equilibristic ladder act, are very daring and sensational; Dandy George and Rosie, in a very pretty and neat turn, are excellent; Culpitt, assisted by Miss Adele, is very droll in his tricks and talk; Sam Redfern is as funny as ever in his act; Sophia Bond is a pleasing vocalist; the Three Comedy Chanters are very amusing; and Eric Johns sings well. The Dottoscope concludes with a good picture.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Douglas F. Bostock.—The top of the bill this week is occupied by Horace Wheatley, Irish comedian, who is as entertaining as on previous visits; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins, exceptionally clever in their line, provide a really amusing vocal sketch; Athalan does a clever equilibristic turn; the Betsons display expertness and skill in a comedy cycling sketch; Bert Danson, American eccentric comedian, has some funny patter; Harwood's Juveniles obtain much appreciation in their vocal scena A Children's Christmas Eve; Madge Allen is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; and not the least entertaining turn is provided by the Fimans, in their comedy scena The Fire Station. Some fine pictures by the Hippodrome Bioscope complete.

PENTRE.—TIVOLI PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—Topping the bill this week is Richard Karsy's Myriophone, a beautifully toned instrument, whose admirable playing delights the audience; E. H. Bostock's group of educated baboons, introduced by Capt. Grahame, are exceedingly clever; the Snow Family, in their skating exhibition, are highly interesting. In an unique cycling turn the George French Troupe deserve warm praise; the Cosman couple, in smart patter and song, are loudly applauded; Smith and Johnson, drawing-room entertainers, Little Tim, quaint comedian, Rowland Hill, comedian, and the Tivoloscope conclude an excellent bill.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Edmund Tearle and company entered on Monday on the last week of the stock season, the attraction being A Woman's Revenge. Mr. Tearle undertakes the exacting part of Frank Drummond, a barrister, and scores a pronounced success; the rôle of the heroine, Mary Lonsdale, is adequately filled by Miss Kate Clinton; Miss Mary Campbell impersonates the adventuress, Mabel Wentworth, and though the part is a somewhat distasteful one, the acting was perfect. Miss Leah Fabri is pathetic as Little Mary; and other hard-working members of the company are Messrs. F. Lomax, B. Turner, and J. C. Hilton. Later in the week Macbeth was staged to a good house.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Chung Ling Soo twice nightly mystifies large audiences, who follow his conjuring tricks with rapt attention. The Four Juggling Geraldos perform some remarkable feats, one member of the quartet proving himself a comedian of no mean ability. Miss Adah Payne has a voice of excellent range and power, and her efforts meet with well-deserved applause; and Dion Wade excellently impersonates well-known artists. Bert Terrell scores with some songs rendered in high falsetto; Kerr and Koe present an amusing farce entitled Yards and Houses; and Mabel La Blanche is an entertaining comedienne. Vernon's Bioscope has this week one of the most amusing and attractive films yet submitted; it is entitled The Chauffeur's Dream.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Mahatma mystifies audiences here, and causes some amusement in her exhibitions of second sight and thought-reading. Slippere, blind entertainer, assisted by Miss Ramsay, sings well and shows skill on the piano and 'cello; Sylvene, assisted by Mlle. Florence, performs skilful feats as an equilibrist; Tom Joy tickles the audience immensely with funny songs and actions; and a couple whose fun evokes much merriment are the Brothers Tarrant. Miss Amy Bellwood is a comedienne who wins approbation; E. W. Selman creates a favourable impression with his humorous songs; Miss Ivy Gallard wins loud applause for her smartly-executed dances; and pictures by the Alexandra Bioscope are being shown and appreciated.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—Mr. G. M. Copping's company is here this week with Love Rules the World, by T. G. Bailey. Harold Kingston is ably delineated by Mr. Richard Vane; Stephen Blight is well portrayed by Mr. Stephen Langton; Paul Carruthers is capably assumed by Mr. Alex. Wilson Wynne; Mr. Matt Russell scores as Billy Binks; Miss Constance Medwyn meets with conspicuous success as Flo Morton; and Miss Gertrude Sterroll cleverly characterises Maud Carruthers.

PORTH.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Topping a good bill here this week we have Bennett and Martell, whose singing, dancing, and acrobating are accorded a hearty reception; the Emsons (Rita and Kitty), refined duettists and expert dancers, score a success; Fritz Kronan delights the audience with his excellent whistling; the Three Rubies acquit themselves creditably as acrobats, contortionists, and trapeze artists; Mlle. Aladina gives an admirable performence with her marvellously trained cockatoos; the Weinars deserve high compliment for their admirable turn. Charles Weinar proves himself to be an efficient instrumentalist; the Tintas are really good in their unrivalled double acrobatic act; De Henau is undoubtedly a clever painter, the drawings executed by him being simply marvellous; the Palascope has an admirable series of pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Leslie Faber and his able company is here with a double bill, and opened on Monday to an appreciative and full house with The Liars. Mr. Faber's impersonation of Colonel Sir Christopher Deering was of high quality, his light touch and kindly persuasive sincerity of purpose being quite convincing; Miss Winifred Arthur Jones was delightful as the rather irresponsible Lady Jessica Nepean; Mr. Charles Combe as Edward Falkner played with marked success; the uncouth and inconsiderate Gilbert Nepean found an excellent representative in Mr. Ernest Ruston; Messrs. Richard Neville, F. G. Thurstans, Bellenden Clarke, and Frank Latham sustained their several parts of Freddie Tatton, Archibald Coke, George Nepean, and the Waiter at the Star and Garter in first rate style. Miss Hilda Moore looked and acted sweetly as Beatrice Ebernoe; Lady Rosamund Tatton played with captivating vivacity by Miss Jessica Thorne; and Dolly Coke and Ferris were well taken by Miss Muriel Pope and Miss Beatrice Ainley respectively. For Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings The Manœuvres of Jane was billed..

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—The sensational drama, The Face at the Winaow, is being played here this week by Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company. Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale gives an effective and realistic study of the Chevalier Lucio Delgado, alias The Wolf; Mr. Scott Leighton as Paul Gouffet, a detective, acts with cleverness and success; Mr. Alfred Warne plays creditably the murdered Henry de Brisson; Mr. Arthur Beverley is admirable as Lucian Cortier; Mr. Henry Stewart is highly amusing as Peter Pottleberry; Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson is an attractive Marie de Brisson, acting with much intensity; Miss Louie Lonora is smart and brisk as Babette; and Miss Elaine Grant is praiseworthy as La Pinan, Queen of the Rogues' Retreat.

KING'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. B. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Gibbon.—Uncle Tom's Cabin is staged here this week, Mr. Charles Harrington's combination being responsible for a welcome return visit. Mr. St. Clair is played by Mr. Dudley Wynton in most satisfactory manner; Miss Kitty Bell makes a winsome and very capable Eva; Uncle Tom is admirably personated by Mr. J. Carr; Mr. E. A. Massingham submits a clever portrayal of Phineas Fletcher; Mr. Cecil Austin-Olgar does good work as George Harris; Mr. T. Bowron is able and vigorous as Legree; and Mr. Walter Langford's embodiment of the Lawyer Marks is capital. Miss Hero Hathaway well depicts Eliza Harris; Miss Hetty Johnson as Cassy is very good; Mrs. Carr portrays Aunt Chloe in effective style; Miss Annie Watson is first-class as Topsey; and Miss Jenny Malcolm as Aunt Ophelia deserves commendation.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The Boissets, in their pantomimical absurdity, The Bricklayers, "a new light on the Labour question," gain plenty of applause for their humorous knockabout business; Bros. Idento, comic jugglers, provoke much laughter; Kitty Rayburn, a smart comedienne, makes a decided hit; Walter Stanley, eccentric comedian and dancer, scores in his amusing song and dance; Florence and Lillian give a charming and refined musical act of much ability and versatility, and receive recalls; Nellie Chandos, a vivacious comedienne and danseuse, has a gratifying reception; King and Benson give an excellent and much appreciated turn; and Payne's Bioscope, with new and instructive films, complete the Bill.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Mr. Carl Hertz, the renowned illusionist, assisted by Miss Emmeline D'Alton, is giving some of his best known and mysterious tricks to the delight of the audience; the Cambrian Trio of vocalists receive a cordial greeting for their excellent efforts to please; A-Ba-Be's Picture Postcard Album deserves high praise for a capital series of artistic and well presented pictures; Mr. Will Driscoll excells as a comedian and dancer; Percival, in his one-man musical comedy, All Through the Christening, gives a most diverting act; the Eight Lancashire Lads are an attractive item, and their clog dancing is greatly admired; Christmas Eve, a midnight episode, is played with much success by Irve Hayman and Little Miss Montague; Miss José Collins, a dashing comedienne, pleases all for her two sparkling numbers. The Hippodrome pictures conclude a most enjoyable programme.

PRESTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company is presenting for the first time in Preston The Outcast of the Family. Mr. W. C. Clarke is good as Sir Henry Thorne; Mr. F. C. Leighton gives a powerful portrayal of his son, Harry Thorne; Mr. C. H. Coleman enacts the rôle of the villain, Richard Martin, in a very natural manner; Mr. H. Bentome is strong in his part of Stephen Barry; Mr. Bert Atherton is responsible for the comedy parts, and as Joe Bushell is very droll; Mr. E. W. Cudd makes a capital Abram Wasper; Mr. M. Platting as Uncle Sam, and Mr. Ed. Jeffs as Seth Sleeke are both equally good in their respective parts; and Messrs. Murray Maude, Harold Holmes, and Heaton Lodge all prove themselves capable in the parts allotted to them. Miss Vera Neville is a smart and vivacious Nancy Bray; Miss Margaretta Tueski is excellent as the scheming Grace Redburn; Little Dorothy is good as Little Rob; and as Ruth Miss Gertrude Thorella has a heavy part to play, from which she emerges triumphantly. The drama is well staged.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—The attractions here this week are many. Topping the bill is Owen McGiveney in a new quick-change dramatic sketch, adapted from "Oliver Twist," and the characters enacted are Fagan, Bill Sykes, the "Artful Dodger," Monks, and Nancy. Mr. Owen McGiveney deserves the highest praise, and being a Prestonian, the audience were not slow in showing their appreciation of his abilities. Lena Page is a burlesque actress with a good voice; Edna Francis is a characteristic vocalist and dancer; Chas. Coburn appears to have solved the problem of perpetual youth; he is as sprightly as ever, and receives an ovation; Dennis J. McCarthy is an actor vocalist who gives a good turn; the Days, second-sight seers, give a clever seance of mental telegraphy, and are well received; Jenny Maningo gives a clever display of juggling with Shrapnel shells and cannon balls, and is well received; Carr and Rose (Fred and Ada) have a capital original operetta, entitled A Winning Double. A Chauffeur's Nightmare on the Bioscope concludes a capital show.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—Henry Arthur Jones's famous drama The Silver King, which has been before the public for so many years and yet retains its hold upon their affections, has been the attraction at the Royal Victoria Theatre and Pavilion on each evening of the past week, and the production has been attended by large and enthusiastic audiences. The title-rôle is finely assumed by Mr. Fred D. Davis; while Miss Edyth Goodall plays Nellie Denver in almost perfect manner; Daniel Jaikes, the old butler, is in the admirable hands of Mr. Edward J. George, and the part of Samuel Baxter, the detective, is made the most of by Mr. E. Stidwell. The villainous Captain Herbert Skinner of Mr. Stanton Sharpe is a really fine piece of work, and his actions call forth the opprobium of the audience—a good compliment, of course, to the artist. The parts of Henry Corkett, Elijah Coombe, and Cripps—the Captain's assistants in nefarious designs—are respectively undertaken by Messrs. George Belmore, Arthur Wright, and Fred May; and the acting of Miss Kathleen Maud as Olive Skinner is well worth complimentary reference. The remaining ladies and gentlemen in a heavy cast perform their allotted tasks in highly creditable manner. The play is well mounted and staged, and is in all respects a thoroughly good show. The last performance in Ramsgate will be given this (Saturday) evening at 7.45.

ROYAL PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Melvin.—On the first three evenings of the past week Mr. Herbert Greville's company occupied the boards at the Royal Palace Theatre with a production of Merely Mary Ann, which is from the pen of the well-known Jewish writer Mr. Israel Zangwill. The part of Lancelot, who composes classical music which no one will publish, was ably assumed by Mr. Martyn Roland; and the character of Peter—who, in his spare time, composes music understood by the man in the street, which publishers will buy—was well represented by Mr. Stanley Logan; Miss Jessica Solomon carried off the honours of the piece as Mary Ann Merely, the ingenuous country maid, who, first introduced to one's notice as the drudge of a London boarding-house, subsequently becomes the possessor of a large fortune left by her mother. Mrs. Leadbatter, a garrulous widow, and landlady at the lodging-house referred to, was capably portrayed by Miss Violet Greville; and Miss Florence Radcliffe did well as Rosie, her very much-affected daughter. The various other parts were one and all entrusted to excellent artists, and individual reference to them, therefore, becomes hardly necessary. The scenery of the play was capital, and the whole show went well. It attracted fairly good audiences. The bill for the last three nights consists of the play A Warning to Women, by Mr. C. Watson Mill's company.

MARINA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. F. C. Dew and L. Valeriani; General-Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—Large audiences continue to testify to their appreciation of the entertainments put on by the Marina management. Sunday evening's exhibition of animated pictures of sacred subjects was admirable, and the week-night shows have been eminently successful. The theatre has been thoroughly cleaned, re-decorated, and lighted throughout with electricity.

READING.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—D'Arc's Marionettes are very cleverly manipulated; the Mannikins represent well-known music-hall stars, whose voices and mannerisms are exceedingly well mimicked. Ernest Montefiore and company elicit the sympathies of the audience in a touching dramatic episode of the South African War, entitled The Little Colonel; Harry Barnes and company give a capital exposition of the terpsichorean art in The School of Dancing. Some exquisite dresses are displayed in this production. The Garricks appear successfully in a pot-pourri of songs and dances; Edmund Caselli is a finished player on the banjo; W. P. Sheen, "the merry widow who talks," has an inexhaustible fund of witty patter; Percy Maye is a good impersonator of lady characters; Du Bois and Fuller, the humorous eccentric dudes, are entertaining; and some amusing scenes are depicted on the Palace Bioscope.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—R. A. Speedwell tops the bill here with a novel and cleverly-executed series of picture paintings; Blanche and Powell give, in their drawing-room act, an entertaining and enjoyable turn; and Fred Smarte sings with considerable success. The Godfreys, in The Slavey and the Coon; Pete and Juno, comedians and dancers; Harry Keeble, ventriloquist; Gladys Wells, vocalist; and the Empire Bioscope complete the programme.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—The popular musical comedy My Sweetheart commenced a welcome return visit with Sidney Spenser's company on Monday, and that gentleman in the rôle of Joe Shotwell; Tony Faust is in the capable hands of Mr. Edward Rawlinson; Miss Lizzie Hall makes a charming Tina; and Mrs. Fleeter is well played by Miss Ada Chapman. The villain is capably sustained by Mr. Harry T. Butler. Mr. Wilton Hardinge makes a funny "Dash-it-all"; Mr. F. W. Freeman (Dr. Oliver), Mr. James Porter (Farmer Hatzell), Miss Gipsey Alexander (Mrs. Hatzell), Miss Olive Downes (Peckaboo), Miss Lily Smith (Christie), and Miss Violet Etherington (Emmeline) also do well in their various characters.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Astley's American Circus is a very funny act, much appreciated; much charming music is provided by the Five Saxonias; Wee McGregor, Scotch comedienne, has many admirers; A Lesson in Love is a smart, up-to-date quick-change speciality by Lytton and Bland; Edmund Kershaw, boy soprano, Jack Holland, character comedian, Lillie Lassah, comedienne and dancer, the Three Tivoli Girls, vocalists and dancers, and Dolly Dodds, serio and ballad, are also very good entertainers.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Wallace Whitney, character comedian, is highly successful with his Tubby the Footballer; La Marseillaise, a scene in a garret in a poor part of Paris, by Walter Raynham, Marie Santley, Edgar C. White, and Kate Gurney, is a cleverly-acted sketch. Mlle. Naveeda, a clever illusionist, Dunningato, with his smart sleight of hand, Adkin, ventriloquist, Jack Foley, comedian, Victor and Louis, in The Golfer and the Caddie, Louie Hurman, in her own songs, the Sicilians, and Beattie Foster, comedienne, also contribute to a capital programme.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Lester King.—Good houses assemble twice nightly to enjoy the excellent animated pictures, which this week include Dick, the Kisser, The Bird of Freedom, the Dieppe Motor Race, Love in a Kneading Trough, The Resurrection of Ramesis, Oh, that umbrella! and the pictures illustrating the song "Will you go-go?"

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and company are this week presenting The King's Rival, Julius Cæsar, The Lady of Lyons, Belphegor, and Richard III. On Monday The King's Rival was given, with Mr. Wilkie as Don Cæsar De Bazan, a character which he thoroughly well portrayed; Mr. Alexander Marsh as Philip II. acted with much refinement and grace as King of Spain; Don José was in the able hands of Mr. Frank Royde, who received due appreciation for his efforts; Miss Maud Gill as Pedro was beyond reproach; and Miss Carrie Baillie displayed admirable earnestness in her acting.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Garside; Manager, Mr. Fred P. Morgan.—Mr. T. Edward Ward's company, in The Love of the Princess, is here, with Mr. Wilson Coleman as Conrad, a character in which he is most successful. Miss Ward as Princess Idalia is pleasing; and Miss Nellie Garside, the daughter of the proprietor of the Theatre Royal, is a great favourite as Lady Irene. Mr. E. H. Dobell was excellent as Josef; and Mr. Graham Winsford as the loyal lover closely approached perfection.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. Jas. Goodricke. — Dear Old Charlie opened for a week here, with Mr. George Lestocq in the title-rôle. He gave a fine performance in the many difficult situations in which he is placed. Miss Margaret Chard as Agnes was admirable; and Miss Lenora Braham as the mother was admirably suited; Mr. Douglas Cox and Mr. R. S. Trelawney as Peploe and Dumphlie were responsible for much humour.

THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. H. Holland.—Mlle. Levante's orchestra is giving three programmes daily. This week Mr. Fred Taylor, a tenor singer, is here, and possesses a delightful voice; Ernie Myers, comedian, is on a return visit, and evinces originality; the Cromwells give a good juggling display; and the Richards Trio show much ability as acrobats. Lily Lonsdale, vocalist, sings in a refined way; Sydney Lee gives a good exhibition in his various palming tricks; and the programme also includes David Poole, ventriloquist; Gravetta and Parr, in pot-pourri act; Wal Owen, comedian; and Mlle. Zelda, with organ chimes. Prof. Jones and his troupe of lady swimmers, Mons. Le Clair's Canine Picture Gallery, and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

OLYMPIA.—Proprietors, Scarborough Corporation.—The New Century Pictures are here for the season with an excellent supply of up-to-date films, which are well shown.

OLD TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, Scarborough Corporation.—The London Animated Picture Co. give frequent change of programme daily with fine films.

SEACOMBE.—IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. James Kiernan; Lessees, The Excelsior Animated Picture Co.; Manager, Mr. George Barry.—A number of excellent animated pictures are exhibited here this week. A capital variety company includes Belle Dainton, comedienne and dancer; Milligan's Coloured Quartette; the Riscos, eccentric cyclists; and Naughton and Gold, a clever pair of cross-talk and patter duettists, and simultaneous dancers.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. H. D. Lyle.—The Mockery of Marriage is the attraction here this week, the company being Mr. W. Graham Arthur's. As Dick Kenyon in the prologue and Sir Montague Jephson in the drama Mr. Arthur stands out prominently. A powerful Jack Stanley is supplied by Mr. Austin Mortimer; Seth Pearse is well drawn by Mr. Harold Kinton; and Toby is humorously sketched by Mr. Frank Masters. As Alva Kenyon Miss Mabel Liston gives an artistic portrayal; Rose is pleasingly drawn by Miss Chris Middleton; and Mary Ann is well done by Miss Kate R. Hughes.

SHEERNESS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors. Sheerness Hippodrome Co.—The Brixton Burglary was played here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday by Mr. C. A. Hill's company. Mr. C. A. Hill was a talented exponent of Septimus Pontifex; Mr. Edward Beecher did well as Fraser Green; Mr. Randolph Reade as Richard Diggle is well suited; and Messrs. H. Garthorne, Mr. Chas. Alexander, and Mr. Lawrence Winning maintain their respective characters with success. Miss Amy Singleton impersonates Alicia Green with force and skill; Miss Ada Gordon as Petunia is satisfactorily suited; and the Misses Ivy Williams and Eileen Kerin complete the cast. On Thursday Our Boys was presented. Each play was preceded by the duologue By Mutual Consent.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Local Representative, Mr. Cyril Parks.—This week's pictures include the following:—Saved by St. Bernard Dogs, A Victim of Science, The Angel of the Village, Revenge, The Lady Barrister, and Wanted a Match.

SHEFFIELD. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company, in the realistic drama, The Price of Sin, opened to a good audience on Monday. An absorbing story, artistic new scenery, and admirable acting gave genuine pleasure. Miss Violet Carlyle, looking handsome in her beautiful dresses, acted with her accustomed charm as the heroine. Other parts were well played by Mr. Graham Woods, Mr. Morris Maude, Mr. William Heilbron, Miss Gwynn Warner, and Miss Margot Chapman. Plenty of excuses for merriment were provided by Mr. Val Gully as an irrepressible manservant. All the minor parts were carefully represented.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—A drama which follows the best traditions of the old Adelphi is Roland Yorke's new domestic play, The Old Home, which was acted to an appreciative house on Monday by the author's company. Several local favourites were in the cast, notably Mr. Charles Franmore, who submitted a clever character study as Daddy Dean; Mr. Henry Lonsdale, the earnest representative of Eric Armstrong; Mr. Fred De Vere, who appeared successfully as Sam Adams; Mr. Roland Yorke, who made a characteristic medico as Dr. Warburton; and Miss Gertrude Bonser, who won the warm sympathies of the audience in the emotional part of Hazel Dean. Other characters were played with conscientious care by Mr. Alexander Bradley as Lord Avondale, Mr. James Lee Hare as Timothy, Mr. Walter Osmond as Jack Warren, Miss Mara Collings as Bridget, and Miss Gertrude Douglas as Pollie. The piece was carefully mounted.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—After a long absence, Mr. Laurence Irving on Monday made his reappearance here, and received a cordial greeting from a crowded audience. The sketch, Feed the Brute, was heartily applauded, thanks to the efforts of Mr. Irving and his clever colleagues. Mr. Warren's illusionary phantasy, "The Magic Carpet," was a prominent item on the bill; Mr. Arthur Lennard is a big Empire favourite; the Shaw-Daunton Troupe do a smart and graceful cycling act; Ludwig Amann's facial entertainment always wins hearty applause; and other talented performers this week are the Bros. Webb, musical comedians; the pretty and accomplished Sisters St. Julian; Mr. Will Johnson, eccentric patter vocalist and dancer; Fred Curran, comic singer; and Miss Daisy Martell, comedienne. Excellent animated pictures conclude the well-arranged programme.

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—The extraordinary illusionary, scenic, mimetic, and musical spectacle of the famous American artist Lafayette, and his forty skilled assistants, supplies a brilliant entertainment, and the enthusiasm of the crowded house culminated on Monday in a perfect tornado of applause, the curtain having to be raised again and again. The original Continental comedy jugglers, Cornalla and Edie, also made a terrific hit; and other first-rate turns were Mr. Harry Zetter, a clever comedian and dancer; Miss Diana Hope's company, in a dramatic episode; Mr. H. O. Wells, comedian; Terry and Bentley, comedy entertainers; Miss Kathleen Coggan, vocalist; Ariel and Astarte, gymnasts; and Vay's talented Juveniles, in Life in the Slums.

GRAND THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin. — The favourite wrestling athlete, Peter Gotz, tops this week's bill, and the excellent programme is contributed to by Mr. Charles Penrose, a popular singer of catchy ditties; Miss Madge Field; Mr. C. Jones, with picture songs; Clifton and Gibson, in a novel performance; Les Curreys, novelty artists, &c. Some good contests have taken place nightly, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux, with admirable films, has more than justified its prominent place in the "Grand" bill of fare.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—The Way of the World is here this week. Capt. Slade is strongly depicted by Mr. H. Skardon, who is well supported by Miss Sidney Crowe as Adela de la Roche. Mlle. Bellini is spiritedly delineated by Miss Marie Fontaine; Miss Nellie De Lacy as Kate Montague and Miss Marie Marah as Marion Fanshaw fill important parts. Other characters are capably portrayed by Mr. J. P. McBride as Cecil Montague, Mr. C. Temple as Matthew Malyon, Mr. A. Hammond as Horatio Bluff, and Mr. Henry Slater as Ned Montague. The piece is well mounted.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident Manager, Mr. George F. Thompson.—The programme here is headed by a playlet entitled The Little Stowaway. The Norman and Leonard Trio delight the audience in The Itinerant; Little Ganty is a favourite here; and good comedy is introduced by Rose and Calvert. George Rae, Scotch comedian; Spituri, wonderful boy juggler and mimic; Madge May, dainty comedienne; and the Bioscope complete.

TIVOLI.—Proprietor, Councillor J. K. Hall.—Will Letters has a hearty welcome here; pleasing songs are contributed by Madge Berker; the audience is delighted with Chester and Lee's new electric theatre, Des Fantoche, with its elaborate transformation scene. Sam Hartley, contortionist, and the Tivoloscope conclude the entertainment.

THE COSY CORNER.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Burton.—Burton's Bohemians are maintaining their reputation here. A good quartette of comedians, Messrs. Ray and Ross, Bert Albert, and George Russell, keep the ball rolling. Miss May Tudor and Miss Pattie Burton add considerably to the enjoyment of the audience; and Mr. Jno. Kershaw's monologues are highly appreciated.

STAFFORD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—A fine variety programme is the attraction here this week. Mlle. Flora Lumière as "the human butterfly" presents a most effective illuminated dance; Judge's cockatoos is a highly interesting and pleasing turn; the Incemores, living mannikins, are very amusing; the Rinders, in picture and song, are well applauded; Charles Lestree proves to be a smart juggler; the Peps give a highly finished gymnastic exhibition; and the Empire Bioscope, with new pictures, concludes.

ST. HELENS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—At the head of the bill this week are Yamamoto and Miss Koyoshi, who give a fine exhibition as equilibrists, for which they are loudly applauded; Raglus is a marvellously smart as well as eccentric juggler; Luigi Salvino, a clever boy, plays many instruments in masterly fashion; Flo Warner has great success with her songs; Billie Burford shines in a Directoire gown and new songs; and Miss Leah Adell's sweet voice is heard with pleasure in old Irish songs. An amusing picture on the Barrascope completes a pleasing programme.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Unstinted praise has been bestowed upon Mr. Fred C. Somerfield's company, presenting his drama Geoffrey Langdon's Wife here for the first time. Standing out prominently is the powerful acting of Mr. Paul Beckett as Felix Beverley; Mr. Edward E. Louis is effective as Jack Stirling; Colonel Miles has a capable representative in Mr. Wm. E. Passmore; Mr. Percy Brown as Thomas and Mr. Percy Dawsone as Charles provide amusement, capitally supported by Miss Katie Lever, who is most pleasing as Sweet Nancy. Miss Cissie Bellamy acts feelingly as Mary; and Miss Elsie Capell's impersonation of the Hon. Mrs. Sands is dignified and clever.

EMPIRE. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—The visits of Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls' company are exceedingly popular, and large audiences have this week laughed as heartily as ever at their amusing sketch The Battle of the Belles. Rose Elliott makes a distinct success with her well-chosen songs; the Sages are clever and amusing burlesque artists; smart gymnasts are Craig, Rose, and Craig; Nina Gordon, in her imitations of popular artists, is appreciated; Frank Bertram and company, in a comedy sketch The Chaperon, are mirth-provoking; Cavalli is an entertaining ventriloquist; and Ray and Miles, comedy jugglers, meet with favour.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's company is presenting The Unknown here this week to large audiences. Some of the latest pictures shown at the end of the performance were an additional attraction. Next week the theatre is to be closed for cleaning and renovation, but will be reopened on Aug. 3 with another of Mr. M. Montgomery's dramas.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—Stanley Carlton and company, in the modern drama The Secret Wedding, is the attraction for this week. The piece is nicely mounted, and some of the sets are especially worthy of mention, viz., the Drawing-room at Hartington Hall and The Devil's Cave. Miss Ruby Maude plays the part of Grace, the heroine, in a sweet and winning manner; a finished piece of acting is that of Mr. Charles Cameron as the butler at the Hall; Edgar Hartington is in the hands of Mr. Stanley Carlton; and the villainy of his plotting cousin Herbert is ably represented by Mr. Marshall Meade. A clever and amusing sketch of the poetic greengrocer's assistant, Billy Barton, is given by Mr. Seymour Perry, who is ably seconded by Miss Emily Lewis as Polly.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Grieveson.—The attraction here is provided by Miss Grace Warner and company in a repertoire of popular plays, opening on Monday in the Scarlet Clue, with Miss Warner as Scarlet Sal, and her various other aliases. Mr. George Gordon lends valuable assistance as Michael Stanton; and Mr. Terence O'Brian enacts the dual rôle of the Brothers Esmond; Mr. V. Garnet-Vayne does well as Crazy Jim, and Mr. Edgar Bruce is responsible for Cockney Evans. Miss Phyllis Massey (Reggie) is excellent, and Miss Esther Dean plays Musette with considerable verve. East Lynne and other well-known plays are also announced.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Heading the bill here is George Formby, as the "odd fellow from Lancashire," who contributes no fewer than four numbers at each house. Marie Santoi and her Merry Japs are popular in a bright musical sketch entitled A Japanese Tea Garden; J. A. Wilson and his dog Towser are well received; and the programme is also contributed to by the Ten Dixie Girls, vocalists and dancers; Harry Sims, comedian; Barlee and Smith, musical comedy artists; Bi-Bo-Bi, eccentric musical comedians; and Green and Wood, eccentric knockabouts.

OLYMPIA.—Lessees, The Skating Rink Co., Ltd.—Despite the fact of the tropical weather, the devotees of the "rollers" gather together in force to practise their favourite pursuit or craze, and to acquire proficiency for the forthcoming Cinderella.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Dean.—Closed for summer season.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. T. J. Pitt's company give a fine performance of the detective drama £1,000 Reward. As a "Tec." of the new school Mr. Pitt plays finely, and Mr. Frank Dallas portrays a thief-taker of a very different order efficiently; Miss Kathleen Eckhart as Mme. Samson is particularly good, her singing being very effective; whilst Mr. Arthur Merton as Fighting Jepps is a decided success.

THE EMPIRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—There is a really wonderful bill provided for Empire patrons this week. George Lashwood came provided with some new songs, and his welcome demonstrated that not only his popularity, but his talent, is as great as ever; W. C. Field's originality and skill as a juggler make his turn a particularly good one; Mendel's turn, as usual, is characterised by refinement and skill, his wonderful talent being greatly appreciated; Cussac Talma, who is assisted by Mlle. Yvonne de Forges, is an illusionist of the most mystifying type; Bobbie Nairn and Stratton Mills present a capital sketch; and Stewart and Morgan are duettists of great ability. A first-class comedy acrobatic display is given by Howe and Ardie, and the Bioscope concludes.

TORQUAY.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—The reopening after the vacation took place here on Monday, when Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne's company presented the musical comedy The New Girl, and a large audience showed its appreciation of the sparkling and witty piece. Miss Rosa Bennett in the title is well-known in Torquay, and soon became a great favourite, whilst Mr. Arthur Poole as Colonel Ballet, V.C., kept the house in roars of laughter with his quaint humour. Miss Ivy Leighton was a pleasing Cerise, and her singing was much appreciated, whilst Miss Victoria Douglas made a severe Martha Grimm. As Bertie Holbrook Mr. Ralph Lyon was quite in his element, and really did extremely well, carrying the party through with considerable ability, whilst Mr. Edgar McIntyre also did well as Harry Harrow. In the burlesque part of Brown, the Butler, Mr. Kenneth Black, jun., provokes much merriment, and he is ably assisted in the second act by Miss Beatrice Sutherland as Jane.

Princess Pier Concert Hall.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—A welcome visit is being paid by Mr. Stuart Alexander and "The So and So's," who were so popular here last season. Miss Maude Davis is a light comedy vocalist of considerable ability, and her pleasing and dainty manner win her frequent applause. Miss Lilian Loeffeler introduces some good step dancing, and Miss Maud Phillips is heard to advantage in some well-known songs. Mr. Harry Quiningborough does excellently, his appearance being marked with repeated applause, whilst his amusing monologues cause great hilarity. Mr. George Sharratt is also very popular, and does some clever business, and Miss Dorothy Edwardes is an able accompanist. Mr. Stuart Alexander is a tenor of considerable talent, and is encored nightly, whilst mention must be made of the concerted numbers, which are rendered in a unique and very acceptable style.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur H. Burdett.—The Hippodrome season, which is now drawing to a close, continues to be well patronised. The bright particular star this week is La Poldini, who in her chic songs is accompanied by a clever child pianist. Comedy specialities are contributed by Morelli and Moore and Phillips and Merritt, who are well received. Jack Roland, in comedy attire, and E. J. Sheldon, the modern coon, are both much applauded in their songs; Zeta Russell is a clever young vocalist and dancer; and Ruffell's Bioscope completes the programme.

TYNEMOUTH.—Palace-by-the-Sea.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—Another excellent and well-diversified programme is being put on here this week, commencing on Sunday with a high-class musical programme in which Miss Katie Moss, A.R.A.M., excelled as vocalist, violinist, and reciter; Miss Rosa Crow proved a success with her 'cello solos; and Mr. J Knowles McLean did well with his songs. For the remainder of the week Mr. John Ridding's opera company is appearing in a round of condensed operas, opening on Monday with Maritana, with Miss Sarah Williams in the title-part—a charming rendering; Don Cæsar, in the hands of Mr. Edward Arthur, was also a creditable performance; and Mr. John Ridding ably enacted the rôle of Don José. Faust, The Bohemian Girl, The Daughter of the Regiment, Il Trovatore, and The Waterman are also billed. In addition, there are varieties by Arthur Croxon, humorist, and Essmann, the juggling waiter.

VENTNOR (Isle of Wight).—Grand Pavilion.—On Monday and two nights following the Serenaders, a combination of highly-trained artists, gave their entertainment. Their programme was somewhat lengthy, but every item was most heartily received. Miss Mabel Johnson, a highly-trained soprano, did extremely well; Miss Ellice Rayne, a fine contralto, was heard to great advantage; Mr. Alfred de Grey is a pleasing tenor; and Mr. Malcolm Cockerell, rich baritone, was appreciated. Mr. Sydney Hamilton is a magician and humorist of the first water; and Mr. Leonard Burke made a most efficient pianist. The audience was most enthusiastic.

On Tuesday afternoon, at the Grand Pavilion, the famous Besses o' th' Barn Band gave one of their special concerts. The conductor was Mr. Alexander Owen, who had to bow his acknowledgment again and again.

WAKEFIELD. — Hippodrome. — Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—A clever protean act is contributed by Miss Marie Jones, assisted by Mr. Ernest Munro; Lozelle gives an excellent gymnastic turn; Bert and Dora, comedy artists, are very entertaining; Mr. George Bendon, comedian, is a popular favourite; Miss Gertrude Lytton, comedienne, is much appreciated; and Mr. Billy Gulson, vocalist, merits favour. Interesting Bioscope pictures are displayed.

WARRINGTON.—Royal Court.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Ryder Boys' company brought a month's season to a close on Saturday night with a successful performance of the farce Jane. At the close, in answer to enthusiastic calls, Mr. Boys tendered thanks for the flattering support accorded him, and expressed his hearty appreciation not only of the splendid manner in which his twelve plays had been mounted, but of the excellent provision made for the artists. The place is undergoing a thorough renovation, and the season will reopen on August Bank Holiday.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—The dainty comedienne Maggie Rimmer sings in charming fashion; Almona is a first-class equilibrist; and Charley Cranston has a fine collection of songs, which are all rendered in capital style. The pictures, especially those showing the King and the Dreadnought and Napoleon and the English Soldier, are excellent specimens.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—Business is good here this week. Miss Helen Roberts is well received for her wonderful interpretation of a "Salome" dance; the Violas are remarkable second-sight experts; Les Zelovas are capital acrobatic equilibrists; Ernest Rees has thoroughly established himself, and his songs are all well received; Harry Grey has a fund of humour which is unlimited; Professor Norton is a clever sleight-of-hand artist; and Marjory Clark and Percy Hayden delight all with their sketch, By Appointment. Robins and Collier again make themselves especially popular with the sketch The Lady and the Porter. The pictures are good.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—Such favourites as the Columbia Comedy Trio are inimitable in their operatic absurdity, and Harry Burn's Juveniles are a troupe of precocious and clever youngsters. Flo Hilton is a tricky little male impersonator; Everhart and his assistants give one of the most wonderful exhibitions of hoop manipulation that it has been the lot of a West Hartlepool audience to witness; the comedy playlet, My Burglar, presented by Harry Thorpe and Zoe Coe, is brimful of fun; the Calcottis in their novel scena Rags and Tatters, excel in dancing and banjo playing; and other acceptable attractions are Harry Tomps, in a novel comedy act, and Teresa da Silva, vocalist.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Miller.—One's desire for variety could be well appeased at the Palace this week, where pictures continue to hold sway.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Grand Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—One of the smartest shows seen here for some considerable time was that given by the Strolling Players on Monday. Miss Madge Nicholson, a pretty little lady sang "Caroo" most charmingly, receiving an encore; another very clever artist is Miss M. Harrison, whose song and dance, "Betty, I'm pining," was rapturously received; Miss Marie Gerrard is thoroughly artistic in her musical monologues; Mr. Hugh Lloyd possesses a voice of rare purity, which was heard to the utmost advantage in "Nirvana," and his ventriloquial turn was exceedingly clever; Mr. H. Scott Leslie's character sketches deserve the highest eulogy, his voice and style is very much like Albert Chevalier's; the star turn is indubitably Mr. Gilbert Fernie. This versatile comedian fairly brought down the house with his numerous comic songs. Mr. John Lambert shows some very beautiful pictures by Pathé Frères, on the Bioscope.

Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. Payne.—Mr. Albany Ward's animated pictures are here for the first three nights of the week, and are proving a big attraction. The film that pleases most is Louis N. Parkre's historical pageant. Amongst the variety turns Madame Vivian's "Queen of the Earth" was warmly received; Mr. Herbert Greville's company opened on Thursday in Merely Mary Ann, the play is exceptionally well cast.

WHITBY.—The Spa.—Lessee, Mr. Payne Seddon; Manager, Mr. R. W. Mitchell.—The attraction at this theatre has been exceptionally good. Commencing on Monday, and continuing during the week, "The March Hares," including Mr. Davy Burnaby, Mr. Edmund Hollick, Mr. Bernard Russell, Miss Maud Jay, Miss Florence Foster, and Miss Kathleen Severn, have given daily an excellent programme, which holds the continuous attention of the large audiences. Under the direction of Mr. Yorks Sheffield, the popular leader, the orchestra will give selections thrice daily, commencing on Monday, on the promenade. Upon the skating rink, where the pastime has become very popular, a special band has been provided during the week. A fancy dress carnival is being arranged on the skating rink for next week.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company.—Mr. Joseph Bebb's talented company is appearing here to delighted audiences, in A Lion's Heart. Mr. Henry Bedford gives a powerful impersonation of Rizardo; the villainous Gaspard Dobre finds a capable exponent in Mr. Stephen Scanlan; Miss Ada Oakley excels in her charming portrayals of Rizardo's wife and the lion-tamer's daughter. The character of Dick Lorimore is in the capable hands of Mr. Leonard Booker; Mr. E. Lowrie is exceptionally good as Timothy Puggs; Mr. Archie Helsby is a conspicuous success as Col. Robert de Villefort; Miss Florence Barnes ably enacts the part of Bessie; and Mr. H. G. Brandon as Jack Bealey deserves special mention. The play is exceedingly well staged.

The Empire.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Hunt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Marco.—A series of effective films include The Duel After the Ball, The Law of Honour, A Mountaineer's Flirtation, The Pierrot and the Devil, and The Enchanted Mirror, all of which appeal to that which is sentimental or humorous in the crowded audiences nightly. Great enthusiasm is created by the marvellous dexterity with which Tom Carpenter, described as the "champion ball pancher of the world," gives his capital performances.

WREXHAM.—Empire.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jno. J. Scott.—This week the big attractions have been J. W. Rowley, a great favourite here, who with his songs and racy reminiscences keeps the house in roars of laughter; and the Brothers Harrison, with amusing patter and clever dancing.

YORK.—Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Hester's Mystery is a delightful play, admirably presented by Mr. Horace Pollock and his company. Miss Pearl Keates as Hester at once excites sympathy by her charming rendition; Miss Patty Groves is breezy and thoroughly natural as Nancy Butterworth; and amusing parts are capitally played by Horace Pollock, Edmund Pollock, and Harry Collier. Carrie Laurie's Juveniles are a popular turn; the Martellonis are acrobats of pronounced merit, who are applauded; and Nat Wilkins is a comedian whose efforts are enjoyed. Edwards and Dacre contribute a real sketch; Eva Chadwick sings with taste; Geo. Westland's patter amuses; and the Coopers provide an enjoyable entertainment.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DURBAN, June 20.—Theatre Royal (Sub-Lessees, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.).—Wheeler's new London Gaiety company, with The Belle of New York, is here. Miss Alice Pollard as the Salvation Army lassie won general favour, and sang and acted with a charm which earned cordial recognition. As Fifi Fricot Miss Lilian Bell acquitted herself with marked ability; Miss Ivy Louise as Mamie Clancy and Miss Mabel Medrow as Cora Angelique scored distinct successes; Mr. Frank Wheeler was in his element as Karl Von Pumpernick; Ichabod Bronson had a worthy representative in Mr. W. Clark; Mr. Charles Willoughby as Blinkey Bill caused much amusement, and his dancing was exceedingly clever; and Mr. H. Hancock as Harry Bronson acted admirably.

DURBAN, June 24.—Theatre Royal (Lessees, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.).—The Girls of Gottenburg is here. As Max Moddelkoff, Mr. Frank Wheeler is the life and soul of the production; Miss Alice Pollard acted and sang herself into favour, and met with well-deserved encouragement; Mr. C. Willoughby as Brittlebotti gave a rollicking representation; as Otto, Mr. M. Hancock was successful, his fine voice being well suited to the rôle; Miss Lilian Bell as Elsa met with undeniable success; Miss Ethel Clarke as Clementine worked hard, her duets with Mr. Frank Wheeler adding largely to the success of the piece; Mr. W. Clarke as the Burgomaster looked and acted satisfactorily. The minor parts were in capable hands, and the staging and scenery were all that could be desired.

Rodney's Winter Gardens are enjoying well-earned patronage. The artists appearing are Mesdames Netta Ralston, Masie Louw, Betty Bellair, and Smythe, and Messrs. J. Macklane and C. M. Rodney.

The Standard Theatre, Johannesburg, is occupied by the Leonard Rayne company in Robin Hood, with Mr. Norman Partriege and Miss Dorrie Roberts in the leading rôles, ably assisted by a well-selected company.

His Majesty's Theatre (Lessees, The Belgravia Amusement Syndicate).—Max Martin is an accomplished coon artist and dancer; Dolly Webb, Durban's popular comedienne, is meeting with success, and has become very popular; Master Halpain has a good voice; Mme. Kate Midwinter, in her rendering of the "Miserère," is ably assisted by Mr. Randolph Epstyne, whose solos are also good; Miss Shina Monachowa is a clever dancer; Gertie Lanner is a favourite; and Madeline Le Sar, a smart soubrette, completes the company.

A NAMELESS PLAY.

A Play without a name, by T. M. Paule, Produced at the East Oxford Theatre, Oxford, on Monday, July 20.

Eric Duncombe, LL.B.	Mr. F. Forbes-Robertson
Captain Clive, H.M.R.C.	Mr. Sydney Hawton
John Scott, M.D.	Mr. Jack Allerton
Hon. Bertie Symkins	Mr. Tom Leeson
Sir Richard Temple, M.P.	Mr. Richard Beaton
Barrington Selmore, M.P.	Mr. A. D. Scudamor
Marcus Selmore	Mr. Claude Agnew
Wilkins	Mr. Edmond Beresford
P.C. Browne	Mr. Robert West
P.C. Keene	Mr. Henry Mullgate
Dixon	Mr. Austen Milroy
Esther Leroy	Miss Eva Fryett
Stella	Miss Margarette Collins
Vera Desmond	Miss Avice Meredith

Mr. E. A. Esmonde produced on Monday night the above play, which had a very favourable reception from a good house. Act 1 opens in the smoke-room of The Towers, where Eric Duncombe, Captain Clive, and Dr. Scott are discussing their financial prospects, and a wealthy marriage as the only way out of them. They decide to cut the cards, the winner to be allowed a free field for proposing to Vera Desmond, a wealthy American heiress, the ward of Sir Richard Temple, a prominent M.P. Luck favours Eric, and on the arrival of Vera the others leave them together. Vera has overheard some of the conversation, and plays the old game of pretending to be ruined. Hearing this, Eric proposes, is accepted, and finds that the money is all right after all. The curtain falls on Eric's triumph, and the discomfiture of Clive and Scott.

Act 2 takes place at Sir Richard Temple's town house, the day before the election. We now discover that Vera has been infatuated enough in the past to write letters to Marcus Selmore, who has escaped from prison, where he was sent for forgery, and now demands £200 for the letters or threatens to expose their old relations to Eric and hand him the letters. Barrington Selmore, the father of this precious scoundrel, also holds a stupid letter written by Sir Richard, running down the chiefs of his own party to Selmore, who was then a colleague, but is now a bitter opponent, and unless Sir Richard at once sends in his resignation Selmore threatens to publish the letter and hold him up to ridicule. Eric overhears this, and decides on a bold action to serve Vera and save her guardian. To accomplish this he tempts an old burglar, Wilkins, who is now in Sir Richard's employ, once more to use his old skill and burgle Selmore's safe, and secure the incriminating letters.

In Act 3 we find Selmore full of his impending triumph over Sir Richard, refusing Vera's entreaties, who then leaves him. Eric and Wilkins then enter, break open the safe, and secure the incriminating letters.

Act 4 sees the settlement of affairs all round—the restoration to Sir Richard of the letter, that frees him again to enter Parliament, and the enforced recovery from Marcus of Vera's incriminating letters by her lover, Eric. Marcus then commits suicide, and Sir Richard blesses Eric and Vera, and assents to their early marriage.

The management have gone in for the curious plan of offering three guineas to anyone of the audience suggesting the most suitable title for the above play, the winner to be announced from the stage next Saturday night. Mr. F. Forbes-Robertson gave a powerful and well-balanced rendering of the part of Eric Duncombe; Captain Clive and Dr. Scott found capable exponents in Messrs. Sydney Hawton and Jack Allerton; Mr. Tom Leeson was a very amusing Hon. Bertie Symkins; Mr. Richard Beaton made a dignified and impressive Sir Richard; and the same can be said of the efficient way Mr. Scudamor filled the part of Barrington Selmore. Mr. Claude Agnew made a handsome figure of his profligate son, and acted with commendable force and reserve, his acting when checked by the sight of his mother's photo from shooting his father calling forth loud cheers; and Mr. Edmond Beresford gave a clever sketch of the character of Wilkins. Miss Eva Fryett was a bright and vivacious Esther Leroy; Miss Collins did well in the small part of Stella; and Miss Avice Meredith was a most charming exponent of Vera, acting in a sympathetic, natural way that quite took the house. Mr. Paule's play had a very good reception and, when the first night's nervousness has worn off, and the artists do themselves full justice, should go well; but the comic element needs strengthening.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

The first performance of Puccini's lurid opera, La Tosca, was given for the first time this season at Covent Garden on Saturday night, July 18. The Queen, Princess Victoria, and the Duke of Sparta were present, as well as a large and distinguished audience. Miss Cavalieri, who played Tosca, achieved a greater success in this character than in her performance of Fédora or Manon Lescaut. In the great dramatic scene of Scarpia's death Miss Cavalieri fully realised the horror of the situation, being received by the audience with frantic applause at the fall of the curtain. Miss Cavalieri's undoubted triumph in Puccini's opera was due more to her ability as an actress than vocalist. Mr. Scotti, as on former occasions, made a superb Scarpia, every detail of this repulsive character being carried out in the most artistic manner. Mr. Garbin made a striking figure of the unhappy Cavaradossi, and sang the music with considerable power; while the Old Sacristan, the only cheerful part in this sombre opera, was admirably performed by that clever artist, Mr. Gilibert. Spoletta was played by Mr. Zucchi; and Mr. Campanini, who conducted, gave full effect to a performance of absorbing dramatic interest.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, July 20,

"THE TICKET-O'-LEAVE MAN."

Mr. Ernest Abbott's season is now in its third week, the attraction being Tom Taylor's popular play, The Ticket-o'-Leave Man. Mr. Abbott plays Bob Brierly in a straightforward, manly fashion, which makes him a great favourite; Mr. Herbert Morgan is sufficiently villainous as Jem Dalton; Mr. Edwin Keene gives a capital character sketch of Melter Moss; Mr. Douglas Phelps scores heavily as Hawkshaw; Mr. John Lester is good as Mr. Gibson; Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown is an excellent Maltby; Mr. J. Smith is good as the waiter; while Mr. F. Roper and Mr. Walter Pease are well placed as Mr. Burton and Mr. Sharpe. Miss Florence North is a capital Sam Willoughby, bright and clever throughout; Miss Marjorie Tennant is very amusing as the talkative Mrs. Willoughby; and it would be difficult to find a more pleasing and sympathetic May Edwards than that of Miss Ada Abbott. For Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday Lady Audley's Secret is the attraction.

Mr. Buchanan Wake has been engaged by Mr. Seymour Hicks for his autumn tour of The Gay Gordons.

Mr. Percy Williams (late manager of the Royal and Grand Theatres, Plymouth, and now conducting the famous play, The Fatal Wedding on tour) has secured the rights of Hall Reid's latest American success, Alone in the World, and will produce it for the first time in this country at the Theatre Royal, Woolwich, early in February next.

THEATRICAL CRICKET.

London Actors v. Provincial.

It may possibly be assumed that the overshadowing attractions of the Olympic contests at Shepherd's Bush were answerable for the very meagre number of spectators who assembled on Tuesday at the Oval to witness the match between histrionic teams drawn from the Metropolis and the provinces respectively. The weather, indeed, was fairly good, and no one would for a moment suggest that the object to which the gate-money was to be applied, viz., the Actors' Orphanage and Benevolent Funds, does not meet with the heartiest sympathy alike of members of all branches of the theatrical profession and of their wide circle of friends and supporters. The team which came forward to do battle for the provinces proved themselves no match for the men of the Metropolis, and in the end were beaten by ten wickets; in fact, but for the efforts of Messrs. A. W. Metcalfe and C. King, they might have been defeated by an innings.

Of course the home team had a wonderful accession of strength in the presence of Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, the old Sussex captain, and he gave an excellent display of his "round the corner" bowling which served to dismiss six of his opponents for 26. Along with Mr. B. Egerton, he accounted for the entire provincial team for 50 in the first innings. The Londoners succeeded in knocking up 152 in their first turn at the wickets, 48 being made by Mr. A. W. Metcalfe before he was caught out by Mr. Leslie Holland, and 40 by Mr. C. Aubrey Smith. In the second innings Messrs. V. O'Connor and H. Wilde did most of the bowling, Wilde taking four wickets for 17 and O'Connor four for 43. Metcalfe and King made a good stand in the second innings, the former being 22 not out and the latter being caught by F. Pope Stamper when he had accumulated 33. There was a general unanimity among the spectators that on both sides the fielding was distinctly the best part of the play. In short, it may be said that not a catch was missed, Mr. Henry Ainley especially putting in some very hard work. The following are the full scores:—

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. Douglas Gordon has been engaged by Mr. Maurice Bandmann for leading parts in the comedy company he is sending to India and the Far East, sailing Aug. 14.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The annual distribution of prizes to the students of the Royal Academy of Music took place on Friday, July 17, Her Grace the Duchess of Wellington this year giving the awards and prizes to the successful pupils. As in former years, a short concert preceded the prize-giving. Raff's "Cavatina" was cleverly played by the orchestral students, who were also heard in Boccherini's charming "Zer Minuet" and Sir A. C. Mackenzie's "Zingaresca." Mr. Hans Wesseley conducting. The choral students afterwards gave a four-part song, "Summer Night," by R. L. Herman, and the "Spinning Chorus" from The Flying Dutchman. The accompanists were Mr. Ralph Letts and Miss Mary Burgess, and at the organ Mr. B. J. Dale. Sir A. C. Mackenzie conducted the choral students. In coming forward to give his address, Sir Alexander Mackenzie had a most cordial reception.

The principal, in speaking of the presence of Her Grace the Duchess of Wellington, said, "A more direct and personal interest is attached to the fact that in 1830, along with three other friends of the institution, Arthur, Duke of Wellington, signed the petition for the Charter under which we work," and the great commander would, he ventured to think, have been considerably impressed if he had seen the present appearance of the modest little school which in 1822 contained only between twenty and thirty pupils. Sir Alexander, in speaking of the continued success and prosperity of the school, said: "No one is better qualified than myself to express the opinion that the school is being loyally served by an accomplished body of musicians, who do not limit their efforts to the present education, but as often as not extend a personal interest to the future of their pupils." The principal said he should not make a lengthy speech, "as there had been no change in the board of directors with the single exception of the retirement of our friend Mr. Morton Latham, whose place had been taken by Sir John Murray Scott, Bart., to whom the nation is deeply indebted in connection with the great art collection known as the Wallace Gallery." In speaking of several additional names on the list of professors, Sir Alexander mentioned Mr. C. W. Perkins, organist of the Birmingham Town Hall, Dr. F. G. Huntley, organist of St. Peter's Eaton-square, Mr. Frederick Moore, a former student and experienced pianoforte master, and Mr. Thomas Meux, an English vocalist who, with Signor F. Rossi, professor of the Italian language, will join our staff. In speaking of the late chairman, Mr. Thomas Threfall, Sir Alexander, amidst great applause, announced that his widow makes an annual grant to the Academy of £125. Other annual gifts are the Alexander Roller Memorial Prize of £5 5s. by Mrs. Roller, a donation of £500 from Mr. Lesley Alexander for the benefit of viola and violoncello players, and two excellent oil-paintings of the portraits of the brother musicians Charles and Samuel Wesley. After referring to the capital performances given of The Barber of Seville and Verdi's difficult Ballo in Maschera, Sir A. C. Mackenzie said "I note an enormously augmented interest in, and a more enthusiastic and intelligent understanding of, music, as well as the surprising growth of native-born talent. The technical skill of our own performers has reached a very high point. Among the quite young it is almost phenomenal; while the number of clever and really gifted English composers is perhaps even more striking. It is a hopeful sign tha our native singers are, year by year, securing a firmer footing on the great stage at Covent Garden. In mentioning the most distinguished students of the year the principal referred to Mr. Bertram O'Donnell, winner of the Worshipful Company of Musicians medal given to the most distinguished student in the Academy. Miss Elsie Owen, winner of the Dove Prize, Master Horace G. Perry, who had won the Threfall Scholarship for organ, and Mr. Percy Hughes, who had secured the Alexander Roller prize for pianists. After the distribution of prizes by the Duchess of Wellington the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to Her Grace for her kindness in being present that afternoon, moved by Mr. W. E. Bigge and seconded by Mr. E. E. Cooper.

"AN ARTIST'S LOVE STORY."

Some remarkable revelations are made in the book with the above title, by Oswald G. Knapp, which has just been published by George Allen. The story told in the correspondence quoted is that of the grand passion of Sir Thomas Lawrence, the artist, for the lovely but ill-fated daughters of an equally lovely and more talented mother, the great actress Mrs. Siddons, with whom Lawrence had been on terms of intimacy from his youth, and whom he always continued to regard with reverence and affection. The true story of this disastrous double-courtship and double-desertion, says Mr. Knapp in his preface, has never yet been told, and consequently the character of Lawrence has, in some quarters, suffered more than his conduct altogether deserved. It has even been suggested that he was responsible for the death of one or both the girls who were so deeply attached to him; but, whatever mental suffering his inconstancy may have inflicted on them, he must be cleared at any rate of this charge on the testimony of Mrs. Siddons herself. On the other hand, he has been excused as merely the innocent object of an unrequited passion—at any rate in the one case; or sympathy has been demanded for him as being the more to be pitied of the two—a view which, as it will be seen, is even farther from the truth than the other. At the outset all the details of the tragedy were known (if we except the three chief actors in it) only to one other person besides Mrs. Siddons herself. Even her husband and brother were kept in the dark till the last act was reached, and the rest of the family seem never to have been fully taken into their confidence. Contemporary gossip made guesses, more or less wide of the mark, and biographers have, for the most part, passed lightly over a subject on which they had no accurate information, or feared to wound the feelings of the living by disclosing too freely the failings of the dead. The fullest account is to be found in Fanny Kemble's "Records of a Girlhood"; but even she, who, as the daughter of Charles Kemble, and therefore the cousin of the unfortunate girls, had the best opportunity of learning the facts, was clearly in error in several particulars. For it happens that a correspondence between the chief actors in this strange drama and the one friend who shared their secret has survived; which, being written while it was still proceeding, not only gives an account of it at its most tragic moment, but incidentally serves to test the correctness of other versions of the events which preceded it. It was preserved by this friend, in the first instance, as she tells us, for her own justification in case of a possible scandal which she had at the time good reason to anticipate. This danger soon passed away, but the letters were still kept with a view to publication when the susceptibilities of the living could no longer be hurt by the disclosure of the truth, and for this purpose they were left by her to her most intimate friend and correspondent. On the death of Mrs. Siddons the question of their publication was mooted, but dropped apparently on the ground that there were still some who might be pained by their disclosure. The lapse of a century since they were penned, and the publication of a version of the story, as mentioned above (copied in a recent life of Mrs. Siddons), removes this objection. The book is admirably illustrated, and contains some amusing letters.

Tour Sheets can be obtained printed in duplicate in books. The duplicate is obtained by inserting a carbon paper. In the case of a small tour, the stereotyped ruling will be found adequate, but for important tours more extensive forms will be found necessary. The advantages of this form are :—

(1) A complete record of each tour is available in one book, so, in the event of sheets returned to the Head Office being lost or mislaid, a duplicate copy can be obtained without any difficulty.

(2) The Tour Manager, without any additional writing, retains a copy for himself. This is of the utmost importance, for frequently queries may arise thereon, which may not have been noticed until some weeks after the return has been made.

THE HISTORY OF THE LYCEUM.

The present Lyceum Theatre, writes Mr. Michael Williams, in "Some London Theatres," the third standing upon the same site, owes its origin to a building erected in 1765, by the well-known architect, James Payne, on some ground belonging to the old town-house of the Lords Exeter. It was originally intended for a picture gallery, and the Incorporated Society of British Artists at first held their annual exhibition here. But the Lyceum also, in its earlier existence, seems to have been turned to many other uses. In the winter of 1783 Signor Biaggini exhibited an air balloon, described as "an Aerostatical Globe of ten feet in diameter, at the Great Room, known by the name of Lyceum, nearly opposite Somerset House, Strand." In the following February, the Montgolfier balloon was shown "for a few days, before its removal to Oxford, in the Grand Apartment, called the Lyceum, three doors above Exeter Change." This balloon, we are told, was forty feet in circumference, was entirely overlaid with gold, and was exhibited by a Monsieur Chevalier. Other balloons were also shown, by Lunardi and Count Zambeccari, during this same year. They were followed, in 1785, by an exhibition of waxwork, quaintly set forth, in the phraseology of that day, as "a Cabinet of Royal Figures, most curiously moulded in wax, as large as Nature." The visitors to this exhibition were further informed that they might have their portraits taken in wax, or miniature, by the proprietor of the show, and "should the Portraits not be thought the most striking and correct Likenesses, he would not expect anything for his trouble." This was, at any rate, honest on the part of the proprietor—a certain Mr. Sylvester.

Collins gave a comic musical lecture, The Evening Brush, in the years 1788-9, when Master Linley occasionally played the violoncello, between the parts. This young Linley was subsequently the famous violoncello player of the opera orchestra. George Savile Carey was lecturing here in April, 1789, and in December the elder Dibdin gave his entertainment, The Oddities, or Dame Nature in a Frolic. Dibdin also lectured in January, 1791, and in March of that year Moses Kean, the ventriloquist, and father—or uncle—of Edmund Kean, gave his imitations. In or about the year 1794, Dr. Arnold, the musical composer, converted the back part of the premises into a small theatre—henceforth the first Lyceum Theatre—but was unable to procure a licence for theatrical performances, owing to the then all-powerful opposition of the Drury Lane and Covent Garden managers. Astley, however, burnt out in Westminster, took refuge, with his equestrian company, at the new theatre, in the months of August and September. A little earlier, Mr. Reeve had been giving his lecture, Mirth's Museum, or the Country Club, on the same boards. In 1795 it was opened as Handy's New Circus, with "The Little Devil" from Sadler's Wells, and other popular performers. In 1798 it was a "Theatre of Astronomy," in which Mr. Lloyd displayed his Dio-astro-dozon, or Grand Transparent Orrery. On Monday, July 22, 1799, Mr. Wilks, of the Dublin Theatre, delivered a lecture, A Cabinet of Fancy, illustrated by transparencies.

In the year 1800, Cartwright's "Musical Glasses," long a favourite amusement with the public, were to be heard at the Lyceum. During the next year, Mr. Philipstahl set up his Phantasmagoria; and in 1802, "The Invisible Girl" was the attraction. Robert Ker Porter's large pictures, The Battle of Alexandria, The Earthquake at Lisbon, The Battle of Lodi, and others, were successively shown, during the early years of the present century. An exhibition of gas illumination was the feature of 1804, and Laurent attempted what would now be styled a variety entertainment, consisting of music, dancing, and short pantomimes, the first of which latter was Neptune, or Harlequin Woodcutter, in 1805. The first play ever acted on the stage of the original Lyceum Theatre was, we believe, Otways's once famous, but now almost forgotten tragedy, Venice Preserved. This was represented by some amateurs, on Monday, April 21, 1806, under the special patronage and countenance of the Duchess of Gordon, one of the best-known leaders of Society at the time. Robert Palmer gave his Portraits of the Living and the Dead, in August, and the singer, Incledon, his Voyage to India, in September of the above year. Mr. Ingleby, "the king of all the conjurers," leased the Lyceum for the Christmas holidays of 1807-8, and in March, Dibdin introduced a new vocal entertainment, The Professional Volunteers. Mr. Ingleby was again here in December, 1808, as well as for the early months of the ensuing year.

The element of fire, however, indirectly exercised a very material influence upon the fortunes of the Lycum, about this time. The burning of Drury Lane Theatre—on February 24, 1809, left the manager and his company on a sudden without a home. It was willingly enough that Mr. Wroughton, and the committee, now seconded the efforts of Mr. Samuel John Arnold—son of the former proprietor—to obtain a licence for the Lyceum, since, although this only extended to the performance of operas, and the lighter forms of the drama, such as spectacle, pantomime, and extravaganza, for a limited number of weeks in each year, an arrangement could now very easily be come to for its occupation during the remaining months, by "Their Majesties' servants," until the larger house in Brydges-street could be rebuilt. Accordingly, all difficulties having been smoothed away, the theatre—enlarged and redecorated—was opened by the Drury Lane company on Tuesday, April 11, with Colman's comedy, John Bull, followed by the farce of The Prize. These were supported by Messrs. Siddons, Bannister, Johnstone, Miss Duncan, and Mrs. Henry Siddons. On the next night Elliston played Captain Absolute, to the Lydia Languish of Miss Duncan. The Soldier's Daughter, The West Indian, The Cabinet—with Braham and Mrs. Mountain—The Honeymoon, The Heir-at-Law, a new comedy, Grieving's a Folly, which had had a run of several consecutive nights, The Poor Gentleman, Three, and the Deuce, The Critic, Pizarro, The School for Scandal, Love in a Village, Rosina, Ella Rosenburg, and The Stranger, were presented during the brief season which terminated on Monday, June 12. On Monday, June 26, the Lyceum was reopened, on his own account, by Mr. Arnold, as the English Opera House, by which name it long continued to be known. The opening novelty was a new ballad opera, Up all Night, or the Smuggler's Cave, composed by a Mr. King, with Dowton, Phillips, Horn, Mrs. Bishop, and Mrs. Mountain in the principal parts. There was also a ballet, Love in a Tub, with music by Bishop. The scenery for both pieces was painted by Mr. Greenwood, the well-known scenic artist. The Princess of Wales, who seems to have greatly affected this theatre, was present on the occasion. Various novelties were produced in the course of the season, the most noticeable amongst them being a three-act musical piece by Theodore Hook, entitled Safe and Sound, the cast of which included Dowton, Horn, Phillips, Oxberry, Penson, Smith, Wewitzer, Mrs. Mountain, Mrs. Bishop, and Mrs. Orger. Mrs. Billington appeared as Mandane, in Artaxerxes, for Mrs. Mountain's benefit, on Monday, Sept. 11, and Mr. Arnold's first season terminated most auspiciously about a week later.

"FOR LOVE AND THE KING."

Jarvel ..... Mr. C. Watson Mill

The elements of melodrama most favoured by the popular playgoer are contained in For Love and the King, in which a plot to overthrow a European monarchy is allied to incidents of a romantic and exciting character. The piece, which was originally produced at the Prince of Wales's, Mexborough, on April 13, is this week making its first London appearance at the Elephant and Castle, where large houses have given it a hearty greeting. A full account of the story was given in our issue of April 18 last, but it may be recalled that the dominating figure of the piece is a young Englishman, who, under the name of Jarvel, has entered the Army of a supposititious state called Sylvonia, and risen to the rank of captain. Uros, the King's nephew, and Crown Prince of Sylvonia, who assumed the disguise of a sculptor, has fallen in love with Natila, a lowly maiden, said to be the offspring of a miser named Michael Obrenovic, but in reality the daughter of the King, from whom Michael had stolen her when a child. Natila has also gained the affection of the young Englishman, but when he learns of her betrothal to the Prince, he determines to do all in his power to bring about the union. Such an unequal marriage is prohibited by the laws of the State, but the Prince determines to set convention at defiance, and, relinquishing all claim to the throne, gain his livelihood by means of his art. The King bitterly opposes the match, and, when he meets Natila, bids her give up all thought of his son, and she promises never to see him again. Declining all monetary assistance, Natila makes her way towards the mountains, but is followed by Jarvel, who determines to secure her safety. The miser and his son Vladimir are the head of a conspiracy to overthrow the dynasty, and, learning that the secret council is to meet that night, Jarvel gains access to the chamber, where, hidden behind a panel of the wall, he learns of a plot to kill the Royal Family, and of the secret of Natila's parentage. He is discovered and overpowered, but not before he has sent the tidings to Princess Milania, who is favourably disposed towards Natila. The conspirators endeavour to obtain from Jarvel the whereabouts of the girl, but he firmly refuses, and is dragged into an adjoining chamber for the purposes of being tortured. A realistic scene is then enacted. There is a rattle of chains and the clang of irons, and from the adjoining room issue terrifying groans and ejaculations indicative of the most exquisite torture. Again and again voices are heard calling upon Jarvel to yield, but without avail, and presently he staggers forth, his forehead smeared with blood, and his breast covered with the same sanguinary fluid. Further efforts are made to induce him to reveal his secret, but he again refuses, and, receiving a sword thrust, falls apparently dead. He lies insensible till daybreak, when he recovers sufficiently to drag himself to the window and make his escape.

The villain Vladimir is convicted of cheating at cards in the third act, the victim being the sister of Jarvel, who has come from England to tell her brother that he has inherited a baronetcy. Jarvel appears, and, enquiring after Natila, learns that she is nowhere to be found. She is discovered, however, by the King at the door of a neighbouring monastery, and is offered assistance by his Majesty. Natila, however, refuses the offer, and no sooner has she departed than the King, from whom the knowledge has been kept in consideration of his delicate health, learns from his exultant enemy, Michael the miser, that she is his long-lost daughter. Efforts are made to find the unfortunate girl, but she falls again into the clutches of the miser. She is speedily rescued by Jarvel, who restores her to the Crown Prince, with whom she is now on terms of equality. The miser and his son meet with the fate reserved for the villain of the piece, and Jarvel, having fulfilled his mission prompted by "love and the King," sets out for England with his sister.

The cast is practically the same as that of the first performance. As Jarvel, Mr. C. Watson Mill gives a powerful rendering of the young soldier of fortune, of whom he makes an heroic figure. His voice rings forcefully in the thrilling lines he has to utter, and throughout he wins the cheers of the audience. His outstanding scene is that of the torture episode, which he enacts with horrifying realism. In an incident somewhat similar in a recent production, the stage was darkened for the purpose, but in the present scene the episode is enacted in the full glare of the limelight, which shows up the gory marks which are supposed to be the result of fiendish tortures. The scene, though unduly protracted, had the startling effect intended, and there were many little shrieks from hysterical females. Mr. John Burton accentuates the hatred and bitterness of the traitor, Michael Obrenovic; and Mr. Henry Earlesmere is the object of a volume of hisses for his masterly treatment of the part of Vladinir Obrenovic, the traitorous officer of the King's Guards. Mr. T. W. Dunscombe gains distinction by his quiet, but effective, acting as Prince Uros; and Mr. Geoffrey Chate scores repeatedly as the mincing Duke Ferdinand, always coming out strong at the right moment. Mr. Frank Lyndon gives a fine portrayal, marked by much feeling, of the aged and infirm King Kara. As a German artist, with a great capacity for consuming ices, Mr. Jim K. Woods is the cause of much hearty laughter. Miss Rosalind Tate is a sympathetic Princess Athene; and Miss Joan Ellis makes a pretty and pathetic figure of Natila, "the beggar maid." The performance of Miss Marie Ault as Grazia, the vivacious daughter of the miser, who is by turns humorous and sentimental, gains great admiration; and Miss Francis Tierney is to be credited with a refined and intelligent study of Edith Meredith, the English young lady in search of her brother. Mr. Arthur Trail gives a picturesque performance of a bloodthirsty revolutionary bent on revenge. No expense has manifestly been spared on the production, the scenery for which is elaborate, and the uniforms and costumes elegant and costly. It had a reception which was a good augury of future success.

Mr. Lawrence Derrick was responsible for a most successful production of a pretty Pastoral play called Mischief-Making on Wednesday last at Gravesend. Two performances were given in the course of the afternoon in the beautiful grounds of Wombwell Hall, before a large gathering of the élite of the neighbourhood, including the Countess of Darnley and Mr. Colyer Ferguson, J.P. Mr. Derrick, who had arranged some very effective dances, business, &c., stage-managed and took entire control of the performance, in addition to playing the leading male part, and was accorded, as he deserved, warm recognition by all present for the able manner in which he had carried the production through.

CHAT WITH MR. LEONARD SHEPHERD.

It is nearly five years since Mr. Leonard Shepherd—who arrived in London from America the other day—starred in this country as Shylock, Richard III., Hamlet, Iago, and the other big Shakespearean rôles, and he would probably have continued doing so until now but for the offer he received to play leading Shakespearean rôles in America, and although he has come over to London either for business or for a holiday nearly every summer, he has confined his engagements to the States ever since. He originally went out for a nine months' engagement, touring all through California and the West, intending to return to take out his own company here; but an offer to join the late Richard Mansfield just before leaving, and, later, one to go under Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske's management, for whom he played in several productions, made him abandon his plans on this side. He then played Herod for a time, and toured all through the middle West, and this last season, besides playing a New York season, and playing the big Eastern cities, he has been all through the South, to New Orleans and Texas, under the management of Mr. Augustus Piton. His wife, Miss Helena Head, who went out to the States at the same time as her husband, to play Rosalind, Portia, and other Shakespearean rôles, has also stayed in America, so far as her engagements have been concerned. She recently gave some interesting recitals in New York from Macbeth, which character she played in South Africa, eventually starring in it herself with her husband. This last season she has been with Mr. E. H. Sothern, playing Florence Trenchard in his revival of Lord Dundreary, and has also appeared in his production of Don Quixote.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd, who have both had tempting offers to return to America, are now down in Devonshire enjoying a well-earned rest, with their little girl, and expect to return to the States in September for their autumn engagements, Mr. Shepherd to go under one of his old managements, and Miss Head to return to Mr. E. H. Sothern, to resume her part when he again revives Lord Dundreary.

Speaking on the subject of the opportunities in America for English actors, Mr. Shepherd says:—"It depends entirely upon the man himself. I know quite a number of English actors who have gone out there 'on spec,' and have come back disappointed. And yet American managers are all comparatively easy to get at. You can knock at the door and see most of them. Over here, unless they know your work personally, everybody has to rehearse on approval. Then the Americans are much quicker in their methods than the English. They will try a dozen people and 'fire' all out while we are trying one, so that unless an actor can give an American manager a good indication of what he can do with a part directly he starts rehearsal, he doesn't stand much chance. They don't give you credit for doing anything else beyond what you can show them at once. I advise English actors going to the States to study well their prospective parts, and to furnish a pretty good indication of their abilities to play them at the first time of reading. The American manager is not willing to take it for granted that everything will be all right at the end of a month's rehearsal.

"Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske allows about five weeks' rehearsal, but the period is shorter in the case of some of the other producers. This last season with Mr. Chauncey Olcott only three weeks' rehearsals were given to the production of the Irish drama, O'Neill of Derry, which was under the management of Mr. Augustus Pitou. Another great difference which the English actor will find in America is that you don't get the actor-manager out there. Their theatres and their productions are governed by business men, and they engage stars to play their leading parts. They look upon the presentation of their pieces from the purely commercial point of view. They choose their actors by the pesonality of the men, and the possibility that he may be a versatile character actor does not sway their judgment. 'Will this man look the part without any make-up?' is the sole question they feel called upon to decide.

"There are no New York actors in the sense that we understand the term of London actors, as all American productions go on tour along with the stars. If a piece is a failure, they drop it at once, and do not permit it to run on in the hope that it will weather the storm—a principle that receives too much consideration in this country.

"Finally, I would warn English actors contemplating engagements in the States that they must be prepared to work hard out there. To imagine that the stage affords an easy means of earning a livelihood is a grievous mistake?"

The staff of the Lyric, Hammersmith, held their first outing on Sunday last, nearly sixty persons taking part. The programme for the day was thus arranged:—Train to Henley, then boat to Marlow, where an adjournment for lunch at the Crown Hotel was made, then on again to Windsor, with tea on board, and train home. A delightful day was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Croke, together with Miss Louie Chalmers and Master Norman Chalmers, motored to Marlow, and then accompanied the party as far as Windsor. Mr. J. Allaway presided at the lunch, where the healths of "The King," "Mr. and Mrs. Croke," and "Mr. F. S. Jennings," the popular manager, were enthusiastically drunk. It was much regretted that Mr. Jennings was absent through illness, but a wire was received from him, wishing them a pleasant day.

"A SCHEME THAT FAILED."

Domestic Drama, in Four Acts, by Mr. Fred Green, produced at the Prince's Theatre, Accrington, on Thursday, July 16.

Harry Vaughan ..... Mr. Stanley Bedwell
Doris ..... Miss Nellie Lewis
Sis ..... Miss Maude Townsend
George ..... Mr. Chas. Sydney
William Smith ..... Mr. Allan Carruthers
Mary Jones ..... Miss Violet Temple
James ..... Mr. Louis Esmonde
Mark Rudge ..... Mr. W. H. Melrose
Jim Rudge ..... Mr. J. G. Maine
Reggie Hardy ..... Mr. Sydney C. Cranston
Philip Norton ..... Mr. Robert Faulkner
Kate Norton ..... Miss Mabel Mannering
Barbara Dane ..... Miss Francesca Strickland

This drama is skilfully constructed, full of telling line, and includes plenty of "comic relief." The story opens in Devonshire, where Harry Vaughan, a gentleman of means and a widower, lives with his daughter Doris. He has for a neighbour one Philip Norton, a rake and a profligate, who has recently married a pretty young lady for her wealth. On one of his many visits to London Norton meets an adventuress named Barbara Dane, with whom he becomes so infatuated that he installs her in a house near his own. Barbara learns that Harry Vaughan's gamekeeper, Mark Rudge, is aware of their relations, and is afraid that he will impart the information to Kate, Philip's wife. She acquaints Philip with this, and he determines he will prevent Rudge telling tales. He proceeds home in a half-drunken state, and decides to desert his wife and throw in his lot with Barbara. He abstracts from a safe all the money and valuables it contains, and, snatching up a gun, leaves the house. He encounters Mark Rudge, and shoots him dead. Jim Rudge, the gamekeeper's son, accuses Philip of the crime. But Philip, who is sobered by what he has done, tells Jim that he is aware that certain articles have been stolen by him from the Vaughan household, and if Jim does not keep silent he (Philip) will lodge information with the police. Rudge is afraid, and Norton induces him to fix the guilt of the murder on Harry Vaughan. Observing Harry's little daughter, Doris, playing with a small toy gun, Jim asks her if she thinks her father could hit a flowerpot, which he places upon a hedgerow near the body of Mark Rudge. Vaughan fires, and breaks it, and Rudge, rushing in, charges him with the gamekeeper's murder.

Three years elapse, and in the second act we are introduced to Harry Vaughan's brother, George, in a bungalow in West Africa, where we also find Barbara Dane and Philip Norton. Barbara poisons George, who expires. Norton disguises himself as George Vaughan, and proceeds to England, with Barbara as his wife. Harry Vaughan falls in love with Kate, who, believing her husband to be dead, accepts him.

The third act opens in a drawing-room on their wedding day. We see them leave for the church. Jim Rudge denounces and exposes Norton, to the dismay of Kate.

In the fourth act Norton, seeing the game is up, confesses everything, informing Vaughan that it was Barbara who administered the poison to George. Barbara, who is lying in wait for Norton, overhears his confession, plunges a dagger in his heart, and, calling a constable, gives herself up.

The play was admirably acted throughout by the members of the Prince's stock company. Mr. Stanley Bedwell made a manly Harry Vaughan, playing in most convincing fashion; Philip Norton was forcibly embodied by Mr. Robert Faulkner; Mr. J. G. Maine as Jim Rudge was well cast, and he did not fail to make the most of it; Mr. Sydney C. Cranston was responsible for an excellent portrayal of Reggie Hardy; and Mr. W. H. Melrose was capital as Mark Rudge. Mr. Allan Carruthers was very amusing as William Smith, and was ably assisted by Miss Violet Temple as Mary Jones; Miss Mabel Mannering in the part of Kate Norton scored a distinct success, submitting a natural depiction of the character, and proving herself a capable and charming actress; Miss Nelly Lewis as Doris was very successful; Miss Francesca Strickland essayed the rôle of Barbara Dane with excellent effect; and Miss Maude Townsend was all that could be desired as Harry Vaughan's sister.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, July 20, the Musical Play, entitled, "JUNO."

Diverting from the usual course of drama, musical comedy fills the bill for the current week at this theatre. The story of Juno, written by Mr. Geo. Roberts, with lyrics by Mr. H. G. French, and music by J. S. Barker, is not distinguished by novelty. Chief interest centres round the statue, Juno, which is accidentally brought to life by the placing of a chain round its neck by Timothy Twinkle, a solicitor's clerk. Juno naturally falls in love with Timothy, who has not a very prepossessing appearance, and who is already engaged to be married to Priscilla Strong, his landlady's step-daughter. Timothy soon has enough of his living statue, who gets him into numerous scrapes by turning up at the most awkward moments. In the final act Timothy again secures the chain, and Juno reverts to her former condition of stone. The play offers a good opportunity to Miss Kate Graham Beck, in the title-rôle, to display a well-cultivated voice, which she uses to excellent advantage. Mr. Charles Leverton is kept pretty busy in the character of Timothy Twinkle, and works hard, extracting as much fun as his lines will permit. Samuel Strong is capably undertaken by Mr. Fred Carrington, who secures applause for his song, "A bumper of sparkling wine." Mr. Richard Teasdale as Sherlock Beake scores also in song and dance. Miss K. O'Malley is amusing as Mrs. Marie Strong; Miss Marie Beresford makes a suitable Priscilla Strong; Miss Ida Lawrence as Lottie Timson creates a favourable impression; and Les Papillons are expert dancers. Mr. George Walker, Mr. W. Millard, Mr. Sam Baylis, Miss Jeffie Raymond, and Miss Eva Blackford complete the cast.

A certain antiquary, when Kemble first assumed the part of Richard, took objection to the prayer-book he affected to read in this scene. "This book," writes Boaden, "for aught I know the 'Secret History of the Green Room,' which Kemble took from the property-man before he went on, our exact friend said should have been some illuminated missal. This was somewhat inconsistent, because one would suppose the heart of the antiquary must have grieved to see the actor skirr away so precious a relic of the dark ages, as if, like Careless in The School for Scandal, he would willingly 'knock down the mayor and aldermen.'" It was at this time, probably, that antiquarianism first stirred itself on the subject of scenic decorations. The solitary banner unfurled by Kemble, as Richard, bore a white rose embroidered upon it. "What!" cried the antiquaries, "a king of England battling with invaders and yet not displaying his royal banner!" And remark was made upon the frequent mention of armour that occurs in the later scenes of the play. We have "locked up in steel"; "What! is my beaver easier than it was?" "And all my armour laid into my tent"; "The armourers accomplishing the knights"; "With clink of hammers closing rivets up"; "Your friends up and buckle on their armour." Yet, as Boaden relates, it was no less strange than true, that, in Kemble's time, "excepting the breastplate and thigh-pieces on Richmond, not one of the dramatis personæ had the smallest particle of armour upon him in either army."

OUR MUSICAL DIRECTORS.

MR. WILLIAM CORRI.

Mr. Corri is a member of a well-known musical family of Italian descent, and may be said to have commenced life in the orchestra at the age of fourteen. In fact, he played the violin in the orchestra of the Standard Theatre, under his father, the late William Corri, and soon made his way to the leader's seat, and so became his father's right-hand for some years. He left the Standard to go on tour with Mr. J. L. Shine as conductor of Little Don Juan, and thus said good-bye to the violin and the Standard. On his first introduction to Mr. Shine he was met with the remark, "You're very young for a conductor, Mr. Corri," to which he replied: "Well, and you're very young for a manager, Mr. Shine." He was also engaged for the following tour and to compose new numbers for the burlesque.

His next engagement was at the Globe, with Mr. Chas. H. Hawtrey, during the run of The Private Secretary, which proved to be a long engagement, as he went with Mr. Hawtrey to the Comedy when his tenancy of the Globe expired. Mr. Corri wrote all the music required for Mr. Hawtrey's productions at these theatres, and conducted Atalanta, produced by him at the Strand.

It was during his engagement at these theatres that he composed the ear-haunting pizzicato entr'acte "Baby's Sweetheart," which was played everywhere, and still finds a place in string orchestral programmes. Indeed, he says, "I was only reminded of this fact at the Christmas of 1905, when I received a present from its publishers, Messrs. Hawkes and Sons, in the shape of a cheque, which was a very pleasant Christmas-box." His next engagement was with Mrs. Langtry at the St. James's Theatre to conduct and write the music for her production of As You Like It. So pleased was the "Jersey Lily" with his efforts that she re-engaged him for her season at the Princess's with Antony and Cleopatra, for which he also composed some of the incidental music.

From Mrs. Langtry he went to Sir Augustus Harris to conduct Orpheus and Eurydice on tour, and was complimented by the then Mr. Harris for his share in the production, when Augustus made a speech to the audience on the opening night. Mr. Harris also re-engaged him for the spring tour of The Young Recruit. Speaking of his first interview with Mr. Harris, Mr. Corri says: "It was at Drury Lane Theatre, when Mr. Alfred Moul was also present. 'What do you think of this young man, Alfred?' asked Harris. To which Moul replied, 'He is a good conductor and a good musician.'"

When Mr. William Corri the elder was taken ill in Manchester in December, 1892, his son complied with an urgent appeal to go to his aid. This meant practically writing in about eight days the music for Mr. Flanagan's pantomime at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, when his father was the musical-director. "From this period," Mr.

MR. WILLIAM CORRI.

Corri says, "my work has been principally in the provinces; and except for a couple of pantomimes for the Queen's, Manchester, one for J. F. Elliston, one for Denton and Bode, London, and a spring tour with Miss Ada Blanche and The Telephone Girl, has been almost entirely for Mr. John Tiller. I commenced my innings," he says, "with this enterprising and successful manager at the Christmas of 1899 and am still 'not out'." His opening score was the music composed for the sketch Jolly Jack, so successfully produced at the Empire, Liverpool. This was followed by successful musical sketches, pantomimes, and other work.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, July 20, the Drama, entitled "GREED OF GOLD."

The popular drama Greed of Gold, from the pen of H. R. Silva, is drawing large audiences to the Shakespeare Theatre this week. Mr. T. Morton Powell's company is responsible for the representation, which is in all respects thoroughly satisfactory. The play is interesting from start to finish, and is staged with completeness; the scene in which a real model working beam engine is introduced being a clever piece of stagecraft. Mr. Walter H. Domoney plays the part of the scheming Harry Hood with due effect, his delivery being well emphasised. Mr. C. Stafford is a manly Arthur Erroll, and invests the character with just the right amount of vigour and determination. Mr. James Jarrett gives a neatly varied piece of acting as the dumb man, Tom Welstead, and his dumb show in the last scene is cleverly executed. The essentials of mirth-making are supplied by Colly Sprig, a tipster, whose misadventures are many and various, and are drolly carried out by Mr. Sydney Bryant. Mr. Denis Campbell as Conn Creamer also contributes his share of the fun, and is ably seconded by Miss S. Bryant as Patty Marfield. Mr. Victor C. Rolfe is a capable exponent of the part of the barrister, Mr. Brightstone, and Miss May Ediss, a young girl, acts prettily as Cecil Hood. As Dora Miss Elma C. Turner has a thorough grip of the character, submitting a finished impersonation of the unhappy wife, which enlists the sympathy of the audience. Miss Annie Barclay is a stately Mrs. Maxwell, and the minor parts are all capably sustained.

Always Refreshing.—Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman's "INCOMPARABLE SMELLING SALTS." A delightful adjunct to the toilet, invaluable for the Theatre, Ball, Concert, or any heated Assembly. Of great use in the Sick Room. Insist upon having Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman's, which is the original. Sold by chemists and stores, 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., or post free for stamps from Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman, 19, Golden-square, Regent-street, London, W.—[Advt.]

Daisy ..... Miss Lilian Lilyan
Oiki San and Cowboy ..... Mr. Jack Henry
Constable ..... Mr. A. R. Galloway
Mr. "Notsowell" and Marks
Mr. J. W. Woodbridge
President of the Tokio Tram Co.
Mr. H. A. Hewitt
Chinese Laundryman ..... Mr. Albert Chink
Nurse Girl ..... Miss Lily Callen
Mrs. Phat ..... Miss Clara Pierse
Yo San ..... Miss May Yorke
Wut Guy ..... Miss Nan Ainslie
Yoco Mey ..... Miss Beatrice May
Chop Suey ..... Miss Doris Hartley
Oyama ..... Miss Doris Ainsley
Newsboy ..... Mr. M. McCluskey

The comedy opens in Tokio, with the Widow Johnson, her niece Rose, and Charley, her secretary, along with Happy, Donald Macgregor, Max Guggenheimer, and Nettie, who are on a trip around the world. Owing to he non-arrival of the widow's remittance, the party are stranded. Charley obtains the post of manager to the Tokio Tramway Co., and he enlists the services of Macgregor and Max as driver and conductor respectively. Then the fun commences, and after the two have made the most of their opportunities, the first act ends with the whole party en route for New York. The second act opens in Macgregor's pawnshop, opened by using the widow's money, obtained by fraud, he having married her. He takes Max into partnership, and instructs him in the business; but he does everything wrong, and causes his partner any amount of trouble. In the last act the scene is laid at the home of the widow, near London, and Happy Hooligan, who has been of great assistance to the widow, having come into a legacy, marries the lady, who has obtained a divorce from her second husband; and all ends happily. A large audience was present to witness the initial performance, and, judging from the hearty laughter which greeted the artists in their fun-making, success should be certain. Mr. Wm. H. Lester impersonates the name-part, Happy Hooligan, and he does excellent work in his singing and dancing; Mr. Jos. J. Sullivan as Donald Macgregor and Mr. John K. Hawley as Max Guggenheimer are responsible for the bulk of laughter-producing, and their efforts to please kept the house in a continual roar; Miss Lottie Wilson appears as Widow Johnson, and she makes a capital study, her singing being very good; Miss Rose Lyndon is a dainty Rose, her niece; and the dancing of Miss Blanco Moure in the part of Nettie fairly caught on. Mr. Harry Emeric as Charley Flipp, secretary to the widow, works very hard and does well. The remaining characters are well played. The dresses are magnificent, and it should be noted the number of changes taking place during the play, there being no fewer than fourteen. The scenery is fine, and does credit to the artist responsible, Mr. A. W. Barker. The play abounds in plenty of tuneful melodies, arranged by Mr. Aubrey Kennett, who also has charge of the direction of the orchestra. Mr. Herbert Lloyd is the genial general-manager, and he has a company who work in a very hearty manner. They have had a good send-off, and three hearty cheers were given at the close by the company to celebrate the event.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The programme of the Students' Concert on Thursday evening, July 16, opened with Schumann's "Quartet for Strings" in A. The executants were Miss Dorothy Devin, Miss E. Muriel Pickup, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Miss Beatrice Harrison. Although the playing of the second movement was somewhat rough, the young performers gave a good account of the Adagio and the spirited finale. An excellent performance of Mozart's "Sonata for Piano and Violin in B flat" by Miss Ellen Edwards and Miss Amy Rydings received hearty and well-deserved applause from an audience smaller than usual owing to the wretched weather, but which made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers. Another interesting item in the programme was Mr. Eric Gritton's admirably-played organ solos of "Ein' feste Burg," "Gott des Himmels und der Erden," and "Jauchz, Erd, und Himmel, juble!" from Max Reger's "Choral-Vorspiele." The theme of the first, "Ein' feste Burg," is the fine old hymn tune of which Meyerbeer makes such effective use in his opera of The Huguenots. The vocalists in this concert were Miss H. Muriel Robinson, heard in two songs of Schumann, "Stille Thränen" and "An den Sonnenschein"; Miss Florence Barrow, who was very successful in the "Willow Song" and "Where the bee sucks," by Sullivan; and Miss Alice Moffat, whose singing of Liza Lehmann's "Titania's Cradle Song," written on Shakespeare's familiar verse "I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows," and Purcell's "Hark! the echoing air" were much applauded. The trio of Dvorák for piano, violin, and violoncello in F minor, played by Miss Grace Humphery, Mr. Sidney Bostock, and Mr. Cedric Sharpe with considerable ability, concluded the concert, the accompaniments of which were Miss Ellen Edwards and Mr. William Murdoch.

The orchestral concert of the Royal College on Tuesday evening commenced with Beethoven's fine Symphony, No. 8, in F, of which an excellent performance was given by the orchestral students under Sir Charles V. Stanford. Mr. Frank Bridge's Rhapsody for Orchestra, played for the first time on Tuesday evening, cannot be taken seriously. Perhaps the young composer does not intend it to be, but even in a rhapsody there is some dominant theme—take Liszt's 11th and 12th Rhapsody for piano, for example. In Mr. Bridge's composition there are occasional snatches of quaint and fanciful passages, varied with crashing chords, which show the composer is a disciple of Strauss. In the more subdued portions Mr. Bridge displays evident talent in writing for the orchestra, and the composer, who conducted, had a most cordial reception from the large audience. Mr. Thomas Peatfield proved himself an able violinist in Lalo's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in F major; and the band gave a brilliant performance of Josef and Joh. Strauss's delightful polka "Moulinet" and waltz "Schatz." In the vocal side of the programme Mr. Spencer Thomas distinguished himself by his singing of Mozart's "Dalla sua pace"; while Miss Amy Bosworthick won a hearty recall for three songs of Edward Elgar's "Sea Pictures," the charming "Where corals lie" being particularly well sung.

John Kemele, who was so minutely observant of the great dramatic canon, "suit the action to the word," that he would study before a glass the proper position of a finger even, seeing an actor hold down his head on his pronouncing "O heaven!" and hold it up on pronouncing "O earth!" said, "That fellow has committed a solecism with his head."

The Queen, Princess Victoria, and suite witnessed Miss Isadora Duncan's dancing at the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday.

ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ART.

An interesting matinée was given by some of the students of the Academy of Dramatic Art at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on the afternoon of the 17th inst. The miniature playhouse was packed with an audience consisting mainly of friends of the pupils, and amongst prominent theatrical folk were Sir W. S. Gilbert, Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, Mr. Cyril Maude, Miss Winifred Emery, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Fred Kerr, Mr. C. M. Lowne, Mr. Herbert Waring, Mr. Fisher White, Mr. Lyell Smith, Mr. W. L. Courtenay, and Mr. H. Chance Newton.

The principal new item of interest in the programme was a Play, in One Act, by George P. Bancroft.

Lord Colbeck .....MR. WILFRED FLETCHER
Jack Meredith .....MR. LANE CRAWFORD
Bertram Ashbrook.....MR. FREDERICK JAMES
A German Waiter .....MR. LYONEL WATTS
Muriel March .....MISS PHYLLIS DAVEY
Penelope March .....MISS ATHENE SEYLER

It is a pleasing little play that Mr. Bancroft has written around what in real life is too often an unpleasing subject. Penelope March is an actress who has won some fame in her profession. She gets an offer of marriage from Lord Colbeck, who is seemingly a genuine enough individual. But Mistress Penelope is a lady with something of a past, and she considers it necessary to tell the story of it to her aristocratic suitor. A few years previously, in her less palmy days, she had lived on certain terms with one Jack Meredith. The latter has now returned to England after having made a fortune abroad. His wife had recently died, and he now calls on Penelope and expresses his deep affection for her. That lady's previous caller, Lord Colbeck, had informed her that her relations with Meredith would not adversely influence his feelings towards her, and he left after having extracted from her a promise of a definite reply the same evening. Apparently Penelope is undetermined as to whom she shall choose, but when she learns that Meredith's intentions are that they shall resume their former mode of cohabitation she decides in favour of Lord Colbeck.

The piece was, on the whole, capitally acted. Miss Athene Seyler was quite an engaging personage as Penelope, and she handled the part with considerable skill, in spite of its inherent dicultics. Miss Phyllis Davey charmed the audience with her interpretation of the part of Penelope's domesticated sister; and Mr. Wilfred Fletcher successfully portrayed the character of the persuasive lover, Lord Colbeck. Mr. Lane Crawford gave a careful study of the rôle of the less agreeable Jack Meredith; and a word of recognition should be awarded to Mr. Lyonel Watts as a German waiter and Mr. Frederick James as a solicitor.

In Act IV. of Mr. Pinero's The Princess and the Butterfly Miss Seyler again distinguished herself, this time in a most artistic and effective piece of character-acting as Fay Zuliani; while Mr. Lane Crawford and Mr. Lyonel Watts also showed to advantage in their respective rôles of Sir George Lamorant and Faulding. In 'Op-o'-Me-Thumb Miss Seyler, who, by the way, is the holder of the gold medal for this year presented by Sir Squire Bancroft, essayed a part quite different from her previous ones, and with it she gained her triumph of the afternoon. Very strikingly did she bring out the pathos of the character of Amanda Affleck, and the performance was one which would have done credit to an actress of some experience. Miss Pearl Timberlake as Mme. Didier, Miss Constance Cook as Mrs. Galloway, Miss Thora Daiemond as Rose Jordan, Miss Phyllis Davey as Celeste, and Mr. Frederick James as Horace Greensmith all showed great promise. Altogether the directors of the Academy of Dramatic Art may feel proud of their pupils. The afternoon concluded with an exhibition, under the instructorship of Miss Elizabeth Earle, of the Delsarte system of the art of expression, whereby the body is trained to express adequately the emotions of the mind, the training including the art of executing stage falls naturally and without violence.

THE BEN GREET PUPILS.

Deserting for the moment their little studio at 3, Bedford-street, Strand, in favour of the more commodious and well-appointed Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, the pupils of the Ben Greet Academy of Acting gave a private performance on Monday afternoon last before a full and appreciative audience. Shakespeare and Pinero filled the bill, the Immortal Bard being represented by extracts from the forest scenes of A Midsummer Night's Dream, and the eminent modern dramatist by Acts I. and II. of The Times. The first-named selection showed that the scenic resources of the little Rehearsal Theatre are equal to the setting of a woodland glade in which Oberon's ungallant scheme for the discomfiture of Titania is laid. Four characters only were concerned in the excerpt. The fairy queen had a winsome exponent in Miss Gwladys Alder, who acted with delicacy but was lacking in feeling. Miss Jeanne Langlois made an Oberon of noble mien, and declaimed her lines very well, especially at the close, when her performance very much improved. Miss Tina Langlois was a boisterous Puck, but her gaiety was obviously forced, and her articulation by no means clear. Miss Sylvia Norton prattled prettily as the First Fairy, playing with admirable spirit and intelligence.

Complete justice was done to The Times, which put the audience into an agreeable state of merriment. Chief honours rested with Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., who appeared by permission of Messrs. A. and S. Gatti. He put much comic force into his rendering of the splenetic Percy Egerton-Bompas, M.P., and achieved a great success. Mr. Percival Clark, of the "Phillipians" company, was a chivalrous and gentlemanly Viscount Lurgshall, investing the part with much quiet expression; and quite a character-study of the Hon. Montague Trimble was given by Mr. Arthur Baldry, who displayed comedy talent of a high order. Miss Elspeth Holland acted with refinement and delicacy as Beryl, admirably preserving the sentiment of the scenes in which she is engaged. Mr. Robert Ashby took a broad view of the responsibilities of the son Howard, who in speech and manner gave little indication of any University training. Miss Hélène Millée played with intelligence and effect as Mrs. Egerton-Bompas; and Miss Lottie Hornsby essayed with success to portray the aristocratic hauteur of the Countess of Ripstow. Miss Mary Trenchard adopted the approved Irish accent as Mrs. Hooley; her daughter Honoria was played with rugged charm by Miss Irene Colyile; and the Timothy McShane, M.P., of Mr. A. L. Burke was drolly ferocious, the lines being skilfully emphasised. Miss Gwladys Alder acquitted herself with credit as Lucy Tuck, and Miss Teresa Hornsby's rendering of the gushing Miss Cazalet was a clever characterisation distinguished by much variety of expression.

The curtain had to be raised several times at the close, so delighted were the audience, who would have been well satisfied to have seen the concluding portion of the play. The performance was one of the most successful ever given by the popular school, the autumn term of which, it may be added, begins on Monday, Sept. 21.

MESSRS. MILTON BODE AND EDWARD COMPTON have taken over the lease of the Theatre Royal, Brighton, from Aug. 3. The old-established theatre is now being re-decorated, and will re-open on the date mentioned with Mr. George Edwardes's Merry Widow company

BUSINESS MANAGERS.

MR. H. B. FITZGIBBON.

Mr. H. B. Fitzgibbon is one of the best known and most able business-managers on the road. Beginning as an amateur, with much success, Mr. Fitzgibbon came, for a brief period, under the tutelage of the eminent actor Mr. Herman Vezin. His regular professional work commenced when he joined the late Mr. Wilson Barrett's company at the New Olympic Theatre in December, 1890, afterwards going on tour with that popular actor, and remaining with him for some four years. In this time he made two long American tours, visiting all the principal cities of the United States and Canada. Mr. Fitzgibbon obtained a varied experience, playing many parts in Mr. Barrett's remarkably extensive répertoire of the Shakespearean and classical drama and the many fine melodramas which he staged. In this respect Mr. Fitzgibbon may surely claim a record for the "legitimate," as a protean artist, having on one memorable occasion—at the Star Theatre, Brooklyn, owing to an epidemic of illness amongst the members of the company—been called upon, and successfully played, six parts in two plays on two consecutive nights! Prior to leaving Mr. Barrett, Mr. Fitzgibbon had his first insight into theatrical management, with which branch of the business he eventually identified himself, being appointed to assist the business-manager in his duties. In this connection, it may be noted, that he is a skilled shorthand writer, and has had some journalistic experience, which has stood him in good stead, having specially reported for the New York Herald and the leading London dailies, contributing articles to the Evening Standard, &c. Mr. Fitzgibbon comes of a literary and theatrical stock, his father having been a writer of considerable reputation, and co-author with the late Robert Buchanan of several dramas and plays, while his grandmother was an actress of repute in the days of Madame Vestris, with whom she frequently appeared. Mr. Fitzgibbon was engaged for a further tour abroad, but receiving an offer from Mr. H. Cecil Beryl and the directors of the Nottingham Theatre Company, he obtained his release at Mr. Barrett's hands in order to take up the position of acting-manager of the old Theatre Royal, Nottingham, retaining that post for upwards of three years, until the theatre was pulled down for rebuilding. He was then engaged by Mr. William Greet as business-manager of The New Mephisto tours, with which he remained two seasons. He was subsequently offered a further engagement, but had to relinquish it in order to fulfil a contract with Mr. George Edwardes, with whose Circus Girl company he made a long tour. His next engagement was with Mr. Edward Compton, with whose tours he was associated for a lengthy period, covering eight years, gaining much useful experience and doing much valuable work. During the intervals of Mr. Compton's touring, Mr.

MR. H. B. FITZGIBBON.

Fitzgibbon occupied successively the posts of acting-manager at the Paisley Theatre and at the Theatre Royal, Hanley, varying this resident work with tours. He was with the last Dan Leno production, Mr. Wix, of Wickham, when phenomenal business was done; afterwards piloting the original tour of Joseph Entangled, Mr. H. A. Jones's successful comedy. In the autumn, 1906, Mr. Fitzgibbon was engaged by Mr. George Alexander as business-manager of his North company of His House in Order. Mr. Alexander desired to retain him for the spring and autumn, 1907, but he was under contract to return to the Compton Comedy Company for the spring. On its conclusion Mr Compton offered Mr. Fitzgibbon a further year's engagement, including the acting-management during his London season at the St. James's. Feeling, however, that the time had come to venture into "fresh fields and pastures new," Mr. Fitzgibbon decided to resume his position as business-manager of Mr. George Alexander's North company, and has recently concluded a very successful season with His House in Order. "The man in front," says an interviewer, "is born, not made. He must possess the patience of Job, united to an urbanity, a serenity, and a courtesy which nothing short of a cataclysm can disturb, and his capacity for business must be as wide and as deep as that of the chairman of a New York trust. All these qualities Mr. Fitzgibbon has shown he possesses, and has amply justified the confidence which successive managers have reposed in him." He hopes to find a wider sphere of work, where his enthusiasm and his energies may have full scope.

THE NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 20, the Drama, entitled "THE SHADOWS OF A GREAT CITY."

Mr. Arnold Bell has engaged a strong company to represent the above powerful play, which met with an enthusiastic reception on Monday, when the Lyric held its usual crowded audience. Mr. Bell gave an excellent interpretation of the part of Tom Cooper. That popular heavy man, Mr. Fred Morgan, submitted one of his usual finished performances as George Benson. Mr. F. C. Robson did well as Arkwright, the detective. Mr. C. L. Ludlow was distinctly good as the pawnbroker, Abe Nathan; and as Jim Farren, the thief, Mr. A. T. Lennard was equally satisfactory.

Miss Frances Campbell, in the dual rôles of Annie Standish and his daughter Nellie, earned much applause, and was presented on Monday with a beautiful bouquet. Miss Nelly Daly caused much laughter by her impersonation of Biddy Roonan. As Mrs. Higgins Miss V. Campbell gave an effective performance.

For Friday evening a special performance of East Lynne was announced.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS ELSIE VRON.

A young Shakespearean actress of considerable promise, Miss Elsie Vron began by studying art for four years in a Manchester studio, and in the winter months took part in amateur theatricals, appearing in The School for Scandal, Tom Jones, &c., at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, with Mr. Ryder Boys, with whose company she is now playing lead on tour. Her first professional appearance was made in Aberdeen before a distinguished audience, which included the Lord Provost and all the mayors from several surrounding towns. The débutante made her first curtsey to the play-going public in the character of the Third Witch in Macbeth with Mr. William Mollison's company. "It was," says Miss Vron, "a weird little character suitable to my weird little feelings. No one in that bright assembly could have dreamt how the heart of the raw recruit throbbed that night. The part was accommodating to my shaking limbs, for my hands to shake and my voice to tremble is what I had rehearsed.

MISS ELSIE VRON.

I remember they did quake unnaturally naturally on that night from sheer fright! After the cauldron scene, when I wondered if I really were steeped in witchcraft—so terrified I felt—a few minutes remained to transform me into a reliable-looking gentlewoman for Act IV. The fall of the curtain left me feeling happy my first night was over, and that I could look forward to loving my profession always." Miss Vron also played Celia in As You Like It (which has always been her favourite character), Nerissa in The Merchant of Venice, and Kate Carnegie in Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush during the week—a very creditable performance when one considers it was the young actress's first professional engagement. Since then she has played several Shakespearean parts with Mr. Mollison, and in March last acted with him in her native city of Manchester, which she considers, of all towns in the world, the most just, critical, and generous.

MISS ADA FRANK.

The career of this bright and clever young lady has been far from an indolent one spent amongst the roses and the flowers. Daughter of a naval officer, Captain Frank, she commenced her early theatrical days as a member of several amateur dramatic societies. Then, her thoughts turning to the more serious side of the profession, she joined Fred H. Graham's pantomime company, playing second girl in Cinderella. This was followed by a long engagement with the late Ellen Cranston and Clarence Burnette, playing the child's parts in A Man in a Thousand, Our Guardian Angel, East Lynne, stock at the Theatre Royal, Blyth, playing Mother Guttersnipe in The Mystery of a Hansom Cab, creating the soubrette's part in The Border Heroine, the title-rôle in Trilby, Corny Carlyle in East Lynne, Tina in My Sweetheart; then playing the juvenile part in Dottridge and Longden's Serpent's Coil, followed by two tours as Carrie in When London Sleeps, with the author, Charles Darrell; two tours with Mr. T. Morton Powell as Pattie in Greed of Gold; tours with Clara Weston, The Devil's Device; then two years with Mr. Fred Southern sketching, during which Miss Frank played some two hundred parts, ranging from chambermaid, boys, old hags, to lead; then back again to the theatres, staying for two and a half years with Mr. F. Marriott Watson to play Emma, chambermaid part in The Black Mask; followed by two engagements with Mr. F. G. Kimberley, chambermaid part in Bound to Win; then specially engaged by Mr. Charles Herrick to create the part of the artist's model in The Triumph of Truth; three and a half years with Messrs. Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls, playing chambermaids in all their pieces; and finally creating the low-comedy part in their successful sketch, The Battle of the Belles. Now Miss Frank has taken up the reins of management, for herself, touring the successful comedy-drama, A Fight for Life.

To those about to enter this profession and who imagine it to be a life of ease and comfort, Miss Frank could tell some sad stories of life spent in endless striving for engagements, with a slender purse, of supperless evenings followed by a night spent on cold bare boards in some of the humblest lodgings in cruel London.

MR. R. W. HUTTON.

Mr. Ralph Wollaston Hutton was born at Dover, and educated at Bedford Grammar School and University College, Oxford. He made his first professional appearance at the New Theatre, Cambridge, as a waiter in Money, on Jan. 23, 1900, and two nights later joined Mr. Ben Greet for his season at the Comedy Theatre. For the next eighteen months he continued with Mr. Greet's comedy and pastoral company, playing a variety of parts and understudying, both in A Royal Family and in the round of Shakespearean and old English comedies.

In 1900 Mr. Hutton indulged in a somewhat premature attempt at management, in conjunction with an "old actor" who should have known better, which venture came to a somewhat abrupt conclusion. After a stock season with Mr. Douglas C. Phelps, playing Sir Richard Yorke in The Union Jack, Dr. Brinkton in The Unknown, &c., and four weeks with Mr. James Willard's A Woman of Pleasure, he was engaged again by Mr. Ben Greet to play the Duke of Hull and A.S.M. in The Second in Command. He was fortunate on more than one occasion, during a second tour with this piece, to play Major Binks—Mr. Maude's part.

In the summer of 1902 Mr. Hutton was stage manager to Mr. Alfred C. Calmour for his production of The Queen of the Roses at Wyndham's, after which he returned once more to Mr. Greet to tour with Sherlock Holmes, playing at different times Moriarty, Forman, Bassick, and Parsons. In the spring of 1903 he played Pifferi and Tomasso in Mr. Howard's Eternal City, and in the autumn the Pope. The following year Mr. Tree engaged him to play Father Pifferi on tour, and he was re-engaged by Mr. Tree in the autumn for The Darling of the Gods, playing Kugo for the greater part of the tour, and Kato, a Fisher of Carp, for about four weeks. Mr. J. B. Howard then engaged him to play Kato in his tour of the same drama, and in the autumn of 1905 he was the Pope once more in Mr. Howard's No. 1 Eternal City.

In February, 1906, Mr. H. F. Maltby engaged him to stage-manage his first tour of The Youngest of Three, in which he was the Samuel Johns, also playing under the same management Lord Midhurst in Mr. Weaver's drama, In Holy Orders. At the beginning of last year Mr. Hutton took part in the Stage Society's production of The Cassilis Engagement at the Imperial, playing Watson, and understudying Mr. Sam Sothern, and also at the Criterion played Pierre in the production of The Wooden Shoe. After this he was engaged by Mr. Monckton Hoffe as his general manager for his tour of Oscar Wilde's comedies, The Importance of

SUFFRAGETTES AND ACTRESSES.

Miss Janet Steer gave an "at-home" at her residence, 53, Sloane-gardens, S.W., on Tuesday afternoon, when an address in favour of the extension of the franchise to women was given by Miss Christabel Pankhurst. Miss Steer had invited a number of distinguished lady members of the theatrical profession, and amongst those present were Miss Mary Moore, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Sidney Fairbrother, Miss Vane Featherstone, Miss Mabel Love, Miss Lottie Venne, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Miss Muriel Wylford, Mrs. Vedrenne, Mme. Zelie de Lussan, Miss Phyllis Carr, Miss Compton, Miss Marta Cunningham, Miss Marie Raby, Mrs. Jopling Rowe, Mrs. Sam Sothern, Miss Muriel Wylford, Mrs. Lucette Ryley, Miss Dora Barton, Miss Esme Beringer, Mrs. McLean, Miss Julie Markham, Miss Rose Nutthall, Lady Duff Gordon, Lady Rivett Carnac, Mrs. A. Bryce, Miss Dora Fellowes, and others.

At the opening of the meeting a new Suffragette song and march, entitled "Stand up, women!" written by Mr. Cayley Calvert, the music composed by Miss Tennyson, and arranged by Mr. W. W. Meadows, was sung by Mr. Edmund Cooper. Mr. Meadows acted as accompanist. The song was described as "an urgently-needed counterblast to the scores of sneering, and often ribald, ditties at present aiming at bringing the women's cause into contempt and ridicule." The song was admirably rendered by Mr. Cooper, and was received with much applause.

Miss Janet Steer, who is an ardent supporter of the cause of the Suffragettes, then briefly addressed her guests, pointing out that women were seeking for knowledge and for truth. It was a sign of the times. Women were awaking from a long, long sleep, and beginning to realise that there was something to be done. She had great pleasure in introducing Miss Christabel Pankhurst to the audience.

Miss Pankhurst, in the course of an eloquent and telling speech, proceeded to explain exactly what it was that she and those who were associated with her were working for. They only asked for votes to be granted to women who paid the rates and the taxes the same as the men. She was sure that the vote would give women a freer scope for their development. Every woman, both rich and poor, ought to be interested in this cause. She appealed to the ladies present to join the militant Suffragists, and pointed out that, while at the present warfare was being waged with the Cabinet Ministers, a time might come when the war would be directed against men generally.

On a show of hands all the ladies present expressed themselves in favour of women suffrage.

MR. APPLIN ON ACTING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—The simplest way to become a great actor in England is to have a play with a great part. It may not be easy to suit an actor at once, but, given a sufficiently clever playwright, or, perhaps one should say, play-journalist, with sufficient time to study his patient's temperament, he will, in course of time, evolve a part in the play entirely suited to his client. We can well imagine, for instance, Mr. Pinero or Mr. Henry Arthur Jones writing a play round Mr. Balfour or the Bishop of London, which, with proper scenic effects—Westminster Abbey at night, the terrace of the House of Commons at dawn, or the interior of a famous brewery—would draw all London.

The play itself would not matter if the leading man had plenty to do and the scenic effects were sufficiently realistic. It would be quite easy to cast the smaller parts, and no one would take much notice of them—mere choir boys, Members of Parliament, or brewers' assistants speaking three lines.

This is not a fanciful picture: it represents the stage of to-day. It is thus the actor trades. He can be divided into three classes—the amateur, the competent actor, and the actor-manager. These can be sub-divided into the educated and the uneducated, the bogus and the honest. The amateur is not confined entirely to the provinces, though he has almost ruined theatrical business there, and has helped to close a great many theatres, but he also fills the gaps in big London productions. He walks on or dances on; he plays servants, nice young men and young women about town; he is educated, and is trusted by his tailor; he generally speaks the King's English, and in London he is fairly harmless. If he is in earnest he can learn his business; if he is not, he at least amuses himself, and saves the manager a salary. To speak of an uneducated actor is hardly fair; moreover, the particular type to which I refer has almost ceased to exist, having been driven out of the provinces by starvation wages, and amateurs drawn from the servant girl and clerk classes. His education in many ways is, or was, very complete; he knew his business, every trick of the stage; he could fence, sing, dance; he knew much and could do much my young gentleman straight from college did not know and could not do. He was not—for this how grateful the play-going public must have been—a drawing-room actor. He was indeed a mummer, and he was proud of his trade—or, rather, he called it his art, and perhaps with some truth, for he was nearer the artist than the actor of to-day: the emotions with which his audience was inspired came from his heart and his head, not from scenery or pictorial printing.

But he has passed away, alas! for the English stage. That we want him and his rugged, homely methods is shown by the reception that was given to the Sicilian players at the Shaftesbury Theatre.

Then there is the competent actor, who is well educated, the semi-successful man who as yet has not been wiped out by the avalanches of pictorial, scenic, and mechanical effects that yearly sweep the stage. He is confined entirely to London, for the provinces cannot afford him, except perhaps once a year for two or three weeks. We seldom give him opportunities of acting, because he is only an actor and not a manager; but at the Court Theatre not long ago he showed us of what he is capable—showed us that, with an independent or national theatre England could produce actors and dramatists worthy to rank with those of France or Germany. These actors—and, of course, by actors I include actresses—consider themselves lucky, many of them, if they are working for six months out of the twelve. They rely for their work, not on themselves or their public, but on the whim of the public, the playwright, the producer, or actor-manager. Accident often engages, and failure disengages, them; and more than fifty per cent. of the plays produced in London are failures.

It may be interesting to note that because a play is a failure it does not mean it is a bad play, or one that many thousands of people are not extremely anxious to see; it does not mean that the salaries are excessive, for though one man may be taking a hundred, several are taking two or three, pounds a week, or less. It means that the trade of the actor and playwright is being ruined by the men who trade or gamble in theatres. A builds a theatre and leases it to B, B sub-lets it to C, who in turn leases it to D, who will sub-let it to E, who has either written a play he wishes produced, or is anxious to face the limelight as a leading man. He is not interested in the drama of his country; he is only interested in the tragedy of himself.

We see those tragedies year after year.

Possibly the man who is paying three or four hundred a week rental for his theatre considers it unfair to that theatre to produce a play that is not gorgeously mounted. If he is playing the leading part it is important that he should surround himself with magnificent scenery, and both he and his company must be faultlessly dressed. Clothes make the man, so why not the actor? Moreover, people like to look at nice clothes and nice scenery; and so, when the time comes to arrange the salary list, there is not much left for the actor. Art, what art there be, is on the whole sorry business, and has to be written with a very small a. And so the actor does not really trade in emotions, he trades in frocks and frills, in scenery and limelight, and the beautiful act-drop and the luxurious stalls.

Seeing these things, knowing these things, can we expect the actor to have any love or respect for his public or for his work? Nature forces him to respect his stomach; he must live, and to live he must take part in the stupid gamble. He knows there is little chance of his doing good or worthy work, and, however successful he may be, little chance of his ekeing out more than the most precarious living, unless he finds someone who will gamble in his talents and procure him the lease of a theatre. It is hardly too much to say there is scarcely an actor living who is content with being an actor: his one ambition is to be a manager, or, rather, an actor-manager. He is not wanted as an actor in London, he knows he cannot exist; his only chance is to find a backer, or collect a few pounds—and gamble.

And so theatres spring up like mushrooms in the night; scenic artists are always busy, the stage-hands of London theatres are formed into a powerful, united body, composed of clever, intelligent men, who earn excellent wages; in certain districts the shops of theatrical costumiers even rival in number the local public houses. A splendid and flourishing business is done by the sub-letting of programmes and cloak-rooms. Many dressmakers have been helped to fame and fortune by modern theatrical productions—and what ordinary woman can resist the temptation of wearing fifty-guinea dresses, and possibly being paid a few shillings a week for doing so?—Yours faithfully,

ARTHUR APPLIN.

MISS GRACE HARLINGTON has been re-engaged by Mr. Frank Bertram to play Batty in his autumn tour of The Breed of the Treshams.

COPY OF TESTIMONIAL to the Chemical Cleaning Company. July 22, 1908. From E. Oswald Brooks, Sole Lessee and Manager, Grand Theatre, Swansea. T. Harris, Esq.—Dear Mr. Harris,—Please accept my best thanks for the excellent way in which you have carried out the work I recently entrusted to you. Both my wife and myself are extremely pleased with the manner in which you have executed our commissions.—Kind regards, yours faithfully, E. OSWALD BROOKS. [ADVT.]

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham is completing negotiations by which Captain Robert Marshall will furnish him with a new play for use in the near future. Meanwhile, The Mollusc, which celebrates its 250th performance at the Criterion on Monday, is being so much sought after that its run might well be continued until the production of the new comedy by the same author, Mr. Hubert Henry Davies, of which Miss Mary Moore will be the principal figure. When the time arrives for Sir Charles and Miss Moore to reappear together, it will be in a new comedy by Walter Ellis, entitled The Duke and the Demi-God, the personages of the title being respectively an English aristocrat and an American millionaire.

The theatrical stage is temporarily to be deprived of the services of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Alfred Butt, the manager of the Palace, having succeeded in inducing the distinguished couple to enter into an engagement to appear at the Palace in the course of next year. Mr. and Mrs. Bouchier will be touring the provinces up to the end of January, returning to the Garrick early in February, so that their appearance at the variety theatre is some distance ahead. They will be seen in several small plays associated with their names, and in all probability some novelties will also be produced.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will embark upon a short provincial tour, starting on Sept. 14, with Mr. Pinero's play The Thunderbolt. Mrs. Campbell will herself sustain the part of Phyllis Mortimore, and her daughter, Miss Stella Campbell, will have the rôle of Helen Thornhill. Performances of a German version of Electra, and of Hervieu's La Course du Flambeau, both of which have been translated into English by Mr. Arthur Symons, will also be given in the course of the tour.

An event is announced at the West Pier, Brighton, for next week which ought to attract the attention of the many Londoners who have been interested in the establishment by Miss Horniman of a répertoire theatre in Manchester. A distinctive feature of the enterprise has been the bringing together of a permanent company whose all-round excellence, rather than the prominence of any particular member, has been secured. The company has not confined its operations to Manchester, but has made excursions to other dramatic centres with most gratifying results, winning admiration in every town visited.

In addition to staging plays by Shakespeare, Rostand, St. John Hankin, and Charles McEvoy, as well as bringing forward some promising new authors, Miss Horniman's company has made a feature of Mr. Bernard Shaw's plays, two of which they will perform on their visit to Brighton. Candida is announced for Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings and Saturday matinée, and Widowers' Houses for Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings and Wednesday matinée. The productions have been all under the direction of the general-manager, Mr. B. Iden Payne. The company returns to Manchester in September, and in the meantime the Gaiety Theatre in that town, which has been purchased by Miss Horniman, is being rebuilt.

Hearty congratulations have been given to Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Blumenthal (Miss Marie Montrose), who on the 17th inst. had a welcome addition to their household in the shape of a daughter. Miss Montrose will be well remembered by London playgoers as a charming ingenue and vocalist. She made her first appearance at Drury-lane, when no more than six years of age, in the part of Mamillius in A Winter's Tale, and after an interval in which to complete her education, went on tour with a juvenile opera company. She was the principal girl of Sir Augustus Harris's Dick Whittington at Drury-lane in 1894, and her panto-mime engagements have been numerous. She has also won fame in musical comedy, one of her greatest successes being as Tina in My Sweetheart.

Mr. H. Cecil Beryl, who has won such popularity during his long association with the Theatre Royal, Brighton, which has now come into possession of Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton, is to be the object of a public testimonial. Alderman Colbourne, J.P., of Brighton, is the treasurer of a fund which has been opened, and an influential committee includes the Mayor of Brighton and the Mayor of Hove. Promises of support have been received from the Duchess of Marlborough, the Hon. Mrs. Campion, and many others.

The extent of Mr. Beryl's work during his long sojourn at Brighton hardly needs any allusion, so well is it known not only in the popular town itself, but in the metropolis and other parts of the kingdom. His connection with the theatre has extended over eleven years, namely from March 25, 1897, but many years prior to that date he had made a name both as actor and manager. One of his earliest engagements was with the stock company at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, where he widened his knowledge and developed his talents as an actor. Later he secured an engagement with Mr. and Mrs. John Billington as leading juvenile, both on tour and at the Globe Theatre. Subsequently Mr. Beryl created the parts of Harry Valentine in Rough and Ready and Lieutenant Lisney in Paul Merritt's play, Olive Branch.

Mr. Beryl entered upon managerial work by becoming lessee of the Lincoln theatre. Next he was found booking and managing the first tour of Diplomacy, with a cast including J. H. Barnes, J. D. Beveridge, E. D. Ward, Miss Carlisle, and Miss Sophie Eyre. Then Mr. Beryl settled down in Scotland, and for several years directed the affairs of the Royal Princess's and Grand Theatres in Glasgow, and the Edinburgh Theatre Royal. Following upon his Scotch experience, Mr. Beryl conducted tours for Mr. Wilson Barrett and Mrs. Bernard Beere. In 1892 the Nottingham Theatre Co., Limited, secured his services as manager, and then came his advent to the Theatre Royal, Brighton, which has been productive of such gratifying results.

Apart from the theatrical profession, Mr. Beryl has done much good public work since he has been in Brighton. He was for some time a zealous and valued member of the Brighton Town Council, and when he retired in 1905 he was the recipient of a copy of a resolution passed by the Pavilion committee according him a hearty vote of thanks for his valuable services as chairman of the committee during the year, and his unvarying courtesy to the members on all occasions. An expression of sincere regret occasioned to them through his retirement from the council was added.

Many congratulations have reached Mr. J. Langdon Lee, resident-manager of the Royal and Grand Theatres, Plymouth, who was married this week to Miss Kathleen Winter, youngest daughter of Mr. Winter, South Brent. The ceremony, which took place at Holy Cross Church, Tothill, was performed by the Rev. Father Kane. The bride looked very charming in her travelling dress, which was of two shades of brown. Mr. A. E. Pine (brother-in-law of the bridegroom) acted as "best man," and among the relatives present were Mrs. A. E. Pine and Miss Lee, sisters of the bridegroom. The honeymoon is being spent in South Devon.

The new play by Hall Caine and Louis N. Parker, based upon the former gentleman's novel "The Manxman," will be produced at the Lyceum on Saturday, Aug. 29. Mr. Ernest Carpenter on Monday will read to the members of the company the first two acts of the piece, for which a definite title has not yet been decided upon. The Lyceum version of the popular story contains much fresh matter, and one of the most picturesque scenes will be that of the historic Castle Rushen, where the ceremonials connected with the crowning of the old kings of the island took place. Mr. Matheson Lang will be the Pete, the character associated with the name of the late Wilson Barrett, and Miss Hutin Britton the Kate.

Miss Lena Ashwell, whose sister is the foundress and patroness of the pretty little Frances Club for actresses at 425, Strand, has written to Mr. Frank Desprez thanking him for a gift of a set of pictures for the walls of the dining-room of the club.

Mr. Martin Harvey, whose season at the Adelphi Theatre opens on Sept. 9, with The Corsican Brothers, has engaged Miss Mary Rorke for the part of Madame dei Franchi and Mr. Vincent Sternroyd for that of Chateau-Renaud. The Conspiracy, the new one-act play (which has not yet been seen in London), will also be in the initial bill.

The death occurred on the 13th inst of Mrs. Nancy Beattie, formerly lessee of the Blackburn Theatre Royal. The deceased lady was in her sixty-second year, and passed away at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Young, in Revidge Mount, Blackburn, after an illness extending over seven weeks. A native of Pudsey, Mrs. Beattie's maiden name was Miss Baker, and she married Mr. Charles Henry Scholes, who was better known as Mr. C. H. Duval. In the late sixties Mr. Duval became lessee of the Blackburn Theatre Royal, and upon his death, about 1884, Mrs. Duval remained lessee.

Some years later she married Mr. William Chalmers Beattie, who died about ten years ago. In 1886 the theatre was bought and re-built by Mr. E. F. Elliston, and for some time afterwards Mrs. Beattie remained at the theatre. Later she removed to other towns, but for the last four years has resided in Blackburn. The funeral took place at the Blackburn Cemetery on the 16th inst.

The private performance of the prohibited play, Three Weeks, adapted from Mrs. Elinor Glyn's novel, was duly given at the Adelphi on Thursday. There was a distinguished audience, including Prince Francis of Teck, the Duchess of Rutland, Lord Curzon, and the Austrian and German Ambassadors, and among the members of the profession were to be found Sir Charles Wyndham, Miss Mary Moore, and Miss Alexandra Carlisle.

The piece, which was produced by Mr. Charles Hawtrey, was staged in a most lavish manner. The authoress herself took the part of the Queen, or, as she was described throughout the play, "The Lady." A few departures from the novel were noticeable in the play, the chief point of difference being in the final interview of the young Englishman with the Queen, just before the latter is murdered by her husband. A prologue had also been added. A noteworthy incident of the afternoon was the serving of tea at intervals by imposing-looking servants in knee-breeches and silk stockings.

A large attendance of both bodies was present at the joint meeting of the Shakespeare Memorial Committee and the National Theatre Shakespeare Memorial Committee, held at the Mansion House on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. The gathering was convened for the purpose of proposals being set forth for the amalgamation of the two committees.

Resolutions were unanimously carried as follows:—1. That the Shakespeare Memorial Committee consist of the members of the present Shakespeare Memorial Committee and the members of the present National Theatre Shakespeare Memorial Committee. 2. That an executive committee be elected, consisting of twenty-one members, with the addition of an hon. secretary and a secretary, and with power to add to their number.

The following were elected members of the executive committee:—The Earl of Plymouth, the Earl of Lytton, Viscount Esher, the Lord Mayor, Sir John Hare, Dr. Furnivall, Mr. Wm. Archer, Mr. H. Granville Barker, Mr. S. H. Butcher, K.C., M.P., Mr. J. Comyns Carr, Mr. Sidney Colvin, Mr. W. L. Courtney, Mr. Robt. Donald, Mrs. G. L. Gomme, Mr. Edmund Gosse, Mr. Sidney Lee, Mr. Sidney Low, Mr. H. W. Massingham, Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Mr. G. B. Shaw, Prof. I. Gollancz (hon. secretary), and Mr. Philip Carr (secretary). It was further resolved to invite Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree and Mr. Forbes-Robertson to join the executive committee.

The Shakespeare Theatre will be the scene on Monday next of the first production on any stage of the new drama by Mary Ford, entitled The Power of Lies. Mr. Marshall Moore will produce the piece, and a strong cast has been selected. Incidental music, of which a feature has been made, has been composed by Mr. Michael Connolly. Entirely new scenery has been painted. Mr. Otto Minster will play the juvenile lead. The production is under the general direction of Mr. Charles R. Hardy.

Miss Mary Ford (Mrs. Charles Howitt) will create the attractively-drawn character Margaret Hardie in her drama, The Power of Lies, to be produced at the Shakespeare on Monday. Miss Gladys Ford-Howitt (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howitt) is the schoolgirl heroine. The gowns worn by Mrs. Howitt and her daughter are said by competent judges to be delightful creations.

Baron Harriss's principal Prince of Pilsen company, with Miss Sophie Harriss as the bright, particular star, embarks upon its fifth tour at the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, next week.

The prize for amateurs for ladies taking part in the competition under the auspices of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, held at the Playhouse on the 17th inst., was won by Miss Eve Jame. The George Alexander prize for Elocution at the Guildhall School of Music was awarded to Miss Anais Holbrook, and the School prize to Miss M. A. Farrell on Monday last. All three ladies are pupils of Mr. Cairns James, professor of elocution at the Royal College of Music, and Guildhall School of Music, and principal of the School of Musical and Dramatic Art, New Oxford-street.

The recent production of A Midsummer Night's Dream at the Theatre Royal, Worcester, for the Shakespearean Festival was so successful that there has been a great demand for reproductions of the comedy for Pastorals. One was given at Pershore on the 17th inst., when Mr. Arthur Carlton's daughter Elsie appeared as Puck with very great success, receiving a handsome bouquet at the end of the performance. An acknowledgment of Mr. C. H. Croker-King's ability as the producer was made by Colonel Hudson, who, while presenting him with a handsome laurel wreath on behalf of the Cottage Hospital, spoke very highly of the great talent he had displayed as the stage-director.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's Mrs. Ponderbury's Past company, which includes Mr. George Mudie, Miss Annie Stalman, and Miss Florence Wix, started a most successful tour at Blackpool on Monday. The house was crowded, and much enthusiasm was aroused. This merry farce, which ran for over eight months in London at the Vaudeville Theatre, is booked right up to next April.

Mme. Yvette Guilbert will make her appearance on the London dramatic stage in an adaptation of the comedy Mariage d'Etoile, which was produced at the Paris Vaudeville some two months ago. The story is that of a wealthy young man, who is betrothed to the daughter of a famous actress, but finds himself yielding to the fascinations of the mother. Mme. Guilbert's rôle will be that of the actress alluded to, and she will be supported by an English company. The version will be made by Mr. Edward Knoblauch, the adaptor of The Shulamite, and the production will take place at a West End theatre in the course of next year.

"The Early Worm" has definitely been decidedly upon as the title of Mr. Frederick Lonsdale's new comedy, which is to be produced at Wyndham's on Tuesday, Sept. 1. The cast is a most attractive one, and will include Mr. Weedon Grossmith, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. Alfred Bishop, Mr. Wilfred Draycott, Mr. A. W. Baskcomb, Miss Muriel Beaumont, and Miss Fanny Brough.

Mr. Lonsdale's musical play, which is to be produced at the Prince of Wales's on Sept. 3, is to be called Princess Marie, in place of The Queen of Cadonia, the title originally fixed upon. Mr. Adrian Ross is responsible for the lyrics and Mr. Sidney Jones for the score. Included in the cast will be Miss Isabel Jay, Miss Gracie Leigh, Mr. George Barrett, and Mr. Huntley Wright.

The performances of King Harry's Revel which are to take place at Serlby Hall, Bawtry, the seat of Viscount Galway, on Aug. 6, 7, and 8, promise to be of great interest. The revel has been arranged by Lady Galway, and is being produced by Mr. M. V. Leveaux. Besides writing the "book," Lady Galway is to play the part of the Lady Idonea de Serlby, and the cast also includes Countess Fitzwilliam, Lady Knaresborough, Lady Katherine Pilkington, Lady Evelyn James, the Hon. Mrs. Sandars, the Hon. Violet and Helen Meysey Thomson, Mrs. Whittaker, Viscount Galway, the Hon. R. James, Colonel A. E. Whitaker, Captain Kennard, Captain Rankin, Captain Skeffington Smyth, the Rev. C. Scott Moncrieff, and the Rev. F. Burney.

The active members of "Le Cercle Artistique," we are told, will be scattered all over the provinces in the fulfilment of their autumn engagements, but a certain number hope to be in town in September, when they will give another entertainment consisting of a dramatisation of one of Guy de Maupassant's short stories, together with selections from Browning and a new wordless play set to classical music. Full particulars may be obtained of the secretary, 69, Huron-road, Balham.

"What the Butler Saw" will start its sixth tour on August Bank Holiday and visit Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and most of the principal provincial theatres. Mr. Lionel Rignold will once again be seen as that inquisitive but humorous individual, the Butler, a part in which he has already amused and delighted many thousand playgoers.

Miss Grace Lester concludes to-night at the Islington Empire a special re-engagement with Mr Alan Holt's sketch, A Society Woman, and is re-engaged by Mr. Frederick Melville for autumn, commencing at the Coronet Theatre, Aug. 3.

Mr. R. A. Roberts, the world-famous protean actor, is hard at work this week and next rehearsing his company for his forthcoming tour of his four-act domestic drama, Straight from the Shoulder. In addition, Mr. Roberts is, on alternate nights, playing his sketches, Dick Turpin and Ringing the Changes, twice nightly at Hackney, a sufficient proof of the clever performer's fondness for work.

Mr. Frank J. Pitt, who has successfully toured the powerful detective drama, £1000 Reward, for the last two years, is taking a short rest at Torquay next week, previous to commencing his autumn tour at the Prince's Theatre, Portsmouth.

At a special general meeting of the Playgoers' Club, held on Monday, it was resolved: "That this meeting accepts in principle the suggested amalgamation of the O.P. Club with the Playgoers, but refers back to the Playgoers' Club Committee the whole question of terms, to be submitted to a subsequent general meeting for confirmation. A sub-committee consisting of Messrs. F. S. Hess, E. J. Bevan, L. E. Harfield, W. Sparks, W. R. Bennett, E. A. Whitehouse, and J. Sharpe was appointed to arrange the matter.

Mr. E. H. Knight's company starts its tour with the new play The Lighthouse Robbery at the Lyric, Hammersmith, on Monday. The company includes Mr. Stanley Bedwell, Mr. H. Wallace Curnock, Mr. Wilfred Mansfield, Mr. Herbert Lewis, Mr. Willie Reid, Miss Francesca Strickland, Miss Maggie Stewart, Little Ethel Lovett, and Miss Hilda Baynton. The scenery, which is most effective, includes an elaborate revolve from the interior to the exterior of the lighthouse.

Mr. Tom B. Davis has engaged Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cane for the parts of Israel Hart, the Hebrew moneylender, and his sister Anna, in Miss Evelyn Millard's production at the Garrick Theatre of Idols, adapted by Mr. Roy Horniman from Mr. W. J. Locke's novel of that name. Many of our readers will doubtless remember Mr. Cane's clever performance of Ezra Lazareck in New Babylon, a character he represented over 1,000 times.

The short Yiddish season at the Pavilion Theatre opened on Monday night to a large and enthusiastic audience, when an excellent company, under the direction of Mr. M. D. Waxman, gave a very fine performance of Captain Dreyfus. The crowded audience welcomed their favourites with floral tributes, accompanied by many gifts of a personal character. A change of play has been given each night.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Sam Arthur, who passed away at the West London Hospital, Hammersmith, on the 17th inst. The deceased actor was the son of the late Mr. Charles E. Geary, of Lowestoft, and was only thirty-nine years of age. His last appearance was made at the Grand Theatre, Walsall, on Feb. 10, when he played Captain Jack Fortescue in A Fight for a Throne. His death, which was due to heart disease, was unexpected but peaceful. The funeral took place at Chiswick Cemetery on Tuesday amid many tokens of regret.

Mr. W. W. Keene, who has been for many years associated with Mr. Lewis Waller in his productions, has resigned his position at the Lyric Theatre to assume the general management of the Répertoire Theatre Syndicate, which operates at the Theatre Royal, Margate. The Association is considerably enlarging its operations, and proposes to make the production of new plays its principal work.

"The Sins of Society," the latest Drury-lane triumph, is shortly to be given at the leading suburban and provincial theatres, Mr. F. W. Bolam having acquired the entire English rights of the piece. The cast includes Miss Pattie Browne, Miss Grace Leslie, Miss Dorothy Giles, Miss Janet Hodson, and Messrs. Blake Adams, C. F. Collings, Frederick Annesley, E. Vassall Vaughan, and Edwin Palmer. The tour, which will be under the management of Mr. L. Ashton-Jarry, starts at the Borough Theatre, Stratford, on August Bank Holiday.

Covent Garden Opera House will be in the hands of the builders for some time after the close of the present season, when rearrangements are to be made for the greater comfort of the occupants of the pit and grand tier boxes by the alteration of the slope of the partitions. Fireproof walnut frames are to be introduced, and the dividing walls so arranged that the stage will be almost as easily overlooked from the back as from the front of these boxes.

In lieu of the usual autumn season, four weeks of opera in English, under the auspices of the Grand Opera Syndicate, will be given next year, starting on Jan. 16. Three complete cycles of Der Ring des Nibelungen, under Dr. Hans Richter, are promised, and the first performance of Dr. Naylor's prize opera, The Angelus, is also included in the scheme.

Opera-lovers will not, however, be left to languish during the autumn, for the Moody-Manners' company will again be found at the Lyric, where its annual season of opera in English at popular prices will begin on Aug. 17. The répertoire will include Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, Die Meistersinger, Tristan, Aïda, Faust, Il Trovatore, Madame Butterfly, La Bohème, Pagliacci, and Cavalleria Rusticana. Mr. Philip Brozel, who has made such vast progress in his profession during the last few years, will be the principal tenor.

Recent awards at the Royal Academy of Music have been made as follows:—The Charles Lucas prize, for composition, has been awarded to Eleanor C. Rudall, a native of London; the Schloesser prize, for accompanying, to Kathleen Thomson, of Bristol; the Frederick Westlake memorial prize, for pianoforte, to Helen M. Dodd, of Newcastle-on-Tyne; the Anne E. Lloyd exhibition, for singing, to Eugenie Ritte, of London; the Parepa-Rosa prize, for sopranos, to Alice Baxter, of Nottingham; the Julia Leney prize, for harp, to Dot Lyons, of London; and the Joseph Maas prize, for tenors, to Andrew Jones, of Bangor.

The Walter Macfarren gold medals, for pianoforte, have been awarded to Dorothy L. Grinstead and Ambrose Coviello; Messrs. James Tubbs and Son's prize was secured by Henry O. Parsons; Messrs. Hill and Son's prize goes to Evan Williams; the Dove prize has been awarded to Elsie Owen; and the Charlotte Walters prizes have been gained by the Misses Elsie May Davidson and Florence A. Hudson. The Betjemann gold medal (operatic singing) has been awarded to Mary Fielding; the Ridley Prentice memorial prize to Clara Smith; the Charles Rube prize (ensemble playing), to Henry O. Parsons, Elsie Owen, Edwin Quaife, and John Mundy; and the Hannah Mayer Fitzroy prize (violin) to Edwin Quaife. Melba prizes have been secured by Mary Fielding and Marie I. Wadia, the Bowen gift by Hettie Franklin, and the Alexander Roller prize (pianoforte) by Percy Hughes.

Mr. Ernest A. Douglas has been engaged by Mr. Wm. Greet for an important part in his production of The Old Firm at the Tyne, Newcastle, on Aug. 17.

We offer to Mr. Reginald Grant, the popular manager of the New Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, our congratulations on his marriage, which took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst. On the previous evening Mr. Grant was made the recipient of a beautiful silver tea service by the members of the theatre staff, with whom he is distinctly popular. Mr. W. W. Kelly, in making the presentation, spoke of Mr. Grant's popularity, and wished him, on behalf of himself and staff, every happiness. Mr. Grant briefly replied on behalf of himself and his bride, and said the gift would be one of his most valuable possessions.

The final of the London Inter-Theatre Golf Tournament was decided on the Huntercombe Links on Wednesday. In the result Queen's Theatre beat Lyric Theatre by 2 points to 1, thus securing possession, for a year, of the challenge shield. For Queen's Mr. Fred Leslie, jun., beat Mr. F. Brereton, and Mr. Arthur Hart beat Mr. Victor Lewis, while Mr. Dan Rolyat lost to Mr. A. E. George.

The Theatre Royal, Torquay, during the summer recess has undergone considerable improvement. By the abolition of the old staircase leading from the pit to the gallery, accommodation has been made for nearly a hundred additional persons in the pit. In the orchestra stalls the seats have been re-upholstered, whilst new carpet has been provided throughout the theatre. Improvements have been effected in the lighting of the vestibule and the corridors, whilst the latter have been decorated to match the foyer. Numerous other renovations have been carried out, and altogether a sum of about £250 has been spent in decorations and alterations.

Worksop, in North Notts, has long been without proper accommodation for theatrical performances, but this defect will shortly be remedied, and in a most practical and up-to-date manner. Hitherto the Criterion Hall in Bridge-street has done duty as a theatre, but it has been a mere apology, and the proprietor, Mr. S. Goodman, has, with commendable enterprise, decided to transform the old hall into an up-to-date modern theatre. With this object in view the hall has been gutted, the roof taken off, and the old balcony taken down, nothing being left of the old fabric but the side walls. The stage accommodation, the brickwork of which is nearing completion, is on a very large scale, and built to something like twice the height of the old stage, with of course proper grid and fly accommodation and appliances, the space being such as will provide adequately for the largest companies travelling.

Underneath the stage new and spacious dressing-rooms are being built, and the whole of the scenery will be new. The floor of the old hall has been taken up, and will be relaid in a sloping direction towards the stage, so that all in the pit may have a good view of the stage, and the hall will be tastefully decorated. The dress circle is to be beautifully upholstered and laid with carpet throughout, and the entrance to this part will be separate from that to the pit. The theatre will also be fitted up with electric light and limelights. There will be two emergency exits and lavatory accommodation, ladies' cloak-room, and all other necessary adjuncts provided. An important feature of the alteration will be the ventilation, which will be carried out by Messrs. Shorland Brothers, of Manchester, on the most scientific lines, and altogether it is intended to make the theatre one of the best in the provinces. It will be named the "Gaiety Theatre," and will be opened on Sept. 10 with the musical comedy The Dandy Fifth.

Mr. Will H. Thorne, the well-known actor, has been carrying off swimming honours, and was the winner of the Serpentine S.C. 55yds. veterans' handicap, which was decided on the Hyde Park lake on the 16th inst. The age limit is forty-five years, but the majority were well above that figure, one competitor being eighty-one and another seventy-six. Mr. Thorne, who completed his half-century six years ago, had a start of 17sec., and won a well-contested race by a foot, his time being 1min. 38 1-5 sec.

The usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union was held on Tuesday afternoon at Hummums Hotel, Mrs. Walter Bentley presiding. Others present were Messrs. D. Lewin Mannering, Chas. Calvert, Cecil G. Calvert, Ewart Drake, Carl Lyle, W. Ruddle Brown, Geo. P. Lester, W. Macready, C. C. Grattan, Jerrold Heather, Fred F. Loyd, Frank Copeland, Sydney N. Hallowes, Edwin Wilde, Fred Jacques, Paul Lovett, Edward Y. Rae, Chas. V. Sandford, Harry G. Rutland, Charlie Clarke, and Alfred Terris; and Mesdames Bessie Armytage, Maud Henley, Kitty Marion, Bessie Bedford, Carina McAllister, Mlle. Vere, Eva Lumley, Adelaide Gracey, Ruby Wyndham, May Conrade, Mary Lovett, Maud Kirwan, Elsie Sinclair, Florence Creagh, Mrs. Henry Belding, Gertrude Gilbert, T. Silvestre, Emma Stockley, and Constance Bromley.

The chairwoman, in the course of her remarks, strongly urged the foundation of a school for the use of children whose parents were members of the Actors' Union, so that the youngsters could be properly educated and cared for while the fathers and mothers were on tour. Mr. Jerrold Heather and Mr. William Macready spoke in support of Mrs. Bentley's proposal, and the latter gentleman gave instances of brutal treatment of actors' children. Mrs. Bentley further suggested that the A.U. should write to stage-managers and others in reference to the late hours at which chorus girls and poorer members of a company were kept at rehearsals, many of the girls being compelled to walk long distances at night owing to their having lost the last train or tram. She would be pleased to contribute to the postal expenses.

It was explained at the private meeting which followed that the proposed club would be run independently of the Union, inasmuch as the funds of the A.U. would not be used in carrying the club on, and, on the contrary, it was hoped that the club would subsidise the Union.

Mr. G. Morton-Williams has been engaged by Messrs. Northway and Garrod to create the heavy lead in their production of A Country Girl in London, which takes place at the Theatre Royal, Macclesfield, on Saturday next.

Mr. Charles Bradford and his wife, Miss Brenda Leslie, who have just concluded a nine months' tour of the provincial theatres with Mr. J. H. Tomkinson's No. 1 Royal Gipsy company, have been re-engaged for his 1908-1909 tour, starting in September.

Miss Violet Osmund's company will produce The Belle of the Ball, a musical comedy, in three acts and four scenes, by L. Norden, music by E. T. De Banzie and Michael Dwyer, for the first time, at the Opera House, Southport, on Monday. The cast is a strong one, and includes Robert Hyett, Gertrude Melville, Maude Terry, and Johnnie Schofield. Elaborate scenery has been painted for this production by T. Robinson, of Liverpool. Mr. Alexander Loftus, who is producing the play, has been rehearsing at the Opera House, Southport, for the last two weeks. It was at this theatre, and under his management, that The New Barmaid was launched on her successful career some fourteen years ago.

At the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, Messrs. Murray King and Clark were on Wednesday night honoured by the presence of the Mayor and Mayoress of Eastbourne, the Mayor and Mayoress of Dieppe, and the Mayor of Boulogne. The performance was that of the new play, The Lady of the Pageant, in which Mr. Louis Calvert appeared in his clever creation of a remarkable Frenchman.

Miss Beth Elliott, who has for the last eleven months been conspicuously successful in the part of Josephine, in Mr. W. W. Kelly's A Royal Divorce, is taking a well-earned rest at Colwyn Bay. The highest praise has been given this talented young actress by the managers of the theatres visited, by Mr. Kelly himself, and by the Press and public. We may hope that Londoners will soon have an opportunity of seeing her in a similar rôle.

In the hall of the Battersea Polytechnic on Saturday the scholars of the secondary schools gave a performance of In the Days of Chaucer, a pastoral interlude, written by Miss E. F. Ohlson. It was in two scenes, the first in a garden behind the Tabard Inn, Southwark, and the second at St. Thomas-a-Watering, a meadow on the road to Canterbury, the period being 1386. Mr. Janan deserved credit for the general organisation. The music was specially composed by Mr. J. P. Attwater, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O., and the costumes were made by the Girls' School and the properties by the Boys' School, the authority of the celebrated Ellesmere manuscript being followed. The result was a picturesque and pleasing entertainment.

The committee of the M.C.C. have generously granted another date this season for the Actors v. Authors match, which was completely spoiled by rain last week. The game will be played at Lord's on Thursday, Sept. 3, and all tickets sold for July 16 and not used will be available on the later date. The match is for the benefit of the Actors' Benevolent and Orphanage Funds, and as considerable expense was incurred last week with no reimbursement from the gate, it is hoped that a large number of tickets may be sold. Books of tickets will be forwarded to any members of the profession who will endeavour to dispose of them on application to Mr. H. Nye Chart, Westbury, Carlton-road, Putney, or to Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, the Playhouse.

At Bow-street, on Thursday, Sir A. de Rutzen gave his decision in the case against the Waldorf Theatre Syndicate, Ltd., and Mr. George Frederick Hughes Morgan, who were jointly summoned, by the Westminster City Council, for the non-payment of rates amounting to £1253 9s. 4d., due in respect of the Waldorf Theatre. Details of the case have already appeared in our columns.

The magistrate said that it had been argued on behalf of the defendants that there had been no occupation on the part of the receiver, and in support of that contention a case had been quoted in which it was decided that the appointment of a receiver, under somewhat similar circumstances, did not constitute a change of occupation. He (the magistrate) was bound by that decision, and that put an end to the case so far as the receiver was concerned, and necessarily so far as the syndicate was concerned. Therefore, the summons must be dismissed, and he felt sorry for the Westminster City Council that it must be so. He should be pleased to state a case for the higher Court if he was asked to do so. An application for costs was refused.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Tree and "Alexander."

MR. BEERBOHM TREE was laying a foundation-stone the other day, and, to round off his speech, he improvised, on the spur of the moment, the following "quotation":—

"Oh, that as easy were the use of verb and vowel
As is the deft manipulation of a trowel."

After the ceremony, one of the City Fathers, a very puffy and important old gentleman, came up to Mr. Tree and said to him severely: "Excuse me, sir, but I do not remember the quotation you introduced into your speech." "What!" said Mr. Tree, "have you never read your Pope?"

Irving Anecdotes.

"ON one occasion," says Mr. Walter Herries Pollock, in his "Impressions of Henry Irving," just published by Longmans, Green, and Co., "I was sitting in the audience during the scene in the Witch's Kitchen. The action was just nearing the point where the Witch, failing to recognise Mephistopheles, turns and rends him as an intruding malapert, whereto he gives a fantastical retort. Something had distracted my attention from the stage (I had seen the play a good many times), and when I looked again Mephistopheles was gabbling some partly intelligible jargon at top speed, and laying much more stoutly than usual about him with a whisk to overturn and shatter the crockery on the shelf above the couch on which he half reclined. Meanwhile the Witch stood aghast and astounded, as well she might. I was puzzled because I had just missed the clue to this unaccustomed departure, which was accepted by the larger part of the audience as a diverting and intentional incident in the scene. What had happened was this. Mead was playing the Witch with his usual excellence. But his memory failed him, as now and then it would do, after he had burst through the cloud of lurid smoke; and he stood literally struck dumb for the moment. Irving took in the situation at a glance, and spoke as quickly as he could all the words he could remember of the Witch's speech, filling it in with nonsense phrases, and giving to the jumble a tone as of one who could read the Witch's thoughts. Here was an instance of the "double consciousness" employed by the actor, who, never forgetting the character he impersonates, is yet at all moments ready to cover up and repair any mishap or mistake in the stage business by which he is surrounded.

A PRECISELY similar incident took place in The Lyons Mail, when the player of Lesurques's father, appearing while the robbery, with murder, of the mail is in full blast, forgot to utter the fateful words addressed to Dubosc, 'My son!' Quick as thought Irving improvised the words, 'I am not your son!' thus implying those which ought to have been spoken, and almost simultaneously with the utterance fired the pistol which wounds the old man. The rapidity and the noise of the whole thing was more than enough to prevent general perception that anything had been slurred or omitted, or that the improvised words were in fact sheer nonsense, since Dubosc was entirely ignorant that his double or his double's father had any existence.

"ANOTHER instance from Faust is somewhat different in kind. This was noted in the scene of the sword fight between Faust and Valentine, with Mephistopheles at the back giving, beyond the knowledge of Valentine, the aid of his sword to Faust's. The scene was most carefully got up, and was in its way a special feature in the whole performance. The swords when crossed flashed fire, not the "shower of sparks" defined and approved by Mr. Vincent Crummles, but an eerie, lambent, blue flame, due to ingenious electrical apparatus. This involved the wearing of special non-conducting gloves by Faust and Valentine. On this occasion the player who was undertaking the part of Valentine at very short notice, had, not unnaturally in the circumstances, forgotten when he was called for the stage to put on his glove. Consequently, at the first crossing of the blades, he got a full shock, and, during the whole of the fight, considerately shortened, had to do his best, bravely enough, under the assault of repeated shocks. The mocking mirth of the aiding and watching Mephistopheles was usually restrained, sometimes was confined to a sardonic smile. On that night it was very audible, insistent, effective. And here was an instance of the actor's double consciousness merged into unity. Mephistopheles could not properly stop to inquire into Valentine's misfortunes or to express any sympathy. But it was quite in keeping with the character that he should laugh at Valentine's unavailing efforts. Thus, then, the surprise of the actor-manager and the devilish merriment of Mephistopheles found absolutely common ground in as natural and appropriate a laugh as could be given on any stage."

"IN connection with Two Roses, one incident, by force of its oddity, has stuck in my memory. One night (it was probably the first night), in a spirited scene with Jack Wyatt, played by Mr. Charles Warner, one half of Irving's moustache fell off. Deftly, and taking cover under his tall hat, Irving removed the other half, and appeared with a shaven lip through the rest of the play. The person most to be pitied was Mr. Warner, who, facing Irving, saw the whole thing, and preserved gravity enough to prevent any infection of tittering in the audience. Wherefore I presently, in print, congratulated Irving and Mr. Warner on presence of mind preserved throughout 'a stage accident.' Thereon a kindly critic, writing of theatrical affairs at large, and thinking that folk might be unduly alarmed, reassured them in his feuilleton by explaining that the 'stage accident' was nothing worse than the loss of half a moustache."

A Safety Bucket.

THEY enforce the regulations against theatre fires in France, and are nothing if not official. M. Paul Mounet appeared at Havre recently as the Missionary Bishop in Le Duel. As he lighted a cigar at the wings, an officer of the Fire Brigade informed him that he must not smoke in the theatre. "But it is in the play," explained M. Mounet; "I am smoking as I go on, and then I throw my cigar on the stage." "Very well," replied the officer. So M. Mounet made his entrée as usual, but following him were two firemen, one with a bucket of water and the other with a huge sponge. The audience, appreciating the situation, roared and applauded with delight, and M. Mounet carefully deposited his cigar in the bucket and wiped his fingers on the sponge before proceeding with the dialogue.

A Stage Landslip.

THE late Mr. Alfred Dampier was a man of remarkable resource. At the old Melbourne Theatre he was once appearing as Starlight in Robbery Under Arms when the stage carpenters were unusually careless. Suddenly a backcloth and a pile of scenery came down with a crash, exposing the bleak brick interior behind. For a moment Starlight gazed at the ruin; then he yelled: "Aha! What did I foretell? The landslip—the landslip! Run for your lives!" And he headed the retreat as the curtain fell.

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

A SILVER WEDDING.

In one of Henri Murger's stories he alludes to a gathering of clever people as being different from most dinner-parties, in the fact que l'on s'amusait. When the number of diners exceeds that of the Muses, the assembly sometimes degenerates into that fearful thing, a "function." There was no danger of that happening in the "Pinafore" room at the Savoy Hotel last Tuesday evening, when a brilliant gathering took place to do honour to The Era, the occasion being the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Desprez. With such indefatigable raconteurs as Mr. Beerbohm Tree and Mr. E. S. Willard; with journalists like Mr. Ernest Parke, the editor of the Star, and Mr. W. J. Fisher, whose plucky contest of Canterbury was one of the exciting incidents of the last election; with witty and pretty women like Miss Adrienne Dairolles (Mrs. W. J. Fisher) and Miss Eva Moore (Mrs. H. V. Esmond) (who was unable to stay the whole evening as she had to appear in The Explorer at the Lyric); with an ardent "Suffragist" like Mrs. Carl Hentschel; and with such an appropriate and interesting guest as Sir George Power, the original Ralph Rackstraw of H.M.S. Pinafore, there was no fear of things ever "falling flat." Also of the party were Mr. A. E. Newbould, Miss G. Kirkby, and Mr. Carl Hentschel. Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, who has not been so well of late, kindly looked in on the party assembled in the foyer. Unfortunately at this time many of the leading managers were otherwise engaged, and the following letters were regretfully sent and received:—

"MY DEAR MR. DESPREZ,—I would gladly have accepted your kind invitation on such an interesting occasion, but, alas! I am acting. It will be my last week or last week but one. Had it been later or on a Sunday I could have managed it. I shall be with you in spirit. Will you kindly present to Mrs. Desprez a trifling souvenir of my appreciation of the excellent manner she must have brought you up.—Yours very sincerely,
"CHARLES WYNDHAM.
"Criterion Theatre, Piccadilly, W.
"July 8."

"DEAR MR. DESPREZ,—I should have been only too delighted to have accepted your kind invitation for the 21st, but I regret to say I left London for my holiday last week, and shall not be there again until late in the autumn.—With all good wishes, yours very truly,
"JOHN HARE.
"Lower Hare Park, Newmarket.
"July 16."

"DEAR MR. DESPREZ,—Unfortunately we shall be holiday-making on the 21st and away from London, or we should have been delighted to be present at your silver wedding. We are sending you a little souvenir of the happy event as a slight token of appreciation of your excellent work in the service of the stage.—Yours sincerely,
"GEORGE ALEXANDER.
"57, Pont-street, S.W.
"July 8, 1908."

"DEAR MR. DESPREZ,—Please accept warmest congratulations from Mrs. Martin Harvey and myself on the happy occasion of your silver wedding.—Yours very sincerely,
"MARTIN HARVEY.
"Sheringham.
"July 21."

DEAR MR. DESPREZ,—Nothing would have given me greater pleasure than to have been present at your silver wedding. Unfortunately, I shall be out of town, but please ask me to your golden and diamond wedding. With kindest regards to you both.—Believe me, yours sincerely,
"GEORGE EDWARDES.

Letters of kindly congratulation were also received—from various parts of the kingdom and the Continent—from Miss Lena Ashwell, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Terry, Mr. Brandon Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson, and many other leading actors and actresses.

An amusing diversion was created in the course of the evening by a mystifying telegram from His Majesty's Theatre, signed "Tree," saying that he had been obliged to go to Marienbad, and wishing the happy pair "bimetallism." Mr. Tree was mercilessly chaffed at this imagined exposé of the methods by which his zealous and courtly secretary, Mr. Whelen, distributed artificial courtesies. When the laughter had subsided a second peal was evoked by the discovery that that inveterate farceur Mr. Tree had secretly sent the wire himself. In the course of the evening, Mr. Tree amused and delighted the guests by reading aloud to them Mr. Comyns Carr's translation of the very funny "Flea" song in the new version of Faust. It was agreed that Mr. Carr had dealt very skilfully with the difficulties of the German original.

Mr. E. S. WILLARD, rising to propose the health of Mr. and Mrs. Desprez, said that twenty-five years ago things in London were very different. There was then, for instance, no His Majesty's; and Shaftesbury-avenue had not been invented. The other day he heard a young lady, one of the minor lights of the drama, talking to a friend, who asked her where she lived, whether she was still in Brixton? To which the young person replied, "Brixton, indeed! Certainly not! Why, we've moved to Shaftesbury-avenue!" There were now no "knife-boards" on the omnibuses, and there would, he supposed, soon be no horse 'buses at all. He remembered in the old days of the Princess's he was sitting on the top of an omnibus, talking with a friend by his side, when the conductor gave him his change. Feeling that it was sixpence short, Mr. Willard made some remark to the man, who, returning, again tried to palm off on him a false balance. In the end, after a slight altercation, Mr. Willard was "paid in full," and as he was getting off the 'bus, the driver called to the conductor, "What an idiot yer was to try it on 'im, Bill! Why, that's the 'Spider'!" Some twenty-five years ago Mr. Frank Desprez, with the assistance of Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan (laughter), was drawing full houses at the Savoy (laughter), being in the habit of supplying the first pieces. They were acquainted with his work from the time he left writing plays to join the staff of The Era, his leading articles in which paper, dealing with thorough knowledge and understanding with the wants and feelings of the stage, had been deeply appreciated by the profession. Since then, as Editor, he had kept a watchful eye on its interests, and had always opposed anything that could injure or degrade the drama. He asked them to drink the health of Mr. and Mrs. Desprez, and to wish them every happiness and prosperity till the time of their golden wedding.

Mr. FRANK DESPREZ, in reply, said:—Ladies and gentlemen,—I am not about to spoil the effect of Mr. Willard's charming speech by making another. Indeed, there is nothing for me to say. My wife forbids me to praise her—in public; and Mr. Willard has left me very little to say in praise of myself. I thank Mr. Willard for his generous speech; I thank you for being present here to-night, and especially Mr. Tree for so kindly travelling from Harrogate to join our party; and I say, in the words that poor Henry Irving so often used on his first nights, "Thanks, thanks, and yet again, thanks!"

Amongst the numerous presents were a handsome silver jewel-case, from Sir Charles Wyndham; a beautiful silver table dish, from Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander; a handsome claret-jug, from Mrs. R. D'Oyly Carte; an elaborately chased solid silver tray, from Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Parke; a very pretty toilette-box, from Miss Adrienne Dairolles (Mrs. Fisher) and Mr. W. J. Fisher; a valuable silver salver, from Mr. Edward Ledger in Scotland; and two charming bonbonnières, from Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hentschel.

NOTABLE THEATRICAL WEDDING.

A theatrical marriage of considerable interest took place at the Church of the Ascension, Balham, on Sunday last, when Miss Bertha Kingston was united in wedlock to Mr. W. V. Garrod. The ceremony was a very quiet one, only a few relatives being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrod became acquainted six years ago, on Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's first tour of Under Two Flags, and on Mr. Garrod's entry into management some four years ago, in conjunction with Mr. Alfred Northway,

MR. W. V. GARROD.

Miss Kingston was engaged as leading lady, a position she has retained ever since, playing the principal rôles in The Sledge-Hammer, The Prodigal Parson, Still Waters Run Deep, The Sleigh Bells, Delicate Ground, &c. She is an accomplished musician, having won the bronze medal of Trinity College and bronze medal of London Academy, besides numerous honours certificates. Previous to entering the theatrical profession, Miss Kingston studied for three years at the Lambeth Art School, and the accomplishments thus gained have proved of great value in the designing of scenery and costumes for her husband's productions.

MISS BERTHA KINGSTON.
(Mrs. W. V. Garrod.)

After a course of training under Mrs. Crowe, Miss Kingston secured her first engagement about seven years ago, appearing in East Lynne, under the management of Mr. Pitt Hardacre. A lot of varied work followed, and then she appeared as Kyndrede in Every Man when Mr. Wm. Poel first revived the play at the Charterhouse.

This was followed by a tour with the Drury-lane drama, The Great Ruby. Then came several lengthy engagements with Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow, during which Miss Kingston played Cigarette and the Princess in Under Two Flags, Dorothy in The Adventure of Lady Ursula, Ottiline Mallinson in Lord and Lady Algy, Phœbe in As You Like It, and Lady Rassendyll in The Prisoner of Zenda. She was also engaged for the short-lived Sword of the King at Wyndham's Theatre. Between these engagements Miss Kingston appeared with Mr. Philip Carr at the Botanic Gardens in pastoral plays, Milton's Comus, Ben Jonson's The Hue and Cry after Cupid, &c., Mrs. Beerbohm Tree being in the cast.

It is just ten years since Mr. Garrod made his first professional appearance at the Opera House, Cork, under the management of Mr. Wm. Calvert, having previously studied elocution under the late Charles Clegg, and appeared as an amateur in Liverpool. Since then he has played about 150 parts, sustaining all the principal rôles in Mr. Calvert's répertoire of twenty plays. Engagements with various melodramas were followed by a return to répertoire, supporting Mr. Lancelot Lowder as Joseph Surface, &c. He afterwards fulfilled a long engagement with Mr. Norman V. Norman as leading man, and later toured with Irish drama. Then came a long tour with Mr. Henry C. Arnold as Deepwater in The Prodigal Daughter. Subsequently joining Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow, he created the part of the Black Hawk in Under Two Flags, also appearing as Mr. Dent in The Adventure of Lady Ursula, and Jaques in As You Like It. This was followed by stock seasons at Bradford and Leeds, during which he played Bloodgood in The Streets of London, &c., and appeared with Mrs. Lancaster Wallis in The Lady of Lyons. Returning to Mr. Arnold, Mr. Garrod played Deepwater for another long tour, and then Mr. Francis Laidler engaged him to create the leading part in a new piece at Bradford. Following this he starred with Mr. Martin Adéson in the title-rôle in A Human Terror, a new version of The Mysteries of Paris. A tour as Sir John Harding in The Idler, and appearances in pastorals at the Botanic Gardens, Manchester, came next, and then Mr. Garrod fulfilled a long-standing engagement with Mr. Arthur Collins and Mr. Milton Bode in the leading heavy part in the Drury-lane drama, The Best of Friends. A short re-engagement with The Idler, Captain Swift, and A Woman of no Importance was followed by a long tour as Lucas Lyle in Home, Sweet Home, this being Mr. Garrod's fourth engagement with Mr. Frank Lindo. After a summer stock season, during which he created the Nubian Imp in Miss Daisy Halling's play The Fire Witch, Mr. Garrod joined Messrs. Polini and Melford for the Spider in The Silver King. Immediately after this he embarked in management in partnership with Mr. Alfred Northway, touring Wilson Barrett's drama, The Sledge-Hammer, for fifty-five consecutive weeks. Then they acquired the rights of The Prodigal Parson, and starting on Feb. 12, 1906, the tour has continued up to the present without the slightest interruption, Mr. Garrod having played the title-rôle 741 times. By way of a change he has appeared on odd occasions as John Mildmay in Still Waters Run Deep, and Mathias in his own two-act version of The Sleigh Bells, a part in which he has been remarkably successful.

After a brief holiday, Mr. Garrod will produce a new play, entitled A Country Girl in London, in which he and his wife will create the leading parts. They have been the recipients of many handsome presents, notably from the members of The Prodigal Parson company.

AN ELOCUTION COMPETITION.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones acted as the judge in the elocution competition held by the British Empire Shakespeare Society at the Playhouse on the afternoon of the 17th inst. There were thirty-four entries, and the competitors had to give two skill recitations—one serious, the other comic. The following were the results:—

Juniors (under 16),—1, Miss Margot Balfour (Edinburgh centre); 2, Miss Nellie Innes (London); commended, Miss Alice de Grey (Stratford-on-Avon).

Professional Ladies.—1, Miss Hazel Thompson; 2, Miss Kathleen Rind; commended, Misses Margaret Chatwin and Carrie Haase.

Professional Gentlemen.—1, Mr. Howard Rose; commended, Mr. Arthur Trantom.

Amateur Ladies.—1, Miss Eve Tame (London); 2, Miss Annie Walden (London); commended, Misses Georgina Jebb (Birmingham), Doris Marzetti (London), and M. E. Wells (Sheffield).

Amateur Gentlemen.—1, Mr. P. L. Eyre (London); 2, Mr. A. C. Rickatson (London); commended, Messrs. W. L. Barber (Birmingham), H. E. Brown (Bristol), Joseph O'Dowd (Sheffield), and Hugh J. Percy (Alnwick).

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, in the course of the afternoon, made the following speech:—A shrewd old judge once advised a junior brother to give his verdict, but never to give a reason for it. I am going to violate that old judge's wise piece of counsel. I am going to give you a reason for my verdict to-day.

A piece of acting, a display of elocution, may be judged from three main points of view. First, there is the personality of the actor or the reciter, and this rightly counts for much. We are ready to pardon many faults in those who draw us by a charming or a mysterious personality. On the other hand, we all know many estimable actors and actresses who the better they act the more we don't want to see them. After personality there are natural gifts of voice and temperament, of fire, of passion, of comic force. After personality and natural gifts comes training, the conscious direction of personality and natural gifts to a definite end, all that is summed up in the word "Technique." I shall, so far as possible, leave out of my reckoning what is due to personality and natural gifts, and I shall award the prizes chiefly on the score of technique. Not that I value personality and natural gifts less highly than technique; indeed, in a general way, I should put them first. But on the English stage to-day we are sadly to seek in the matter of training, of technique, of elocution. This is where we lamentably fail in comparison with our French friends. I do not think anyone who has watched the recent performances of the great Coquelin at His Majesty's can fail to acknowledge that in the matter of training we have much to learn, and this is especially the case in the matter of the delivery of verse. We have in our English blank verse line a far nobler and stronger instrument than the French alexandrine. The French alexandrine is a very irritating measure unless it is correctly and beautifully spoken. But a French company will go through an entire rhymed play, giving the right measure and accent to every line, and yet without any sense of constraint or awkwardness; moving easily under the weight of the verse like ladies and gentlemen in old court dress. You do not feel that it is less natural to speak in verse, you merely feel that it is more beautiful. But on an English stage how rarely in a Shakespearean play do we get the specific delight that the verse should give us, how rarely does a line fall upon our ears and give us the pleasure of music, a pleasure akin to that of hearing a fine passage on a violin. We get other delights in an English theatre, but we do not get the delight of hearing verse beautifully and musically spoken. I have heard whole scenes of verse delivered in an English theatre, and unless I had known them by heart I could not have told that they were in verse; I should have thought them to be a mere jumble written by an author who thought it a very fine thing to write prose that would occasionally scan as a blank verse line.

From these considerations, then, I am trying to award the prizes to-day for lines that are most correctly spoken.

It is a very difficult thing to do off-hand. It is difficult for the performers to lose their self-consciousness and do themselves justice. A judge would like to have longer and more varied hearing than this necessarily hurried and limited competition. He would like to have fuller opportunities before he could be quite sure that his verdict exactly summed all the merits of the competition. However, it is a case where swift and decisive judgment is a necessity, and having indicated the grounds of my decision I must give my verdict accordingly.

RICHARDSON, who was the last of the real race of itinerant dramatic showmen, amassed a fortune by unwearied industry; for upwards of forty years he reigned supreme in Smithfield and other fairs. It happened at the time of a fair at St. Albans that a dreadful fire occurred Richardson and his company did their utmost to extinguish it, and their services were considered valuable. Some time afterwards a subscription was raised for the uninsured sufferers. A plain-looking man, in a rusty black coat, red waistcoat, corduroy inexpressibles, and worsted stockings, entered the committee-room and gave in his subscription—£100. "What name shall we say, sir?" asked the astonished clerk. "Richardson, the penny showman," was the proud reply.

Time and place are indeed opportune for the production of a farce bearing the above title. The spirit of pageantry is conspicuously before the townsfolk of Eastbourne, but by a curious coincidence the date and place for the first performance were settled without any knowledge of the time chosen for the Pevensey Pageant, which is being enacted during the week. The piece has a story of agreeable freshness, and the satire contained in it is clever and amusing. Sir Titus Eastrey, a retired carpet seller, is lord and master of Eastrey Park, and at the opening we are introduced to a number of people busy rehearsing for the pageant to be held in the grounds. Sir Titus is to essay the rôle of Julius Cæsar, but at the same time he forbids his wife taking any part in the pageant, as he considers it beneath the dignity of the wife of a baronet to assume any kind of fancy dress. He is eminently a proper person, and he expects his wife to live up to a high standard of morals. But the young and pretty Lady Eastrey has not been entirely above suspicion, for during her sojourn in Paris she met an artist, Prosper Vandelay, and a close but innocent attachment sprang up between them. The artist delighted to paint her only, and he used her as a model for painting advertisements for soaps, cigarettes, &c., so that Paris hoardings are decorated with pictures of the woman who is now Lady Eastrey. These posters, which are sometimes of the partly-nude and classical order, find their way to England, and, unfortunately, the Rev. Arthur Sheldon, the master of the pageant, happens to see one of them. He recognises the features of the wife of Sir Titus, and at once communicates the news to the husband, whose ideas of propriety now receive a sad shock. Prosper Vandelay is in London, and Sir Titus at once procures a warrant for the arrest of the artist on a charge of libel by exhibiting the pictures which have given so much offence, and he proceeds to London to see the order carried out. Sir Titus visits the Frenchman in his studio, and furiously asks for an explanation. Vandelay's innocent mind cannot realise the situation, and he begs the injured husband to allow his wife to return with him to his studio in Paris. This request, calmly made by the artist, further infuriates Sir Titus, and in the midst of his wrath a knock is heard at the door, and Lady Eastrey appears. Sir Titus conceals himself in a sedan chair, and hears his wife and Prosper talking of their former happy days spent in Paris. The police arrive to arrest the painter, but in mistake carry off and imprison the baronet. In the meantime preparations are going forward for the pageant: a new Julius Cæsar has been appointed to take the place of Sir Titus, and Lady Eastrey decides in the absence of her husband to appear as Boadicea. Prosper Vandelay, too, turns up as a troubadour, and amuses the assembled crowds. In the midst of the bustle, Sir Titus appears, the police having discovered his identity, and at once released him. He hurries to the field in the Roman toga, only to find a rival installed in the character of Julius Cæsar, his wife dressed as Queen Boadicea, and, worst of all, the hated artist present. Vandelay now explains that he wants the lady on account of her excellence as a model for his work. Lady Eastrey vows she loves her husband, and him alone, and the Frenchman departs. There are now two Cæsars in the field, and the curtain descends as they are both addressing their legions at the same time.

Mr. Louis Calvert as the calm and innocent Frenchman, Prosper Vandelay, gives a very amusing performance, and the quaint broken English, often capable of several constructions, are delivered with a humour which appealed to the audience; Mr. Edward Rigby works hard and ably as Sir Titus; Mr. Frank T. Arlton contributes genial and genuine fun as Mr. Honeyspinner, the rival Cæsar; Mr. G. Elphinstone has much to do as the Rev. Arthur Sheldon, and does it admirably; and Mr. Ernest Graham is a bright, manly Harry Eastrey. Miss Ernita Lascelles has the necessary physical attributes for the impersonation of Lady Eastrey and Boadicea, and her acting is always earnest and effective; Miss Daisy Fisher is a dainty and pleasing Claudine; and the smaller parts, of which there are many, are all capably handled by members of an efficient company.

"IN a stock season in a Northern town, by a company of which I was leading actor," writes Mr. Butler Stanhope, "there was produced the great American play of Under the Gaslight, of which the principal feature was the 'thrilling sensation' of a railway train crossing the stage at express speed. The leading part, a character called Snorky, a one-armed man, is tied to the rails by the villains, and, of course, rescued at the right moment, as the train is heard coming along at terrific speed. Now the stage carpenter was very enthusiastic about this train, and devoted all his time to its making; and he turned out a very fine-looking engine and two carriages—'profile,' of course. He was very proud of his work, and he determined that he himself should work the engine. He picked out two of his best men to work a carriage each, so that nothing should mar the performance. The train was fastened together by a string running along behind. 'Now, lads,' said the carpenter, 'make no mistake. I run with the engine, and you run after me, each with a carriage; but don't be seen by the audience. Bend a little, so that your heads are not visible. Do as I do, and all will be right.' The last scene came, the lights were lowered, signals were set, line clear, and red fire lighted, and Snorky was safely bound to the rails. The cue was given, Snorky acting for all he was worth, working up the scene, till the excitement became intense, the engine shrieking, the red light glaring, Snorky was rescued, and on dashed the train; but unfortunately the poor carpenter stumbled over something in his way. Over went the engine, and he on top of it. The carriages, following on at great speed, fell over the engine, and all were muddled up together, each man struggling to get on his legs, and frantically endeavouring to extricate himself. It was a terrible 'railway accident' indeed. Fortunately it was the end of the drama, so the curtain descended on a dreadful catastrophe."

QUIN was asked once what he thought of turtle-eating. "By Heaven!" he said, "it is a thousand pities that on such an occasion a man has not a stomach as long as the cable of a first-rate man-of-war, and every inch palate."

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE COLISEUM.

Mr. Oswald Stoll's policy at the Coliseum has resulted in a dividend at the rate of ten per cent. per annum on the six months' working of the new conditions. We may, therefore, offer him very appropriately our heartiest congratulations on the high position the magnificent house has taken in the rota of London amusements, a position due to the originality of the programme, which is largely made up of theatrical items. Mr. Stoll has presented many prominent players from the legitimate houses, and considerable interest has been manifested in the appearance at the Coliseum of Miss Dorothy Grimston, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, who has won success in such parts as Nina in His House in Order. Miss Grimston makes her début on the London variety stage in a playlet by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the author of "The Master Mummer," "The Prince of Sinners," and other books whose name is quite new to the "lesser stage." The piece is entitled

"THE MONEY SPIDER."

Gordon Holmes .....HERBERT BUNSTON
Richard Fargus .....HENRY LATIMER
Margaret Holmes .....DOROTHY GRIMSTON

Richard Fargus enters the study of Gordon Holmes (millionaire) with sinister intent. He had been a prosperous mill-owner, but in the stress of competition Gordon Holmes, the "spider" of the story, had sent him under. The struggle is now hopeless, and only revenge is to be thought of. On the study table of Holmes, awaiting his signature, are agreements taking over certain of Fargus's ventures. The bargain made had been a hard one, and the beaten man is handling with grim determination a shining revolver, when his meditations are disturbed by the entrance of Margaret Holmes, wife of the millionaire. She learns his purpose, and pleads eloquently for her husband's life. She will prevent him signing the papers at all costs. Fargus agrees to postpone his vengeance, but when the clock strikes he will shoot. Holmes listens to the pleading of his wife unconcernedly, and ridicules her quixotic notions concerning business. The man of commerce, he says, must make use of brains and opportunity. If he should fail to do this, he will go under as Fargus has done. But Margaret's agonised appeals eventually have their effect, and the documents are destroyed. With the silent departure of Fargus the curtain falls.

Miss Dorothy Grimston acts with an intensity and a pathos that keep the house in a tension of silence, and her success in so big a house is a fine testimony of her elocution. Mr. Henry Latimer contributes a sinister study of the disappointed Fargus, and Mr. Herbert Bunston presents a consistent portrait of the keen business man, Gordon Holmes.

Miss Madge Crichton is another new comer from the theatres. She finds an excellent vehicle for her abilities in the monologue by Laura Leycester, entitled George or Arthur? Both lovers have promised to call, but the object of their adoration is not quite certain which of the two is to arrive first. She passes the qualities of the two in review, and her woman's wiles and the author's wit supply the audience with a delightful quarter of an hour. A hilarious time is spent with Bella and Bijou, who present their latest skit, The Suffragette, with great success. For charm and idyllic qualities commend us to Callahan and St. George (lady and gentleman) in their Irish musical duologue The Old Neighbourhood, which is a genuine and deserved triumph. The harp is most skilfully played by the lady, who also sings the ballads of the disthressful country with natural pathos. Her companion is a comedian of the first rank. The Lyric Mummers present a duologue, in which the piano plays a prominent part, and the loves of a modern pierrot and pierrette are told in harmonious and well-rendered duets. Comedy is uppermost in the turns of Albert and Edmunds and Goodfellow and Gregson; sensational dancing comes from the Sousloffs; Celia Galley, a consummate artist, imitates Sarah Bernhardt cleverly; Odette Valery is a Cleopatra of considerable dramatic intensity, as shown in her dancing scena; and other turns in a fine programme are Binns and Binns, Alcide Capitaine, Mavis Clare, and the Ten-Ji Troupe. The Bioscope illustrates interesting incidents.

THE SURREY.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten's locum tenens here, Mr. Roy Cochrane, has had the satisfaction of viewing full houses this week. Foremost on the programme are Lew Lake and his crowd of Cockney comedians in The Bloomsbury Burglars, which is received with shouts of laughter. As Nobbler—one of the Nuts—Mr. Lew Lake gives a creation all his own; while as his timid pal, Jerry, Mr. Bob Morris is both clever and amusing. Miss Kitty Wilmore as the dashing Edith Arlington is smart and charming.

The Leonards, in their comedy duologue True Blue, are highly amusing. Susan Soapem, a housemaid, has been deceived by a police-constable who, after borrowing her savings, had disappeared. Susan has just entered on her duties in a new situation, when she is interrupted by the unceremonious arrival of a policeman, who has been flung down the area steps by his prisoner. He tries to make love to Susan, but she has an abhorrence of men in his uniform, and tells him the reason. All his old affection returns, and he tells her he is her old lover Bob Catchem, and when she asks for the return of her money, he says he gave it to the War fund. This satisfies Susan, and Bob, to show off, produces a pair of handcuffs, and on Susan asking him to demonstrate their use, he clasps them on his own wrists. He is much concerned to get them off again, as he is expecting his inspector round, and begs of Susan to get the key from his pocket and unlock them. She gets the key, and with it a bundle of girls' photos. Bob declares they are all his sisters, but Susan won't release him until he has written a promise of marriage. Merry laughter follows the unfolding of this simple and amusing story, and this clever couple well earn the liberal applause bestowed on their efforts.

Kitty Clinton, a chic and charming comedienne, gives point and expression to her two songs—"Have you another girl at home like Mary?" and "I must ask my mother first." The Four Kellys are smart, daring, and skilful male and female acrobats. One of the ladies turns a somersault from a pedestal some fourteen feet high. Gertie Lewis, male impersonator, is an active, sprightly dancer; Guest and Newlyn, in their potpourri of cross-talk, bâton-spinning, and dancing, have to respond to a triple recall; the Breton Troupe of pantomimists keep the ball of fun merrily rolling in their knockabout pantomime The Tramps' Picnic; Josephine Crook, in her illustrated song "Take me on the Flip-flap," takes her audience with her in the chorus with much gusto and enjoyment; Ada Parker, a youthful comedienne, is a skilful dancer; A. E. Clifford does exceedingly well in his descriptive song "Girls, Girls"; Chas. Sino is an expert sifleur; and in shadowgraphic scena he is most amusing. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux close an entertainment rich in variety and enjoyment.

CHELSEA PALACE.

An assortment of varieties at the popular palace at Chelsea contains at least one item that has the distinction of a first production, and it is no less ambitious an effort than an abbreviated version of The New Clown, which made so conspicuous a hit on its production at Terry's in the February of 1902. The story, it may be remembered, is that of a young lordling who imagines he has killed his friend, and seeks refuge in a circus, where he takes up, with dire results, the rôle of a clown. Happily the man supposed to be dead turns up strong and well, and the amateur "Joey" throws up his part with joy. The action of the sketch is confined to the interior of Dixon's Circus, of which a realistic setting is given. Mr. Arthur Cornell plays Lord Cyril Garston, and never spares himself in his efforts to create laughter. He is an admirable light comedian, with methods not at all unlike those of Mr. James Welch, who created the rôle, and though he hurried his lines towards the close, his delivery was skilfully pointed and the funny dialogue lost nothing of its drollery. Mr. Meadows invests with rugged humour the rôle of the circus proprietor; the strong man, in whom the new clown arouses such resentment, is realistically depicted by Mr. G. Gibbons; and a comely circus-rider is found in Miss Olive Wilton. The diverting antics of the donkey Flip-Flap, who can be made to bray melodiously whenever called upon, should not be overlooked. The sketch had a gratifying reception, and may be relied upon to please any audience.

A playlet of recent production is also that of The Boatswain's Mate, which is from the clever pen of Mr. W. W. Jacobs in association with Mr. Herbert Sergeant. The piece is both humorous and exciting, and under the direction of Vaughan and Lawson it provides an enjoyable interlude. Still another sketch to which novelty attaches is that of Madrid, 4 p.m., which serves to introduce Burke, Andrus, and Frisco, the last-mentioned, if we mistake not, being a bucking mule which indulges in many extraordinary capers. The scene is a Spanish amphitheatre, and an amusing burlesque of a bull-fight is given. A return visit is made by France and Stewart, with their clever and refined sketch, The 100 to 1 Chance, which is the cause of uncontrollable merriment; and Brayne and Lloyd also create laughter with their broad and pungent comedy in The Tree of Truth.

The voice insured by Mr. Herbert Clifton for £1,000 proves to be a strong falsetto, which he utilises in the burlesque of several musical comedy favourites, giving imitations, among others, of Miss Zena Dare and Miss Gertie Millar, in songs associated with their fame, and, responding to an encore with an extravagant travesty of Miss Camille Clifford's "Gibson Girl." Mr. Clifton is also a grotesque dancer of no mean ability. Dancing of many nations is done by Mr. Leonard Gorney, who gives expert specimens of his native Russian, the Hungarian, the Dutch, and the Chinese, not even hesitating at the British hornpipe, and executes all his interesting selections amid the loudly-expressed satisfaction of the audience. Mr. Arthur Reece gains the ear of the house with his tuneful and humorous advice on how to choose a wife, and afterwards his invitation in song to "Come to the land of Bohemia" is interrupted by a policeman, who is himself a vocalist, and is induced to join in the refrain. Coon songs at the piano are indulged in by Miss Mabel Bright, who appears as a communicative child, and displays an agreeable talent for dancing. Contributions to the programme are also made by Miss Bessie Lind, comedienne, and by Jeapes's Graphic, which supplies an amusing series of pictures. Mr. Henri Gros, the managing-director, looks in occasionally to note the good business done, and in the meantime the interests of the hall are safe in the hands of Mr. J. Norman Berlin, the courteous and alert acting-manager.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

An excellent programme is submitted this week to the patrons of this popular establishment, of which Mr. Ernest Bridgen is the courteous acting-manager, assisted by Mr. C. Young. After the overture ("Pique Dame") had been admirably rendered by the band under the able direction of Mr. Forbes Russell, the first turn on the programme on the night of our visit was that of Foreman and Fannan. These favourite artists were in excellent form, and were warmly applauded in duologue and songs "La-da-diddle-de" and "My little Zulu baby." Mena Bray, Dutch girl, contributed a pretty little turn, consisting of a song, "Tina," and dance. Gus Garrick's imitations of famous comedians were very successful and afforded much amusement, the impersonations including Sam Mayo, Harry Champion, Harry Lauder, and a French comedienne. The Zancigs interested all with their marvellous entertainment. They are aptly billed as "two minds with but a single thought," and as psychological experts are inimitable. The sisters Grovini are very clever gymnasts, smart and attractive, and deservedly applauded; Ella Shields made a huge success with her songs "No money in your pocket," "Walking round the world," and "Coals," and proved herself a delightful singer of coon songs; the Maples appeared in a clever duologue entitled How to Treat a Burglar, and wound up with a smartly-executed dance; Tennyson and Wallis made a success with "My Japanese girl," and are patter comedians and dancers of considerable ability; the Coloured Meisters were very successful glee singers, their contributions, including "My rosebud" and "Laughing at us all," were loudly applauded; and the performance concluded with the American Bioscope, which exhibited a magnificent picture entitled The Paris Fire Brigade Drill.

FREE REHEARSALS.

At Brompton County Court on Monday, before Judge Bray, George Lake Grange, described as an actor, of New King's-road, Fulham, sued W. H. Savile, the proprietor of a music-hall sketch, residing at Bishop's-mansions, to recover 25s. in respect of a week's salary.

Plaintiff's wife appeared, and stated that her husband had recently been engaged in cinematograph work. He asked her to look at the columns of the theatrical paper the Stage, and if she saw anything that was likely to suit him to reply to the advertisement. She did so, and saw among the advertisements one from the defendant for a tall gentleman; and, her husband being a man 6ft. 2½in. in height, she sent her little boy round to the defendant, and on her husband's behalf asked for 35s. per week. Subsequently an interview took place between her husband and the defendant, and the latter arranged to pay her husband 25s. weekly, and fixed a rehearsal for the following Saturday, thus confirming the agreement.

Defendant, in evidence, said he was producing a new sketch with seven people in it. It was customary for the actors in such a production to give their services free at one week's rehearsals, and six out of the company of seven did this. Mr. Grange told him he was not in quite comfortable circumstances, and did not see his way to pay his expenses to and from Fulham and the Surrey Theatre, where the sketch was to be produced. Witness thereupon agreed to pay out-of-pocket expenses. The production of the sketch was, however, postponed.

In reply to his Honour, the defendant said he had no witnesses to prove the custom to which he had referred. He added that he considered the plaintiff's claim a most improper one. A promise to pay his out-of-pocket expenses had been twisted into an agreement to pay salary.

His Honour said the onus rested with the defendant to show that it was customary for artists to give their services for a week, but no witnesses were present to prove this, and under the circumstances he could not find that such custom was proved. There would be judgment for the plaintiff for 25s., the amount claimed.

MR. SAMMY SHIELDS, Scotch swell comedian, is the latest to join the Terriers' Association. On Sunday last he was initiated by Griff, who was in the chair.

"THE MORETON PEARLS."

A Dramatic Sketch, by Russell Vaun, Produced at the Hammersmith Palace, on Monday, July 20.

Gentleman Jack .....MR. CHAS. VANE
Detective Durham .....MR. EDWARD CRANSTON
Olga le Strange .....MRS. BENNETT

The portrayal of human perfidy has always been a favourite subject with the dramatist, and when a woman is the exponent of this revolting side of and "My little Zulu baby." Mena Brae, Dutch fully stirred. In The Moreton Pearls Mr. Russell Vaun has embodied an episode in which the apotheosis of various evil passions—hate, greed, and treachery—may be said to be reached. Olga le Strange is a strikingly handsome adventuress married to Gentleman Jack, the leader of a gang of burglars, known as the Scarlet Masks. Under the alias of Mrs. Murgatroyd she has obtained an introduction to the household of Lord and Lady Moreton, at Moreton Manor. The famous family pearls are the object of the cupidity of the gang, and arrangements have been made for their removal by Gentleman Jack, with Olga's assistance. But Detective Durham, of Scotland Yard, has succeeded in laying the members of the gang by the heels, with the exception of their leader. He presents himself to Olga, and offers her the alternative of arrest or her admission as King's evidence. The temptation is great, and, coupled with an underlying hatred of her husband, and the probability of securing the jewels for herself, induces her to agree to betray Gentleman Jack into the hands of the police. To obtain the jewels she murders the Countess, and, on her husband appearing on the scene, she places the dagger in his pocket. In trying to leave the mansion, Jack falls into the police trap, but contrives to escape their clutches, and returns to wreak vengeance on his faithless wife. He finds her gloating over the possession of the jewels, and, in a scene of gruesome horror, strangles her. The scena affords Mrs. Bennett an excellent opportunity of displaying her very strong dramatic powers. She certainly takes full advantage of that opportunity, and is ably supported by Mr. Charles Vane as the betrayed husband. Mr. Vane imparts the maximum of exasperated ferocity to the part; Mr. Edward Cranston gives a quietly effective rendering of the rôle of the detective, being more like the genuine article than the usual stage presentments of those functionaries.

PROVINCIAL TALENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Your complimentary notice of the Empire, Camberwell, in your last issue reads: "The Camberwell Empire holds the record of introducing a larger number of provincial artists than any house in the metropolitan area." Might I point out that a great amount of the booking of provincial artists—perhaps all—at this theatre is through my agency? And may I again say—as I mentioned when I opened up a correspondence in The Era not long ago under the heading of "Latent Talent"—that there are still plenty more artists awaiting their entrée? I saw a manager the other day, and spoke very highly of a certain comic singer—one who is, like others, awaiting his Mecca; and he don't mind waiting, as an entrance to Town under certain conditions is a bit of a farce—and his reply was, "Don't know him; never heard of him." What is an agent for but to find new people? This class of agent is worth 10 per cent. I have never yet, as an agent of recent years, waited for an act to be found for me and brought under my nose, and then sat, in a complacent manner with a top hat on at an angle of 45deg., and said, "Call up at the office in the morning."

You will quite excuse, I am sure, my availing myself of your report, but in the rough-and-tumble of the agency world, to quote the old saying, "its a poor heart that never rejoices," and if you don't blow your own trumpet nobody else will. To use an auctioneer's term, "Any bids?"—Yours faithfully, WILL DALTON

(Dalton's Agency).

29, Mauldeth-road West, Withington, Manchester, July 20.

THE first death in the ranks of the head office staff of Moss' Empires and associated companies since its establishment, nearly four years ago, has occurred. On Saturday morning last a telephone message was received announcing that Mr. Alfred Calder Mumford, the manager of the legal department, had died during the night of double quinsy. The deceased gentleman, who was well known and universally respected in the variety world, had only been absent from his post four days, and even whilst at home had insisted on transacting as much of his business as was possible. Mr. Mumford, before being appointed to Moss' Empires, was "right-hand man" to Messrs. Smith, Rundell, and Dods, solicitors, subsequently becoming secretary to the Coliseum, Ltd., and the Hackney and Shepherd's Bush Empires, Ltd. The funeral took place on Wednesday at the Kingston Cemetery.

THE Mining Exhibition at Olympia, which is now entering on its last week, was visited on Tuesday evening by the nine miner heroes who, earlier in the day, had been decorated by the King. On Saturday, July 25, the exhibition will be viewed by nearly the whole of the members of both Houses of Parliament.

PECULIAR interest attaches to the engagement of La Belle Nello at the Hackney Empire next week. Some weeks ago, it will be remembered, the death through accident of Clown Delevanti was recorded. La Belle Nello was an apprentice for ten years of the famous old clown, and originally appeared with the Three Delevantis. The supple grace of the young lady is eloquent testimony to the thoroughness of Clown Delevanti's training. La Belle Nello has just returned from a three years' world tour, and has been booked by the Moss-Stoll syndicate for some years ahead.

MISS CLARICE MAYNE, the talented comedienne and mimic, who has made such a rapid advance to the front rank of the profession, has this week signed 108 weeks' contracts with the Syndicate halls through the agency of Mr. Harry Day, Effingham House, Arundel-street, Strand, who is her exclusive representative.

THE engagements at the Palace, Maidstone, are made solely through Brooks's Agency, 36, Shaftesbury-avenue, to which firm artists should apply.

MR. ALFRED BUTT, who has done much to bring the theatre and the music hall stage into touch with each other by the engagement of dramatic "stars" and the production of little plays, announces the important engagement of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bourchier (Miss Violet Vanbrugh) for the Palace Theatre. No precise date has been fixed, and, owing to previous engagements, the interesting event can scarcely happen until next spring. They have two excellent duologues in Mr. Alfred Sutro's A Marriage Has Been Arranged and Mr. R. C. Carton's Ninth Waltz, both of which have already been stamped with the seal of public approval at the theatres; but possibly they will present something quite new.

THE AWARDS.—The three interim Awards and the final Award, corrected and revised by George Ranken Askwith, K.C., the official arbitrator appointed to the music hall dispute, may be had in pamphlet form at The Era Offices. Copy, including postage, three-halfpence. Address, The Publisher, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

ROYAL MUSICIANS.

Since the Norman conquest, writes a correspondent, music as an art has been fostered by nearly all the sovereigns of England. In early times monarchs encouraged in various ways the bands of minstrels that perambulated the country, and it was a knowledge of music, according to legendary history, that secured the restoration of Richard I. (1157-1199) to his country and his throne, his imprisonment in the castle of Dürnstein being discovered by his favourite minstrel, Blondel de Nesle.

"In the stillness of the night he preluded on his instrument," says Mr. F. J. Crowest in "The Story of British Music," and "began to sing a romanza composed by Richard in Palestine at a time when ardent love for the beautiful Marguerite, Countess of Hennegau, filled his whole heart. As each verse of the song had a refrain, he was sure that if the captive was really Richard he would now betray himself. Blondel's supposition proved correct. A voice, hollow, yet practised in the art of singing, answered from the prison:—

'I know with full assurance that woman's gentle care,
Brings comfort, hope, endurance, in time of deep despair.'

Then did Blondel feel certain that he had found his patron and his King. He sped to England and told his story to the barons and nobles. Without loss of time a treaty was entered into for Richard's ransom."

Edward IV. (1442-1483) established a Court band, from which organisation is derived the title of "Master of the King's Musique," an appointment now held by Sir Walter Parratt, although the Royal orchestra, as a part of the Court, was abolished a few years ago.

Richard III. (1450-1485) took special interest in the improvement of singing in the Chapel Royal, and authorised one John Melynek "to take and seize all such singing men expert in the science of music as he could find and think able to do the King's service." But it was not until the Tudor period that an English monarch actually won distinction as a composer.

This was Henry VIII. (1491-1547), whose extensive knowledge of music was due to his early training for the Church, music in those days being an essential feature of the education of an ecclesiastic. "His Majesty," wrote the Venetian Ambassador in 1519, "is very accomplished, a good musician, composes well, is a most capital horseman, a fine jouster, speaks good French, Latin, and Spanish, is very religious, hears three masses daily when he hunts, and sometimes five on other days." Henry composed numerous motets, among those preserved in the British Musueum, and published by Messrs. Novello, being the anthem "O Lord the Maker of all things," and the madrigals, "Pastime with good company," "O how beauteous art thou," and "The time of youth." The song, "Now fayre, fayrest off every fayre"—to quote the original title—is a melodious effusion His Majesty composed for the marriage of his sister Margaret with James IV. of Scotland—a union from which King Edward VII. traces his descent.

Elizabeth (1533-1603), as became the daughter of Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn, was extremely fond of music, and was a fine virginal player, as well as the possesor of a rich mezzo-soprano voice. A quaint story is told of her in Burney's "History." Sir James Melvil was sent to her by Mary Queen of Scots in 1564 on a diplomatic mission. Elizabeth asked him how his Queen dressed. What was the colour of her hair, whether that or hers was the better, which of them two was the fairer. Then she asked what kind of exercises Mary used.

"I answered," said Melvil, "that when I received my despatch the Queen was lately come from hunting; that when her more serious affairs permitted she was taken up with reading of histories; that sometimes she recreated herself with playing upon the lute and virginal." She asked if she played well. I answered, "reasonably for a Queen." The same day after dinner my Lord of Hunsden drew me to a quiet gallery, that I might hear the Queen play upon the virginal. After I had hearkened awhile, I took up the tapestry that hung before the door of the chamber, and seeing her back was towards the door, I entered within the chamber, and stood a pretty space hearing her play excellently well. But she left off immediately so soon as she turned about and saw me. She appeared to be surprised to see me, and came forward seeming to strike me with her hand. She asked me how I came there. I answered, "As I was walking with my Lord Hunsden I heard, as we passed by the chamber door, such a melody as ravished me, whereby I was drawn in ere I knew how," excusing my fault of homeliness as being brought up in the Court of France, where such freedom was allowed, and declaring myself willing to endure what punishment Her Majesty should be pleased to inflict upon me for so great an offence. Then she sat down upon a low cushion, and I upon my knees by her, but with her own hand she gave me a cushion to lay under my knees, which at first I refused, but she compelled me to take it. She enquired whether my Queen or she played the better, and I found myself obliged to give her the praise.

James I. (1566-1625), according to Tassoni, wrote "not only sacred compositions for the voice, but found out of himself a new kind of music, plaintive and mournful, differing from every other."

Playford records that Charles I. (1600—1649) was "not behind any of his predecessors in the love and promotion of this science, especially in the service of Almighty God, and with much zeal he would hear reverently performed, and often appointed, the services and anthems, being by his knowledge in music a competent judge therein and would play his part exactly well on the bass viol." The only composition of this monarch which has been preserved is his setting of Thomas Carew's poem, "Mark how the blushful morn." His principal tutor was John Cooper, who, after his return to England from Italy, called himself Signor Coperario!

George IV. (1762-1830), when he was a young man, was an accomplished musician, taking part in quartets with Karl Abel, Wilhelm Cramer, Johann Salomon, and other great instrumentalists of the day, and he sang patriotic and jovial ditties his fine bass voice being eulogised by Rossini, who by the way, gave music lessons to Queen Victoria His Majesty was a severe critic, as is instanced by an anecdote recorded by George Smart. He attended in 1822 a concert at the Pavilion, Brighton, at which Catherine Stephens (who in 1835 was married to the Earl of Essex) was singing. Not caring for her voice His Majesty said to Smart:—'You conductors force a performer upon the public whether capable or not. Now, Sir George, you know Miss Stephens is not a great singer—give me your candid opinion." The reply was diplomatic: "It would be presumption in me to offer an opinion to your Majesty, who is so good a judge in musical matters."

Thibault IV., King of Navarre (1201-1253), was the first monarch to distinguish himself as a composer, and his song, "L'Autrier par la Matinée," is preserved and occasionally heard in musical circles.

Frederic the Great (1712-1786), who "studied harmony in secret because his father considered music to be an effeminate pastime," wrote many military marches and a number of concertos for the flute, his favourite instrument. "He often performed," says one writer, "in the evening five concertos on the flute, which his Royal orchestra had to accompany. In composing he wrote down only the melody, and he indicated in words how the bass and the other parts should be contrived; for instance, 'here the bass shall be in quavers,' 'here the violins shall play alone.' These directions he gave to his Kapellmeister Agricola, who then completed the score."

RACHEL'S BOUQUET.

In the conversation of the actor's foyer of the Français, writes Albert Rhodes, the past is often referred to. The lights nearest the present burn most brightly and the old ones somewhat dimly. The anecdotes concerning Talma are becoming rare; the people who knew him have passed away. Rachel is still talked of, as well as Mlle. Mars and Mlle. Georges, for some of the talkers personally knew the three. There are some curious features in the life of the first of the trio, which are not without interest. As those will recollect who have read Thackeray, the deus ex machina in the case of the Fotheringay was old Bows in the orchestra; in that of Rachel it appears to have been, or something approaching thereto, Samson, a leading comedian of this theatre, and a member of the society, who was her professor. When Rachel presented herself at the Français, after passing two or three years at the Conservatoire, she first applied to Provost, another comedian of this theatre. "You are not made for the stage," said he; "you had better go on the Boulevards and sell bouquets." When she reached Samson there was some encouragement. "If I had your organ," said he, "I would work miracles." "Then put your genius into my voice," returned she; "be my master."

Samson, who was author as well as actor, undertook the dramatic education of the young person with the remarkable larynx, and in a short time made such progress with her as to induce his colleagues to receive her as a pensionnaire. At her introduction into the establishment she offered the name of Eliza—her baptismal name being Elizabeth Rachel—to which the manager objected, saying that she should be called Rachel. Through the efforts of Samson—it was the best he could do—an important part was confided to her during the warm season, when most people were off at the watering places. On one of these unfashionable summer nights Jules Janin, "the prince of critics," happened to be present, although as a rule, according to his own account, he objected to the Russian bath. In the next edition of this journal the Parisian world was informed that a new planet had arisen in the theatrical horizon, destined to pale several that had until then shone with steady lustre. The following day the grateful young woman went to the critic and thanked him, when the writer turned the scene into copy, with that spirit of exaggeration for which he was known. Rachel had been at the Gymnase Theatre before entering the Français, and, according to him, she spoke her language imperfectly, saying to him: "C'est moi que j'étais-t-au Gymnase l'an passé"; to which he returned, with a peal of laughter, "Je le savions!" But we are not obliged to believe this because Jules Janin wrote it.

She had played soubrette parts at the Gymnase, and was under the impression that such work was suited to her, until she placed herself in the hands of Samson, whose first injunction was that she should forget all about comedy as soon as possible.

In two or three months the effects of Rachel's studies with Samson were evident. Notwithstanding her talent, she did not, or could not, play a part until she had repeated it word for word from the mouth of her professor, who taught her the musical side of the interpretation as well as the dramatic, for there is a cadence in the old tragedies which may not be translated into foreign tongues. The pomp of rising and falling declamation found its high priestess in Rachel; the effect was marvellous. The finances of the establishment, which for a time had been at ebb, rose tide high. At the end of one of her brilliant victories she carried an arm full of flowers from the stage and deposited them in the lap of Provost, saying:—

"Won't you buy some? You recollect you advised me to sell them."

"Come," answered the comedian, "forget the advice and embrace the false prophet."

MR. FRANK HARDIE is reproducing next Monday at the Camberwell Empire his highly sensational American episode, Pedlar Sam, with entirely new scenery and effects, by Francis H. Bull.

A HUNGARIAN fête, organised by an influential committee presided over by the Lord Mayor, was given at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court, on Tuesday afternoon in aid of the League of Mercy. The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador was present, and the opening ceremony was performed by the Countess of Chesterfield, president of the Kensington branch. A host of distinguished guests attended the gala matinée in the Summer Theatre of the "Hungarian Street."

AT the concerts Mme. Ilka Palmay (Countess Kinsky), formerly of the Savoy Theatre, Mme. Sarolta d'Argay, Mme. Erma Torok, and other celebrated artists contributed a national Hungarian programme, which met with cordial appreciation from a representative international audience. Afterwards, at the Old Welcome Club, in the Western Gardens, there was a reception by the committee and stewards in honour of a Hungarian deputation from Budapest, with the artists of the National, Magyar, and King's Theatres of the capital. At the conclusion of the final National Hungarian Concert the festivities were brought to a close by a performance of the Csardas lance.

THE first house-dinner and concert of the Canonbury Tower Club, Canonbury-square, was held on Saturday evening. The Warden, Major Dance, occupied the chair. The excellent programme included Miss Lilian Homesley, an American artist new to England, whose series of self-accompanied children's songs delighted the large audience present. Her acceptable contributions included "I want the moon," "In daddy's arms," and a German soldier song, and she had a most flattering reception, her ditties appealing specially to the ladies. Mr. Robert Anthony, a rising young baritone singer, sang several songs, and his excellent voice and style quickly made him a favourite Miss Margaret Hall Walker, although far from well, gave an admirable rendering of "April morn" and other songs. Miss Maude Longhurst, a contralto with a fine rich voice, had a splendid reception, her artistic rendering of "Eva" and "Angus Macdonald" being greeted with prolonged applause. Mr. Will Ballard scored with his comic ditties; and Mr. Charles Norman's "Song of the Camp"—a recitation in which snatches of songs were introduced—proved one of the successes of the evening. Mr. Frank Frith acted as accompanist, and Mr. Will Clinch gave valuable assistance as stage-manager.

MR. F. T. STUDD, ventriloquist and magician, the proprietor of "The Funmakers," writes as follows:—"In your issue of July 18 your Southend correspondent has sent an erroneous report re the Pier Hill Bandstand. 'The Pick-me-Up's' only appear twice daily, and my company, 'The Funmakers,' also twice daily."

HERMAN MERIVALE'S REMEMBRANCES.

My grandfather's essays in play-writing, says Herman Merivale in "Bar, Stage, and Platform," began in an interesting fashion. His wife's father—Devonian like himself—was the famous scholar and head-master, Dr. Drury; and both loved the play. And, on a fit-up stage in Exeter, one night they saw a strolling player enact Othello and Harlequin. And so overcome and startled were they by the man's extraordinary power, that my grandfather at once wrote to Byron, then of the managing committee of Drury Lane, which was but at a low ebb, and advised him to find the player out. Byron only laughed and pooh-poohed him, assuring him that he was always hearing of these wandering genii, who never came to anything. But Drury Lane ebbed more and more, and one morning my grandfather got a letter from him to say that something had to be done, and that if the Exeter genius could be unearthed he would give him a chance on the recommendation of so good a critic. So the seekers set to work, and after much ado discovered the wanderer in some out-of-the-way corner of mere rustic Devon, ebbing like Drury Lane, and run low down indeed. The story that followed is known to all the world, for the poor, world-tossed genius went to London, and waited hopelessly enough for the chance that came at last. And they called him at the theatre "the litle man in the capes," and his name was Edmund Kean. Perhaps he was the greatest actor, if we may trust all the records, who ever flashed upon our stage. And it was not only as Shylock that he appeared. In a metaphorical sense he repeated his Exeter experiment. "They say that the fellow is a good Harlequin," said an envious member of the company, after he had struck the empty benches into fire, till "no one could have thought that so few people could kick up such a row." "Yes," said the kindlier Fawcett, "he's the best I ever saw, for he has jumped at once over all our heads together."

And so from Kean to Kean, from father unto son, from Edmund unto Charles. Our families were close friends, of course, after that beginning, and he was much at my father's table in my young boy-days, thereby, I think, dissipating for ever any fears of the woolsack that might have haunted my bar-doomed life. Annoyed with my mother, who was an invalid, unable to attend the theatres, because she admitted one evening that she had been to hear Albert Smith (his jealousies were always boyish), he carried me off to his theatre in revenge, and introduced me to his columbine, whose flounces and eyes settled my tastes definitively. He became so fond of me, and I of him, that I almost lived at the Princess's during the holidays. Early after breakfast I trotted off to rehearsal as if I were a child-actor, and wandered at my will from box to stage, and stage to box. Particularly when the Midsummer Night's Dream was being rehearsed, when all the pretty girls of the company, save when their scenes were on, collected in the Royal box and petted me. Kean had a wonderful eye for pretty girls, and this was a real bevy, headed by one who still remains in my mind, in spite of all the dreams of later beauties, as the loveliest woman in her youth whom I have ever seen—out of a real stage-stock—Carlotta Leclercq. She was but a dancer first, and then a columbine, and as she had no especial talent, rose from the ranks by sheer right of beauty. Kean trusted her, as a first "speaking part," with Phœbe in As You Like It, and such a queen of curds and whey, with bugle eyeballs and with cheeks of cream, might have made Rosalind herself turn very man to love her. She was a perfect woman without flaw—features without a fault, yet with no lack of expression—height, hair, and limbs, figure, and proportions, all in the fairest symmetry of womanhood.

MESSRS. MARY AND Co., of Green-street, Leicester-square, made the costumes and wigs for Mr. W. D. MacKenzie's company in Moments with the Masters, at the Hippodrome, Hastings.

ALLMAN.—Miss Maude Branscombe was the Phœbe in Miss Wallis's revival (under that lady's management) of As You Like It at the Gaiety (matinée) on April 11, 1883. Your questions involve considerable search, and we may be able to say more next week.

SENEX.—Mme. Anna Thillon's approaching retirement from the stage was announced in The Era of May 20, 1855, the first of her farewell performances taking place at the Lyceum on May 16, 1855, when The Crown Diamonds was revived, Mme. Thillon playing Catarina, the heroine of Auber's opera, a part in which she first appeared before an English audience in 1844.

MR. JOHN THOMSON (Philadelphia).—Verdi's opera Il Trovatore was adapted into English by Mr. Charles Jeffreys, and was produced in that language for the first time at Drury Lane Theatre on March 24, 1856, with the following cast:—Leonora, Mme. Lucy Escott; Azucena, Miss Fanny Huddart; Manrico, Mr. Augustus Braham; Count di Luna, Mr. Henri Drayton; Ferrando, Mr. Farquharson. You will see by this cast that neither Sims Reeves nor Clara Novello were the originals of the characters of Manrico and Leonora. The opera was produced under the management of Messrs Tully and Kingsbury.

J. ELLIS WELLS.—There is an actor of that name who has been touring in Monte Cristo. We do not remember the charity performance you speak of, and do not know whether the actor referred to appeared in it.

A. PALMER.—The Garrick Theatre, Charing Cross-road, W.C., was opened by Mr. (now Sir) John Hare on April 24, 1889. See notice above.

A MOST alluring programme is being arranged for the August Bank Holiday at the Crystal Palace. There will be a large number of military bands, and a feature of the day will be a great athletic and cycling meeting promoted by the Anerley Bicycle Club. Variety shows in the Centre Transept, Fred Karno's company in the theatre, grand military tournament by the Frontiersmen, and all kinds of side shows will combine to provide amusement for the thousands of visitors to the famous resort. Messrs. Brock will give a magnificent display of fireworks at night.

WHILE on the Pier at Colwyn Bay last Friday (the 19th) Mr. A. Hubner ("Corelli") observed a party of school children in danger of drowning while bathing in the sea, and by his promptness in raising an alarm,, and getting some boats out, luckily succeeded in effecting their rescue. The four girls were safely brought ashore, and though unconscious eventually recovered. For his timely assistance he was on Monday presented by the children with a very handsomely engraved solid silver cigarette case inscribed with their names.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, JULY 25, 1908.

PINAFORE AND PUGILISM.

In one of the choruses in H.M.S. Pinafore, which Mrs. R. D'OYLY CARTE has revived with such triumphant success at the Savoy, it is stated that the British tar is a "soaring soul," and that his fist should be "ever ready for a knockdown blow." Sir W. S. GILBERT is an ardent yachtist, and has probably imbibed, with the scent of the briny, some of the spirit of this immortal verse. There are few, even of the younger generation of dramatists, who could have dealt as promptly and vigorously with an assailant as he did outside Covent Garden Theatre last week. At about a quarter past eleven, it seems, he was walking up Endell-street looking for a cab. He had found one, and was getting into it, when he received a blow on the mouth from a young man about twenty years of age, who at the same time made a violent grab at the dramatist's watch-chain. Fortunately, the bow of the watch broke, and the swivel of the chain came out; and so the assailant "got nothing for his trouble except a rather severe blow on the face," which Mr. GILBERT "contrived" to deliver during a "momentary hold" on the coat of the thief. Sir WILLIAM was, however, prevented from capturing the highwayman by the presence of four or five confederates, who blocked Sir WILLIAM'S way till the rascal was out of sight.

Sir WILLIAM complains, we hear, that proper police precautions are not taken to prevent attacks on elderly gentlemen who may be taking the air, or a cab, in Endell-street between eleven o'clock and midnight; but really, when those elderly gentlemen are so extremely well able to take care of themselves as Sir W. S. GILBERT appears to be, official assistance scarcely seems necessary. The only use of the police in such cases would be to act as sleuth-hounds and run down the game which the hunter had struck before it had time to mingle with the herd and escape to the woods and thickets of Long Acre and its vicinity.

Sir WILLIAM'S character and views form a nice and interesting study, and the revival of H.M.S. Pinafore gives one an excellent opportunity of analysing his system. He has all the Anglo-Saxon hatred of blague and effusion, and all the Anglo-Saxon admiration for acerbity coupled with genuine good qualities. There is something extremely admirable in this complete, definite, and defensive personality. "Whom do I love?" asked NAPOLEON. "DUROC, perhaps? Yes, for the fellow never shed a tear!" The reduction of everything in the heavens above and the earth beneath to a kind of grey pulp, flavoured with literary quality and mordant wit, is a phenomenon which can hardly repeat itself. There is, and there can be, but one W. S. GILBERT. We do not believe that the GILBERTIAN humour has any deep foundation in logic or in ethics. For some time we fancied that the satire in Patience showed an anti-Greek and pro-Hebraic spirit; but latterly we learned that Bunthorne and Grosvenor were originally curates, and that it was only by an afterthought that they became æsthetes. Sir WILLIAM seems to satirise, as a certain other Scotch gentleman swore, "at lairge." Everything is absurd; let us lay on hard all round as long as the bladder holds to the string. It is ridiculous that people should be proud of their country; it is ridiculous that any of them should prefer pretty things to ugly ones; it is ridiculous that we should love or hate or procreate. We have often been struck by the intellectual likeness between Sir W. S. GILBERT and the renowned Captain Kettle. The ethics of the merchant service—feed your crew on beastly garbage, and, if they complain, knock them down with a belaying-pin—are carried out by the gallant little captain with a thoroughness which compels admiration; but one cannot help wondering what the situation looks like from the point of view of the common sailor—"Oh, the irony of that word!"—and if the results, which, according to Mr. CLARK RUSSELL, are the usual ones, of mutiny, murder, and ultimate shipwreck and starvation, are all for the best in this best of all possible worlds. The piquancy of the study of Sir WILLIAM'S mind lies in its combination of limitations and qualities. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern is perfect as far as it goes; but what a curiously circumscribed outlook it demonstrates! What an odd attitude was that which ridiculed effeminacy in Patience and laid the scene of the first act of H.M.S. Pinafore on the deck of the "Victory," with a comic First Lord travestied as NELSON!

The curious felicity of Sir WILLIAM'S verse raises libretto-writing to the level of the fine arts. The extraordinary manner in which, in the midst of a scene of utter absurdity some phrase or sentence used to flash out, cutting deep into the flesh like a razor of a South Carolina nigger; the wonderfully rapid solution of a sentiment in the biting acid of irony; and an elvish, prankish love of fun and mischief are yoked with a literary faculty which, in its surroundings, is phenomenal. The best of Sir WILLIAM'S work may easily pass unobserved. What a depth of suggestion, for instance, lies in the phrase "As some of you may know," addressed by Little Buttercup to the ladies on board the vessel in the second act of H.M.S. Pinafore! How exquisite is the turn of phrase in Iolanthe when the Lord Chancellor says, "Allow me, as an old Equity draughtsman, to make a suggestion"; and then proceeds simply to reverse the existing statute! How sly and "pawky" is the humour of the lines of the Judge's song in Trial by Jury:

> I soon got tired of third-class journeys,
> And dinners of bread-and-water;
> So I fell in love with a rich attorney's > Elderly ugly daughter.

Few of us can maintain the Porcupine attitude towards life even for a day. An east wind, a fit of indigestion, or an ill turn done us by one trusted will transform us into pessimists for a period; but sooner or later, as JOHNSON'S friend said, "Cheerfulness will come creeping in"; and we become false to the religion of bitterness. It is the merit of Sir WILLIAM GILBERT that he has been consistently "cynical"; and this without the help of poverty, family troubles, or ill-health. What excellent wearing quality there is in this kind of temperament is shown by his recent action in defence of his property. We wish the gallant old Knight many more years of cleverness and combativeness.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The weekly meeting of the council of the Actors' Association was held at 409, Strand, on Tuesday. Present:—Mr. Robson Paige (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Clarence Derwent, Chris Walker, F. Morland, Franklyn Walford, Richard A. Greene, Edmund Gurney, and F. Annerley, Misses Agnes Imlay, Lucy Sibley, and Marion Lind and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary).

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Finance Committee, consisting of Miss Agnes Imlay, Miss Lucy Sibley, and Mr. Annerley, met on Monday, and the secretary of the committee read the report, which the council discussed at great length.

The following were elected members:—Nancy Grogan, A. L. Burke, and Duncan Yarrow.

The chairman dealt with two suggestions.

The secretary reported ten engagements made since the last meeting of the council.

The council interviewed Miss Irma Fielden with reference to a member. The council also interviewed Mr. Jules Charmettes with reference to his claim.

A letter was drafted and sent to the Referee with reference to the paragraph which appeared in that paper on Sunday, the 19th inst., with regard to the meeting of the council on Tuesday, July 14th.

The secretary informed the council that a representative from the London County Council called upon him with reference to the proposed licensing of theatrical agencies, with a view to stopping bogus institutions, and asked what would be the views of the council of the A.A. on the matter. He received instructions to write to the L.C.C. to the effect that the council of the A.A. are unanimously of opinion that theatrical agencies should be licensed.

ACTORS' UNION.

AT the weekly meeting of the executive of the Actors' Union held on the 9th inst., the following were present:—Messrs. Lennox Pawle (chair), J. W. Braithwaite, J. H. Batson, D. Lewin-Mannering, Paul Lovett, A. Maitland Stapley, F. Rawson Buckley, Henry Bedford, Frank Gerald, Fred F. Loyd, Royce Milton, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary). Letters were received from the following committee men who are out of town, the communications counting as an attendance:—Messrs. Lewis Gilbert, F. Strickland, E. J. Collins, Harry C. Momber, and Cecil G. Calvert. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The Secretary was instructed to contradict the rumour that commission is charged for engagements obtained through the agency of the Union. He was also instructed to notify members that it is possible that the hearing of Provincial County Court summonses, upon application to the judge, may be transferred to London. One member was elected.

THE usual weekly committee meeting of the Actors' Union was held at 49, Bedford-street, on July 16, when the following were present:—Messrs. Geo. P. Lester (chair), Jerrold Heather, E. Howard Templeton, Fred F. Loyd, W. Ruddle Brown, J. W. Braithwaite, D. Lewin-Mannering, Oswald Marshall, H. Tripp-Edgar, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary). Letters (which count as an attendance) were received from Messrs. Bruce Lindley, Frank Gerald, Cecil G. Calvert, Harry C. Momber, Paul Lovett, and Royce Milton. The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed. The Secretary was instructed to write to the Secretary of the Touring Managers' Association, and was further instructed to convey the sympathy of the committee to the relatives of the late Franklyn Graham, and inform them that as Mr. Graham was out of benefit at the time of his death, they have no call on the Death Levy Fund of the Union.

IT was decided that the Union be represented at the Trade Union Congress to be held on Monday, Sept. 7, at the Mechanics' Institute, Nottingham, and for the five following days. The question as to whether there should be a special issue of stamps in connection with the Benevolent Fund was referred back for further consideration. The rough draft for the scheme for the club was submitted to the committee by the sub-committee elected for the purpose, and the Secretary was instructed to place the matter on the agenda for further discussion on the following Thursday. Five applications for membership were placed before the committee and passed.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, THURSDAY, July 23.—Despite the heavy rain that fell at intervals, the audience at the Théâtre Antique de la Nature enjoyed the performance of Les Maudits, the new work by M. Henri Fescourt. It is a tragedy founded on the history of Cain. The author shows us Cain, the prey to remorse. He knows he is cursed, and, followed by his tribe, he leads a vagabond life. None of his children, however, know of the crime he has committed. Lameck, his favourite son, has discovered a fertile district, and the tribe is on the point of settling down there, when Tsella, one of Cain's daughters, a kind of prophetess, announces that if they remain on that spot terrible calamities will happen. "The brother," she says, "will be slain by the brother, and the son will be cursed by the father"; and the terrified Cain does not know whether she refers to the past or to the present. In the second tableau Cain hears the sound of music in the distance. After a while a body of men on horseback appear, and Cain is thunderstruck. He has never seen a horse, and he thought that he and his sons were the only inhabitants on earth. Mad with rage and fear, he wakes his sons. They attack the strangers, who, thanks to their horses, manage to escape. Cain's sons, however, have made a prisoner, whom they take to their father. At the sight of the youth Cain utters a shriek, for he recognises the features of Abel. The young captive then explains that his name is Djaël. He is a descendant of Seth, a son of Eve, born after Cain fled into the desert. And Djaël adds that in the land whence he comes he is beloved on account of his likeness to Abel. Cain is convinced that Jehovah has sent him Djaël as a proof that his sin has been pardoned, and he consents to return with Djaël to Seth. In the final tableau Lameck, Cain's favourite son, is jealous of his father's unaccountable affection for Djaël. Lameck, who knows nothing of Cain's past, does not understand Cain's allusions to Abel, and, under the influence of his wife, Adda, he kills Djaël. Tsella's prophecy has come true. Once more a brother has killed a brother, and the murderer has been cursed by his father. But Lameck and the rest of the tribe do not trouble about the blood that has been spilt. Brutal and cruel, to them the life of a man is not more valuable than that of a beast; and they start to conquer the land where Seth is living, leaving Cain lamenting over the body of the murdered boy. The impressive work was excellently acted by MM. Froment, Durozat, Bert, Olin, Mayral; and Mmes. Kalff and Marbeau.

DURING the hot summer months many members of the theatrical profession fight out their differences in a court of law. It is their way of enjoying their holidays. This week's action has been one brought by Mlle. Anne Ratcliff, a young Belgian artist, against M. Abel Deval, manager of the Athénée. The lady claimed £800 damages from that gentleman for breach of contract, but, to her horror, it was she who was condemned to pay that sum to M. Deval. In 1903 Mlle. Ratcliff had been engaged at the Athénée for thirty performances, at a salary of £4 per night. But things did not go smoothly. Mlle. Ratcliff started by refusing to appear in Chiffon and in La Petite Milliardaire, and, after much trouble, she was induced to accept a rôle in Nelly Moray, the première of which was announced for April 10, 1905. The rehearsals began, the scenery was ready, when, the day before the dress-rehearsal the lady threw up her rôle and returned to Brussels. At the time she gave no reason for playing this trick on her manager, but when the case was heard she stated, through her lawyer, that, according to her, M. Deval had done everything in his power to make her rôle a complete failure. She accordingly claimed a forfeit of £800. M. Deval's counsel said that this accusation was absurd, and but a lame excuse to conceal the true reasons of the lady's flight to Brussels, adding that it was an unpardonable trick to play on a manager the day before the première. The Court took this view, and, as I stated before, it is the fair complainant who has been mulcted into the damages. The Parisians, therefore, have never had an opportunity of applauding Mlle. Ratcliff, who is now gracing the Théâtre du Parc in Brussels with her presence.

BUT all the members of the theatrical profession do not quarrel during the summer months. It is also a time for lawful love-making, and those who have been too busy to think of Cupid whilst their theatres were in full swing allow their passion to boil over during the dog days. This week two interesting engagements are announced. The first is that of M. Broussan, director of the Opéra, with Mlle. Jeanne-Samary-Lagarde. The readers of The Era all know M. Broussan, of whom constant mention has been made in these columns. As to Mlle. Samary, she comes from a good stock. She is the daughter of the well-known Mlle. Samary, sociétaire of the Comédie-Française, snatched away by a cruel illness. Beautiful and talented, her death at the time created quite a consternation in Paris. Her mother was Elizabeth Brohan; and her famous aunt, Augustine Brohan, took charge of her artistic education. Mlle. Jeanne, M. Broussan's fiancée, at one time thought of joining the profession, but her marriage with the director of the Opéra will prevent her from carrying out her intention. The other engagement is that of Mlle. Germaine Le Senne, niece of the well-known critic, Camille Le Senne, with M. Charles Batillot. At the recent Conservatoire competition Mlle. Le Senne received the first prize in opera, and, as I had already occasion to remark, we may expect great things from this gifted young artist. The Era offers its heartiest congratulations to the two young couples.

THE Variétés will reopen its season with Le Roi, the great success of last season. The next novelty will be Le Circuit, a comedy by MM. Robert de Flers and de Caillavet, with MM. Brasseur, Guy, Max Dearly, Prince, and Mmes. Lantelme and Magnier in the principal rôles.

AT the Folies-Dramatiques MM. Desvaillières and Moncousin's three-act operette Mademoiselle Trompette will be read to the artists in the course of the coming week. The rehearsals will begin at once, so that the new work will probably be ready for production on Sept. 1. The title-rôle will, I hear, be undertaken by Mlle. Alice Millet.

MLLE. CLAUDIE DE SIVRY, who scored a great success as Mme. Bertony in Le Chant du cygne, has just signed a three years' engagement with M. Deval of the Athénée.

THE Nouveautés is still drawing crowded houses with Occupe-toi d'Amélie; but as many of the artists are either away on their holidays or on tour, the cast is constantly being changed. Thus, the part of Amélie, created by Mlle. Cassive, has been undertaken by Mlles. Landry, Lucile Nobert, and, quite recently, by Mlle. Magda Simon. It is the same with the rôle of Irène, which has been played, first by Mlle. Carlix, then by Mlle. Mais, and latterly by Mlle. Dorigny. As to the men, M. Paul Ardot has passed his rôle of Adonis on to M. Lamare; M. Melchissédec is replacing M. Baron fils; and M. Mayral now impersonates the Prince in the absence of M. Decori.

THE following new operas will be produced at the Opéra-Comique in the course of the coming season:—Solange, by MM. Aderer and Salvayre; Léone, by MM. Montorgueil, Arène, and Samuel Rousseau; Sanga, by MM. Eug. Morand, Paul de Choudens, and Isodore de Lara; Myrtil, by M. Ernest Garnier; Chiquito, by M. Jean Nougnès; Pierre le Véridique, by M. Xavier Leroux; and On ne badine pas avec l'amour, by M. Gabriel Pierné.

MR. KELLY AND THE VETERANS.

Mr. W. W. Kelly, T.C., had, on the 17th inst., a pleasing recognition of his excellent work in connection with Birkenhead Veterans' Relief Fund at the hands of the honorary officials and members of the committee. It is well known in Birkenhead that whatever the popular proprietor of the New Theatre Royal undertakes is done thoroughly and in a practical way. Many charitable and philanthropic objects in the town have benefited handsomely through his efforts. When Lord Roberts appealed to the generosity of the public on behalf of the Crimean veterans still surviving, a local committee was formed in Birkenhead, and in connection with that committee Mr. Kelly rendered yeoman service. It is not too much to say that the financial result obtained was largely due to the practical efforts he put forth. The members of the committee decided to recognise those efforts in some tangible way, and by personal subscriptions they obtained an illuminated address, which was presented to Mr. Kelly in the Mayor's parlour at the Town Hall on the above date. The Mayor (Mr. Arnold Bloom), as chairman of the local fund committee, presided over the gathering, and the company included Mr. W. W. Kelly, Alderman E. G. Mason (hon. treasurer), and Mr. Herbert Halsall, T.C. (hon. secretary). The Town Clerk (Mr. J. Fearnley) sent an apology for absence through another engagement.

The Mayor opened the proceedings by observing that they were met for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Councillor W. W. Kelly in recognition of the excellent services he had rendered to the people of Birkenhead during his residence amongst them. Mr. Kelly had proved himself to be a worthy citizen. During the time he had had the Theatre Royal great changes for the better had taken place, and he had brought to the town high-class talent for the benefit of the public. He had invariably associated himself with every philanthropic movement in the town. The different hospitals, and many other charitable institutions, had benefited by his good work. He had been the means of gathering together a sum of over £1,000 for these laudable objects. When about six months ago Lord Roberts approached him (the Mayor) to assist in raising money towards the Crimean Veterans' Fund, he consulted Mr. Kelly, who immediately, with his usual promptitude and good nature, promised to give a performance at his theatre free of all expense in aid of the fund. A committee was formed to make the necessary arrangements, and as the result of the matinée which was held shortly afterwards the sum of £131 was handed over to the fund. Now, the committee had determined not to let Mr. Kelly's kindness pass by without some due recognition, and they decided to make him a presentation, which was heartily subscribed to by every one of them. Turning to Mr. Kelly, the Mayor continued: "I have very great pleasure, Mr. Kelly, on behalf of the members of the committee of the Crimean Veterans' Fund, in presenting you with this very handsome testimonial, and I desire to express, on their behalf and my own, our most earnest and best wishes for yourself and Mrs. Kelly, who has on all occasions sympathetically and ably assisted you in all these deeds of benevolence."

An address, handsomely illuminated and framed, was then uncovered, and Mr. H. Halsall, as hon. secretary, read its terms, as follows:—

"To W. W. Kelly, Esq., T.C.

"Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned honorary officers and members of the Birkenhead Veterans' Relief Fund Committee, desire to place on record our deep appreciation of the kindly assistance you have always willingly given to the sacred cause of charity, not only in connection with this particular fund, but also to any undertaking promoted in this borough having the relief of the distressed as its object.

"We also fully recognise that your benevolent intentions have always been fully shared in by your accomplished and esteemed wife.

"That you may be long spared to give us the benefit of your generous counsel, and to remain with us as an honoured citizen of Birkenhead is the sincere wish of "Arnold Bloom, Esq., T.C., Mayor, Chairman.

"E. G. Mason, Esq., Alderman,
Hon. Treasurer.
"Herbert Halsall, Esq., T.C.,
Hon. Secretary."

(Then followed the names of the members of the committee, twenty-seven in number.)

The Mayor added that as the funds subscribed exceeded the cost of the illuminated address, they decided to obtain a leather pocket-case, and in that had been inscribed a facsimile of the address (illuminated), to further show to Mr. Kelly the esteem and respect in which he was held by them all.

Alderman Mason, in presenting the pocket-case to Mr. Kelly, wished him and Mrs. Kelly many years in Birkenhead of health, happiness, and prosperity, and observed that this additional gift was in such a form that Mr. Kelly would be able to carry about with him a deep assurance of their very kindly sentiments.

Alderman Shaw, on behalf of the Council, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Kelly for the manner in which he met their efforts in connection with the Veterans' Fund, and Mr. Halsall seconded.

The vote was passed with hearty acclamation.

Mr. W. W. Kelly, who was received with enthusiasm, said he stood there that day the proudest and happiest man in Birkenhead. What he had done towards the advancement of not only this but of other charitable matters he had done from the fulness of his heart, and because he considered that it was his duty to do so. At the same time, he really could not thank them sufficiently for their kindly expressions. They had made him a very happy man in presenting him with this magnificent and very appropriate testimonial, which his wife and he would honour for the remainder of their days. He did not know at whose suggestion the duplicate of the address in miniature was made, but he thought it was a very happy one. In his travels abroad—and he was a considerable traveller—it would always be a pleasure to him to show, by that pocket-case, what kind friends he had in Birkenhead. When he came to Birkenhead twelve years ago and took possession of the Metropole Theatre he was asked by the Magistrate's Clerk for a surety or two. He immediately called upon Mr. Michael Byrne, who was the most substantial surety he could get, and who had been his surety ever since; and as another, he got his solicitor, Mr. G. F. Lees. They were responsible for the safe conduct of the theatre, and through them he (Mr. Kelly) had, he hoped, gained the appreciation of the public, and especially of the theatre-goers of Birkenhead. With regard to the Veterans' Fund, he regretted that Lord Roberts did not suggest his scheme much earlier, so that others of the veterans who had now passed away might have shared in some of the comforts. However, it was fortunate that those who now remained could end their days in comfort. After assuring the meeting that his wife would be as delighted as he was with the gifts presented to him, Mr. Kelly, in very cordial terms, proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor for presiding that day. He said Mr. Bloom was "one of the best." He looked back with great satisfaction to the day when he seconded Mr. Bloom's nomination for the Mayoralty, and he knew that none of them had occasion to regret the selection then made.

Mr. Proudman seconded, and Mr. G. F. Lees supported the vote of thanks.

MASONS AT WORK.

A very large gathering of the members of the Chelsea Lodge 3098 were present at the Chelsea Town Hall on Friday last to greet the W.M., Mr. Henry Coutts, upon his occupying the W.M. chair for the first time since his installation, a notable fact being that the whole of the invested officers were present, the Lodge being constituted as follows:—Mr. H. Coutts, W.M., Messrs. James W. Mathews and Albert Le Fre, P.M.'s, W. Hitch, S.W., Harry Bawn, J.W., Wolfe S. Lyon (treasurer), C. J. Doughty (secretary), W.F., K. Walton, S.A., G. H. Dyball, J.D., B. A. Bigny, I.G., Angelo Asher (organist), L. G. Sharpe, E., T. Lester and H. E. Micklen (stewards). The W.M. initiated Messrs. Charles Whittle, Harry Lovell, W. H. Wallis, Bowker Andrews, Paul Murray, W. Cutlin, and Ernie Mayne into the mysteries of Freemasonry, advanced Messrs. Ernie Foster and W. A. Stone, and completed the ceremony with Messrs. Leslie Bell, J. T. W. Grant, and Mr. Cecil Harry Phillips, the last-named being at the request of Mr. Herbert Chenery, the W.M. of the Asaph Lodge, that Lodge having adjourned to November next, being assisted in this ceremony by Mr. James W. Mathews, who rendered the Traditional History in a very masterly manner. Following, the reigning Master congratulated Mr. H. Griff upon his safe return from a very successful tour of America, and invested him as a steward of the Lodge. The first Master of the Lodge, Mr. James W. Mathews, on behalf of the members of the Lodge, presented Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon with the regalia worn by members of London rank, and in so doing stated that when the request from the Grand Master came that the Past Masters of the Lodge should select and forward to the Grand Lodge the name of some brother who from work done on behalf of the craft they thought entitled to receive the honour of London rank, he and his brother Past Masters were unanimous in the opinion that Bro. Lyon, having conceived and promoted the Lodge, was the fit and proper man to receive that honour, and, being asked to present him, on behalf of the members of the Lodge, with the insignia of the order, they were endorsing with their approval the action of the Past Masters.

Mr. Lyon, in response, thanked the Past Masters for selecting him, and the members of the Lodge for the very handsome present they had made him, and of which he could not help but to feel very proud, and the pleasure was so much more keen that it was presented in the presence of his son, who, by their kindness in altering the bye-laws and allowing him to initiate him, was a member of the Lodge; but that he was, if possible, more prond of the fact that he had promoted a Lodge which in the exceedingly short space of three and a half years had a membership numbering 114 men who were daily making the influence of Freemasonry in its fullest sense felt not only in Great Britain, but also in all parts of the civilised globe, as from the nature of their profession they were veritable birds of passage—here to-day and gone to-morrow; and a further proof of the interest taken, if further proof were required, was emphasised by the fact that there was present at that meeting members who had come from Brighton, Reading, Southampton, Nottingham, and elsewhere to attend their Masonic duties, and who would have to rush off to catch trains which would enable them to return in time to attend to their business in the evening.

In addition to the names already mentioned, the following members were present:—Messrs. Ernie Chester, G. H. Hill, W. H. Atlas, Monte Bayly, Fred Neiman, C. H. Burton, H. R. Mayville, Victor Kelly, Tom Parker, James S. Lyon, W. Collinson, Douglas White, Valazzi, Albert Christian, Herbert Austin, H. Kay Rameden, Robt. W. Duce, Gray Mosely, &c., and as visitors Messrs. W. J. Carey, J. D. Burnett, Bernard Cohen, H. Wardlow Fuller, and T. Gaston White.

"A WOMAN'S WAY."

Sketch, in One Act, by Mollie Laney, produced for the first time at the Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday, July 20.

Charlie Lovel .....MR. GEORGE C. DOUGHTY
Kitty Lovel .....MISS MOLLIE LANEY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A clever and pleasing idea is neatly developed in Miss Laney's new sketch, A Woman's Way, which was successfully produced at the Manchester Hippodrome on Monday. The scene is the home of the Lovels, and, in honour of Charlie's birthday, Kitty has bought him a new silk hat, after the impulsive manner of young wives, without first acquainting herself with the size he wears. She places it upon a chair, pending his arrival, and, among other reflections concerning him, indulges in the hope that he is, after six months of married life, cured of his old habit of backing horses. A telegram arrives. On opening it, she finds it is for Charlie: "Don't forget Flo—three thirty. She's a pinch." What can this be but an assignation? Quite in a woman's way, she yields to jealousy, and Charlie, appearing just then, is in for a hot time. Of course, just like a woman, hearing nothing but her own voice, and believing nothing but her own surmises, she threatens to go home to her mother, and, upon Charlie's desperate acquiescence, proceeds to put her threat into execution. It is now, on her disappearance from the room, that Charlie finds the hat. What is this but compromise? The hat is much too large for him; it is the hat of a gentleman visitor concealed by his wife. Now Kitty is in for it! The accusations and reproaches that succeed clinch the matter—Kitty is to go. At this juncture Charlie finds a letter addressed to him on the table. It is a communication from his solicitors, telling him that the bank in which his whole fortune was invested has stopped payment. This means ruin. Kitty, now ready to go, looks round for a last word, womanlike. His attitude—the letter in his hand—tells her something is wrong. Only one thing can come of it—the misunderstanding of the telegram is cleared up. In the hour of misfortune she stays—quite in a woman's way. The acting was of a quality in keeping with the cleverness of the theme. Mr. George C. Doughty's impersonation of Charlie Lovel was natural and thoroughly entertaining; and Miss Mollie Laney's depiction of the hasty but affectionate wife was informed by that inside knowledge of the character one might have expected from her authorship of the piece—upon which, and its success, she and Mr. Doughty are to be congratulated.

The pretty incidental music has been specially composed and arranged by Mr. Joseph D. Rogers, the well-known conductor.

"THE COON'S RESTAURANT."

A New Musical Comedy Playlet, produced at the Queen's Park Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday, July 20.

Harry .....MR. HARRY LAPPO
Nellie .....MISS ALICE STEWART
Chloe .....MISS DOLLY LANCASTER

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This is essentially a juvenile production, which was fairly well received by an audience which appreciated Mr. H. A. Jordison's endeavour to provide an entertaining morceau. It represents the attempt of Harry, a planter's son, to amuse the coons by opening a restaurant in an amateur way, while Chloe hinders his efforts as much as possible. The representatives of Chloe and Nellie both sing and dance well; the scenery is good, and the whole thing, bodied out with a juvenile chorus, is prettily done.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

THE METROPOLITAN, which may really be regarded as the third building of that name, will be opened on Monday, Aug. 24. There will be a private view on Friday, Aug. 21, when Mr. Henri Gros, managing-director, and Mr. Jack Edgar, manager, will be "at home" to a host of friends and well-wishers.

A CHAT with Mr. John F. Revill, the clerk of works to Mr. Frank Matcham, who has planned the sweeping alterations and important improvements at the Met., revealed to us the very liberal scheme under which the practically new hall will be conducted. Cheap prices and luxurious comfort are the watchwords of Mr. Gros, who, like the astute caterer that he is, has his finger on the pulse of the public and reads the signs of the times.

THE old tavern, which had a history as a posting-house in the days of the village of Padyngton, has been demolished to make room for a new exit and entrance to the balcony, and the purchase of an adjoining shop has enabled Mr. Matcham to complete the façade in the Edgware-road—an architectural improvement that will strike the eye of the wayfarer.

THE seating accommodation has been increased by four rows of seats in pit and balcony, the occupants of which will luxuriate in tip-up chairs installed by Lyon and Co. Considerable alterations have been made to the box fronts, which will, of course, be elegantly embellished to harmonise with the colour scheme of the decorations of the house, which are to be of cream, gold, and a pretty shade of green.

BEHIND the proscenium there will be every possible new appliance that can in any way aid that desideratum of the modern music-hall—celerity in stage setting, and the chances of effective, realistic scenery and elaborate mounting are much improved by the widening of the stage itself. It is unnecessary now to give more detail of a building that will be a veritable people's palace for Paddington, as it will be fully described in our columns on the occasion of the private view.

THE PALACE, Tottenham, will open its doors on Aug. 31. Mr. Henri Gros will be present at the opening, and will then depart for Bad Nauheim for a much-needed holiday.

UP to the moment of writing, the grand military night, which is to take place at the Oxford on Friday evening next, has received the patronage of Earl Roberts, V.C., Lord Cheylesmore, the Lord Mayor of London, Sir George White, V.C., and the general committee of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny Fund.

MR. ALBERT CHEVALIER has been re-engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll for a special fortnight at the Coliseum, commencing Aug. 3. During the first week of this engagement Mr. Chevalier will appear as Turby, in a condensed version of the favourite old farce, The Goose With the Golden Eggs, as performed by him 300 times on tour. For the second week he will, for the first time, impersonate the old French actor, Achille Talma Dufard, in Behind the Scenes, a tabloid edition of The First Night. Mr. Chevalier will be supported by Messrs. E. W. Garden, Harry Brett, Arthur Brankston, Bertie Baxter, Mesdames Mabel Garden, and Daisy Irvine.

THE part of Achille Talma Dufard has always been a favourite one with our leading actors ever since Mr. Alfred Wigan played the character in his own adaptation of the French piece Le Père de la Débutante, and his impersonation was considered by a leading and enthusiastic critic of the day (1849) to possess sufficient originality, refinement, and heartiness to challenge any version of the character, past, present, or to come. Mr. Beerbohm Tree has played the part somewhat recently, but we may expect original treatment of it from Mr. Chevalier, whose accent we are sure will be irreproachable.

MR. CHARLES BEECHAM AND MR. WORLAND S. WHEELER, manager and acting-manager and secretary for the past eight years at the Paragon, have resigned their positions at that establishment, which they will shortly leave to enter into partnership as sketch producers and dramatic and variety agents. Messrs. Beecham and Wheeler have already taken offices in Henrietta-street, Covent Garden.

AT a meeting of the directors of the Coliseum Syndicate, Ltd., held in London, on Tuesday, an interim dividend for the half-year ending June 30, 1908, was declared at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, free of income tax, on the ordinary shares of this company. The share books will be closed for seven days prior to Aug. 1, upon which day the dividend will be paid. It will be remembered that the company reopened the London Coliseum on Monday, Dec. 16.

THE Hackney and Shepherd's Bush Empire Palaces, Ltd., have declared an interim dividend on ordinary shares for the half-year ending June 30 last at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, free of income tax.

MR. ALFRED MOUL will introduce at the Alhambra on Monday some manifestations which are so puzzling that "The Mystery of Mysteries" fitly describes the performance. To avoid the possibility of trickery the simple adjuncts required have all been made by employees of the house under the superintendence of the master carpenter, and they will be put together on the stage in sight of the audience. Further, committees of ladies and gentlemen drawn from various parts of the house will be asked to examine the performers. It may be added that, courting the fullest enquiry, tests have been carried on for some weeks past by independent persons, who, like the management, have failed to discover the secret of how material is formed out of space. Perhaps the public will be more fortunate. Mr. and Mrs. Tomson, the author of "The Mystery of Mysteries," gave a private demonstration at the Alhambra on Friday (yesterday) afternoon.

MR. LEO DRYDEN, who gave us in "The miner's dream of home" one of the finest descriptive songs ever written, is very much up to date with "The White Man," which is founded on the story that was told at the Lyric recently in Mr. Milton Royle's drama of the same name. Mr. Dryden is nothing if not picturesque, and his newest character suits him exactly.

MR. HERBERT SHELLEY'S success is so sound with Dan the Outlaw that he has lately received a tempting offer to tour it through the whole of Ireland as a play. He is also in negotiation for New York, and presents it at Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday.

A SENSATION of a novel character is to be introduced at the Empire Theatre on Monday, when a troupe of highly-trained dogs, under the direction of M. Velanchi, will play a game of football. This is their first appearance on any stage, and it is safe to say that the excitement of this canine contest will be quickly communicated to the audience, judging by a picture of the game which appeared recently in an illustrated newspaper. The Empire Bioscope has secured the exclusive rights of presenting in the West-end of London the results of the Olympic games, and these will be shown each night on the screen.

THE Tivoli, Pentre, will be closed during next week for some necessary alterations.

A SYNDICATE has been formed for the purpose of erecting a place of amusement at Darwen. Operations will be commenced shortly.

THE Pavilion, Abertillery, is closed next week for renovations, and will open on Bank Holiday for the second season of varieties, two houses nightly.

THE directors of the Leicester Palace Theatre, Ltd., have declared an interim dividend on the ordinary shares for the half-year ending June 30 last, at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, free of income tax.

MISS ETHEL DONNA had to give up work last Thursday (16th) at the Empire, Middlesbrough, through a touch of influenza. She has gone to Brighton for a few days, but resumes business on Monday next at Hull.

THE Manchester Hippodrome and Ardwick Empire, Ltd., have announced a final dividend for the year ending June 30 last at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, free of income tax, £4000 being transferred to the reserve account, and the carry-forward being slightly more than last year.

SIGNOR PEPI had a disappointment last Monday at the Hippodrome, Darlington, and 'phoned over to Manager Rembges at the Empire, Middlesbrough, for a turn. Cliff Ryland was at hand and so went over, and made his first appearance at the new Darlington house on Monday. Judging from the hit he made Cliff will be wanted there again.

THE Coventry Empire closed on Saturday last for re-decorations and alterations, and will be re-opened on August Bank Holiday. Mr. Kay Draco, the manager of this house, rode in a one mile scratch cycle race at some Coventry sports last Saturday, against Mr. Lennox Barry, the manager of the Empire, Coventry, who won, after a closely-contested race, by a few yards.

A LARGE and influential committee is being formed with the object of presenting Mr. Lennox Barry with a testimonial on the occasion of his benefit, which is to take place next month. During his sixteen months' stay in Coventry Mr. Barry has always taken an active interest in all charitable matters which have come under his notice, and has been the means of adding considerably to the funds of several local institutions. The testimonial is to take the form of a cheque.

ON the south sands, South Shields, recently, the Bathing Facilities Sub-Committee, together with other members of the Town Council, met for the purpose of formally naming and launching the new surf boat built for the Corporation, to be used by the beach attendant for the purpose of rendering aid to bathers who may be in trouble.

COUNCILLOR J. K. HALL, proprietor of the Tivoli, South Shields, referred to the efforts of the Bathing Facilities Sub-Committee to properly equip and popularise the south beach. The Corporation also felt that whilst they encouraged bathing, they should also, as far as possible, provide for the safety of bathers, and to this end they now had very wisely provided a boat of such a character.

THE Mayor performed the christening ceremony, naming the boat the "J. K. Hall." He said that the interest which Councillor Hall had taken in developing and popularising the sands made it peculiarly acceptable to them that his name should be associated in this way with this new feature of the seaside facilities. He had therefore great pleasure in naming the J. K. Hall surf-boat. His Worship then broke the customary bottle of wine across the bow of the boat, which was subsequently launched.

THE transformation which has been effected at the Hippodrome, St. Thomas-street, Scarborough since last February is in several respects remarkable. It is now no longer the old circus so familiar to Scarborough people and others, but an entirely new Hippodrome. The old arena and encircling rows of seats have gone, the balcony has gone—everything has gone but the bare walls and even these have been altered and strengthened in parts. Nobody who knew the old place will recognise even the faintest shadow of a resemblance to it in the new.

TO-DAY the Hippodrome—which will be opened for the season on Monday next—is an up-to-date theatre, furnished on the most approved and ever luxurious lines, with decorations of walls and boxes and balconies and ceiling in the choicest shades of white and blue and gold, which are altogether pleasing to the eye, and which give an air of much refinement to the interior. Mr William Peacock—whose father-in-law was the late Mr. Sam Adams, of the old Philharmonic, Islington, the Royal, and the Trocadero—of the York Empire, and the Grand Opera House, Harrogate, is the managing-director.

THE fine house has a holding capacity of two thousand, there being on the ground floor orchestra stalls, pit-stalls, and pit; the first tier is the grand circle, and above that the gallery, whilst there are six boxes, three on each side. Behind the pit the circle and the gallery there is a promenade, and the exits are so arranged that it is calculated the house can be emptied in a minute and a half.

THE handsome and elaborate main entrance in St. Thomas-street will be used for the occupants of the dress circle, orchestra stalls, and pit stalls only, the dress circle being approached from a flight of broad marble steps in the main entrance. A large corridor enables the gallery audience waiting for admission to be in shelter in wet weather. An arrangement of this kind has also been made for the pit and all other portions of the house. The whole building is to be lighted by electricity. The rebuilding has been carried out to the plans of Mr. F. Tugwell, the architect of the Theatre Royal, York, and the Opera House, Harrogate.

LA MILO has been recently winning golden opinions at the Palace, Aberdeen. A local critic says "that the inhabitants of the granite metropolis found themselves in a new atmosphere. At a time when all the world is watching the progress of the Olympic games, modelled on the glories of Grecian athleticism, we, in Aberdeen," he says, "are fortunate in having the living embodiment of that statuesque grace which the great Greeks of the golden age loved to portray in the marble. La Milo, the queen of living statuary, has drawn crowded houses to the Palace Theatre, and her poses may be described as educational, refined, beautiful, and impersonal."

THE Winter Gardens and Victoria Pavilion, Morecambe, are to be sold by auction (by order of the Court of Chancery), by Mr. G. H. Petty, at the Midland Hotel, Morecambe, on Tuesday, Aug. 25, at three o'clock in the afternoon precisely, subject to conditions to be then produced. The property includes the large concert or music hall called the Victoria Pavilion, the Winter Gardens or Ballroom, and six lock-up shops, a valuable freehold property occupying a commanding position. The Pavilion and Ballroom premises are licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors. For further particulars apply to the auctioneer, 62, Market-street, Lancaster; or to J. G. Wright, solicitor, Lancaster.

MR. ORLANDO POWELL, so long chef d'orchestre at the Crown Theatre, Peckham, nightly occupies the conductor's chair at the Oxford, what time Mr. George Leyton is presenting Mr. John P. Harrington's dramatic scena, The Last Muster, to which Mr. Powell has composed the incidental music.

MR. GUS ELEN, who is in Stanley, N.B., has been enjoying a fairly good time, though he has sprained his ankle, which seems to be getting on all right now. Mrs. Elen has been bitten by a dog on the arm, the animal tearing an expensive blouse she was wearing at the time.

THE conditions have been a bit unfavourable for fishing, and Mr. Elen has only grassed two salmon, but has had good sport with the sea trout. Ernest Shand spent a week with him in the early part of the month, and they had a good time together, both visiting Loch Leven, and catching some fine trout—the most beautiful they ever saw. Mr. Elen, whose forty-sixth birthday was on Wednesday, is not fretting at his absence from the boards.

JOHN LAWSON has received an offer to visit America, but is experiencing a difficulty in postponing his contracts here. There would be not the slightest doubt of his success. Lawson gave us dramatic thrills on the variety stage before the Grand Guignal pieces had been heard of in London.

MRS. JOHN LAWSON paid her first visit to the Empire, Dublin, this week with that powerful work, The Devil's Sunday. Of her success there is no doubt, and all the Dublin papers speak in praise of her acting. This clever lady will be seen at the Grand, Clapham, on Bank Holiday in The Woman and the Apple.

THE famous Gaiety comedian, John L. Shine, is about to introduce a new and up-to-date single turn. And why not? A more versatile comedian could not be found. Who does not remember his fine impersonation in Hogmanay, or his blatant millionaire in Sydney Grundy's The Glass of Fashion? His advent in a new rôle will be looked for with much interest. He will appear during the week of Aug. 17 at the Palace, Reading, having been secured by Mr. Howard Watson through Will Oliver's agency.

MR. TOM MCNAUGHTON, genial and breezy as ever, is back again with his two partners in the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.—Messrs. John P. Harrington and Joseph Kandt—looking bronzed and thoroughly "fit," after a delightful trip from America on the Lusitania. Tom has done some wonderful things in the way of "placing" for the Berners-street firm whilst in America, perhaps his biggest achievement in this direction being the arranging for no less than fifteen of the Monte Carlo songs with one firm alone, the Ted Synder Publishing Co., of New York.

MR. FREDERICK VICTOR, well known as Napoleon in Wills's play, A Royal Divorce, will produce at the Palace, Bow, on Monday, what is termed an "Impressionist" sketch, entitled Meredith's Masterpiece, in which he will have a strong acting part. Special scenery has been painted by Mr. F. H. Bull.

MR. GALLAGHER, who was appointed manager of the Willesden Hippodrome at the opening of that house, is severing his connection therewith, and Mr. Horace Sheldon, the chef d'orchestre there, who is the son of Mr. Ernest Sheldon, of Aberdeen and Dundee, is also leaving.

MR. FRED MILLER, the popular general-manager of the Canterbury and Paragon, will sever his connection with the Syndicate to-day, and his resignation has been received with unfeigned regret among the habitués of the Canterbury. For close on eight years Mr. Miller has been a familiar figure there, and his unfailing courtesy and genial kind-heartedness have made him the staunch friend of a great number of people.

MR. MILLER in 1893 was appointed secretary to Mr. Arthur Tressider, manager at the Paragon, and on his death occupied the same post to Mr. Will Lennon. He succeeded Mr. Lennon as manager at the Paragon, and when Mr. Fred Holden severed his connection with the Canterbury, the directors appointed Mr. Miller as manager of the Canterbury and Paragon, a position he has held for about eight years.

IT was during Mr. Miller's managership that the golden anniversary of the Canterbury took place, when all the music-hall celebrities of the day were present, including the late Mr. Charles Morton, the father of the halls, and founder of the Canterbury.

AT the golden anniversary Mr. G. Adney Payne took up the old rôle of chairman, an office long since abolished at music halls.

MR. MILLER has had another appointment offered to him, but as yet he has not come to any decision on the matter. The Canterbury will be run on the two houses a night plan at the end of September.

MISS NELLIE WILSON arrived at Sydney (Australia) on the 17th inst., per the s.s. "Himalaya," after a most enjoyable and pleasant trip.

MR. HERBERT DARNLEY will shortly launch another big music hall production. He will not survey mankind from China to Peru, but keep the action in the Flowery Land. Mr. Darnley wrote the late Dan Leno's greatest successes, including the farcical comedy Mr. Wix of Wickham, Tower of London, Mrs. Kelly, Buying a House, &c., and is part author of Moses and Sons, His Majesty's Guests, &c.

MR. GEORGE LEYTON will also shortly produce a song with a play-title, viz., "The Flag Lieutenant," founded on the successful piece by Major W. P. Drury and Mr. Leo Trevor now running at the Playhouse. The verses will be from the pen of Chris Davis and the music by Orlando Powell.

MR. JOHN E. COYLE, the popular comedian, has been attacked with hæmorrhage of the lungs. The first intimation of the mischief occurred on Sunday, the 12th, at Liverpool, and on Tuesday last week, after the first performance at the Birmingham Hippodrome, Mr. Coyle was seized with a second and more severe attack, when Drs. Trout and Bennett attended him, and prescribed absolute rest for three months, and a holiday abroad. We understand that all Mr. Coyle's contracts are cancelled up till October.

THE Tivoli report shows a net profit for the twelve months ended June 30 (after providing for £5,833 interest on the mortgage and debentures) of £15,468. In January last an interim dividend of £4 per cent. (less income-tax) was paid. The directors now recommend the payment of a further dividend of £6 per cent (less income-tax) for the half-year ended June 30, 1908, together with a bonus of 2s. 6d. per share (free of income-tax), equal to £12 10s. per cent. for the year.

AFTER payment of this dividend and bonus, the directors propose to deal with the surplus by applying £5,000 to the general reserve fund, making £20,000 to the credit thereof, and carrying forward the balance to the current year's accounts. A highly satisfactory report, on which the shareholders may be heartily congratulated. Mr. Henry Tozer (chairman), who will offer himself for re-election on Wednesday next at the seventeenth annual meeting, will again be the unanimous choice of the shareholders. Of that there can be no shadow of doubt.

WE are very pleased to say that Mr. Charles Clifford was not accidentally killed while riding near Budapest, as announced in our "Variety Gossip" of last week. Our information came from Mr. Clifford's brother, who, with the whole of the family, was deceived by mistaken identity. We extended our sympathy to Miss Jennie Johns; we now offer that charming artist and her fiancée, Mr. Charles Clifford, our heartiest congratulations on their marriage, which takes place quietly to-day. Mr. Willie Hesketh will officiate as best man.

THE space occupied by the Edgbaston Reservoir, Birmingham, may be utilised for the purpose of a "Fun City." Messrs. Fred Ginnett, P. Collins, and Frank Bostock are named in connection, and the figure mentioned is £1,000.

THE sketch The Sheriff and the Rosebud, by W. Townsend Collins, which was produced for the first time on June 23 last at the Manchester Hippodrome, is to be given for the first time in London on Monday at the Shepherd's Bush Empire.

THE story is laid in the romantic and picturesque regions of the Pacific slope, and has been adapted from a work by Horace Annesley Vachell, author of Her Son. Miss Ida Morgan, daughter of the resident-manager at Shepherd's Bush, Mr. E. P. Morgan, will repeat her impersonation of Sadie ("Bud").

THE monologue which Miss Madge Crichton is playing at the Coliseum this week is written by Miss Laura Leycester, who has furnished Mr. Colin Bryce (just returned from America) with a farce entitled Are You a Socialist? which he will shortly produce at a London music hall.

THE Bordesley Palace, Birmingham, has turned out very successful since its conversion, last October, from a music hall into a playhouse. For one thing, its resident-manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward, spares himself no effort in popularising his show-place and fare with the locals, while his conduct of the house is perfect.

LAST Saturday Mr. Woodward held a children's matinée with Mr. Charles Harrington's Uncle Tom's Cabin company, playing to over 4,000 of the little ones, and at the end got them out comfortably in less than four minutes. This week Messrs. Garside and Forbes Knowles' company is playing here to extraordinary summer business.

"THE HARMONIC CRANKS, entertainers," is the exact announcement on the Euston bill of a group of merrymakers, who speed the time with song, with jest, and with comic business. The scene is a modern hostelry on a festive occasion, and a burly policeman is called in to assist with his fine voice the harmonious sounds—as full and sweet as ever echoed over the valley at the foot of Mount Helicon. There is an imp of mischief, an excellent dancer, in the frolic of the "cranks." A lady Suffragist, too, just gives a hint about "Votes for Women," and something very scathing also is said concerning the Licensing Bill. It is all delightfully irresponsible and amusing, and the Harmonic Cranks have an assured future.

THE daring aerial performance by the Sisters Curzon at the Manchester Hippodrome, this week, came to a dramatic but painful end on Tuesday night, when one of them let go her hold whilst whirling in mid-air, and dropped into the arena cushions, a distance of 30ft. At the time of the accident both performers were hanging by the teeth, and, as the young lady dropped, the other end of the revolving swivel swung from a horizontal to a vertical position. With great presence of mind the remaining performer clutched at the rope, and thus saved herself.

MISS WILLARD, as the injured lady is known in private life, was removed to the infirmary in an unconscious condition. She remained in this state all night, but next morning she was better. The doctor's examination showed that the wrist was apparently broken, but beyond severe bruises on the face and body, there was no other serious injury.

THE two young ladies are sisters, and are of American extraction, one being married; but the pair have always played under the name of Curzon. Six weeks ago they came to England for the first time, and after a continuous run at the London Hippodrome, went on to Manchester without a rest. An examination of the apparatus used by the Sisters Curzon revealed that all was in perfect order.

THE eleventh annual meeting of shareholders of the Birmingham Gaiety Theatre of Varieties, Ltd., took place on Friday, the 17th, Mr. John Young presiding. The directors regretted that the year's trading would not permit of a dividend. The profits, after providing for debenture interest, insurance, salaries, and depreciation, amounted to (including the balance brought forward) the sum of £702 9s. 11d. This, the directors recommended, should be carried forward.

DURING the year competition had considerably increased. Matinées had been instituted, but discontinued during the summer, and the general expenses much lessened. It was suggested that if the board was composed of local gentlemen interested in the theatre it would be advantageous. After some discussion the balance-sheet was approved. The directors offered to resign, but the future composition of the board was deferred for discussion at the adjourned meeting, to take place on July 29.

A PLEASING innovation has been made at the Palace Ball-room, Blackpool, in the shape of a ballet entitled The Children's Dream of Toyland. This was submitted to the public on Saturday evening, and met with an enthusiastic reception from an enthusiastic audience. Mlle. Pauline Rivers, who is responsible for the novel and attractive production, is to be highly complimented, and so are the 150 local children taking part in it.

THE theme running through the tableaux is that of a little family, tired out with play and fallen into slumber, awakened by fairies to find themselves in possession of a sort of Pandora's box—in this case the contents being up-to-date dolls and toys. These characters are, of course, taken by the children, and with song and dance and a series of picture groupings, glorious animation is preserved up to the grand finale, in which thousands of lights are employed, the scene being surpassingly pretty and novel.

SPECIALITY numbers are given by the Misses Lena Melville, Gertie Langley, Edith Howarth, Lily Lofthouse, and Violet Harold. Then there are the "Pauline" and "Dainty Dandies" sextettes, and other groups of tastefully attired performers who give dances of an interesting character.

MR. PAUL BARNES, of New York, concludes his first visit to England this week, sailing next Tuesday for the United States on the s.s. Ivernia. He is enthusiastic about England, its audiences, and everything concerning the old country. He has had a great time, but intends to have a greater when he returns next January. Barnes is booked practically solid from next February to April, 1910, and he is going to broach a new cask of jokes, japes, and stories. Meanwhile he retires to his finely-situated country home in New Hampshire, where, on the lakes adjoining, he indulges in his favourite hobby of motor-boating.

THE staff of the Empire Theatre, Swindon, held their annual outing on Saturday. Train was taken to Gloucester, where a steam launch was chartered to convey the party up the Severn to Tewkesbury, where dinner was served. The esteemed managing-director, Mr. Alfred Manners, accompanied the party.

THE annual outing of the staff of the New Cross Empire takes place on Sunday. A special saloon train will leave New Cross Station (L.B. & S.C.R.) for Brighton at 8.40 a.m., returning from Brighton at 7.10 p.m. Dinner will be served at the Washington Hotel, West-street, at 1.30 p.m. sharp. The chair will be taken by Mr. Ernest Bridgen (manager) and the vice-chair by Mr. C. Young (assistant-manager).

THE first annual picnic of the staff of Barrasford's Hippodrome, Sheffield, took place on Sunday to Dove Dale, situate in the midst of Derbyshire's grand and majestic scenery. The party, numbering about sixty, and including Mr. E. D. Elbourne, the resident-manager, and Mrs. Elbourne, journeyed by "special" Midland train to Matlock, where well-appointed coaches were in waiting to convey them to their destination. Dinner was served in good style at the Peveril of the Peak Hotel, after which a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Elbourne, who, in a brief, but happily-worded, reply, spoke of the good feeling that existed amongst the staff.

THE staff of the Empire, Newcastle, on the 19th had their sixteenth annual outing to Warkworth, in delightful weather. Dinner was served at 1 p.m., after which Mr. W. P. Wells, the courteous manager, proposed the toast of the day, "The Moss' Empires, Ltd.," coupled with the name of Mr. Richard Thornton. Mr. Wells also made a presentation to Mr. John W. Dawson, the popular musical director of the theatre. The present took the form of a roll-top writing-desk, silver clock, almanack, and silver candlesticks. Mr. Dawson replied in feeling terms, and ringing cheers were given for him.

THE result of the sports held during the day was as follows:—Girls' Skipping Race (under 16 years).—Miss Joyce, 1; Miss Elliott, 2. 120 Yards (open to staff).—Dunlavey, 1; Derry, 2; Graham, 3; Levett, 4. Egg and Spoon Race (Ladies).—Miss Ridley, 1. Boys' 100 Yards Race.—Stephens, 1; Dryden, 2. Ladies' Costume Race (first prize kindly given by Mrs. Thornton).—Miss Thompson, 1; Miss Ridley, 2. Ladies' Skipping Race.—Miss Cooke, 1; Miss Thompson, 2. Veterans' Race (50 Yards).—Jenkins, 1; Brierley, 2. Muddle Boot Race.—Brown, 1; Battersby, 2. Three-legged Race.—Sharp and Kilbour, 1. Managers' Race.—Mr. Kelly was a popular winner, with Mr. Boardman second, and Mr. Phillips third. Messrs. Wells, Bell, Pellow, Buckingham, and Abrahams were among the "also rans." The prizes were afterwards gracefully presented by Mrs. Thornton. After a most enjoyable day the party returned to Newcastle by the 7.15 train.

MR. JOHN DONALD in his scena A Scottish Exile's Dream met with a very hearty reception in Ireland on Monday last at Belfast. His reception was not at all surprising as the popular vocalist played there in pantomime last year, also the previous year; but all the same his new rôle came as a welcome surprise.

A PARTY of friends and relatives of Osborn and Brookes, the popular comedy duo, assembled at St. Pancras Station on Friday morning to wish them a pleasant voyage and happy engagement with Mr. Rickards in Australia, to which land they sail by the s.s. Orotava. They return early next year to fulfil London engagements.

W. D. MACKENZIE'S musical scena, Moments With the Masters, an entirely new and original production, with a chorus of fifteen voices, introducing the Human Ocarina, has been doing great things at the Hippodrome, Hastings, getting six and eight curtain calls each night and crowding the house. The Human Ocarina has to give two encores. Mr. Vivian Fisher, the managing-director here, says that no show has caught on so well since the house has been built.

LITTLE MONA CONNOR, daughter of Fred J. Connor, proprietor and manager of the Hippodrome and Circus, Douglas, was the recipient of many valuable presents on Monday night last, the occasion being her birthday. The circus was crowded, and the clever little rider was received with a great ovation on Mr. Albino, the ring-master, making the presentations, the donors being Manx and professional friends.

THE new Hippodrome for Todmorden, situate in Halifax-road, is progressing satisfactorily. The roof is being put on, and in a few days the building will be covered in. The seating is being pushed on, the fireproof curtain is in hand, and the electricity contract will be given out very shortly, an efficient scheme of lighting having been specially provided. A long list of engagements has been already entered into, and the manager (Mr. Richard Dewhurst) is assured of a handsome structure. The opening date is Monday, Oct. 5.

THE CANTERBURY will open its doors on Monday with a new manager, Mr. Charles W. Adams, who will be remembered as the popular resident chief at the Shepherd's Bush Empire. Under the auspices of Mr. Frank Leon, the famous clog dancer, a competition will be held, and the clang of wooden shoon will be heard every evening during the week. There will be no entrance fee. The prizes consist of a silver belt and title of amateur champion of England, also silver medallions, cups, and medals. Jack Sheppard and Miss Ruby Vesta will appear in the Great Trunk Mystery, and a new coster episode, entitled Corkscrew, will be presented by Nevill Graham & company. Another novelty is "Memora," the girl with the marvellous memory.

THE case of the United Counties Theatres, Ltd. v. Chanti came before his Honour Judge Woodfall in the Westminster County Court on Monday by way of a claim for damages by music-hall proprietors against an artist for breach of contract. Mr. Walter Payne was counsel for plaintiffs, and Mr. Doughty for the defendant. The case for the plaintiffs was that defendant was engaged to perform at their Plymouth hall, and wrote that he was too ill to fulfil his contract. He wrote that he had a slight attack of rheumatic fever, but sent no medical certificate. Plaintiffs had put him at the top of the bill, and had to go to considerable trouble and expense to get another turn to take his place. There was a clause in the contract that a medical certificate must be supplied in cases of inability to perform through illness.

MR. DOUGHTY said the only person who had suffered was Chanti, who lost his salary. Illness, he submitted, was an excuse in law. His Honour said the contract was a binding one, and had been partly performed by each side, defendant having supplied the bill matter and plaintiffs having put it in the bill. What damages had plaintiffs sustained? What was the cause of the contract being broken? The illness, not the absence of the certificate. Plaintiffs would have suffered the same had defendant sent the certificate, and they would have had to engage another artist just the same. He quite understood the necessity for a certificate, and here the artist agreed to supply one if he fell ill and was unable to perform. Plaintiffs were entitled to nominal damages, which he assessed at 40s.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

ONE of the tremendous booms that occasionally happen in the world of popular song has just occurred. The Isle of Man has gone positively frantic over the song by Dan Lipton and C. W. Murphy entitled "Oh! oh! Antonio!" which Miss Florrie Forde has been singing at Douglas. It being Glasgow Fair week, popular Douglas has been thronged with holiday-making Scots, all of whom are singing the ditty at all hours everywhere. Messrs. Francis and Day have immediately placed the song in the "Sixpenny Pops," and so great and continuous are the orders by letter, telegram, and telephone, the presses have been going night and day to keep pace with the demand.

AMONG other "Sixpenny Pops" just issued or in the press which Messrs. Francis and Day are placing on the market are "A heart full of love and a pocket full of money," "Take me back to the Isle of Man," "Esau, take me on the see-saw," "Where, oh where, is my Lancashire lad!" "The jocular joker," "Shake hands," "If I had only slept another minute," "Whistle, and shut your eyes," "Don't run after the girl," "Speak of a man as you find him," "Who said he don't like girls?" "Hang out the front door key," and "The end of the pier."

AMONG the new dances that Messrs. Francis and Day have secured none are likely to be more popular than the new round dance invented by Mr. Tom Walton, the popular M.C. of the White City, Manchester, and composed by Mr. L. C. Everitt, entitled "Alma." Already many visitors at Blackpool, Douglas, and the White City have danced their soles from their uppers to this daily redemanded morceau. The same may be said of the same inventor and composer's two-step "The Boston," which took second prize at the conference of the United Kingdom Association of Teachers of Dancing. This also is being published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA'S new song "The lass who loved a sailor," by John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell, has been purchased by Mr. David Day's firm, as has also that funny comic song "When he's three-score ten," the Old Age Pension song, written and composed by E. P. Weston and Harry Bedford, and sung by the latter.

MISS VESTA TILLEY has secured from F. W. Leigh and Kenneth Lyle a clever and tuneful number entitled "The simple human girlie."

ALICE LLOYD'S "Lovelight" song, which has been the rage of her second successful American tour, will now be "featured" in Florence Zeigfeld's production, The Follies of 1908, by Miss Lucy Weston at the New York Theatre, Broadway. "Isn't it lovely to be in love?" has been fixed with the same production, and will also be sung by Miss Lucy Weston. "Sweet Eileen" will be specially "featured" in Messrs. Shubert's new production, The Mimic World, at the Casino Theatre, Broadway. "Good-bye, Mr. Williams," is now the leading song of Laddie Cliff, who has made such a success in the States. "Lovelight" is published by Francis and Day in America, and the three last-mentioned songs by the Ted Snyder Publishing Co., of New York.

MISS ANNA HELD, in a characteristic letter to Messrs. Harrington and Orlando Powell, has gracefully tendered to them her thanks for their Americanised version of Miss Marie Lloyd's "The Directoire Girl," which the American star will be specially "featuring" in the States shortly, and has commissioned these writers to supply her with several new numbers for the forthcoming Zeigfeld production.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA'S "song o' the sea," entitled "The lass who loved a sailor," by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell, which she will produce for the first time on August Bank Holiday at Greenock, has been acquired for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. Miss Victoria has this week accepted another number, "The job won't suit," from the same writers.

MR. TOM B. NEWSOME, the author of all Rowland Hill's successful "Dame" songs, has fitted him with two historical numbers in "Henry the Eighth" and "In the days of Cromwell."

MISS MILLIE HYLTON, who opens at the Liverpool Empire on Monday, will sing two songs, both written and composed by Charles Wilmott and Hermann Darewski, jun. The first is "Take me up on the Flip-flap," and "Meet me under the Golden Dome." The latter will be heard for the first time, and has a very catchy refrain. Miss Hylton will also sing it on her return to town shortly.

OUT of the many successes with which John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell have furnished Miss Marie Lloyd, never perhaps have they found her one quite so good as "The Directoire Girl." The Monte Carlo Publishing Co. have already exhausted the large first edition, and a big order for fresh copies has been placed with their printers to cope with the insistent demands for this most successful of "Sixpenny Successes."

MISS LIL HAWTHORNE has been scoring on the Stoll tour with the novel American song "The boy who stuttered and the girl who lisped." The idea is quaintly original, and Miss Hawthorne further adds to its attractiveness by a most becoming costume.

MISS CARRIE SWAIN, the world's favourite vocalist, who appears at the Coliseum for a week, commencing Aug. 3, prior to her departure for America, will sing "Carissima," published by M. Witmark and Sons.

THE success of the ballads composed by Mr. Ernest R. Ball, who gave us "Love me and the world is mine," is something phenomenal. It is rare indeed when a composer follows a great success with other numbers equally attractive. Miss Truly Shattuck is singing "As long as the world rolls on," by this popular composer, and the song seems destined to become quite as popular as the others in Mr. Ball's catalogue.

MR. ANDIE CAINE is singing "Way down in Colon Town" to delighted audiences in Filey, the gem of the northern watering places. This number will certainly be found in all the principal pantomimes during the coming season.

MR. DAVE CARTER, the original singer of "Love me and the world is mine," is taking a most deserved holiday at Brighton. Mr. Carter has introduced, with the greatest possible success, the pretty Irish song "Where the River Shannon flows."

MISS GERTIE GITANA has been increasing her already great popularity by her charming rendition of Witmark's song "Sweet Jessie dear."

MISS JESSIE MERRILEES returned to London on Monday, opening at the Duchess, Balham Miss Merrilees is making a great success with Ernest R. Ball's ballad "I'd live or I would die for you."

IT seems likely that during the coming season we are to have more than one musical comedy of an ornithological nature, as, on good authority, we hear that the clever bird impersonator, Mr. Walter Stanton, has been approached with offers to star in an original piece of that nature, to be built round him.

MESSRS. BEECHAM AND WHEELER.

Mr. Charles Beecham and Mr. Worland S. Wheeler, who have held the respective positions of manager and secretary at the Paragon, Mile End-road, tendered their resignations at a directors' meeting on Wednesday last, having entered into partnership as dramatic and variety agents.

Mr. Beecham commenced his duties at the Paragon in a humble capacity, and was subsequently promoted to a position in the office. Under the observant eye of Mr. G. Adney Payne, he learned the rudiments of the music-hall business, and was soon appointed secretary and treasurer at the South London. He next accepted the position of secretary at the Paragon, subsequently becoming manager, upon Mr. Fred Miller leaving to take control of the Canterbury.

Mr. Beecham has worked under many managers, including Messrs. Thiodon, Will Lennon, Harry Lundy, Fred Holden, and Fred Miller. He is a life governor of the Albert and Victoria Hospital and the Poplar Hospital. Among his many productions were The Freebooter, Sherlock Holmes,

MR. WORLAND S. WHEELER.

Captain Dreyfus, The Night Alarm, Black v. White, Cromwell or the King, and The Silent Sentinel, the last three being written by his present partner, Mr. Worland S. Wheeler.

Mr. Wheeler at the age of eighteen was a journalist. He entered the service of the late Mr. Geo. Adney Payne as shorthand writer at the Canterbury, then under the management of Mr. Fred Holden. After a short time Mr. Wheeler was appointed secretary and treasurer to the Paragon, and commenced his duties with Mr. Beecham as manager.

FEDERATIONS AND FUNDS.

MR. JOE O'GORMAN, the chairman, and the general secretary, Mr. Monte Bayly, have been instructed to attend the forty-first Trade Unions Congress to be held at Nottingham on Sept. 7, and the five following days, as delegates from the Variety Artists' Federation.

AT the 570th meeting of the M.H.A.R.A., held on Wednesday, the following members were present:—J. W. Cragg (trustee, who occupied the chair), G. H. Smythson, W. E. Gillin, W. H. Atlas, Lieut. Albini, Walter Munroe, Albert Voyce (chairman), Sid Bandon, John Alexander, Harry Blake, Bert Williams, J. Tray, J. Atroy, W. Brown, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). Mr. John McConnell, of the Ship Hotel, Blyth, and Mr. Wm. Cockburn, of the Railway Hotel, North Shields, were appointed agents in those towns.

IT was announced that the Liverpool office, situated at 21, Houghton-street, Liverpool, would be ready for opening before August Bank Holiday, and it was decided to send Mrs. Egerton, of the American Bar, Lime-street, Liverpool, a letter conveying the sincere thanks of the Association for her past services. The weekly statement showed an increase of twenty new members and receipts of £32 2s. 6d.

AT the Sports on Wednesday, Aug. 12, at Herne Hill, there will be five championship races, and special interest will be attached to the motor-cycle racing between C. R. Collier, C. V. Colver, and H. Martin, who will compete in a three-cornered match for one, two, and five miles at the special request of Mr. Harry Tate. C. R. Collier will also attempt to lower the five-mile record. The prizes will be presented by Mrs. Joe Elvin. A solid silver cigar case will be the gift of The Era. The event to which it is to be allotted has not been settled.

A MOST successful reception was held on Wednesday at the new office of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, Room 63, Albion House, 59, New Oxford-street, W.C., under the auspices of Mrs. Fred Ginnett, president, Mrs. Eugene Stratton, vice-president, and Miss Belle Elmore, hon. treasurer, who received the guests. The sister guild of theatrical ladies sent congratulatory letters through Miss Fanny Brough, Mrs. Kitty Carson, and Mrs. Edward Compton, and hearty messages were also sent by Miss E. G. Clarke, the Actors' Church Union, and others.

AMONG those who looked in during the afternoon were Mrs. Herbert Shelley, Mrs. Charles Coborn, Miss Kate Vulcana, Miss Bertha Graham, Mrs. Northcott, Miss Northcott, Mrs. Hole, Mrs. Mayer, Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. Doust, Mrs. Chas. Mitchell, Miss Kettner, Mrs. Bradgate, Miss Alice Chapin, Miss Eva Erskine, Miss Maud Horsnell, Miss Poppet Ginnett, Dr. Crippen, Mr. Douglas Stuart, and many more.

MISS MELINDA MAY, the secretary of the Guild, wishes to return thanks to Mrs. and Miss Northcott for a donation of 5s. and a parcel of clothing to Mr. Marsh of Brixton for decorating Guild rooms with beautiful plants; also to Misses McNeill (Edinburgh) for a parcel of clothing, to Miss Kate Vulcana for a collection of 6s. 6d., and to an anonymous donor of clothes.

MR. BEN WOODGER, secretary of the Music Hall Home, has received the following letter from the founder and hon. director (H. Lee J. Jones) of the Food and Betterment Association of Liverpool: "Dear Sir,—In accordance with promise, we have much pleasure in herewith forwarding £5 for the aid of your praiseworthy project. Please accept this gift as a humble and small token of our admiration and thankfulness for the collective magnificent assistance the theatrical profession of all sections and grades has so whole-heartedly given this Association in the past. With every good wish."

OTHER contributions to the Music Hall Home Fund are 13s. 9d. from Mr. Rolmaz, Grand Theatre, Manchester, and £1 2s. 6d. from Mr. P. A. Lennon, of the Camberwell Palace.

MR. GEORGE WHITELEY, late Patronage Secretary of the Treasury, and chief whip to the Government, who was recently made a peer, has taken the title of Baron Marchamley. Lady Marchamley is a daughter of W. Tattersall, Esq., of Quarry Bank, Blackburn, and a first cousin of Mr. W. H. Clemart, vice-chairman of the Variety Artists' Federation, and King Rat.

AFTER being for many years at the York Hotel, Waterloo-road, the Music Hall Sick Fund has changed its quarters, and members are requested in future to address all communications to the Secretary, the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

MUSIC-HALL CELEBRITIES.

MISS ROSE HARVEY.

An established favourite both on the legitimate and variety theatres, Miss Rose Harvey hails from the thriving little seaside resort of Sandwich, close to Deal and Dover. As a girl her voice was considered good, and her services were in great request for local concerts and entertainments. At the age of fifteen she was induced to join a touring choir, her original idea being to stick to the concert platform. But it was not long before she adventured into the music-hall world, and since then her career has been one of constant success. As a ballad singer and burlesque artist she has toured town and country, making for herself friends and admirers wherever she has gone; while her ventures into pantomime have met with equal success. Her engagements in the latter capacity have included three as Crusoe, one as Dick Whittington, and two as the Prince in Cinderella.

Miss Harvey declares herself very much attached to pantomime, but owing to the poor salaries offered, notwithstanding enquiries for her services, she was reluctantly compelled to relinquish her favourite work. An example of Miss Harvey's popularity with the children, as well as a tribute to the youthfulness of her appearance, was furnished in a small letter from a small boy, which reached her when she was playing Crusoe at Cheltenham two years ago. Her juvenile correspondent wrote:—"Will you come to my Ma's 'at-home' next week? I hope you will bring your gun and white fur dress." "I thought it quite too sweet," says Miss Harvey. "Of letters and tiny presents, sprays of flowers, paste brooches, &c., from factory girls," she adds, "I have received quite a number, which I have treasured far above more expensive presents."

One of her most interesting experiences was a tour with a music hall company to Johannesburg, some years ago, the delights of the voyage and the enthusiastic reception she received from both the Boers and Uitlanders in that town being themes of which she never wearies. Lately Miss Harvey has been alternating her music hall singing turn with that of playing a very pretty part in a sketch produced by Mr. Maitland Marler, entitled His Worship the Mayor, in which she appears as an artist's model.

Miss Harvey possesses a really excellent voice, and has all the charm of a finished actress, and if one day she should go into musical comedy, as she is rather desirous of doing, she will most likely blossom out into a first-rate favourite. Off the stage her geniality seems to increase. She likes things that are "jolly," and in addition she is fond of tennis, driving, and motoring—"with the pace quick!"

TRICK and Trixie, after a successful six months' tour in England, have been booked by M. B. Leavitt, of New York, for the Rentz Santley company for thirty-five weeks' tour, commencing about the middle of August. They are leaving Waterloo to-day at ten o'clock, sailing from Southampton by the s.s. "St. Paul." They are well booked for 1909 on their return to England, and have also settled for pantomime for 1909-10, with Mr. Arthur Carlton, of Worcester.

MORTIMER v. V.A.F.

The action brought by Mr. Mortimer against Mr. Joe O'Gorman and the V.A.F., which has been so often adjourned, came to an end on Monday in the Westminster County Court, when Judge Woodfall gave a final judgment in favour of the Federation.

Originally the plaintiff sought to recover damages for an alleged breach of indemnity, stating that while he was a member of the Federation (he has since left it) he was called out in the great strike, and, according to his case, he was indemnified against any loss attending him by striking, without which, he said, he would not have come out. Some, he alleged, had full pay from the Federation, while he only had part. First he sued the Federation as a body, and the action went against him; then he sued the members individually, which, according to a statement by his counsel, was done on the advice of Mr. Doughty, the Federation's counsel, who had contended that the Federation was wrongly sued as a body.

Mr. R. Storry Deans, who had previously watched plaintiff's interests, was not in court on Monday, but Mr. Walter Payne appeared in his place, and Judge Woodfall recited to him a digest of the case, emphasising the main points in dispute.

Mr. Payne put forward that the alleged illegal action of the Federation occurred prior to the operation of the Trades Disputes Act, and on that account plaintiff should not be held to be debarred from relying on the agreement that had been given him that he should be indemnified against any loss of salary.

Mr. Doughty produced a number of volumes, and intimated that he could cite many cases which would meet Mr. Storry Deans and Mr. Payne's contentions and prove his own.

However, he was not called upon to do so.

The judge said that this was an action to recover damages for breach of indemnity which plaintiff said arose out of his breaking a contract in consequence of the action of the Federation. Plaintiff was fulfilling an engagement at the Canterbury Music Hall, when a messenger—a sort of ambassador—came down and said he was to strike. As to his loss, it was stated "You'll be all right," and that induced him to break his contract. He (the judge) did not know, and had not to inquire, whether the aims of the strike were good or bad, but he had to say what was the object of the Federation, and he found it was to injure the hall proprietor. That was the effect of plaintiff coming out, and that was the intent. That being so, the Federation appeared to have paid him sums of money, but not to have carried out the indemnity. The action in inducing him maliciously to break his employment was an illegal act, and contrary to public policy. Plaintiff had to rely on the contract to indemnify him, and that contract was illegal, so he could not recover in this action. Mr. Payne's submission was that the illegal acts were before the Trades Disputes Act operated, but this was not in his (the judge's) opinion a trade dispute. Plaintiff himself said that it was not a general strike. It was one directed against two proprietors, and the whole trade must be concerned to make it a trade dispute. The defendants must have judgment; but he would make no order as to costs, the reason for defendants' success being their own illegal act.

Mr. Doughty thought the defendants were entitled to some costs, irrespective of the result of the trial.

The Judge decided to consider the whole question of costs, stating that his decision would be communicated, and counsel need not attend.

THE EMPIRE.

A deep contrast to the daintiness and charm of Coppélia at the Empire is found in the latest bijou melodrama produced there by Mr. H. J. Hitchins on Tuesday night. The novelty is a translation by Miss Norah Keith of the Grand Guignol bijou drama by E. Reibrach and G. Docquois entitled Après l'Opéra, which in its English dress is known as

"AFTER THE OPERA."

Lawrence Devas .....MR. ROBERT PATEMAN
Captain Gordon Follett ..MR. CHARLES BRYANT
An Inspector .....MR. VERNON
A Burglar .....MR. T. WALLS
Marie .....MISS ELSIE CLERC
Lady Lulu Devas .....MISS EVELYN D'ALROY

The scene is a luxuriously-furnished boudoir in a Park-lane mansion. Lady Lulu Devas, a society beauty, her elderly husband, and her lover, Capt. Follett, have returned from the opera. The husband, Lawrence Devas, receives a telegram, which makes it imperative that he shall depart for the North by the midnight train. It is palpable that Mrs. Devas has but little affection for the man who has endowed her with all the luxury that immense wealth can command. He is the "Coal King," and Follett is deeply in debt. On the husband's departure the woman tempts the lover to stay, and with reckless abandon she has just thrown herself into his arms, when they are both alarmed by footsteps. Follett would face the intruder; but persuaded by the piteous entreaties of Lulu—who thinks that her husband has played her a trick and returned—Follett exits by the window.

He has only just gone when a burglar enters the boudoir, and catching the hapless woman by the throat strangles her. In the next scene Follett is discovered by the police in the act of climbing down from the balcony, and the inspector demands an explanation. Briefly explaining that a woman's honour is concerned, Follett is departing, when he comes face to face with Devas, who has missed his train. It is an awkward predicament for Follett, but it is no time for parley. Who was it that had interrupted his tête-à-tête—possibly a burglar. He will not reply to the eager, angry questioning of Devas, but thinks only of the danger of the woman upstairs. Instinctively he feels that something terrible has happened. In a state of harrowing anxiety the two men—husband and lover—enter the house, to discover that their worst fears are realised. Lulu, the airy trifler with a husband's honour, lies dead on the floor, and the guilty miscreant who has robbed and murdered her has escaped. Lawrence Devas, with a cunning born of furious jealousy, charges the Captain with theft and murder, telling the police to search him for notes that he (Devas) had given to the murdered woman; but Follett is spared a trial at the New Bailey by the return of the police with the murderer handcuffed. His confession foils Devas in his hastily-planned scheme of vengeance, and in an access of fury the latter attempts to shoot Follett, but his arm is knocked up by the inspector, and bloodshed is avoided.

The acting is excellent; and in consequence the drama is thrillingly impressive. That finished and experienced actor, Mr. Robert Pateman, plays with a well-sustained power as Lawrence Devas, and makes it abundantly clear that the elderly husband is something more than an adoring dupe. The volcano of passion in the final scene is very finely handled. Mr. Charles Bryant as Capt. Follett plays a difficult part with great tact and judgment, especially in the final scene. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, looking very charming as that alluring Delilah, Lulu Devas, displays considerable ability, and in securing her the management has made an excellent choice. She realises exactly the temperament of the woman, and hence her indisputable success. The little piece is a triumph, and should have a good run.

MANCHESTER PALACE OF VARIETIES STAFF OUTING.

PICNIC TO BUXTON, JULY 19TH, 1908.

The staff of the Palace, Manchester, had a delightful day for their outing on Sunday to Miller's Dale and Buxton, in the far-famed Peak district. Eighty were expected, but seventy-four actually made the journey. The train left Manchester Central Station at 9.50 and arrived at Miller's Dale at about 11 o'clock. The drive to Buxton through lovely country was hugely enjoyed, and dinner at the Shakespeare Hotel in that beautiful town followed, Mr. Fred Leighton presiding. Telegrams of good wishes were read from Mr. Walter de Frece and Mr. Peter Watson. During the afternoon another beautiful drive to the Cat and Fiddle, Goyt Valley, and Long Hill added immensely to the pleasure of the party, who pronounced the picnic to be the best they had had since the Palace opened seventeen years since.

Bramley, Leeds.

WITHIN a twopenny tram ride from the city of Leeds, with its million or more of people, lies the ancient township of Bramley. It is equally as accessible from Bradford and its teeming population, and close by are Newlay, Stanningley, Rodley, Armley, Kirkstall, and Wortley. It is this stupendous fact of the busy hives of industry linked together by cheap tram lines that gives increasing value to the feasts and fairs on the central Yorkshire round.

GIVEN a good site, with cheap tramways, and the people will crowd a well-ordered fairground. It was so on the Saturday night of the feast when we visited the fair. Everybody seemed caught in the whirl and joy of the feast. Old and young alike, on innocent fun and pleasure bent, crowded shows, roundabouts, swings, busy shooting galleries, and throwing games, thronged stalls, and novelty frames, amusement caterers, giving the people what they needed—recreation in its best and most healthy form.

THE big shows were those of Tuby and Sons, Enoch Farrar, and John Crighton. The big machine novelties were those of Messrs. J. W. Waddington, W. H. Marshall, A. Morley, and John Groom (with helter-skelter tower), Tower's miniature jungle, and the shooting concerns, throwing games, novelty stalls, &c., of Messrs. Waugh Bros., Ratcliffe, Baines, Fawcett, Shaw, R. Williams, E. Seed, S. Waddington, and others, made up the attractions of the fair.

New Brighton Tower.

THE Millican Plantation Show, that has been the attraction at the New Brighton Tower Theatre since May 23, ceased to play in that theatre on Friday last. While the style of entertainment offered would have been appreciated in America or in any other country where the genuine negro is known, it did not appeal to a British public, who always think of the negro with sentimental ideas of beautiful melodies, such as "The Swanee River," "My Old Kentucky Home," and like musical gems. The performances given by the Millican company were more of the coon shouting and rag-time character, and the patronage was consequently kept at such a pitch that it was not found profitable to continue it. Mr. Millican's contract was based on a percentage of the receipts, and his receipts did not justify a continuance of the entertainment, so it was decided to close the company. Mr. Arthur Ellis replaced it with a variety combination, which included Willard's Merry Mannikins, Tom and Amy McKay, Georgo Goodburn, Connie Croston, and the Animated Bioscope of the Weiskers Carbonora Company. This combination seems to have given great satisfaction to the patrons of the Tower.

THE Bass Brewing Company excursion to the New Brighton Tower on Friday last was made under the best of weather circumstances, and the 10,000 trippers were given the freedom of the New Brighton Tower Park, with all its various attractions, including Cummins' Wild West, the cost of the picnic being borne by the directors of the company. This is not only the best organised "outing" in England, but a more enjoyable time was never spent than by these people at the Tower on Friday last.

THE Sunday night concert at the New Brighton Tower theatre last Sunday night was an exceptionally brilliant one, the audience numbering quite 3000, and the demands on the artists engaged for encores necessitated the shortening of the programme by several numbers. Madame Blanche Marchesi was there at her very best, and while she was on the programme for three numbers, she was forced, in response to the general demands, to give nine. The music licence of New Brighton Tower only permits of a concert of an hour and a half, but the Tower management have this season each week provided such attractions as have made it almost invariably impossible to get through the entire programme within the prescribed time. For next Sunday, July 26, Zimbalist, the incomparable Russian violinist, will be the principal attraction.

ON Saturday, Sept. 19, the annual Eisteddfod at New Brighton Tower will take place, and the entries that have already been made for this event indicate that it will be the largest and most successful of these events, which have grown in popular favour during the past ten years.

W. W. DILLINGHAM, one of Colonel Cummins' most expert cowboys, was married on Saturday to Miss Stewart, a daughter of the proprietor of the Lifeboat Hotel, Victoria-road, New Brighton. The wedding came as a surprise to the many friends of both parties, who have only known each other for a few months, but all seem to be happy, and quite a celebration was indulged in on Saturday night at the residence of the bride's parents. Everybody wishes Bill and his bride the best of luck.

Notes from Wales.

AT Neath Messrs. Wm. Haggar extended their visit for a few days, as their exhibition proved so popular, many new pictures—new to Neath—attracted crowded houses. A grand fête and gala was held in the beautiful old abbey ruins on Thursday. Glorious weather was the means of attracting a large number of spectators. Messrs. J. T. Danter catered for the pleasure of the visitors with his racers, shooters, Emmas, cokernuts, swings, &c., part of the proceeds of which they gave in aid of the local charity.

AT Mountain Ash Messrs. Dooner have a good programme for their numerous patrons. Several new pictures are well worthy of notice. The variety part of the entertainment consists of Nellie Anderson, serio comedienne, who well merits the applause of the audience. The Lashmars, song, dance, and legmania artists, present a clever turn, which is immensely appreciated.

MESSRS. WADBROOKE'S biograph and varieties are on a return visit to Tylorstown, where they proved very popular. Several new and entertaining subjects are shown nightly to old and new friends.

MESSRS. CRECRAFT'S bioscope are on a visit in the Aberdare district with some very good films which are new since last visit.

PROFESSOR LLOYD opened a successful visit at Abercynon with his new cinematograph exhibition.

The White City, Old Trafford.

THE annual exhibition of the National Rose Society—whose headquarters are in London, where they hold exhibitions in the Inner Temple Gardens and Regent's Park—drew an immense crowd to this amusement park on Tuesday, and included a wide area of exhibitors—professional and amateur—the chief prize going to Belfast.

THE Three Röhrs, clever daring trick cyclists, finished their engagement here on Saturday. Their star turn is "looping the loop" in an inverted steel globe, and they have had a very successful run.

Two sensational acts are performed this week—one a ride down the water-chute (the highest in England) on a cycle into the water, and the other is "the human flame," which is a dive of about 80ft. by a man enveloped in flames into the lake.

SAM ANDERSON, the winner of the 12st. championship belt at the Manchester Palace Tournament last week, and several of the other competitors are giving an acceptable exhibition of wrestling in the White City Circus this week.

THE excellent weather brings the people to this lovely amusement park, where the band gives most acceptable selections, and innumerable amusements are going on in all parts of the grounds.

Alleged Nuisance by Noises.

THE WHITE CITY, LTD., OLD TRAFFORD (from the very commencement), have had many obstacles thrown in their way by residents and property owners in the vicinity, one of which prevented their being granted a drink licence. Then the Blind and Deaf and Dumb Asylum objected to the lights and noises, which have been moderated. It may be mentioned that much of the deterioration in the value of the property in the neighbourhood is due more than anything else to the enormous goods traffic to and from the ship canal, the chief docks of which are close to the White City. An action was brought in the Chancery of Lancashire by a large owner of residential property in the rear of this amusement park for an injunction and damages for deterioration of his property by reason of the noises of the water-mill wheel, screams of excited females on the water chute, the band of the negro plantation show, &c., and on the conclusion of a great deal of evidence on both sides, Vice-Chancellor Leigh-Clare intimated that he would reserve his judgment until he had visited the premises on a date to be kept secret from the defendants (the White City, Ltd.). The Vice-Chancellor duly attended, and to satisfy himself more completely, asked the Manchester Registrar of the Court to visit the locus in quo on another occasion. The Registrar's report agreed with the Vice-Chancellor's view of the matter, and while considering that the tenants were not unreasonable in saying that the houses were not as desirable for residential purposes as before the construction of the White City, and that the value of the property had deteriorated, he (the Vice-Chancellor) could not say that this was an actionable nuisance which he could restrain. He therefore gave judgment for the defendants, but with regard to costs, the Vice-Chancellor did not think the plaintiff ought to pay the whole of them. He would have to pay one-half of the defendants' costs, as well as his own.

AT the Moor Meadows, Maidenhead, we have a week of Studt's galloping horses, motor-car track, and bioscope exhibition. They are doing a roaring business, the fairground being crowded nightly. Studt Brothers promise that the whole of the takings on Friday will be given to local charities. Their organisation is one of the most complete ever seen here, and is most excellently managed. The whole show is lit with electricity, for the production of which all necessary plant is carried. The proprietor's living caravan is a model of excellence in every way. Unfortunately the magnificent Gavioli organ could not be played, as a showman who recently visited us was prosecuted for an alleged nuisance, caused by an instrument of similar character. At considerable extra expense our Silver Town Band (under Bandmaster Busby) is engaged for the week. This is billed as Studt's first visit to Maidenhead. Assuredly the patronage he receives will cause it not to be the last.

The Cricket Field.

AN evening fête, with balloon ascent, is billed for Thursday, 23rd, a special attraction being a parachute descent by Miss Viola Spencer-Kavanagh. Maidenhead Town Silver Band is engaged, and arrangements are made for dancing.

Stalybridge Wakes.

THE Lancashire folk in this great centre of the cotton-spinning industry value their famous local holidays—the Wakes. Here to entertain the vast crowd of patrons were Captain Tom Payne with new Bioscope show, P. Collins with Wonderland, the Westwood Giant Children, Ball's Midget Marvels, and small exhibitions by Messrs. Payne, W. Shaw, and Blakey. The first-class aggregation of machines included sets by Messrs. P. and J. Collins, T. Hurst, W. Mitchell, and Hibbert; shooters, throwing games, and varieties by Messrs. Cordwell, Royle, White, Jewell, Clough, Cornwell, Burton, and many others.

Darwen Wakes.

THE good people of Darwen were right well supplied with amusement by the following enterprising showmen and fairground traders:—J. Hastings (with two shows), Westray, Patterson, Ralph, and Pedley (with small show), and Tom Holden. John Green, T. Mitchell, Wm. Helm, John Sharp, and Mrs. Holden with machine novelties big and little; George Cornwell, Luke Marsden, J. Jepson, A. Sedgwick, J. Freer, Isaac Harrison, H. Redfern, and J. Ingham with shooting ranges, varieties, and throwing games.

The Guild Meeting at Longsight.

In accordansce with long-standing custom, the annual summer meeting of the Showmen's Guild will take place at Longsight Wakes, Manchester, on Sunday next. The meeting will take place in the St. Agnes Schools, adjoining the Wakes ground, at 8 p.m. The Organising Chaplain will be glad to meet as many members as possible at that gathering. There are important matters to report.

Wolstanton Wakes.

AMONGST the capital shows, machines, &c., at this village Wakes were Beach's Premier Exhibition, W. Davies's fairground novelties, the electric jumping horses, steam yachts, juvenile motors, miniature horses, and park swings. The other entertainers were: Messrs. Birch, Holt, P. Davies, J. Jewell, and many others with all the fun of the fair.

The Spanish City, Whitley Bay.

THIS resort, at what is known as Newcastle-by-the-Sea, continues to receive most generous patronage from the many visitors that throng the place, the season being now at its height. In addition to the Toreadors proper, there are specially contributed items by the Whitworth Cycling Girls and Gaapkin, the latter being extremely clever as the tramp cyclist; Edward Vyson, ventriloquist and mimic; and last, but by no means least, we have the Davisons, the Anglo-American mystifiers and thought transferers or mental telepathists, who astound their audiences with their apparently marvellous feats.

What the Lions Saw.

"DUKE OF YORK" BOYS IN THE BOSTOCK JUNGLE, HUNGARIAN EXHIBITION.—"Earl's Court" defied the elements on Saturday (18th inst.), for the scientific drainage of the promenades insured shelter and safety from slush. The cadets of the Duke of York's Royal Military Academy, numbering over five hundred strong, and accompanied by their friends, came in with their band, and apparently enjoyed everything. The delight shown in the Great Bostock Jungle and Arena was so expressive that the lions, disturbed by the red uniforms, wished to come outside the bars and join them. The cadets had never before seen so compact and complete a collection of savage brutes dragged from the wild's recesses, and they enjoyed themselves mightily. Mr. Frank C. Bostock (the Animal King) escorted the officers around the jungle, explaining the different characteristics of the beasts. The coal mine and its realistic depths were thoroughly explored, and the various other entertainments also had their share of attention. It was a picturesque sight when the whole body marshalled up in the Imperial Court, and played national airs, while the band of H.M. Irish Guards, in deference, listened.

Alligators' Fight in "Hungary."

AN exciting surgical operation was performed recently on an alligator belonging to the Great Bostock Jungle and Arena at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court. The necessity for calling the services of Dr. E. H. Scott, who is veterinary surgeon to Mr. Frank C. Bostock, "the Animal King," was caused by a fierce fight which occurred between the patient and a fellow alligator the previous morning under rather extraordinary circumstances. It appears that Siva, a half-bred American Indian lady who is in control of the Saurian pit, was fondling in her arms "Baby," a very young alligator. Suddenly it spasmodically wriggled from her, and fell into the pool, where a new and more than usually vicious animal had just been placed. Startled at her pet's danger, Siva lost her balance and plunged into the water, where the savage one, crawling quickly over the backs of the other animals, came with open jaws at the woman. As he snapped at her arm, her old friend, the largest of the beasts, seized his lower jaw and broke it on the right side. The trouble was all over in a few tense minutes and danger past. Mr. Bostock then decided to have the maimed alligator killed, but finally yielded to the entreaties of Siva, who had seen the Indians treat similar injuries among Saurians. So the surgeon was sent for, and after a rough mould had been taken, a hollow splint holding an antiseptic solution was fitted to the wounded jaw, and a bandage holding all, including the tongue, was passed round. Sad and discomfited, the defeated alligator now rests in a private pool for the next few weeks.

The Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

THE next meeting of this Society will be at Dewsbury on the Tuesday in the Feast Week. For place and time of the gathering see our advertisement columns. The Secretary desires a strong muster. Business of great importance is on the agenda.

ANSWERS TO SHOWMEN.

If N. Clifford will address to Mountain Ash this week-end, the show he asks for may be there. If he fails in finding the show there, let him address (under cover), Showmen's Letter-box, The Era, and we will forward it on to the private address of the firm.

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD AT BRAMLEY.

Owing to Dewsbury Feast being a week later than usual this year, the Rev. T. Horne had to re-arrange his itinerary of the Yorkshire Feast and take Bramley instead of Dewsbury, as previously arranged.

Dewsbury Feast this year clashes with Longsight Wakes, Manchester, and as the Organising Chaplain has taken Longsight Wakes for many years past, on no account could it be omitted from his itinerary. In order to meet the Yorkshire members of the Guild, and in some measure compensate them for the loss of the anticipated gathering at Dewsbury, the Organising Chaplain made arrangements at the last moment for meetings of the Guild at Bramley.

Every show and concern on the ground was visited and told of the emergency meeting at Tuby's Show at half-past three o'clock on the Feast Sunday.

Yorkshire Showmen in Conference.

The response to the call of the Guild was eminently satisfactory, and the attendance of the showpeople was (considering the lateness of the call) extremely good.

Mr. J. W. Waddington, V.P., presided, and supporting him were the Rev. T. Horne, Guild Chaplain, John Gavan, Edward Seed, W. Fawcett, H. Baines, Randall Williams, Stephen Waddington, Charles Shaw, W. Ratcliffe, J. Waugh, Towers, Saunders, E. Waugh, Mrs. A. Morley, and others. There were also a large attendance of employees, who took a deep interest in the proceedings.

Mr. Waddington, in opening the conference, referred in warm language to the work of trade defence so ably conducted by their reverend friend, the Chaplain. It was in order that the Yorkshire Fairground traders and amusement caterers should understand better and support that work better that Mr. Horne had come to Bramley. He, for his part, was ready to do his part in the necessary work of protecting the show business from attack and injury. He doubted not that the showpeople at Bramley Feast (as at other fairs) would rally to the support of the cause. (Applause.) The Movable Dwellings Bill was a most serious matter to them all, especially so to their poorer brethren. The powers asked for were of the most obnoxious character and placed a most undeserved stigma upon showpeople and their mode of life.

He would not pursue the matter further. Their Chaplain and Trade Organiser was with them, and he felt sure that the conference would be better able to discuss the Bill after they had heard the address he now called upon Mr. Horne to deliver. (Cheers.)

Address by the Rev. T. Horne.

On rising to speak the Organising Chaplain was enthusiastically received. He commenced by fully explaining how it was that he found himself speaking to showmen at Bramley, when, according to his own plan, he ought to have been at Dewsbury. However, the urgency of their business was so great, and the work before them so important, he felt constrained to fill in the spare Sunday he found that he had by coming to them at Bramley Feast.

The work of opposing the Movable Dwellings Bill had been carried forward from the day it was introduced down to the meeting he was now addressing. That work was of vital importance to all who earn their livelihood following the fairs. A time-honoured and lawful industry was threatened with virtual extinction by crude and ill-considered legislation. A home industry that touched the livelihood of seventy thousand people was attacked. The holidays—local and general—of the people were endangered. It was, therefore, a matter of life and death to them that the Bill should be effectively opposed, and that the fairground business should be protected. (Applause.)

What the Guild Has Done.

The Guild has rallied the friends of the showmen and the friends of the popular open-air amusements of the people in the Houses of Parliament. It has done more than that; it has already, by negotiations with the promoters of the measure, very largely altered its character, and has materially modified its drastic proposals. (Cheers.) Showpeople would gain nothing by ignoring the serious nature of the evils of gipsy life, and the serious menace to public health that insanitary encampments of gipsies and squatters on common lands were.

The promoters of the Bill had a case as against the gipsy and the squatter. The showman or the fairground trader using vans and tents in his trade and business was utterly separate and apart from the objectionable life of either gipsy or squatter. It was for them, as showmen and as fairground traders, to safeguard their character from unjust aspersion and to protect their avocation in life from attack. We should gain nothing, he said, by refusing to see the difficulties that faced public bodies with regard to the problems of both gipsy and tramp life.

Points of Agreement.

In entering into negotiations with the promoters of the Bill, he had frankly agreed that the problem of finding some means of bringing the gipsy or squatter under the restraints of citizenship was a great problem. He did not impugn the good intentions of the authors of the Bill. All that he asked for was that whilst they sought to reform the small and decreasing class—the gipsies—that lasting injury and most undeserved stigma should not be suffered by the large and increasing class of people who provided the open-air entertainment of the workers at our fairs, feasts, and wakes. (Applause.)

Another point of agreement was the important fact that the organised showmen did not oppose the educational clauses in the Bill. He had laid before the Government and before the promoters of this particular measure the proof that showpeople were as anxious as any other class of parents in the country that their children should be well educated. He had again and again made it quite evident that the organised showmen would not shield careless or negligent parents—(cheers)—that if such parents were found amongst them, they desired that the law deal with them as with all other classes of the community.

Why Showmen Object to the Bill.

Showmen deny that special liberty-destroying legislation is necessary for them or for their business in life. They take their stand against the Bill on the broad ground that it implies that their homes on wheels are outside the sanitary and health provisions and securities of the common law of the land. They claim that there is ample security, ample provision, for the health and sanitation of show vans under the Public Health Acts, the Housing of the Working Classes Act, and the Notification of Infectious Diseases Act. Under these Acts the movable dwelling of the travelling showman is now subject to the same inspection and the same local control as the fixed dwellings in both town and country.

The showman denies that either his home life or his business needs special legislation: that is the position that the showman takes. He is under, and subject to, the ordinary laws of the realm, and loyally obeys them.

What did the Movable Dwellings Bill aim at? Its great object was to compel the gipsy and the land squatter to observe the ordinary decencies and amenities of life—to compel him, in a word, to give up his wandering life, and settle down and be no longer a wanderer on the face of the earth. Would the Bill secure that object? He (the speaker) had no mission to defend the gipsy—the show-people were not Romanies—but if history taught anything, one lesson was clear: that coercive and tyrannical legislation never succeeded in destroying the strength and genius of a race. You may imprison, you may persecute a race, but you cannot make it change its essential character.

He held no brief for the gipsy, but he doubted not that, when the time came for meeting this Bill in Parliament, even the gipsy would find a champion to stand up for him.

He had spent many years of his life in making it clear that in no sense were show-people gipsies. The showman travelled from town to town, from fair to fair. The working plant of his trade and business (essentially a home industry) required that the home should be part and parcel of the show. Though wanderers in a sense, they were more at home than any other class of workers in the commonwealth. They were proud of their homes, and they resented being classed as fit subjects for special legislation. They lived honest, cleanly, and virtuous lives as a class. He, as their chaplain, claimed this for them. He had maintained this character for them from a thousand platforms, and no one had been able to bring reliable evidence against that position.

The Campaign of the Guild Against the Bill.

Without a break during the past four months—at fairs in all parts of the country—the Guild had held meetings protesting against the measure. They had in the meanwhile opened up negotiations with its promoters, and extremely important amendments had been, and were still, under consideration. He was not able to make these negotiations altogether public, but he was able to repeat what he referred to in his opening remarks—that the Bill, in its present form, was dead and buried, and that at the worst a much milder and more reasonable Bill would be submitted at the third reading.

The Guild Executive had sent him into conference with Lord Clifford, and important concessions touching their interests had already resulted.

In conclusion he begged his hearers to rally to the support of the fighting funds of the Guild, either by additional subscriptions or by joining as ordinary members. He was confident that out of all this threatened trouble and danger the organised showmen would come triumphant, that they would be drawn closer together, and that their organisation would grow and prosper. To this work he had set his hand. He knew them, and had every confidence that their time-honoured craft and talented profession would maintain its strong hold upon the heart of show-loving England, which, despite all that the pessimists had averred to the contrary, was Merrie England still.

Emergency Committee Meeting.

At the Chaplain's suggestion, the meeting then resolved itself into committee to consider the suggested amendments. This led to a most interesting and helpful discussion. The chairman (Mr. Waddington), and Messrs. Gavan, R. Williams, E. Seed, H. Baines, W. Fawcett, C. Shaw, and Mrs. Morley gave valuable suggestions.

It is the intention of the Organising Chaplain to submit the proposed amendments of the Bill (the outcome of his conference with the promoters) to all the meetings he may address during the adjournment of Parliament. He feels that along the lines of amendment by negotiation will probably lie the wisest and safest course to secure adequate recognition of the showman's case against the Bill.

Guild Subscriptions at Bramley Feast.

Mrs. Morley, 5s.; Messrs. E. Seed, 10s.; H. Baines, 5s.; W. Fawcett, 5s.; R. Williams, 5s.; J. Waugh, 5s.; J. Gavan, 5s.; S. Waddington, 5s.; E. Waugh, 5s.; and Towers, 2s. 6d.

At the close of the conference the usual complimentary votes were accorded to the Rev. T. Horne, the chairman, and Messrs. Tuby and Sons for the use of the show pavilion.

Guild Service at Night.

The evening meeting of the Guild took the form of the Guild service. The beautiful show of Messrs. Tuby and Sons was the chapel of ease to the parish church on the feast ground; and right well did the showpeople appreciate the privilege of attending the simple yet helpful Church service.

The service was taken throughout by the Rev. T. Horne, Guild Chaplain, who preached the sermon, taking for the subject the Holy Gospel for the Sunday. Mr. C. Shaw (manager) and the whole of the working staff of Tuby's electric coliseum rendered yeoman service in making the service a success.

The Accident to a Showman.

MR. H. BANFIELD writes to us to say that he is unable to reply to the numerous kind letters from his brother and sister artists throughout the country. He desires them to accept through the medium of The Era his great thanks for their sympathy with him in his trying circumstances. He is doing well. Both Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Ball are most assiduous in their kind care and attention.

Bostock Challenges His Detractors.

We gladly insert the following energetic disclaimer from Mr. Frank Bostock. The Lion King is as direct and as fearless in dealing with the vipers of slander amongst mankind as he is in the jungle of animal life.

TO THE EDITOR SHOWMAN'S WORLD, THE ERA.

DEAR SIR,—It having come to my knowledge that a maliciously concocted statement has been and is still being disseminated far and wide that the tatooing on the sacred beast in the Temple of the Bostock Jungle and Arena, Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court, is "faked," i.e., merely painted on, I hereby offer to give the sum of one thousand guineas to a public charity, to be selected by a third party if the said tatooing be not genuine and deeply fixed in the animal's hide.—Yours sincerely, BOSTOCK. FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

PAPER TEARING.—This is, perhaps, a necessary title, but it is one, we are convinced, that does not adequately convey anything approaching a comprehensive idea of the subject. It is one of marvellous magic, mystery, grace, beauty, and enchantment. The performances of the characters alone shorn of their mysterious fabrications are calculated to entrance any audience. In a series of inexplicable illusions, graceful animate characters in old-time costumes are created from torn paper, and, in their turn, generate and construct others, animate and inanimate, from shreds, rolls, sheets, and strips of paper cleverly torn and manipulated. PAPER TEARING commends itself to us as the most wonderful trick subject we ever saw.

MARATHON RACE.—The Urban Co. have secured, by special privileges, a picture of the start of the competitors in this historic event from Windsor Castle. Cameras were stationed at different points along the route commanding a most favourable view of the proceedings.

ROYAL VOYAGE TO CANADA.—This series, of course, shows the departure of the Prince of Wales for the Quebec Tercentenary Celebrations. It concludes a close portrait view of H.R.H. and many celebrities, pictures of the new warship Indomitable and of the renowned Victory, panoramic views of the Indomitable from stem to stern, the arrival of the Royal train, the farewells, Prince Edward wishing his father God-speed, a party of cadets from Osborne, including Prince Edward, with Admiral Sir John Fisher at their head, being closely inspected, concluding with the Indomitable steaming out of Portsmouth Harbour, the Victory firing a salute.

GERMAN DRAGOONS CROSSING THE ELSE is a military subject of great general interest and technical value. Cavalry methods of crossing a wide, swiftly-flowing river are fully demonstrated, every movement of horses and men being faithfully reproduced. Kit inspection and the safe arrangement of accoutrements are first shown, after which the colonel assembles his officers in a semi-circle and delivers his instructions. The next view presents a body of men prepared to cross the river, and the entry into the water of men and horses is keenly watched from the bank by the rest of the regiment. Once out of the horses' depth the men dismount, and an original picture is shown as men and horses strenuously breast the current and safely arrive on the opposite bank, riders up. The second part illustrates the crossing of the main body of men in punts, each man leading a swimming horse. The animals seem to enjoy the experience equally with the men, and their bright, glossy appearance as they emerge forms a beautiful photographic study. A scene of great animation as horses and men are accoutred to resume the march concludes this vigorous and stimulating series.

Pathé Frères.

THE INVENTION OF PROFESSOR CURIOS is a film novelty that introduces many comic scenes. It is not likely that Prof. Curios will ever rank among the benefactors of mankind. This jocular old gentleman has made a discovery, but the use he makes of it will not win him the thankfulness of his victims. With his new electro-motor magnet the malevolent scientist makes everybody turn and whirl about, thus causing them to be knocked down and trampled on, to our amusement, but certainly not to theirs. Mr. Curios is sure to fall a victim to his invention as soon as his machine gets out of order.

MR. FUZZ.—This very brief title concerns a fairy tale. Once upon a time there was a queen who had a son, so ugly and misshapen that one doubted whether he was human or not. A fairy who was at his birth, however, assured the mother that he would be very amiable and intelligent, and further, that he would be able to impart intelligence to the person he loved best. Seven years after the birth of this boy another queen from a neighbouring throne gave birth to a little girl of rare beauty. The same fairy happened to be at the birth of the little girl, and declared that she would have no intelligence or charm, but that she would be able to impart beauty to the one she should love the best. And so it was, every day the little girl seemed to grow more and more stupid. The queen, although a good mother, could not help getting angry with her daughter at times, which rendered the girl very unhappy. One day when she had gone to the woods to cry she met the young prince, who had previously fallen in love with her photo, and so strong is love that the prediction of the fairy came true.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—Isabelle, accompanied by her chaperone, Rosane, is taking a walk on the mountain when she meets a young and gallant cavalier, the sight of whom fills her heart with pleasure. The squire, falling in love with her at first sight, comes back every day to the place of their first meeting, and soon the two faithful to the tacit appointment, take long and delightful walks together, whereas the squire's valet makes love to the chaperone. Yet, for reasons very important, her parents decide to marry her with her cousin, a powerful duke, whose estates join theirs. She entreats in vain. The day comes for her to meet her affianced husband, who proposes to her with the air of one who has a distasteful task forced upon him. On looking at each other, however, a cry of pleasure escapes from their lips, for they recognise one another, and thank their parents' will which sanctions by a marriage their idyll in the mountains.

BOBBY ON THE SPREE treats the spectator to several comical situations. Bobby Junior, the son of a very well-known M.P., goes for an evening's outing with his father's evening dress and top hat on. Meeting two ladies he knows, they go together to a fashionable restaurant; but an hour later Bobby is completely tipsy, and he breaks all the glasses, after which, taking the pictures on the walls for so many targets, he throws at them everything he finds in the room. Having been shown the door by the waiters, Bobby takes from his pocket his father's card, which produces a wonderful cooling effect upon them, and makes them bow low before him, while they utter some excuse. On leaving the restaurant Bobby meets two hooligans, whom he calls his friends—his "dear friends"—who are so amiable that they insist on seeing him safely home, and taking with them a few valuables as a token of their lucky meeting. After this Bobby is ill, the house is ransacked by his "dear friends," and a shower of bills and complaints pour in addressed to Bobby's father.

Gaumont Company.

THE Gaumont Co. inform us that their Cinematograph version of JANE SHORE will be ready for reproduction in a very few days from now. With Gaumont's latest successes in our minds such as ROMEO AND JULIET, BLACK-EY'D SUSAN, and NAPOLEON AND THE ENGLISH SAILOR, we are looking forward to a very comprehensive and perfect representation of the popular drama. Gaumont's are doing excellent work by placing on record such brilliant cinematograph versions of our popular English plays. They are receiving congratulations from exhibitors and others on the success of their films ROMEO AND JULIET and NAPOLEON AND THE ENGLISH SAILOR.

A STAG HUNT is a fine descriptive review finely photographed and excellently tinted, every detail of the hunt being described. With a magnificent pack of hounds the meet sets out, and there soon commences a stirring chase. We witness the capture, the kill, and the home-coming. It is altogether a realistic film.

HARRY LAUDER IN A HURRY, which was exclusively produced by Gaumont's, is proving a tremendous attraction. Other films by Gaumont's of importance are MECHANICAL LEGS, a furiously funny novelty, and THE SHIRT OF A HAPPY MAN, a brilliant version of an old-time story, beautifully coloured.

THE second examination of kinematograph operators and exhibitors, which is held under the management of a joint committee of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association of Great Britain and the Northampton Polytechnic Institute, London, took place at the Northampton Institute on June 29 and 30. The examiners were Messrs. Nevil Maskelyne and S. D. Chalmers. Thirteen candidates were successful in securing the higher certificate, and one in securing the preliminary certificate. The names are as follows:—Higher Certificate: Barker, W.G., London; Boddington, H., London; Coulson, W. T., London; Dickson, L. D., Edinburgh; Harvey, S., Norwich; Hayles, W. H., Cambridge; Hogan, W. J., Belfast; Jewill, W. F. G., London; Leonard, G. A., London; Neal, W. H., London; North, W. E., London; Palmer, G., London; Smith, T. D., London. Preliminary Certificate, Kirby, E., London.

FOR both grades of certificates the candidates have to pass an important practical test, but for the higher certificate written answers are also required to questions set in the scope of the syllabus, of which full particulars will be found in the committee's booklet. We print in full below the questions set on both days of the examination. In their report the examiners state that the average knowledge was better than in the previous examination, and they call attention to the necessity for a thorough acquaintance with the L.C.C. regulations, and the reasons for making them. They also suggest that manufacturers be asked to mark resistances in ohms, so that operators may be led to appreciate the theory of resistances. They also suggest that those in authority over operators should do all they can to impress upon their subordinates the desirability of obtaining certificates of efficiency, and when opportunity occurs practical evidence of the value attached to a certificate should be given by showing a preference for the employment of duly certificated operators.

One hour.

Four Questions (of which 1 and 6 must be two) to be answered.

1. You are required to project a 15ft. picture, using alternating current at 100 volts. What current would you take? Describe the resistances, carbons, and fuses you would use, and show by a sketch how the connections are made.
2. Describe in detail your method of making the connections for a mixed jet of high power. State exactly what you do, and in what order, to get the best possible light.
3. Describe the appearances on the gate (a) when the light is too close to the condenser, (b) when the light is too far to the left and too low down.
4. What focal length lens would you require to project a 12ft. picture with a working distance of 36ft.?
5. Give the substance of the L.C.C. regulations about resistances. Why are these regulations made?
6. What would you do first and afterwards in the following emergencies:—
   (a) The back member of the condenser broke and part fell into the lantern.
   (b) The handle came off.
   (c) The film took fire in the gate.
   (d) The tube blew off the oxygen cylinder.
   (e) The coal gas (hydrogen) cylinder was found to be empty half-an-hour before the show.
   (f) You found the film to be the wrong way when you began to turn.

One hour.

Four Questions (of which 1 and 6 must be two) to be answered.

1. You are required to project a 12ft. picture, using continuous current at 200 volts, and are required to take as little current as possible. What carbons, fuses, and resistances would you use?
2. How would you test the quantity of gas in your cylinders? How much gas would you require to show a picture 10ft. diameter for one hour?
3. Give a sketch of the "gate" and mask; show how the light should come on the gate when projecting the film.
4. Describe how you would centre up the film and lantern slide. What should be the focal length of a lantern lens to be used with a 2½in. focus lens? Explain how you get your result.
5. What are the L.C.C. regulations as to the use of lime-light; give reasons for these regulations.
6. What would you do first and afterwards in the following emergencies:—
   (a) A spring broke.
   (b) The re-winding belt came off.
   (c) The fuse went.
   (d) The bellows of the regulator burst.
   (e) The shutter came off.
   (f) A cry of "fire" in the hall.

Cinematograph Fire Dangers Ended.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA

SIR,—On Feb. 28 last the Home Secretary received a deputation from the L.C.C., urging him to introduce legislation to provide against the terrible dangers of cinematograph exhibitions in unlicensed buildings. The Home Secretary promised a short Bill during the present Session; but notwithstanding my questions in the Council asking for the fulfilment of that promise, and those of a similar nature by the Earl of Kerry in the House of Commons, the Session is ended, and nothing has been done. But in consequence of the subject having been brought into such prominence, other brains have been at work, and it is now almost safe to say that, so far as is humanly possible, the hitherto dangerous cinematograph lantern can be made as harmless as a night-light. A most simple and inexpensive device for instantly quenching a film fire was brought to my notice a month ago by Mr. Thomas Barrasford. I immediately organised a visiting committee of the L.C.C. to view the apparatus at work, and each member of that committee, which included representatives of the Architect's Department and the London Fire Brigade, was delighted with the automatic working of the machine.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee I placed a notice of motion on the agenda paper as follows:—"That an addition be made to the cinematograph regulations requiring the use of some apparatus for immediately and automatically extinguishing fire in the event of the film becoming ignited." This motion was carried with enthusiastic unanimity, and has now become a part of the regulations of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee governing the use of cinematograph lanterns in theatres and premises licensed by the County Council.

From now on the apparatus—which is very cheap—will no doubt be adopted most willingly by every cinematograph operator in the kingdom, and, indeed, the world, for it will be to the interest of both manufacturer and operator to use it.

Here is good news indeed, for with one of these attachments to a cinematograph lantern an outbreak of fire will become practically impossible, and from the moment of its adoption the public will be able to view these delightful and educational entertainments in complete security. A public exhibition of the apparatus will shortly be held.—Yours, &c., WALTER REYNOLDS.

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

APPLICATIONS.

14,363.—Albert George Pirkis, of London. Improvements in hobby or toy horses and the like.

14,376.—Jules Inger, of Kilburn, London. Frame exhibiting the events of the day, theatrical notices, and advertisements.

14,383.—Joseph Franz Bachmann, of London. Safety device for tight-rope walking.

14,409.—François Sallé, of London. Improved means for producing theatrical effects.

14,514.—John Calhoun Deagan, of London. Improvements in musical bells.

14,551.—William Claude Fields, of Liverpool. Improvements in appliances for juggling with balls.

14,684.—Robert Fox and Andrew Cruickshank, of London. Means for producing advertising and other cinematograph pictures in railway tunnels and the like.

14,765.—Bert Dent, of Palace Theatre, Greenwich, London. Reserved seat guard with hat-rack combination.

COMPLETE SPECIFICATIONS ACCEPTED.

10,611.—Philbrook. Methods of and apparatus for reproducing pictures or photographs in natural colours.

24,525.—Moy and Bastie. Automatic shutters for cinematograph projectors.

SPECIFICATION OPEN TO INSPECTION.

9,370.—Mathelot and Gentilhomme. Arrangement permitting of synchronising the movements of two bodies.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

3,510.—Roundabouts. P. R. J. Willis, of Kingston-on-Thames, Surrey. (C. F. Orrick, Mount Vernon, Illinois, U.S.A.)

A mast (10), supported by guy ropes (22), carries rotating arms (14) bearing seats (15). The arms are rotated by the occupant of one of the seats, who operates a handle (34) pivoted to levers (27, 28), attached to a ratchet arrangement (26) on the mast. The handle (34) may be either held or released when speed is attained. The seats (15), made of sheet-metal (16), with wire side supports (20, 21), are held in position by rods (35), formed with vertical parts near the seat, and attached to a collar (36) on the mast. The rods (35) may be used to support a canopy, or to dry clothes upon.

4,105.—Roundabouts. C. L. Barnhart, of New York, U.S.A.

Roundabouts are constructed with the means for imparting the gyratory motion arranged below the gyratory shaft, and the ball on the gyratory shaft is driven by a gear-wheel, which surrounds the ball. As shown in Fig. 1, the annular platform

FIG. 2.

(A) is supported from caps (d, *d*1), on a gyratory shaft (D), in a manner similar to that employed in similar apparatus. The shaft (D) is provided with a ball (E), mounted on balls (*c*3, Fig. 2), in a socket (*c*1) of a plate (C), secured by bolts or screws to a supporting-frame (B). The shaft (D) extends through an opening (c) in the plate (C), and is provided preferably with a roller or sleeve (*d*9, Fig. 5), which engages a slotted plate (M), mounted as shown on a shaft (N), which is mounted in a bracket (*n*1), and is rotated in order to oscillate the shaft (D). The ball (E) is driven by a gear-wheel (H), provided with studs (*h*3), which engage longitudinal slots (e) in the ball. The wheel (H) is driven by suitable means, such as a gear-wheel (H1), driven from a shaft (I), which is mounted in bearings (i, *i*1), and may be formed in two parts, connected by a universal joint (I1). The wheel (H) is preferably mounted on balls (*h*1), and is prevented from rising by keepers (L) secured to the plate (C).

4,255.—Teaching shooting. C. von Kropff, of Gotha, Germany.

The device shown in the figure is placed over the lock of a gun, preferably not close to the sight, and enables simultaneous control by two persons of the aim taken by a person using the gun. Mirrors (o, p) of dark-coloured glass are secured in indentations in a metal frame, comprising walls (k, m, n, s). A socket (i) on the frame slidably secures the device upon an elastic base (a), the sides (b, c) of which are covered with leather or other soft material. The target and sights are visible to persons looking in the direction of the arrows.

CINEMATOGRAPH FIRES.

AN INSTANTANEOUS EXTINGUISHER.

In a previous chat with Mr. Walter Reynolds, he emphasised the "chaotic condition of the English law with regard to cinematograph entertainments," and advocated the compulsory provision by exhibitors of a fireproof enclosing box for the operator.

Questions re the safety of the public and the prevention of fire in connection with cinematograph exhibitions in theatres and premises licensed by the London County Council have been asked at the Council's meetings twice by Mr. Walter Reynolds, and also in the House of Commons, but the uselessness of relying on the Home Secretary to do anything in the matter, owing to the congested state of business, has been realised.

An appliance has been brought to Mr. Reynolds's notice by Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the owner of the device, for immediately and automatically extinguishing fire.

Mr. Walter Reynolds was so struck by the machine's possibilities, that he quickly organised a "viewing committee" of the Theatres and Music-halls Committee to see the appliance in operation.

This visiting committee included officers from the architect's department of the London County Council and the London Fire Brigade. Every member expressed himself delighted, and Mr. Walter Reynolds's next step was to put the following notice of motion on the agenda paper of the Theatres and Music-halls Committee, which on Wednesday, July 22, was enthusiastic and unanimous in adopting it.

The motion reads: "That an addition be made to the Council's regulations requiring the use of some apparatus for instantaneously and automatically extinguishing fire in the event of the films becoming ignited."

The language of this motion will now become part of the rules and regulations respecting the use of cinematograph lanterns in theatres and premises licensed by the London County Council.

With regard to the machine spoken of by Mr. Walter Reynolds, we hear that it is simple in construction and cheap, and has been patented by its owner, Mr. Thomas Barrasford, who is taking steps to manufacture same, and place it on the market for immediate use.

Inspection of the device is cordially invited.

LIMITATION OF NUMBERS.

MESSRS. GRAYDON AND RUTLAND'S REPORT.

On Dec. 17, 1907, the Theatres and Music Halls Committee of the London County Council wrote Mr. Graydon, the honorary secretary of the Association, that the committee had decided to recommend the Council to adopt the following rule:—

"Persons must not be permitted to stand or sit in any of the intersecting gangways, and in no circumstances must the number of persons admitted to any part of the premises exceed the number for which the exits from that part are certified by the Council to be sufficient."

Against this, on Jan. 29, 1908, the Association and other proprietors lodged a memorial containing the following clause:—

"Whilst, therefore, your memoralists submit that the reasons set forth herein must satisfy the Council that the proposed rule is unnecessary, they are quite prepared, if desired, to nominate a committee of your memoralists to meet a committee of your Council in the hope of arriving at finality in matters affecting such enormous public interests."

And the Theatre and Music Halls Committee appointed a sub-committee, of whom Mr. Greenwood (chairman), Mr. Wilde, and Mr. Walter Reynolds acted, to receive a deputation of four memoralists. Mr. Stoll, Mr. Tozer, and Mr. Graydon were appointed, as was Mr. Henri Gros, but he preferred not to act, and Mr. Rutland was appointed in his stead.

The deputation held meetings and arranged to uncompromisingly resist limitation and to contend that the past and present arrangements at halls of

(1) Keeping intersecting gangways clear;

(2) Keeping sufficient room at back and sides for passing to and fro; and

(3) Clearing the house in a few minutes, rendered limitation unnecessary.

On June 24, at Spring Gardens, the deputation was received, and considerable discussion ensued. Mr. Greenwood intimated that halls must accept limitation, and that if the halls did not themselves suggest the numbers, the Council would deal with individual proprietors, and not with the memoralists as a body. This, the deputation said, would be opposed by the memoralists as a body until Parliamentary powers had been obtained.

At this juncture Mr. Rutland settled, and the deputation put forward, the following concrete suggestion:—

(a) That the interscecting gangways be kept clear;

(b) That sufficient room for passing to and fro be fairly maintained at the backs and sides;

(c) That the time occupied in clearing the house should not exceed, say, three minutes;

and these, the sub-committee said, they would at once submit to the full Theatres and Music Halls Committee.

Since then we are glad to be able to report that the L.C.C. has written to us stating that the committee have carefully considered the views expressed at the interview, and now think it unnecessary to take any action as regards the number of persons to be admitted into any place of entertainment in which the following conditions are fulfilled:—

(1) The intersecting gangways to be kept clear.

(2) Sufficient room for passing to and fro to be maintained in the gangways and passages at the sides and rear of the seating.

(3) The time occupied in clearing the house of the audience not to exceed three minutes.

Mr. Gros, the president of the Association, intends to convene an early meeting to discuss the matter in order that we may communicate with the L.C.C. without delay.

For Philip G. Rutland and self,
(signed) J. L. GRAYDON.

"THE CORKSCREW."

A Coster Episode, produced at the Paragon on Monday, July 20.

Bill Johnson ..... MR. NEVILL GRAHAM
Mary Jones ..... MISS LILIAN EARLE
Maggy Purvis ..... MISS MARGARET WATSON

A pathetic little play is The Corkscrew, presented for the first time on Monday evening at the Paragon by Mr. Nevill Graham and company. It reminds us of the one-act play 'Op-o'-Me-Thumb, which deals with a similar phase of life. The scene in the piece under review is "a poor room, rented by a poor girl in a poor neighbourhood." The girl is Maggy Purvis, a cripple, nicknamed "Corkscrew," who is, and has been for some few years, in the habit of attending, like a sister, to some of the creature comforts of her coster friend, Bill Johnson, whom, unknown to him, she loves with all her heart. There seems to be no finality to the sacrifices she is prepared to make for him, and, perhaps not unnaturally, when one day he visits her with the information that he is going to get married and asks her advice as to how he should furnish the new home, she feels that a great happiness has entered into her life, and, of course, Bill's bride is no other than herself. So she prepares herself accordingly, purchases materials and makes herself a new dress, powders and rouges her face in order that she may look more beautiful in his sight. Later there enters on the scene Mary Jones, who is introduced to Maggy as the future Mrs. Bill Johnson. Miss Margaret Watson acts feelingly in the part of Maggy Purvis, and the picture she gives is a peculiarly pathetic one. Mr. Nevill Graham furnishes a capital coster study as Bill Johnson; and Miss Lilian Earle suitably enacts the rôle of Mary Jones.

Conspicuous among the other items in the programme is Mr. Jack Sheppard, the handcuff king and goal-breaker, whose act arouses great enthusiasm and admiration. The trunk illusion in conjunction with Miss Ruby Vesta is a smart piece of mystery-working.

THE action, which was down for jury trial during the forthcoming recess in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, in which Mrs. Dora Finburgh, wife of David Finburgh, wholesale stationer, Maplewell House, Leicester, sued Moss' Empires, Ltd., Edinburgh, for £1000 damages, has been settled.

THE pursuer and her husband, while in the Empire Theatre, Glasgow, in November last, were ordered to leave, and certain libellous statements were, it is averred, made about her. Mrs. Finburgh has now accepted a tender of £150 by the defenders and expenses and an apology for what took place on the occasion complained of.

MR. CHARLES COBORN writes us very enthusiastically about a turn which has been appearing with him this week at the Hippodrome, Preston. He says: "It is known as Miss Zona Vevey and company, in My Lady's Bower. The bright little lady is supported by Herr Max Erard, a cultured musician, and others. The act is clever, pretty, tuneful, refined, and beautifully staged, and managers should lose no time in securing it. I shall expect a box of cigars from every manager who engages it through this recommendation. It was an instantaneous success here, and I believe would be everywhere."

BY the way, Mr. Coborn himself has made a new departure by submitting a Lancashire impersonation for the first time in a song entitled "Owd Sal o' Mine." Its reception gratified him muchly.

JAPANESE AT THE HIPPODROME.

The exquisite taste of the Japanese nation is reflected in the setting of the Japanese play which Mr. Oswald Stoll and Mr. Frank Allen, in their restless pursuit of originality and novelty, put on at the Hippodrome on Monday afternoon, introducing at the same time a Jap comedienne of rare gifts. Mme. Hanako is quite a famous actress in her own country, and was born in a village near Tokio. She first appeared on the stage at the age of eight, and, like our own Ellen Terry, speedily made up her mind to become an actress. Her famous countrywoman, Mme. Sada Yacco, a few years ago familiarised us with the tragic drama of her country at the theatres; but it has been left to the latest comer to illumine what is sometimes called the irregular stage with the subtlety and charm of her art. In The Darling of the Gods we learnt something of the possibilities of Japanese scenery, but nothing could possibly be more refreshing or dainty than the exquisite ensemble by Mr. Joseph Harker, who has been specially commissioned to paint the scenery. He has very cleverly duplicated a Japanese house and garden now to be found in the South Kensington Museum, and the whole setting can be dropped into the arena with the lowering of the circular curtain—a clever device, due to the ingenuity of Mr. Frank Parker, the Hippodrome stage-director. The little play in which Mme. Hanako appears is by W. Shiko and Loie Fuller, and is entitled

"OTAKE."

Countess Yoshiko ..... MISS MASSA
Masou-o ..... MR. NADAYAMA
Gaushitshi ..... MR. YOSHIKAWA
Otaké ..... MME. HANAKO

The piece was produced in pantomime at the Duke of York's Theatre on Aug. 26, with Miss Pauline Chase in the title-rôle, the incidental music being arranged by Mr. John Crook. When the curtain rises, Masou-o is just coming away from the country house of the Countess Yoshiko, with whom he is in love, and, in taking leave of that lady, expresses the pleasure he has derived from his visit. Left alone, the Countess receives from her manservant, Gaushitshi, a letter, whereupon she sends him for her mantle, and prepares to pay a visit to some friends. Finding it too warm, she takes the mantle off, and then departs. The little maid-servant, Otaké, overweighted with a large package, struggles heroically with it into the house, and, observing the toilet requisites of her mistress, proceeds to make up her face and arrange her hair. She is delighted at the effect, and commences to dance. Perceiving the robe of her mistress, she puts it on, and struts about the room. Masou-o returns unexpectedly, and, mistaking the maid for her mistress, makes passionate love to her, but receiving no response to his pleadings, denounces her and throws his flowers at her. Otaké, though much alarmed at the incident, soon forgets her fright at the return of Gaushitshi, who brings home some purchases of the Countess, and immediately recognises the little girl. After a love-scene, Gaushitshi proposes marriage. She accepts, saying, "After all I prefer to be a poor man's wife rather than a Countess with beautiful dresses." Gaushitshi remembers he has to return for his mistress, but before his departure earnestly advises Otaké to take off the robe. The lover of the Countess returns, and again urges his suit, without success. Becoming furious, he stabs poor little Otaké, discovering his terrible mistake on the return of the Countess, who takes the dying girl tenderly in her arms. On this pathetic picture the curtain falls.

The acting of Madame Hanako is most interesting to watch. One needs no knowledge of Japanese to understand the eloquence of her gesture play. She reached a high plane of comedy-acting in the making-up scene, the childish glee of Otaké being most naturally suggested. The dance, too, is exceedingly graceful. The death-scene does not appeal quite so strongly to the Western mind, but it is genuinely pathetic. Miss Massa makes a stately Japanese lady of the Countess Yoshiko; Mr. Nadayama capably realises the fury of the lover Masou-o; and Mr. Yoshikawa is an amusing Gaushitshi. The novelty should draw large crowds to the Hippodrome, which looks delightfully cool.

"THE COSTER'S CHRISTMAS EVE."

A Sketch, Produced at the Queen's, Poplar, on Monday, July 20.

Bill Hawkins ..... MR. NAT TRAVERS
Jim Barton ..... MR. IVAN COHERNEY
Bob Stevens ..... MR. GEORGE MALVERN
Meg ..... MISS ETHEL GREENE

We have it on generally accepted authority that "West is West and East is East," and we are somehow coming to realise that at the beginning of the twentieth century the denizens of the Orient are quite on a level with the occidentals in obtaining their fair share of the things which go to make life pass at least pleasantly. At all times the Messrs. Abrahams provide a programme which earns the unstinted applause of their patrons, and the one with which they are just now filling their house is just of that light, summery nature which is calculated to attract those who are not willing to brave the eccentricities of a fickle summer. The principal novelty which is introduced at the Queen's this week is A Coster's Christmas Eve, produced by Mr. Nat Travers and a very competent company, nearly thirty strong. The story is slight, but combines both comedy and pathos in just the due proportion to appeal to an East-end audience. With the flightiness of her class, Meg, a queen among the costers, throws over her sweetheart, Bill Hawkins, in preference for some lover in a presumably more exalted station in life. Bill is of sterner stuff than most of his kind, and so, instead of knocking under, he betakes himself to that land of promise, Canada, where he prospers exceedingly. After three years' exile, if so it can be termed, he returns, and on Christmas Eve we are introduced to a party of his old friends celebrating his accession to wealth. Jollity is of course the prevailing note of the proceedings, and we have some good singing and dancing. Bill himself gives a rather pretty song, entitled "A mother is a bloke's best friend," while his old pal, Bob Stevens, likewise enlivens the company with a delineation of the "East-end aristocracy." While the proceedings are at a height, Jim Barton, an old comrade, enters, to announce the presence outside of Meg, perishing in the snow falling in the street. Proverbially impulsive, the costers welcome the return of the other wanderer, and a reconciliation to her former lover forms a fitting termination to the scene. The principals show considerable dramatic force, and have a thorough idea of the lights and shadows of coster life. Mr. Nat Travers makes full use of the opportunities at his disposal; while Miss Ethel Greene is a pathetically pretty exponent of the repentant sinner. The piece is well staged.

LITTLE HACKENSCHMIDT (pupil of the great Hackenschmidt), the undefeated champion bantam-weight wrestler, after a successful provincial tour will appear next week at the Islington Empire. His manager (C. Cliquot) informs us that he is willing to back him against all comers in his own class. Little Hackenschmidt is only a mere boy of nineteen.

MISS ROSE HAMILTON, who has been resting for eight weeks after a throat operation, resumed business this week at the Hippodrome, Southampton, where she has made a hit with her dialect impersonations and a new song by Harrington and Powell, entitled "Don't you think?" Next week she will appear in a boy's song, entitled "Goodbye to Maudie," at the Hippodrome, Portsmouth.

ARTISTS' LEAGUE MANIFESTO.

The International Artists' League has come to grips with some German managers, and the following appeal has now been issued:—

"We beg to draw your attention to the fact that a boycott has been declared by the I.A.L. against the Apollo Theatre, Dusseldorf; the Reichshallen, Cologne; the Kolosseum, Essen; the Thalia, Elberfeld; and the Olympia Theatre, Dortmund. This has been done solely because the directors of the above-named halls had announced, through agents and others, as well as by written communications to artists, that for the future they would not engage members of the Lodge, and, furthermore, because they requested members to hand in their resignation to the Lodge previous to the signing of a contract. This is an undoubted fact in the cases of the directorates of the Apollo Theatre, Dusseldorf; the Thalia, Elberfeld; the Kolosseum, Essen; and the Reichshallen, Cologne; plenty of documentary evidence being in the possession of the Lodge. With regard to the management of the Olympia Theatre, Dortmund, there had hitherto only been rumours in circulation regarding their decision not to engage members of the Lodge. Two weeks previous to the declaration of the boycott, however, the management had been politely requested by letter, and subsequently by telegram, to contradict such rumours. At the same time it was pointed out that no reply and an ignoring of the Lodge's query could only be interpreted to mean that these rumours were based on fact. In the case of several wires the reply was prepaid, yet no answer was received. Even allowing for a possible absence on holiday or otherwise, ample time had been allowed for a reply, and the I.A.L., therefore, felt themselves compelled to place the Olympia Theatre in Dortmund on the black list. In addition to the boycott, other countermeasures will be taken to protect members of the Lodge and other artists against any consequences, and no stone will remain unturned to secure the desired end.

"In a public meeting of artists, held in Berlin, on July 8, and attended by 262 people, the management of the Lodge made a plain, straightforward statement of the position of affairs which had led up to taking decisive steps. Thus those present were afforded a clear view of the situation, and were enabled to form an unbiassed judgment. After careful examination of the documents, which were open to public inspection, and an exhaustive discussion, where all the pros and cons were carefully considered, the meeting voted solid in favour of the I.A.L.'s action.

"It is, of course, within the realms of possibility that there are yet elsewhere artists, and even Lodge members, who do not see the necessity for the step taken. But if it is taken into consideration that during the past nine weeks every single meeting of the Lodge in Berlin has been attended by from fifty to seventy members, who dealt almost exclusively with the question at issue, and that all resolutions were passed unanimously (or, in one single case, with but one dissentient voice), and with full knowledge of all the circumstances leading up to the dispute; that, furthermore, the public meeting already referred to unanimously sanctioned the resolution, it may safely be assumed that those who, owing to absence, were unable to obtain a clear insight into all the details of the matter, would readily have cast their votes with the overwhelming majority.

"For these reasons we ask all those who were unable to obtain a full view of what went on behind the scenes to confidently rely on the judgment of the fully informed, reliable, and responsible persons present. We, therefore, appeal to all artists of either sex and every nationality to stand united, and thus to prove not only to variety managers, but to the general public as well, that the 'strolling people,' who, for centuries past, have had to fight for their existence as though they had been outcasts, have at length fully realised the dignity of their position. By a determined display of a perfectly justifiable esprit de corps, and by a firm resolve, even at some personal sacrifice, to secure honourable recognition, it will be possible to put an end, once and for all, to the intolerable present state of the law and the unfairness of the contract. For that is the goal which we hope to reach, and every upright and true artist will know how to act."

The V.A.F. and the White Rats of America are standing by the International Artists' League in their determination to get a fair contract for the members of the profession, and to check the oppressive conditions under which they are called upon to work. A defence fund has been inaugurated to help the boycott, and, thereby, to obtain the recognition, by the proprietors and managers implicated, of the demands of the I.A.L.

LA MILO.

The one and only great La Milo, world-famed as the faithful personator of Lady Godiva in the Coventry Pageant, has decidedly proved that "nothing succeeds like success." Her living marble representations of the world's highest ideals of sculpture have sent a thrill of Elysian sensation through two continents. Her fame was created by her astounding and artistic productions, resulting in the enchantment of audiences whose appreciation of this ideal in marble has decidedly proved her art to be one by which all classes are entranced and enlightened. Following her exceptionally apt demonstration and comparison of the silently beautiful and the noisily ugly came the advent of the ultra-Purist pharisee, whose notorious "chants" awakened a healthy interest in the beautiful poseuse, La Milo, leading her onward, victory on victory, to absolute triumph, to the utter rout of that pawky and lachrymose old fossil, Stiggins, the prophet of gloom. Crowded and packed houses have been the order of running for two and a half years, since La Milo first breathed her message in marble, leading to daily competition for her act. Hence, despite the existence of Stiggins and his satellites, La Milo has again been re-booked by those who have experience of the drawing power of her exhibition—an exhibition which has had the approval of thirty-one watch committees and magistrates, and the ungrudging appreciation of the best of the Art and Press world, and last, but not least, the Pulpit. The verdict of three of the greatest English moral reformers of the day has emphasised the absurdity of the doctrines emanating from the whitened sepulchre of prejudice, by bringing into comparison fatuous egoism and calm appreciation of conscionable truth. On this test of comparison, and on its lesson to Stiggins, La Milo has stood strong and resplendent, a bright star in the theatrical firmament, fixed by managerial and public approval as a beautiful ideal—a woman with a mission. Mr. Oswald Stoll, whose great critical and financial experience of managerial and proprietary responsibility in catering for the amusements of the public, is a safe man, and one intellectually fitted to grasp all possibilities. He knows artistic worth when he meets it! Hence he has re-engaged this beautiful meteoric star for the tour 1909. [Communicated.]

HONITON Summer Fair opened with the old-fashioned ceremonies, the town crier, in three-cornered hat and lace coat, walking the fair with a gilded glove on a pole. "Oyez! oyez! oyez!" he cries. "The glove is up, the fair's begun. Let no man be arrested till the glove is taken down." There was a goodly crowd of entertainers with shows, roundabouts, shooters, and variety frames. The local caterers were also present in excellent array.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD AND DISTRICT,
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT,
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

MARATHON RACE FROM START TO FINISH.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

Code Word, "ECUYER."

Isabelle, accompanied by her "duegne" Rosane, is taking a walk in the mountains, when she meets a young and gallant cavalier, with whom she falls in love at first sight; and as he loses his heart to her at once, the following days see them going to, and meeting at, the same place; but as the young lady's parents for reasons very important decide to marry her to her cousin, a powerful duke whom she does not know, she cries her heart out, and entreats in vain. She must submit to the ordeal of being wooed by a man she is sure she will never love; but, lo, on looking at each other, the young people recognise one another, and thank their parents' will which sanctions by a marriage their idyll in the mountains.

626ft. The Subject, £10 8s. 8d. Toning, £1 0s. 0d.

MR. FUZZ.

Code Word, "EMPYREE."

Once upon a time there was a queen who had a son so ugly and misshapen that had not a fairy told her that Prince Fuzz would be amiable and intelligent, and, moreover, would be able to impart intelligence to the person he loved best, the poor mother would have been very much downhearted. Several years later, another queen from a neighbouring throne gave birth to a beautiful little girl, but the same fairy declared that she would be silly, but that she would be able to impart beauty to the one she should love the best. And so it was that Prince Fuzz meeting the princess in the wood one day when she had gone there to cry over her silliness the prediction of the good fairy came true. They were married at the Royal Palace, and must be happy to this day.

BOBBY ON THE SPREE.

Code Word, "ENORME."

Bobby Junior, the son of a well known M.P., goes for an evening outing with his father's evening dress and top hat on. Meeting two ladies he knows, they go together to a fashionable restaurant; but presently Bobby is completely tipsy, and he breaks glasses, bottles, and pieces of furniture. The waiters show him the door, but Bobby takes from his pocket his father's card, and hands it over to them. In the street he calls two hooligans his "dear friends," and the scoundrels, seizing the golden opportunity offered to them, insist on seeing him home, where they ransack the house. The next day a shower of bills and complaints pour in addressed to Bobby's father.

545ft. The Subject, £9 1s. 8d. Toning, 18s.

MY NEIGHBOURS ARE GIVING A DANCE.

Code Word "EMPLETTE."

Poor Mr. Jones is suffering with a splitting headache, and his neighbours, instead of treading noiselessly in their flat just above him, are having a musical evening. John knocks with his cane against the ceiling in order to ask them to stop their disturbance; but they, instead of complying with the young man's wish, begin to dance a barn dance, which makes the floor creak and give way, landing in John's room all his noisy neighbours.

230ft. The Subject, £3 16s. 8d.

THE INVENTION OF PROFESSOR CURIOS.

Code Word, "ENFILADE."

It is not likely that Prof. Curios will ever rank among the benefactors of mankind. With his new electro motor magnet the malevolent scientist makes everybody turn and whirl about, thus causing them to be knocked down and trampled on. Mr. Curios is sure to fall a victim to his invention as soon as this machine of his gets out of order, and nobody will pity him.

428ft. The Subject, £7 2s. 8d.

THROUGH PARIS SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIP.

WON BY BILLINGTON.

Code Word "EXIL."

Titles of the pictures:—Starting from the National Bridge, Along the River, The Arrival, Winner Billington (12 kilomètres, 8¼ miles in 2 hrs. 30).

545ft. The Subject, £9 1s. 8d.

Pathé's Films

UNEQUALLED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

LAST WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

The Grotesque People.

Is a trick film, cleverly got up and on the same level with our standard subjects, such as Modern Sculptors, Miss Hold's Puppets, &c.

Dauber's Whims.

One would not think that artists, or, better, daubers, are sometimes up to pranks which are just the thing one would expect from school boys. Is it not ridiculous to see these sturdy fellows harness a horse to a gentleman's easy chair, and have the gentleman and the chair driven throughout the village to the amusement of the villagers, simply because the poor man would not listen to their explanations? But then, they must be in their second childhood before their time.

Tunisian Industries.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Financial Times, Jan. 28:—
"The Era" Annual, 1908. This well-known almanac and annual is replete, as usual, with information of all sorts regarding the dramatic and theatrical world, and will be found not only useful to those directly connected with the stage, whether in a histrionic or literary capacity, but also interesting to the average member of the playgoing public, who is regaled with some forty pages of "Stories Told by Well-known People"—mostly actors and actresses. Dramatic authors will appreciate the importance of the very full list that is given of new plays and important revivals at the London and provincial, as well as Paris and Berlin theatres during the past year. The publication is well illustrated with portraits of theatrical and music-hall celebrities.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Evening Standard, Jan. 20:—
"The Era" Annual shows its customary excellence, and has some good "yarns."

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
The Star, Jan. 15:—
Mr. Lennox Pawle's appearance in pantomime at Drury Lane gives point to some correspondence, now published by "The Era" Annual for the first time. As an example in brevity it should commend itself to managers and actors.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Morning Post, Jan. 15:—
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1908 contains a large amount of information valuable to members of the profession for whom it is intended, stories told by well-known entertainers, and many portraits.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—H. M. THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The comedy-drama At Cripple Creek, which is presented by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company, draws large audiences this week. Mr. Wernham Ryott makes an heroic Joe Mayfield, and Miss Agnes Verity is admirable as Dynamite Ann; Mr. Charles E. Johnson plays powerfully as the Cripple Creek terror, and Mr. Will Hook is a lively Reggie Harwood. The female characters are exceptionally well represented by Misses Dorothy Lart, Daisy Carlton, Norah Dillon, and Rosie Hopkins. Mr. Harry Leander as a nigger, Mr. Wills, and Mr. Harley-West are also most successful in their parts. The piece is finely staged.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Dr. Walford Bodie's audiences are as big and as appreciative as last week. He is supported by a strong company, including Li-Chang-Hi, the Chinese magician; the Gordon Troupe of international dancers; Mr. George Hyatt, juggler; the Brothers Baxter, Lambeth and Robertson, Little Dolly Dobson, and others.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. David Thomson.—The present season finishes on Saturday. Owing to the bad weather early in summer the audiences were somewhat smaller than at the same time last year, but latterly the house was crowded at all performances. The artists this week are Miss Violet Davidson, soprano; Miss Daisy Taylor, comedienne; Mr. Scott Skinner, the famous violinist; Messrs. Chorley and Connor, comedians; Mr. Jack Marson, vocalist and entertainer; Mr. Dan Williams, comedian; and Vulcaris, "the Scottish Gross-smith." It is unnecessary to add that under the direction of Mr. David Thomson, himself a Scotch comedian of the front rank, the entertainments have been exceedingly enjoyable all along.

ALHAMBRA MUSIC HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair; Manager, Mr. George B. Lee.—Miss Vesta Rae, a comedienne of unusual ability and charm, remains for another week; Mr. Joe Lennox is a dexterous juggler who well knows the value of humorous patter; Little Etta shows singular dexterity as a trick dancer; and Mr. Will Sheridan is popular as a banjoist. Mr. Dove Paterson's films are all deeply interesting. The house is crowded at both evening performances.

ABERTILLERY. — THEATRE METROPOLE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. J. Seaborne. —Mr. Carr Loates presents this week the musical drama entitled At the World's Mercy, which is staged in excellent style. Miss Cissie Milford excels as Skittles, the stowaway, while she portrays Kitty Knott, a music-hall star, in a very realistic and natural manner; Alice Lloyd, the heiress, is excellently sustained by Miss Molly Bee; and the Charley Smart of Mr. Jess Boxer is very amusing. Miss Pauline Courtney as Dot is quite at home in her part; Mr. Terry Davies makes an ideal Captain Frank Manley; Mr. Carr Loates as Jabez Barber, a solicitor, is all that could be desired; Morris Goldstein, a Jew, is capitally acted by Mr. C. D. Knight; and the Slouching Sam of Mr. Leo Rodway is a natural study. The play is well staged, the scenery being quite new.

ACCRINGTON.—TOWN HALL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The World in Motion animated pictures continue a successful career here, and are proving a capital attraction. The principal films submitted this week are Three Maids and a Bull, The Wreckers, and The Arabian Dagger. Miss Mollie Woolstenhulme, operatic vocalist, gains warm recognition; Baby Boden is an exceedingly clever juvenile vocalist, her dancing winning well-merited applause; and Almon deserves praise for his neat acrobatic performance.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—The sketch by G. B. Trevor and company, Her Country's Enemy, is an episode of the Crimean War, and Mr. J. P. Carroll, an old soldier of India, displays marvellous dexterity with the tambourine. Nada Moret tells in song and story of the Piper Findlater episode at Dargai; Rose and Challoner are a pair of smart duologuists, and in The Porter and the Singer sing well and evoke much laughter; La Tostia is a clever mandolinist; Mr. Fred Lindsay, the Australian bushman, with a lash 25ft. long attached to an 18in. stock, performs some surprising feats. The Bioscope pictures include one of Jack Johnson, the coloured boxer, in training, and another showing how bucking broncos are broken in.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—This week's attraction is A Girl Redeemed from Sin. The leading rôles are well sustained by Miss Olive Fulton as Nancy Lee, the mill girl, by Miss Ada Oxley as Peggy Grey, Nancy's friend, and by Mr. Jo Monkhouse as Will May, a ship's officer. Other important parts have excellent interpretation by Messrs. Philip Ore, Victor Knight, Gifforde Reynolds, and Misses Fannie Olive.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Good business is being done here. Helm and Cozens appear in their skit The Doctor and the Patient, which may be truly described as a screaming absurdity; Percy Curry, the original "candy man," is also here in new songs and old favourite ditties; Lena Page sings in charming style some serio-comic refrains; and Ada Jenner is very pleasing in her sketch, The Lady Barber. Ida Barr sings some sentimental songs in good style; Pat O'Connor gives specimens of his humour in song and of his expertness in dance; a novel juggling act is given by Jenny Maningo, "the daughter of the regiment"; Dennis McCarthy is a good character comedian and actor-vocalist; F. V. St. Clair is a very clever extempore artist and famous singing comedian; Edna Francis is a talented vocalist and dancer; and the Bioscope is interesting in its illustrative experiments, The Elixir of Life.

BACUP.—NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—The return visit of Mr. Charles March's No. 1 company with The Gamester of Metz constitutes the attraction here this week. The part of Paul Baldot is undertaken by Mr. Charles March, the author, who acts throughout in manly and convincing fashion; Mr. Arthur Merryless is a dignified and soldierly General de Montparasse; and Lieutenant Heave and Louis Badaire have capable representatives in Mr. Fitzroy Cooper and Mr. Pringle Roberts. Mr. Fred Kew appears as the villainous Captain Badaire, and plays the rôle of this heartless scoundrel with considerable ability. Mr. William Dochary as Ferdinand Du Basson, a heavy tragedian, and Mr. John Westlow as Goliath Grou, a French master baker, supply much merriment. Miss Stella Argent as Countess Baldot is satisfactory; light comedy is supplied by Miss Lizzie Prescott (Gwendoline); and Miss Una Lane acts with grace and feeling as Paul's sister, Lucia.

BARNSLEY.—NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Barnsley Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson.—Ivan Tschernoff's highly-trained horses and dogs go through their performance in a wonderfully clever and sagacious manner; Ernesto wins applause in a smart juggling act; Nancy Renshaw, negro comedienne and bone soloist, obtains a cordial greeting; Towyn Thomas's Royal Welsh Entertainers sing well; Sydney Lee, prestidigitateur, gives a good turn; Joe S. Atkins, comedian; the Three Chanters, in a vocal comedy act; and Zetta Russell, comedienne, are all heard to advantage. Some good pictures are shown by the Palacescope.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE —Mr. C. H. E. Brookfield's comedy, Dear Old Charlie, and the scena, Salome, are winning deserved praise this week. Mr. Williams should feel encouraged to find that his strong company is thoroughly appreciated. The title-rôle in Dear Old Charlie Mr. George Lestock portrays to perfection, he, together with Miss Marjorie Chard, receiving much applause. The friends, Gabriel Peploe and Thomas Dumpie, by Mr. Douglas Cox and Mr. S. Trelawnay, are never tedious. With Miss Leonora Braham as the mother-in-law, and the able support of the rest of the company, the full humour of the comedy is interpreted. Great applause is given to Miss Mabilia Daniell at the close of her weird performance. Miss Daniell is supported by Mr. Robt. Hilton, Mr. Phillip Desborough, and Mr. Hugh Travers, in the rôles of Herod, the astrologer, and the executioner respectively, each of whom leaves nothing to be desired.

THE TIVOLI.—From a sensational point of view perhaps the comedy cyclists, the Villons, have made the biggest impression. Their marvellous performance leaves one with the idea that nothing is impossible awheel. Matthews and Cowper are extremely funny in their sketch, When the Clock Went Wrong, the ambiguities of Barney keeping the house roaring. That the week's bill is a good one is evidenced by the continued full houses.

NEW HIPPODROME.—This popular exhibition of animated pictures is more than maintaining its standard of excellence, as is witnessed by the full houses nightly. Mr. Routledge is to be congratulated upon having so finely gauged the taste of his patrons. Ethel Foote and Alf. Corrie are most deserving of the applause they receive in their comedy interludes.

BARRY DOCK. — THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—His Sister's Honour is presented here this week by Mr. Evelyn A'Dell's company. Frank Stanley is well portrayed by Mr. Walter H. Wilson; and the acting of Miss A. E. A'Dell as Ivy Merion highly appreciated. Mr. Walter Steele scores as Sir Richard Redvers; Mr. Fred Garrett submits a good study of Dr. Godfrey; and in the hands of Mr. Willie Barrett Timothy Timid leaves nothing to be desired. Miss Lilian Rose as Dora Stanley is well received; Miss Maudie Vincent as Marie is very amusing; and other parts are adequately sustained by Messrs. Alf. Harry, John Leyland, E. Larkins, and Fred Stone. The piece is effectively staged, and the musical numbers prove very acceptable.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Carlton is starring here this week, when, in addition to his usual sleight-of-hand tricks and amusing banter, he introduces a most bewildering illusion entitled "The Mysterious Cross," which completely baffles the audience as to how it is done. One of the best and most novel musical acts seen locally for a long time is that of Taree, whose playing upon the mouth-organ and auto-harp is both melodious and clever. His reception is cordial in the extreme. A captivating and refined comedienne is Mayme Cannon, who has several capital songs in her répertoire; Harry Milton, besides being a capable Dutch comedian, proves himself a first-rate step dancer; the Della Sisters, the ladies in black, and the Sisters Bronson, duettists and dancers, each contribute acceptable turns. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux remain a fixed attraction.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The chief feature of this week's bill is supplied by Mr. Jake Friedman and company, who produce with every element of success their Dutch operetta, Happy Holland. Mr. Friedman himself is the life of the piece, his performance being highly diverting, and he is ably assisted by a company of nearly thirty artists. The acme of excellence is exhibited by the Faludy troupe of acrobats, their feats being simply marvellous; and the usual hit is made by Mr. Barney Armstrong, whose rendering of "Why do they call me an extra turn?" is inimitable. Miss Belle Braham, an accomplished songstress, is accorded an ovation nightly; and the Austral Trio, in their musical act; Miss Rosie Bartlett, comedienne; Mr. Jock Campbell, Scotch comedian; and the pictures complete.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmott and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The star here is Mr. Julian Rose, who appears to advantage in his amusing monologue, Levinsky at the Wedding, which creates laughter of the heartiest nature; Mr. Leoni Clarke returns to this city, and introduces his marvellously-trained cats, rats, monkeys, canaries, &c., in a wonderful performance; Mr. Geo. D'Albert, a clever comedian, quickly makes himself a favourite with his fine rendering of several songs; Harrigan and Holt uphold their reputation as smart comedians and dancers; the cycling feats of Mr. A. D. Robins are quite amazing; and Miss Nellie Farrell delights all with her rendering of Irish songs. Also here are the Haverleys, American song illustrators; Lozelle, in his speciality act; Howard and St. Clair, a capital comedy duo; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The leading position here is filled by Mr. Jack Lorimer, the famous Scotch comedian, whose inimitable rendering of several songs gained him a great reception on Monday. Miss Carlotta Levey, the pantomime favourite, sings several catchy chorus songs, which at once command success; the mimicry of Mr. Henry A. Moore is marvellous in its realism; Barton and Franklin introduce with much effect their musical act and dancing speciality; and Miss Bella White is a delightful comedienne and dancer. Also here are Miss Joan Deering, vocalist and violinist; Miss Stella Stahl, a neat comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—The animated pictures exhibited under the direction of Mr. Cecil Wilson include the famous filmograph The Black Princess, Uncle's Picnic, The Innkeeper's Nightmare, Father and Son, and Walter the Postman. The variety element is sustained by Mr. Harry Wright, who is always entertaining, his songs being encored nightly; and the Ramsey Trio, funny knockabout comedians, their sketch, Birdie's Welcome, creating roars of laughter.

BILSTON.—AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Battersby.—The Imperial Pierrots provide a capital entertainment this week, concluding with a sketch, Matrimonial Bliss.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Closed for the week. Winter season commences on Bank Holiday.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—A leading attraction here is Miss Victoria Monks, the charming and accomplished comedienne, who is fulfilling a first engagement here with the greatest possible success. Another excellent turn is that of Mr. George French, whose abilities as a clever and versatile comedian command general recognition; Cosgrove and Burns, very entertaining vaudeville artists, are prominent favourites, and the Ten Union Jack Boys (the Nautical Nightingales), Mr. W. B. Roly (comedian), Mr. Steve Bartle (concertina soloist and vocalist), Mr. Harry Vardon (a smart ventriloquist), and Brown's Royal Bioscope are also included in a liberal programme.

Olympian Gardens, Rock Ferry.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Edwin Adeler.—A brisk performance of The Saucy Arethusa introduces Mr. Dick Tubb (comedian), Miss Elaine Reed (soprano), Miss Jessie Buckle (comedienne), Mr. Bertram Noel (comedian), Mr. Cecil Warwick (tenor), Miss Mabel Danby (comedienne), Mr. J. W. Hughes (bass), Mr. Norman B. Osborne (ventriloquist), and Kemsley Scott-Barrie (the Merry Widow). On Wednesday the Follies in New Ideas constituted a strong attraction.

BIRMINGHAM. — Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo. — Monte Cristo, adapted and enacted by Mr. Junius Booth, has obtained full houses here. Besides the graphic and inspiring performance of Mr. Booth in the title-rôle, there is some excellent acting all round. Mr. Kendrew Milson gives a capital impression of M. Nortier; Mr. A. Bowerman acts well as Baron Danglars; Mr. E. Coates takes his opportunities in full as the Count de Morcref; Mr. C. W. Crowe is at home as M. Villefort; Mr. Walter Long is received with much favour as Albert de Morcref; and Miss Conyers Radcliffe's portrayal of Mercedes has a charm that is all its own. Mr. Percy Braithwaite creates an agreeable diversion as Caderousse; and Miss Alice West is very efficient as La Caronte. Mr. Fred Martin makes an effective Abbe Ferrara.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Great Vaudeville and Universal Animated Picture Company is now on its last week, and presents—Will Euston, the popular coster and actor-vocalist; James Irwin, the clever boy singer; Busset and Chandos, in an entertaining pierrot sketch entitled The Rivals; and a capital selection of pictures, including The Bewitched Son-in-Law, Blue-Beard, Dauber's Inheritance, Le Las Ricochet, The Haunted House, Enchanted Glasses, Institute of Beauty, Honourable Ways, Shipowner's Daughter, Eight Months Away from France, and The Student's Jokes.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake.—Wedded to Crime, presented by Mr. Ernest Chesney, proves a big attraction here. Miss Florence Lillwood scores as the wife, Lizzie Medwin, her portrayal gaining general admiration for its various graces; Mr. Edward H. Hobart gives a clever rendering of the husband's part, Harold Hartree, known as Medwin; Mr. Ernest Chesney brings out the rôle of the swell mobsman, Crayle, with great effect; Mr. Vyvian Thomas is satisfactory as Johnny Dyce Morris; and Messrs. Walter Dale and Dudley Walton play the two apprentices smartly; Mr. Arthur Roberts succeeding as the detective. Miss Kitty Russell acts in a pleasing style as Bessie Goodluck; Miss Lizzie Deane is prominent as Mar; Miss Maud Arnold is very successful in her portrayal of Kate; Mr. Leonard Aardale elicits great applause for his vigorous acting as Harry; and the Misses Marie Grace and Mabel Lamont complete the cast with their clever presentments of, respectively, Lady Gwendoline and Linda.

Palace Theatre, Bordesley.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—A Lion's Heart has made a very strong impression here, with Mr. Joseph Bebb's company. Mr. Henry Bedford's powerful acting as Rizardo kindles tremendous enthusiasm; Miss Ada Oakley, both as the wife and daughter, shows ability and charm; Mr. Stephen Scanlan gives the necessary "sting" to the part of the rascally Dobre; Mr. Leonard Booker does finely as Dick Lorimore; Mr. Archie Helsby is nothing lacking as de Villefort; Mr. H. G. Brandon displays great merit as Jack Bealey; Miss Florence Barnes is a worthy representative of Bessie; Mr. Edward Lowrie's clever humours pervade the play as Timothy Puggs and Chamboran; and an extensive company support. The play is well-mounted.

Grand Theatre of Varieties.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—A return visit of Frank and Jen Latona obtained a hearty welcome; Fred Edwards and his company present a really smart sketch, The Kleptomaniacs, and the Ten Loonies appear in their musical extravaganza, Dotty, which is artistically mounted. Nell Emeral, Carrie Laurie's Juveniles, Johnson and Bert, Mirsky Frank Couch and Noland Noble complete the bill.

Empire Palace.—Resident Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—George Lashwood has had a big reception here, his songs being repeatedly encored; the Provenies are an exceedingly clever troupe of lady trick cyclists; Harry Tate's company is here again, in Motoring; Harry M. Hemsley is particularly good as a child impersonator and caricaturist; the Ten Dixie Girls sing and dance themselves into favour in their sketch, The Silver Coon; and Arthur Jefferson's company presents a comedy sketch, Home from the Honeymoon. Leonie Dixon, Walter Wade, and the Lombards add to the success of the evening.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Another long and entertaining programme is headed by Cornalla and Eddie, whose clever juggling and tumbling, combined with humour, is highly appreciated; Diana Hope and company have a dramatic sketch, Her Good Name; Herbert Clifton gives good imitations of popular artists; and the Derrington Family are daring in their trick cycling act; Carrie Laurie's Miniature Comedy company, in The Belles of the Kitchen, are entertaining. Jane Eyre, the Three Sisters Silcott, Kathleen Cogan, Gicardo and Geoffreys, and Benson complete the programme.

Gaiety Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles Owen.—The principal attraction here is Chas. Baldwin's company, in the amusing sketch, The Bank Clerks; another capital sketch is The Dinner Hour, presented by Ted Karno and company; the Calcotts have a good musical entertainment; Mlle. Jetta is exceedingly smart on the slack wire; Craig, Rose, and Craig are expert gymnasts, and Blake and Granby, and Josh Dixon are responsible for some comedy.

BLACKBURN.—Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—A capital programme is provided here by the Six Brothers Luck in two pantomime sketches, The Hermit and Liftem's, Ltd; W. G. Wesley, comedian; Ethel Sheffer, illustrated songstress; Les Belles Americaines, dancers; Irene and Morton, comedy artists; and Dunn and Reano, in a speciality act.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Mr. Sydney Spenser's company are appearing here in My Sweetheart.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Baron H. Harriss's Prince of Pilsen is paying another visit here this week. Mr. Hairy Kilburn contributes a very humorous portrayal of Hans Wagner, and Mr. Leslie Owen is seen to advantage in the title-rôle. The singing and acting of Miss Sophie Harriss, who again represents Mrs. Maddison Croker, is exceedingly clever and pleasing, whilst Miss Nellie Lomas as Nellie Wagner and Miss Mabel Dent as Sidonie perform their allotted parts with credit. There is a strong and capable chorus, and the scenery and costumes are on an elaborate scale.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is creating an excellent impression here this week with Diana of Dobson's. All the characters are in experienced hands, and the production is entirely successful. Miss Emelie Polini plays Diana Massingberd with lifelike fidelity; Miss Daisy England gives a capital account of Miss Pringle; and Miss Gwynneth Galton very cleverly handles the part of Mrs. Cantelupe. Mr. Edward Vaughan as Capt. Bretherton and Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce as Sir Jabez Grinlay strike exactly the right note. Other minor parts are in very capable hands.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—The principal turn here this week is that of Mr. Hymack, the excellent comedian and change artist, who is accorded a big reception nightly; Dan Crawley continues his engagement for a second week, and merits the appreciation he receives. The famous Craggs appear with great success in a sketch, and the Trapnell Family evoke loud applause by their clever acrobatic feats. The efforts of David Poole, ventriloquist, Lillie Lassah, comedienne, Fred Hastings, comedian, Smarte Bros., acrobats, Tambo and Tambo, tambourine spinners, and Jack and Evelyn, entertainers, are also well received. Vernon's Imperial Bioscope continues to show the latest pictures.

Hippodrome.—Manageress, Mrs. Fioni.—The pictures are still the big feature here. The variety company engaged this week includes Will Doran and Co., in a sketch; Bros. Obo, comedians; and Arthur Astill, the whistling mimic.

BOLTON. — Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—A Warning to Women is on a return visit here, and is being presented by Mr. C. Watson Mill's company. The drama is well staged. The part of Moira Kennion, the unhappy heroine, is treated with considerable ability by Miss Lilian Herries; Mr. Leonard Laurance ably filling the part of Dr. Marcus Dread. All the other characters in the play are in good hands.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—An excellent variety programme is submitted here this week, the turns including Francini, Olloms, and Page, acrobats, equilibrists, tumblers, and jugglers; Bessie Willow, burlesque actress and vocalist; Dunningarto, sleight-of-hand king; the Sages (Will and Jenny), comedy burlesque artists; Helen Charles, pianist, mimic, and siffleuse; Francis and Alfred, jugglers, &c.; Harry Morris, character comedian; Alpho, ventriloquial college boy; Gorman's Juveniles in a scena, The Waif; and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

BOOTLE. — Muncaster Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Wilmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The stock company is this week playing the sensational drama Through the World, the principal characters being played by Messrs. Albert Sember, Stanley S. Gordon, Alfred D. Adams, Tom H. Solly, Cyril Grier, Alfred Grenville, and Misses Nina Vaughton, Kathleen Magee, and Effie Macintosh.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Ball.—Clarice Mayne, comedienne and mimic, with her clever impersonations of celebrated artists, is much appreciated; Peggie Lennie and Walter Hast gave a poetic fantasy, entitled The Sea Nymph, the beginning of the week, there being a change the latter part, when they are producing a new and romantic Hebrew fantasy, entitled The Oracle. Walton and Lester, comedians, are responsible for great merriment; a pretty scene is provided by A-Ba-Be's picture postcards, a series of tableaux that are warmly applauded; Constance Mori dances neatly, and her songs are well rendered; Gladys Mavins, the Canadian girl, wins general admiration, her quickness of action being extremely clever; Harry Webber, Hebrew character comedian, is good; and Arthur Woodville, dancer and vocal comedian, is appreciated. The Hippo pictures conclude.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison commenced their tour with Brewster's Millions here on Monday. The play is magnificently staged, and the yacht scene, specially built by Mr. Ballard, master carpenter Hicks's Theatre, evoked tumultuous applause, the curtain having to be raised five times at the close of the act, while at the close of the performance the audience would not be satisfied until Mr. Hutchison had delivered a speech. This popular actor is at his best in the rôle of Monty Brewster, and threw himself with all his heart into his task, which is a heavy one; Miss Cicely Stuckey is charming as Peggy, depicting the varying moods of a young girl cleverly; Miss Violet Ley is easy and stately as Mrs. Dan de Mille; Miss Francis Davey scores her points well in the character of Janice, a strong-minded woman; and as Trixie Clayton Miss Sybil Walsh is decidedly good. Strong support is given by Mr. Cyril Rawdon as Charlie Harrison, Mr. Robert Forsythe as Mr. Grant, and Mr. Henry Hampson as Archie Golding. The production reflects the greatest credit upon Mr. Cyril Rawdon for the manner in which he has overcome the many difficulties there are when staging such a play in a provincial theatre.

BRADFORD.—Prince's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—The Love of the Princess, the latest romantic play by Mr. C. Watson Mill, was presented for the first time here on Monday by the T. Edward Ward company, who gave a very capable representation of the story dealing with the plotting and intrigue associated with the inner life of a modern Court. The scenic effects are very fine, and the costumes are magnificent. The confirmed gambler, Prince Conrad Ramona of Uldersburg, the dupe of thieves and conspirators, is a part which fits Mr. Wilson Coleman finely, and he is admirably supported by Miss Ward, who is earnest in her acting as the persecuted Princess Idalia; Conrad's sister, Lady Irena, is prettily played by Miss Nellie Garside; Mr. E. H. Dobell's representation of the attenuated and profligate King Josef of Ilarnia is a well-studied and convincing performance; as the traitor, Count Nicholas Danillo, Mr. Ernest E. Imeson is effective; and Mr. George Antley, with some humour, plays his friend, the wealthy parvenue, Duke Scarfe; Mr. Beckett Bould is good as Lieut. Orlans; Mr. Graham Winsford is manly in utterance and bearing as Lieut. Zaroff, the King's Messenger; Mr. Charles Herberte plays the unsympathetic Prince Regent of Narava acceptably; Mr. Edgar Morgan humorously fills the part of Conrad's faithful servant, Boris; and Miss Helen Elmar wins sympathy in the small part of Ilarina's unhappy Queen Constantia.

The Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—In their distinct creation The Palace of Orpheus those clever and versatile instrumentalists, the Elliott-Savonas, are again delighting patrons here; Arthur Lennard, the popular character vocalist, is received with abundant favour in his descriptive songs; Thorpe and company please greatly with their clever little sketch, My Burglar; J. W. Rickaby is amusing with his burlesque songs and patter; trick cycling of a clever and daring character is accomplished by the Daunton Show Troupe; Fred Curran has some funny songs and a quaint style, and the excellent programme also includes acceptable contributions by the Sisters St. Julian, duettists and dancers, Daisy Martell, comedienne, and the Bioscope.

Palace Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Peter Gotz, the famed light-weight wrestler, is here this week, and much excitement marks his bouts with all comers nightly. In their nautical creation, She Loved a Sailor, the Walcots are successful; approbation greets the turn by the Twin Sisters Edwardes, vocalists, &c.; Charles Penrose submits a good comedy turn, and Gracie Hunt, comedienne, is received with favour. In their comedy sketch, Coster and Dude, Fyne and Hurley again prove amusing; Flo Burnett, vocalist, is a distinct success, her songs eliciting hearty encores; in a musical comedy act Ross and Grayson are very funny, and elicit hearty laughter, and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are interesting features of the good programme.

BRIDLINGTON.—Royal Princes' Parade.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Crowded audiences are the rule at Mr. Norfolk Megone's promenade concerts here. Miss Leonora Sparks, prima donna from the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, enraptures the audience by her superb voice. In the Grand Pavilion the extra attraction this week is Messrs. Chester and Lee's Marionettes, a very clever show. Mr. Harry Randall, that clever comedian of Drury Lane fame, makes his first appearance before a Bridlington audience this week in some of his latest songs. The Loyal Dominion animated pictures are very amusing this week, especially a new one, The Unseasonable Pickpocket, which is one of the greatest marvels of animated photography Mr. Will Emmerson has presented here.

New Spa and Gardens.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Herr Simon Wurm and the Viennese Band are giving some of their choicest programmes here, Mr. Maurice's piano solos being especially delightful. Miss Gertrude Bloomfield, the vocalist for the week, quickly established herself in favour by her sweet soprano. Mr. Surrie Lindon and his vaudeville entertainers are appearing twice daily under the glass dome. The great features of the week are the Venetian Carnival and Battle of Confetti, and Brock's great show of daylight fireworks. Animated pictures are given in the open air, being projected with wonderful effect on the end of the Opera House.

New Spa Opera House.—Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The summer theatrical season here was inaugurated on the 23rd ult., when Mr. Tunbridge gave his patrons a great treat in bringing before them Mrs. T. Greenwood-Croft's talented company in that finely-written play The Idler. Mr. C. C. Corri's company, under the direction of Mr. Haldane Crichton, opened here on Monday with The Dandy Fifth. Mr. Jack Crichton makes the most of his opportunities as Trooper Brown, and with Miss Nora Moira is responsible for most of the fun. Miss Pauline Hague is charming as Kate, her songs being beautifully rendered; Mr. Percy Baverstock is an amusing Colonel; Mr. J. Edward Fraser is very successful as Dick Darvill; Geo. Beverley as the Irish sergeant is very funny; and Miss Maud Nichols makes the most of her part as the Colonel's sister.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—On Monday Mr. Ernest Carpenter's stock company entered upon the last week of their engagement here and gave a performance of The Colleen Bawn. Mr. Ronald Adair achieved distinct success as Hardress Cregan; Mr. Charles A. Preece displayed able acting and singing as Myles Na Coppaleen; Mr. Villiers Stanley's Danny Mann and Mr. Ellis J. Preston's Squire Corrigan were admirably played; Mr. Danell Greene was effective as Kyrle Daly; and Mr. H. C. Lanceley did well as Father Tom; Miss Kathleen Russell made a charming Ann Chute; Miss Amy Vennimore was successful as Mrs. Cregan; Miss Lucy Murray was a pleasing Eily O'Connor; and Miss Emmie Barton gave a capital representation of Sheelah. The drama was preceded by Good for Nothing Nan.

Alhambra.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—Marie Lloyd wins very enthusiastic applause for her delightfully rendered songs; Joe O'Gorman's humorous songs and stories are warmly appreciated; Duncan and Godfrey's vocal efforts in a coster romance are well received; the Brothers O'Gorman are effective in song and dance; Florence Yaymen was admirable in burlesquing coon songs; Edward Rutland is a capital comedian; Mabel Le Roy and Ella Lane are able comediennes; and the Alhambrascope Pictures are, as usual, highly interesting and amusing.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Arthur Prince wins enthusiastic applause for his clever ventriloquial sketch; Tom Costello, comedian, is as popular as ever; Ted E. Box gives capital whistling imitations of birds and animals; Ida Rene is a great success in her song, "The Devil"; Dolly Harmer is successful with her popular choruses; the Tafanos, comic serenaders, are cordially received; Barrington gives a clever turn on the pianoforte; Kurkamp, the singing musical conductor, is effective; Harry Roxbury and company appear with marked success in The Prince of Monte Carlo; while Arthur Gallimore's trio of comedy artists and Charles Carr, dancer, also win warm appreciation.

West Pier.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Miss Hornlman's company opened here on Monday with Candida. Mr. B. Iden Payne gave a fine impersonation of Eugene Marchbanks; Miss Mary Price Owen was a pleasing Candida; Mr. Henry Austin was manly as the Rev. James Morell; Miss Ada King was distinctly effective as a lady typist; Mr. Edward Landor as Candida's father and Mr. Basil Dean as the Curate were well placed. The programme for the week also includes Widowers' Houses.

Palace Pier Theatre.—The Serious Family, or Butterflies and Beetles occupies the boards here this week. Mr. J. E. Cowell gives a capital representation of Captain Murphy Maguire; Mr. J. R. Cunningham is effective as Charles Torrens; Mr. Martin Francis and Miss Alice Murray are well suited as Aminadab Sleek, M.P., and Lady Sowerby Creamly respectively; Miss Maud Normanton is a capital Mrs. Ormsby Delmaine; and the remaining characters are ably represented.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs M. Barrasford; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Fred Bauer.—The animated pictures here are still very attractive. Foremost among them is The Blue Bird, comprising a series of fairy incidents. Other pleasing films include Hoist with his Own Petard, The Serpent's Tooth, and The Braggart. Mr. William Lenton contributes illustrated songs in good style.

Concert Hall, West Street.—The Royal Italian Circus opened its last week here on Monday. The engagement has proved highly attractive.

BRISTOL.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Geoffrey Langdon's Wife is the attraction this week, the drama being tastefully staged and well played by Mr. Fred C. Somerfield's company. Miss Cissie Bellamy and Miss Elsie Capell both act admirably their respective parts of Mary (Geoffrey Langdon's wife) and the Hon. Mrs. Sands. Mr. Paul Becket evinces power as Felix Beverley; Mr. Edward E Louis does well as Jack Stirling; Mr. Wilson Summers is seen to advantage as Geoffrey Langdon; Mr. W. E. Passmore gives a good portrayal of Colonel Mills; and the comic parts of Thomas and Sweet Nancy are capitally taken by Mr. Percy Brown and Miss Katie Lever.

Palace — Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Chung Ling Soo, the Chinese magician, heads the programme with his exceptionally clever act, several new illusions being introduced. Carozi and Keith do a good turn, in which humour and clever juggling are combined; Les Voces, operatic vocalists, sing acceptably; Martin Henderson, blind musician, is a skilful pianist and concertina player; Keegan and company amuse with their comedy and cycling act; Martine and Son please with illustrated songs; Arthur Albert, descriptive vocalist, is appreciated; Jessie Lee is a pleasing vocalist; and the Brothers Dean score with their simultaneous dancing, whistling, &c. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

Empire. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Morritt, humorist, heads the bill, and is much applauded for his clever turn; Mabel Thorne, comedienne, has some good songs, and is deservedly appreciated; Georgette Thierry and company score with the dramatic sketch A Daughter of the Revolution; Charles Sloman, comedian, obtains applause; Lily Eyton, character comedienne, does a pleasing turn; Mlle. Jenny's Persian-Angora cats and monkeys are admirably trained; and the Sisters Clifton are smart duettists and skipping-rope dancers. Animated pictures conclude.

BURNLEY.—Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The best of houses are here greeting the turns which make up a most admirable programme. Capt. Max Gruber and Miss Adelina, with their elephant, horse, and pony, head the list. The animals are wonderfully well trained, and receive unstinted applause. Lady Mansell and her juveniles earn much approbation; and original is the turn of Dandy George Duo, including smart contortions and a cleverly-trained dog. The Vettes Bros. introduce a pleasing item, in which acrobatic skill is displayed; and Ted Percival, baritone, sings well; Lily Lonsdale pleases greatly with "My little Deutcher girl," and Ernie Myers causes much laughter with his song and patter; J. Etherington, actor-vocalist, is encored; and Only a Dog is the picture shown by the Empire Theatroscope.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Genuine laughter-makers are the Gothams, in harmonised selections, interspersed by humour; skilful and pleasing acrobatic work is done by the Pasquali Bros.; the Violas give a clever exhibition of thought-reading; and John Donald, in "A Scottish Exile's Dream," sings well, and is greatly appreciated; Natalie and Diana perform a smart trapeze turn; Matthews and Brown, coloured comedians, are excellent dancers; and Hartley Dyson, a local baritone, sings well. Victor Travers is a laughable comedian, with capital legmania business; Professor Norton performs some attractive sleight of hand feats; and the bill is closed with good films by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

BURY (Lancs.).—Circus of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The animated pictures are still proving very popular here. The most appreciated are Scottish Highlands, Baby's Playmate, Colonel's Orderly, Law of Honour, and Little Sammy's Sucker. The variety turns are supplied by Aidee Mellor, vocalist, and T. C. Edwards, baritone.

BUXTON. — Opera House. — Proprietors, The Buxton Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—For this week we have Mr. Allan Wilkie and his excellent company in a round of Shakespearean and old English plays. On Monday evening The Merchant of Venice was performed, Mr. Allan Wilkie giving an excellent embodiment of the Jew. Mr. Alexander Marsh played excellently as Bassanio; and Mr. John Paley was a capable Antonio. Mr. Houston Meharry quite upheld the dignity of the Duke of Venice; and Mr. Frank Royde was excellent in every way as Gratiano. Mr. Ivor Barnard was the Salanio, Mr. Frank Leach Salarino, and Mr. Sinclair Neill Prince of Morocco. Miss Mildred Surrey played admirably as Nerissa; and Miss Maud Gill was a piquant Jessica. Miss Carrie Baillie was an irresistible Portia; and the minor parts are all capitally acted. The play is well staged. Included in the week's programme are As You Like It, Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, School for Scandal, and She Stoops to Conquer.

CARDIFF. — Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—Mr. John Lawson is appearing this week in a répertoire of sketches, and presented on Monday the popular piece Humanity. Mr. Lawson is supported by several talented artists, and makes a great success. Pigs in Clover, King's Minister, and The Monkey's Paw are other pieces this versatile actor puts on during the week. Two smart comedy artists are Kent and Keith, who keep the audience in roars of laughter by their skilful entertainment; a novel act is that provided by La Belle Titcomb, a fair Parisienne, who has a valuable assistant in her beautiful and well-trained stallion Ali; the Narow Bros. create a great impression with their trick cycling and capital knockabout business; while the skilfully-managed illusion performed by Cussac-Talma and Mlle. de Forge is one of the smartest things in that line; Lee Tung Fi is a Chinaman who posseses a first-rate voice; and another gifted vocalist is Hugh Barclay, who renders "The Boys of the Old Brigade" in fine style. The Russian dancing of Wania proves interesting; and a pleasing singer is Blanche Vincent, who appears in a Spanish costumed song. The Bioscope completes an all-round excellent programme.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—At the head of a specially attractive bill of fare this week are the Geraldos, club jugglers and hoop manipulators, whose act is both clever and amusing. Wilson Hallett gains much approbation for his extraordinary imitations of little children; a breezy item is provided by the Bartholomew Girls, who contribute a couple of "goey" songs; and Lawrence Barclay maintains his reputation as a comedian of considerable merit. Alfonso, feet equilibrist; Rose Tilley, burlesque actress; Edie Coolville, a piquant comedienne and dancer; Mable la Blanche, comedienne, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux with fine pictures complete the programme.

CARLISLE.—H.M. Theatre.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mr. R. Stewart M'Kind; Manager. Mr. Thos. Courtice.—After having been closed for three weeks the theatre was reopened on Monday night, and a house crowded in every part gave a hearty welcome to Mr. Frank Lindo's company, which appeared in the drama Home, Sweet Home. During the interval the house has been thoroughly cleaned and redecorated, and with its prevailing tints of deep crimson and cream presents a particularly smart appearance. Mr. Frank Lindo, the author and producer of the piece, appears as the hero, Stephen Armitage, and gives a sound and powerful performance, which met with well-deserved appreciation. Miss Marion Wakeford as the heroine has a part which suits her admirably, and her acting throughout was artistic; Mr. H. Kenny as the Hon. Percy and Mr. Lionel Ray as Lord Silvermore were amusing; and Messrs. Lawrence Doyle, Archer Brown, and Helsby Wright gave creditable performances. Miss Hetty Webster made an imposing Lady Somerton; and Sybil Fay, a music-hall artist, was enacted with good taste by Miss Maude Elliott. Miss Minnie Warden, too, was quite a success as little Dora. The scenery and mounting were particularly good, and the whole performance met with a most favourable reception.

The Palace. — Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—The top of the bill is occupied by Blake and Amber, who give a distinctly novel and clever turn; the Three Royal Dreadnoughts give a marvellous exhibition of rifle-shooting, the accuracy and skill displayed amazing and delighting the audience; Conan and Doyle, old favourites here, crack wheezes in their own inimitable style and dance as nimbly as ever; Miss Ethel Dunford has good songs, which she sings with nice effect. One of the best dancers seen here for some time is Herbert La Martine; originality and cleverness marked his efforts, and his reception was most enthusiastic. The Pepiscope shows some interesting pictures.

CASTLEFORD.—Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—An entirely new series of pictures is introduced here this week by the Loyal Dominion Co., and are, as usual, proving a powerful attraction. At intervals Miss Frances Haskoll, with illustrated songs, sings "The Boys of the Brigade" and "Stay in your own backyard" in a pleasing manner.

CHATHAM. — Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Here we have the Davenports, a pair of neat conjurers; Dalino and Stream, comedians and dancers; Wal Robbins, who entertains in his old familiar way; Happy Attwood, with comic song and parody; Will Driscoll, swell comedian and dancer, who is renewing his acquaintance with local pleasure-seekers; and screams of laughter follow the results of using the Depilatory Powder as depicted by means of Lacey's Erascope; while special mention must be made of the thrilling American sketch The Girl and the Tough, which is enacted in realistic style by Miss Rosie Dane, Mr. Leslie Tyler, and Mr. John G. Brandon.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. E. G. Woodhouse.—Claude Feldman's Beau Ideal Troupe of Prize Juveniles top the bill here, and gain many well-deserved encores for their singing and dancing. Barney Vox has some very ready dialogue in his ventriloquial act, Fun Outside Cassidy's Cabin; Haldane and Bright are indeed an entertaining couple; Miss Daisy Fowle successfully deputises for Miss Kate Trail; also in the bill are George Payne, eccentric comedian; Wright and Elton, in their speciality, The Lady Artiste; Maude Beaumont, burlesque actress; and pictures by the Edisonograph form an entertaining finale to the show.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre. — Proprietors, Messers. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—After a vacation of three weeks, this house re-opened on Monday with a variety programme. Green and Wood create roars of laughter in their comedy acrobatic act; Jack E. Dawe, character comedian, is highly successful; Vandenoff, the lightning artist, turns out several oil paintings in a few seconds; Master May, boy vocalist, sings pleasingly "Love me and the world is mine"; Frank Haskoll appears in songs at the piano; and others in the bill are Alice and Bob Melrose, comedy duo; Phyllis Seymour, soubrette; the Eeduns; and Vernon's Bioscope.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—Operetta House.—Lessee, Mr. W. F. Jury; Manager, Mr. Dudley Harcourt.—The great feature of the picture entertainment here is a grand film of the Franco-British Exhibition and the great Marathon Race. The film is one of the finest ever seen, and the hall is crowded nightly. Other interesting films are shown, including A Wet Day, Matrimonial Stages, Silver King, Wild Coast of Cornwall, &c. Mr. J. Hortin's illustrated songs are still a popular item in the entertainment.

Pier Pavilion.—Lessee, Mr. Harold Montague; Business-Manager, Mr. Ivor G. Sparke.—Harold Montague and his Vagabonds have returned here, and are attracting good audiences by the excellent entertainments they provide.

West Cliff Gardens.—Proprietors, Messrs. Graham Russell and Bentley.—In addition to the stock company, Miss Emily Hayes, contralto; Mr. Walter Montague, raconteur and musical crank; and Mr. P. Gorton Young, baritone and campanologist, are appearing here. The entertainment is of the usual high standard, and the audiences are large and appreciative.

COLCHESTER. — Hippodrome.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The top line this week is a satirical sketch entitled The Village Fire Brigade, billed as an importation from the States. Campbell and Barber prove a great turn in a cycle act which is brimful of cleverness and humorous episodes; Tom Hearn juggles in his own well-known style, and is accorded a hearty reception; Stuart and Stuart, comedy duo, are very entertaining; whilst another good pair are Kloof and Ramsey, in an act of musical eccentricities. Billy Hobbs, billed as an American comedian, elicits applause for his strikingly funny yarns; and the Sisters McKay shine as duettists and dancers, and look very smart in their military uniforms.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—Mr. F. Forbes-Robertson and Miss Avice Meredith with a capital company are representing A Play Without a Name, of which a full account was given in our last issue. A prize of three guineas is offered to any member of the audience for an appropriate title.

Hippodrome Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry.—Heading the bill is Charcot with his automatic man; John Henderson and company appear in a drama entitled The Land of the West, which is heartily received; the Gascoignes, in a comedy juggling and balancing act; the Four Delewares, in a novel act entitled Revels in a Billiard Saloon; the Marvellous Howards, with an exhibition of mental telepathy; Le-Nora Walker, comedienne and dancer; and Walker and May, America's coloured comedians and dancers, also contribute to the programme.

CROYDON.—Hippodrome and New Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Jackson Hayes; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Samuel James and Newman Maurice.—A capital programme is provided here this week. Jack Goldswain, boxer, heads the list, and several interesting bouts are performed; some good wrestling is exhibited by Alf. Hewett; Bessie Nielson is a talented comedienne and dancer; Marie Tilley proves herself a capable low-comedy artist, and dances excellently; Chas. Wren, facial artist, is very amusing; Sadie Southern's illustrated songs are well rendered; the Brothers Glenn produce a comedy sketch, Kaos in a Kafé; and the pictures shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux call for special mention.

DARLINGTON.—New Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—The programme is of excellent quality and is drawing very good houses. Mr. Charles Fisher's Pocket Opera Company is a most enjoyable item; Kelly and Agnes, comedy couple, are very entertaining, and Tony Imeson, assisted by Dave Hornby, presents the sketch The Ragman at the Piano, which serves as a medium for some clever songs and patter. The bill also includes J. Shingleton, singing collier; Estrella, barefoot dancer; Otto and Olga, comedy musical experts; Bert Kemble, comedian; and the Pepiscope pictures.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Langley Wyatt.—The premier item on the bill this week is Leo Dryden, who introduces two musical playlets in which his singing and acting are a pronounced success. The programme also includes Kelly and Ashby, whose knockabout sketch, entitled Fun in a Billiard Room, is both novel and clever; the Primrose Four, male vocalists, are heard to distinct advantage in several tuneful songs; the Florodoras are three charming comediennes, and are cordially received; the Godfreys cause much merriment as comedy musicians; Chas. Lestree is a praiseworthy juggler; Fields and Lewis are clever burlesque artists; and the Rinders are successful as pictorial songsters. The Bioscope, as usual, does not lose any of its interest.

Palace.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company is here in the drama A Secret Wedding. In the rôle of Edgar Hartington Mr. Stanley Carlton acquits himself very creditably; Grace Edmondson is commendably enacted by Miss Rubie Maude, a talented young actress; Mr. Marshall Meade as Herbert Hartington makes a typical villain; Mr. Seymour Perry as Billy Barton, and Miss Emily Lewis as Grace cause much amusement in their respective characters; and the remaining parts are in good hands.

DEVONPORT.—Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Miss Frances Deleval presents her specially selected company in Love's Golden Dream, and does very good business, the piece abounding in West-country scenes and incident. Miss Delaval impersonates Margery, and therein proves herself an actress of pronounced ability; Mr. Percy Warram scores by his manly presentation of Captain Jack Darrell; other noticeable impersonations are those of Messrs. E. Crogan, L. Stokes, Thorne Tracey, and Misses Jennie Bostock and Irene Tracey.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Resident-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's chief provincial company opened on Monday in Mrs. Ponderbury's Past at the Grand Theatre this week. Mr. George Mudie, a comedian of resource and experience, acts admirably as Mr. Ponderbury; Miss Florrie Wix is chic as Mme. Modjeski, and Miss Stalman makes an impressive Mrs. Ponderbury. The mise-en-scene was all that could be desired, and the other characters were well interpreted. The play was preceded by the one act comedy, His Landlady, of which Mr. George Mudie is the author. It was well received.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—A pretty and idyllic musical comedy, The Mimosa Maid, is attracting crowded audiences to this beautiful playhouse. Miss Marie Studholme, of picture postcard fame, is the bright particular star. The company have been well selected. Mr. Austen Huegon, part author, has seen to the production personally. The music is delightful.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, the Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun., Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—At this place of amusement a most seductive programme is presented, with the result that crowded houses are the result of the management's enterprise. Mr. Ernest Shand is a host in himself. Holiday crowds want to laugh, and he compels them to do so. Miss Lola Paley is a charming comedienne; Mr. Tom Stuart is a clever actor and mimic; Miss Agnes Molteno's new vocal scena "An Old Time Story," has quite caught on; Miss Minnie Kaufman is a daring trick cyclist. Then in addition Fred Maitland is a comedian of parts; Chinko, the boy juggler, requires some beating; Vernon's Bioscope reproduces the trend of the world's march. In fact, at the Palace a programme is provided which suits all idiosyncrasies when one remembers that dancing to the melodious strains of Mr. Harry Wood's orchestra is thrown in.

Other amusements in Douglas are Derby Castle, with Miss Florrie Ford and Mr. Jock Whiteford as star turns; Buxton's Pierrots and Tea Village on the Promenade; Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's comedians on Onchan Head; Mr. Fred Connor's Hippodrome; all drawing crowded houses.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The Hippodrome season entered on its last week here on Monday night, when an exceptionally strong programme was presented to a full house. Fragson, who styles himself the "Entente Cordiale Comedian," met with an enthusiastic reception; another excellent item of the programme is the illusion act of Mlle. Von Etta, and Will Douglas and his five Jolly Bakers are both clever and amusing; the Tossing Austins, American jugglers and dancers, are recalled nightly; Captain Elliss in his comedy singing act scores a decided success; the "Mysterious Mahatma," in her mystifying performance, causes quite a sensation; the Twelve Palace Girls are still to the fore; Pat Lynch submits good dancing; and the Royal Pictures are a feature of the entertainment.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. S. Pearse; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Hereford Jones.—The excellent display of animated pictures which are attracting appreciative audiences here include: A Child's Revenge, The Miser's Daughter, The Witch's Cane, The Stolen Purse, A Race for a Husband, The Phantom Guard, Flowers for Mother, The Detective, Me and My Two Pals, Scenes at the Zoo, &c.; and the variety programme is headed by Tom Wheatley in a smart ventriloquial turn, which has caught on immensely; Lo, La, and Jake, in a clever triple bar act, and the popular guide, Bob Pearson.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—This week we have Barton and Ashley in a humorous sketch entitled Adam the Second, and large audiences have been highly entertained; Andie Burns, in song, story, and dancing extraordinary, keeps the house highly amused; and Alda Martini, full of vivacity, is pleasing in song and dance; Signor and Mme. Borelli's pianoforte and vocal duets are a strong item of the programme, and their efforts are deservedly recognised; and Eva Daunton, a dainty soubrette, meets with a warm reception; Rhoda Paul, in new songs and scenery, gives a much appreciated turn; and Lena Verdi is a charming comedienne and dancer; Ed. H. Ford, "the Australian Sundowner," merits warm applause; Films, Ltd., are showing some interesting pictures, and the Empire Tournament completes a varied programme.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—An excellent bill of fare is headed here this week by Francis Gerard, whose marvellous feats of strength are loudly applauded; Lawson and Namon score a distinct success in their comedy cycling act; and very entertaining are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde in a speaking shadow act; Attilla Brothers, Olympian Gladiators, are clever, and are warmly received, and the old favourite Charley Robinson meets with a hearty reception nightly; some popular duets are charmingly rendered by Florence and Rose Showell, and Frank Whitely enhances his reputation as a comedian and dancer; Hess and Lisbon in their roller skating act provide an acceptable turn; and Lucy Coventry is an engaging comedienne and expert dancer; and the Bioscope is to the front with some capital pictures.

PAVILION (KINGSTOWN).—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—At this pleasant resort the change of company is attracting large audiences daily. Mr. J. H. Scotland, the possessor of a fine basso voice, sings several pleasing numbers, which elicit loud applause, and Miss Elsie Steadman submits an amusing turn which is greatly enjoyed; some popular tenor songs are well rendered by Mr. Austin Mahony, and Mr. Alf. Maynall is a comedian of more than ordinary merit. Others who add greatly to the success of the programme are Douglas MacLaren, Scottish comedian; Jack Macdermott, the favourite comique; and Frederick Arthur, in selections on the piano.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. G. A. James.—The following artists are appearing here this week:—Moneta and Ford, comedy duettists; Harry Dandy, comedian and dancer; Eva Searle, comedienne; Eric Thornber, coon vocalist; John Conley, eccentric comedian and dancer; and the Cinematograph.

EASTBOURNE.—PIER PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company is appearing here in The Belle of New York. Mr. Frank Lawton is the bright particular star, and as Blinkey Bill his clever work as siffleur, dancer, and manipulator of the bones makes him a warm favourite. Miss Florence Hersee as Mamie Clancy plays brightly and dances neatly; Mr. Arthur Ricketts returns as Ichabod Bronson, and he scores well with his songs; Mr. James A. Watts does capital work as Harry Bronson, his singing and dancing being of distinct merit; Mr. Jos. R. Tate causes much laughter as Von Pimpernick; Mr. William Jordan works hard as Doc. Snifkins, and Mr. Alec Godfrey is a good Kenneth Mugg; Miss Hebe Kneller sings and acts with much daintiness as Violet Grey; Miss Dorothy Dore is a sweetly sympathetic Fi-fi, who sings very prettily, and Miss Winnie Browne is a fascinating Cora Angelique, her dancing being graceful. The remaining parts are in able hands. The musical director is Mr. B. J. Patterson.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray, King, and Clark.—Mr. Leslie Faber and his company are appearing here this week in The Liars, and keenly interested audiences applaud enthusiastically, curtains being numerous at the end of each act. Miss Winifred Arthur Jones gives a delightfully natural and distinct performance as Lady Jessica; Miss Ethelwyn Arthur Jones, brightly frank and girlish, is an interesting Lady Rosamond; Miss Elizabeth Watson is an eminently satisfactory and effective Mrs. Crespin; Miss May Saker makes the most of her part as Dolly Coke; Miss Hilda Moore is an attractive, romantic Beatrice, and Miss Beatrice Ainley does her little well as Ferris. Mr. Leslie Faber, handsome and fascinating, plays the fine part of Sir Christopher Deering with great success; Mr. Lewis Willoughby, earnest and penetrating, does able work as Falkner; Mr. Frank Bickley is a decisive Gilbert Nepean, and Mr. Maurice Elvey a satisfactory George; Mr. Richard Neville plays with point and effect as Freddie; Mr. Jerrold Manville makes much of the rôle of Archibald Coke, and smaller parts are in good hands. The Manœuvres of Jane was to be played later in the week.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—At the head of the bill is Mr. Jake Freidman's company, which is appearing very successfully in the bright, condensed musical play Jack's the Lad. The singing is pleasant, the comedians funny, and the whole performance bright and taking. Les Rallis have an original and exciting turn in The Artist and the Monkey; Mr. Fred Hallam is a popular comedian; Miss Amy Elcock is very pleasing as a singer and dancer; Selby and Myers patter and dance effectively; Le Gros is an entertainer of merit; Edie Anderson is a comedienne and dancer who commands applause, and new pictures are shown.

EDINBURGH. — ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. William Mollison and company entered upon the closing week of their engagement with Rob Roy last Monday evening before an audience which crowded the house in every part. Mr. Ben Davies was in splendid voice, and his finished singing of several Scottish ballads evoked repeated encores; Mr. Mollison's fine performance of Bailie Nicol Jarvie and Mr. William Calvert's vigorous impersonation of the bold outlaw are of signal merit; while admirable work is done by Miss Kitty Brownless—an expressive singer—as Diana Vernon, Miss Evelyn McMay as Helen Macgregor, Mr. Whitford Kane as Rashleigh Osbaldistone—a really notable piece of acting—and Mr. R. B. Drysdale as the Dugal Cratur. The scenic effects are beautiful, and Mr. George Burnley, the musical conductor, deserves more than a passing word of praise for the skill with which he directs the orchestra.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—An old favourite in the person of Mr. Neil Kenyon headed this week's bill, and the popular artist's powers in compelling either tears or laughter by the pathos and mirth of his songs and stories were greeted on Monday evening with great acclaim. Owing to indisposition, Mr. Kenyon was unable to continue his engagement after the first night's performances; but the management fortunately secured the services of Mr. James A. Moran, a clever Scottish humorist, who during the remainder of the week supplied a most amusing and excellent entertainment. The quips and cranks of Alexandre and Hughes, combined with their admirable concertina playing, provide another very bright and enjoyable turn; and a very interesting exhibition of cycle riding, including some smart acrobatic work, is given by the Dunedin Troupe; while clever comedy marks the sketch given by Little Ganty and Madge May; and Mlle. Eldee appears in a series of illuminated posings, which are exceedingly effective. Mr. Fred Bowyer's powerful tabloid drama, The Little Stowaway, is successfully produced by Mr. Bertie Sheldon, with Miss Marjory Armstrong and Mr. John K. Walton in the leading rôles; the Norman and Leonard Trio contribute a pleasing musical sketch; and the Bioscope keeps well to the fore with a choice display of new films.

FLEETWOOD. — QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—A strong attraction here this week is Mr. Charles Constant's Florodora company. As Anthony Tweedlepunch Mr. Gus Danby keeps the house in a roar the whole time he is on the stage; Mr. Martin D. Pitt as Frank G. Abercoed uses his powerful voice to great advantage; Cyrus G. Gilfain has an able exponent in Mr. Jack Parker; Miss Daisy Lake as Dolores has a part which suits her immensely, and she takes full advantage of her opportunities; Miss Lillie Blythe as the scheming Lady Holyrood is exceptionally good, and is vociferously encored nightly for her "Tact" and "I've an inkling" songs. Other parts are well taken by Mr. Stanley Bartram, Miss Louie Danby, and Mr. Emlyn Davis. There is a strong chorus, and the piece is elaborately staged.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—The Loyal British Empire Animated Picture Company, under the direction of Mr. Thos. Robinson, are prolonging their season, and still drawing crowded houses. Included in this week's long list are The Brigands of Calabria, Black-Eyed Susan, The Kitchenmaid's Dream, and The Pirates. Several smart variety turns contribute to an excellent evening's entertainment.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Messrs. Taylor, Platt, and Trevor Lowe's company are here this week with You Never Can Tell and Arms and the Man. In the first named piece Miss Katherine Stuart as Mrs. Clandon gave a very graceful portrayal, her acting being exceedingly fine; Miss Gwladys Morris and Miss Clara Earle as the two sisters played well; Mr. Donald Calthorp scored a success as Philip Clandon; Mr. Leslie Hamer as Valentine was all that could be desired; Mr. F. Cremlin made a good Fergus Compton; Mr. Trevor Lowe was well placed as Finch McComas; and Mr. Charles Daly as the waiter gave a clever delineation, investing the part with considerable humour.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Gipsies and their Jester, under the direction of Mr. D'Arcy Clayton, are delighting large audiences here. As Dado the Jester Mr. Will Gane is received with tremendous applause, and with Miss Florence Crofts achieves a richly deserved triumph; Miss Dorothy Francis and Miss Inez du Buisson are general favourites; Mr. Walter Grigg sings well; and Mr. Edgar Berte is cordially received.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack Forsyth.—Percy Victor's wonderful dog minstrels top the bill here, and go through a most difficult performance; Mr. Arthur Blount is a smart patter comedian; Mr. Fred May is a humorist of ability; Miss Marie Ford is a chic comedienne and dancer; Miss Rosie Stevens is remarkably successful in characteristic dances; Vela, the tramp, gives a clever exhibition of rope walking; Mr. Vernon C. Booth, baritone, sings some fine songs; The Cedrics are a pair of comedy artists; Miss Barbara Ellison is a fine elocutionist, and takes part in a smart sketch entitled The House Next Door, assisted by Miss Rosie Stevens and Mr. Vernon C. Booth. Animated pictures conclude the entertainment.

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Edward Marris's company is paying a return visit with The Dandy Doctor, and is again meeting with the utmost approval. In the part of Brown, the millionaire, Mr. Owen Dacroy causes continual laughter by his perpetual drollery. Mr. Herbert Pearce is responsible for much hilarity as Colonel Pendred, and Mr. C. Burrunston Williams wins applause for his impersonation of Dr. Vandyke, while Mr. A. Leslie Martin is very amusing as Bertie Bolingbroke. Miss Florence Smithers has a congenial part in Jane, and throughout the performance infuses all the desirable vim into the part. Miss Mollie Wynne gives a fine impersonation of Ivy Pendred, her singing and acting securing well deserved applause. Minor parts are in good hands, and the chorus do excellent work.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—An excellent blend of comedy and drama is provided here this week by Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in An Abandoned Woman. Miss Ruth Zillwood takes the title-part, Ninon Malvoisin, and in appearance and acting is an ideal adventuress. The humorous scenes are much above the average, the credit being mainly due to Mr. Teddy Myles, who gives a very amusing portrayal of an Irish policeman; Mr. Herbert M. King bears himself in gentlemanly fashion as Captain Seaton; and as the injured wife Eleanor Miss Nellie Thorne-Hallam presents a pleasing picture; Mr. Victor Garnet-Vayne as Sammy and Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner as Sally do good service in the comic scenes; Robert Saunders is strongly represented by Mr. Norman B. Purnell, and due weight is given to the part of Sir Marmaduke Seaton by Mr. Frederick Hendry.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—George Formby is starring here, and this clever Lancashire comedian is going better than ever, his patter being particularly smart. An interesting turn is provided by the masked lady L'Incognita, who displays a voice of wonderful range in an English song and an operatic scena in French. Hawthorn and Burt are a clever couple of Hebrew comedians and eccentric dancers, and were accorded a very hearty reception. Bi-Bo-Be, on a variety of novel instruments gives an enjoyable musical turn; Harry Leybourn's impersonations of concert hall types are wonderfully clever; Master Edward Frisby is a popular young vocalist; Cissie Curlette takes well in her songs and imitations; and the Northern Troupe show their skill in some national dances. J. F. Ellision's company in The Art of Deception provide lots of fun, Shaun Glenville as the tramp being especially good.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Horace Wheatley tops the bill here, and in song and dance proves his popularity to be as great as ever. Fred Moule, E. D. Nicholls and company cause roars of laughter with their funny sketch, That Dreadful Detective. Some exceedingly smart dancing is given by Miss Enid Errol in a clever and amusing sketch, The Enchanted Vase, in which Chas. W. Anson and Caroline Fenton provide the comedy element. Jay Laurier is an excellent comedian, with many original touches; Winifred Ward as a male impersonator with several good songs made a decided hit; the Pickfords took well in a comedy duologue; Rosé Cambry has a smart "Merry Widow" song; and Dave Summerhill, Scotch comedian, proves popular. A very enjoyable musical turn is provided by the Elite Harmony Boys, as Messmates Ashore, and they were given a most enthusiastic reception.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good—Dainty Daisy Dormer tops the bill here, and this popular comedienne gets a hearty reception from her many admirers. Another strong favourite is Maude Mortimer, who comes provided with several very catchy songs. One of the best American turns seen here for years is that of Hill and Whitaker, singers and instrumentalists, the lady (Willettee Whitaker) being a comedienne of very special gifts, while the gentleman is a clever musician; their reception was most enthusiastic. Tom Leamore goes strong in his comedy business; and the patter and dancing of Ike and Will Scott was much enjoyed. Ted Curtis and his piccaninnies also prove highly popular; and hearty laughter is heard during the comedy sketch by Robins and Collier, The Lady and the Porter. George Langdon and Connie Laurie take well in their excerpts from famous plays, including The Silver King and The Bells; L. W. Harris is a light comedian with a good style; Wilman gives a clever musical turn; and Mons. and Mlle. Oretta show considerable skill in their equilibrist business.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—The principal turn is filled by Peter Bermingham, Scottish comedian, and his reception on the opening night was extremely cordial. The Sisters Cora, duettists, were also shown marked favour; and Anthony, comedy conjurer, amused the audience with his tricks. The other items included the sketch To New York for the Week-End, with the rolling deck of the steamer, in which Peter Bermingham and J. T. M'Millan appear; Sisters Ford, character duettists; Chas. Ulrick, barrel king; Daly and O'Brien, comedy dancers and singers; Langslow, rifle expert; Three Coopers, harmonising vocalists, and the Bioscope with interesting pictures.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Miss Hetty King's male impersonations are exceedingly smart, and she is a great favourite; May Mars takes well in a "Flip-flap" song, and then gives her beautiful scena, In the Shadow of the Pyramid, for which she received several enthusiastic recalls; Billy McClain and his coloured compatriots give their lively song and dance sketch of Southern life; the Three Prestons again cause roars of laughter with their Liftman's Rise; Carl Lynn is a great favourite in his animal mimicry, and gets a well-deserved double encore; Cassie Walmer, the popular comedienne and dancer; Iben-Obed, the marvellous Arabian equilibrist; Margaret Radcliffe, in illustrated songs; and the Herald Comedy Four, in their novelty act, are the other noteworthy items in a lengthy programme

GAIETY, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—This theatre re-opened on Monday after a short vacation, and is again under the control of Mr. Bowerman. For this week he has secured a good company, including the New Macs, in their patter, song, and dance items; Ella Duncanson, the popular ballad vocalist; Neil McNab, a new Scotch comedian; Hughes and Kendal a clever comedy couple; Vi Rochelle and Nellie Hawthorne, comediennes and dancers; and the Sisters Darrell, in their taking duets. In addition a good display of Bioscope pictures is given.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor and Director, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—The Bioscope plays an important part in the programme here this week. The films are good and the subjects entertaining. In addition, there is a good variety programme, which includes Careta Dahlia, the famed lady gymnast, who performs some clever feats; Bell and Bright, comedy artists; Harry Arnold, Scottish comedian; and May Tyler, comedienne and dancer.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—Mabel Sinclair is a first-class ventriloquial turn; Ernest Rees in his drolleries scores heavily; Alice Maple is a bright comedienne and graceful dancer; Delafiore, a remarkably clever xylophone player, meets with a hearty reception; the Three Grosvenors, who sing popular melodies in harmony, are highly successful; Lily Butler, low comedy artist, meets with a flattering reception, and last, but not least, is Mlle. Haydee with her miniature theatre, some clever tricks with puppets being performed.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale. —Mr. Milton Bode's company in A Chinese Honeymoon is here this week. The play is sumptuously mounted and beautifully dressed. Miss Gwennie Harcourt as Fi-Fi creates roars of laughter; Miss Elsie Shillings is charming as Soo-Soo; Mrs. Pineapple has an excellent exponent in Miss Veronica Brady, whose singing and dancing is much applauded. Mr. Will Harman is very funny as Pineapple, and is responsible for much merriment; Mr. Rudolph Kloss makes a pompous Emperor; Mr. P. Allerton Turner plays Chippie Chop well; Mr. Leonard May is excellent as Hi Lung; Mr. Harry Jenning makes a manly Tom Hatherton; as Mrs. Brown, the official mother-in-law, Miss Maud Adams adds much to the fun. Great praise is due to Mr. P. Allerton Turner for his able stage-management.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Fred Karno's company of comedians are appearing here in The Mumming Birds, London Suburbia, and The Casuals. Daisy Yates is a singer of excellent songs; Mostel appears in a smart musical act; O'Mally and Brown present a capital comedy act; Little Victoria is a dainty dancer; May and Arthur are smart patter vocalists and dancers.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. George Gilbert.—Patrons of this popular establishment are liberally catered for this week. Mlle. Juliette's highly-trained performing sea-lions are a huge draw; the Garden of Girls, a troupe of fifteen excellent lady singers and dancers, appear in a very artistic entertainment; Aerian and Ostara are exceptionally clever aerial gymnasts; Leicester Cooke is a daring horseman; Addison introduces four cleverly-trained dogs; the Four Louberts combine comedy with a smart acrobatic turn; the water pantomime, Fun on the Broads, is still causing much merriment; Doodles, to whom nothing comes amiss, is diving from the roof of the building, as well as introducing absurdities throughout the performance. Excellent pictures are displayed on the Royal Bioscope.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.—Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Harry Rogerson, the "tired" comedian, is creating roars of laughter in his three-legged dance; the Five Vernons give a first-rate musical entertainment; Mlle. Cordella repeats her success of last week; Bessie Herbert has an excellent style; Victoria Loving is a pleasing comedienne and clever dancer; Carl Fredericks is a very versatile entertainer; the Athlones are two fine muscularly developed athletes; Little Della is a charming vocalist; Amy Robson scored well; capital pictures are being shown on the Bioscope.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, the Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Arthur Cash.—De Lilo and Metz present a smart acrobatic and juggling act in a very novel form; Dion Wade is a very funny comedian; Lambert and Glover, duologue artists, create much merriment; Allis and Casatti are very good; Arthur Pearle's whistling is very fine; Victoria Mause gives a very pleasing singing and dancing turn; Lilian Neville has an excellent soprano voice; Louie Belrose is a dainty comedienne; Mike Asher sings good songs, and executes an exceedingly clever dance; Mr. Arthur Verne is a good comedian; excellent pictures are exhibited on the Bioscope.

THE GEM.—Proprietors, The Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.—Crowds are still attracted here to witness the excellent display of animated pictures.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS. — Proprietress, Mrs. J. Sarah Lawton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Barker.—A capital programme is being presented here by the same artists as appeared last week.

MINSTREL ARENA.—The popularity of the Black Diamond Minstrels is still ascending, and large audiences are the rule at each performance.

GUERNSEY. — THEATRE ST. JULIANS.—Lessee, Mr. Ed. Marris.—We are again served with vaudeville fare this week. The engagement of the famous boxer Gunner Moir is proving an immense draw, his exhibitions with local men being particularly exciting; Wallan, juggler, is a past-master of his art; Vere and Royal do well; Medley Barrett is the comedian; and Zenora, and Kitty Malone, a clever comedienne, prove attractive; and Ruffell's Bioscope completes the programme.

HALIFAX.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—T. Morton Powell's company, in Greed of Gold, is at the Grand this week. The drama is well staged and mounted. Mr. W. H. Domoney takes the part of Harry Hood; Mr. C. Stafford gives a vigorous rendering of Arthur Errol; Mr. S. Bryant is well placed as Cully Snig; Mr. D. Campbell scores as Conn Creamer; and Mr. J. Jarrett does well in the difficult part of Tom Wellstead. Miss Elma C. Turner plays capitally as Dora; Miss S. Bryant is successful as Patty Marfield; and the boy, Cecil, is intelligently played by Miss May Ediss.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—Norah Noble is an acceptable singer and good dancer. The Forsyths introduce, in The Tramp in the Nursery, some good business and a clever doll dance; Maston, the Yorkshire mimic, is very good; Dave Samuels, Hebrew comedian, soon got on good terms with his audience with his funny songs and smart patter; the San Remo Girls are successful in song and dance; Lambert and Hands gain applause for their vocal scena; Leslie Bros., in Music Mad, are responsible for hearty laughter, and prove to be clever musicians; Little Dando is a small but successful comedian; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows some good pictures.

HAMILTON.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. René Clayton.—Gustave Fashola, Indian Fakir, in a remarkable series of illusions, is topping the bill here this week; Wild, Willie, and West are exceptionally clever in their trampoline and trap scena, The Bounding Navvies; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins are another exceptionally clever trio, who introduce some excellent singing and comedy business in their scena, The Piano Tuner; Bert Danson, American comedian, is diverting in songs and patter; Madge Allen sings and dances prettily; Alhalan performs some marvellous equilibristic feats; the Finmans are amusing in their comedy scena, The Fire Station; The Belsons introduce some clever cycling tricks in a scena entitled A Tramp's Holiday; and an interesting series of films on the Bioscope concludes an exceptionally strong programme.

HANLEY.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—Agnes Spadoni, with her three admirably trained horses, is very successful; the Grand Pictures show how the French train their firemen—a fine film; Geo. Brooks is a hit in humorous effusions; Florence Aylin sings two catchy chorus songs; Welland, the comic juggler, makes a decided hit with his funny and clever business; Lizzie Dniels, comedienne, is good; and Charlie Deane is again a great favourite. The star attraction is a very welcome return visit of the lightweight champion, Jabez White, who gives a finished object lesson on how to spar. He is meeting local champions nightly, giving a prize on Friday to the best. Chas. Vesty travels with him and gives a fine exhibition of ball punching.

KING'S.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Acting-Manager and Operator, Capt. F. Shaw.—The clearness and steadiness of the pictuers shown at this beautiful theatre are the talk and admiration of the Potteries. This week they include Bobby on the Spree, The Dog Outwits the Kidnapper, the Pursuit of a Suit, The Perjurer, The Music Teacher, Hilda's Lovers, The Boy Detective, At the Stage Door, The Clown Doctor, and a Mysterious Boudoir. Mr. C. Lisbun, a champion skater and a clever comedian, supplies the vaudeville items.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Fielding Smith.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. Brandon Thomas's company appeared in Charley's Aunt. Mr. G. A. Seager as Lord Fancourt Babberley scored a well-deserved success, and his performance was admirably supported by Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Basil Lynton as Jack Chesney and Charley Wykeham respectively; Miss Olivia Glynn and Miss Grace Russell as the young ladies, Kitty and Amy, gave pleasing characterisations; Mr. Sidney Compton as the college scout was amusingly lugubrious, and Mr. Spettigue, played by Mr. Roy Byford, was as vivacious as ever. The smaller parts were all well filled. Charley's Aunt was preceded by The Lancashire Sailor, also by Brandon Thomas. For the remainder of the week Mr. Charles Frohman presents The Hypocrites.

THE KURSAAL.—General-Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—Miss Constance Collier recited selections from her large and varied répertoire on Monday afternoon to a large and fashionable audience. Mr. Harry Randall is announced for a special matinée on Tuesday. Miss Robertson Grimston is the vocalist for the week, and Mr. Curtis Leo, the popular conjurer, the entertainer. Miss Evelyn Stuart is announced as solo pianist for the symphony concert on Wednesday, which Mr. Julian Clifford will return to conduct after his long and serious illness, and he is sure of a rousing reception.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. Ferrier.—The picture shows continue to be popular here, and this week capital films are shown, which include Baby's Playmate, Buying a House, The Hunchback's Luck, The Charmed Sword, The Baby Elephant, Cowboys and Redskins, The Caterpillar Engine, The Gentleman Gipsy, Japan Rapids on the Ozu River, and Those Scandalous Boys.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr Charles B. Scutt.—A return visit is paid this week by Mr. Leonard Boyne and his company in Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman, and a large and delighted audience assembled on Monday to give the popular actor a hearty welcome. In Mr. Boyne's delineation of A. J. Raffles the warp of an otherwise charming personality was skilfully presented, and the author's cleverly devised drama found very capable exponents respectively in the company supporting him. Particularly effective was the acting of Mr. Harold West as "Bunny"; Miss Dora Sevening as Gwendoline Conran was equally admirable; the acting of Mr. E. W. Thomas as the American Detective, Bedford, and of Mr. Buckstone Clair as Crawshay was equally good. Characteristic renderings were given by Mr. Arthur Willoughby as the Earl of Amersteth, by Miss Blanka Stewart as Lady Melrose, and by Miss Beatrice Fitzgerald as Lady Ethel, the remaining rôles being also well presented. Raffles is well mounted, and the scenery deserves praise. Mr. Montague Love stage-managed. Mr. Francis Simpson, who has recently recovered from a severe attack of enteric, is now the business-manager for Mr. Leonard Boyne.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Miss Shiela Daly, an attractive comedienne, is accorded a hearty reception; some dramatic subjects are cleverly depicted on the new Hipposcope; Phil Bransby, the coster comedian, proves exceedingly amusing; some part songs and pleasing ballads are rendered with much sweetness and expression by Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls; the Sisters McCalla (Dolly and Madge) introduce some pretty and graceful dances; Alice Maude and company are associated in a laughable sketch; Johnny Dwyer is a truly eccentric character comedian; a diverting operetta, entitled Sunny Spain, is an attractive turn given by Austin Boyd, the tenor vocalist, and Trixie Gilfain, on the bagpipes.

PIER PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—The English Light Opera company, under the direction of Mr. T. H. Friend, are still attracting good audiences. Besides the operas Il Trovatore, The Marriage of Figaro, &c., Faust is the most popular. The splendid form and excellent voices of the artists achieve a distinct success. Taking the last-named opera, Mr. Fred J. Hargrave, as Faust, distinguishes himself both as an actor and a vocalist; Mr. Arthur Winckworth delivers the difficult music of Mephistopheles with considerable ability; Mr. Tom Griffiths as Valentine sings in spirited fashion; as Siebel Miss Edyth

Alvord, with a voice of sympathetic quality, lends agreeable variety to the play. Madame Marie Titiens as Marguerite sings the music with a wistful tenderness which earns a cordial welcome. The whole of the operas are bright and tunefully rendered under the conductorship of Mr. T. Lawton.

Beach Concert Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—Favoured by the genial weather, the entertainers provided by the Wallis Arthur Syndicate supply a much-sought-for entertainment. The al fresco concerts in the Alexandra Park also attract large audiences.

Public Hall.—The entertainment provided by the London Animated Picture Co. continues pleasingly educational and attractive, the subjects being well chosen and varied in character.

St. Leonards Pier Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. Cyril Getliffe's National Ladies' Choir is attracting fair audiences. The pretty singers, in picturesque dresses, render a variety of pleasing songs, trios, and quartettes; cornet and violin solos are also introduced, Mr. Getliffe himself holding a high position as a violinist. Variety is given to the entertainment by an amusing ventriloquial sketch by Mr. Fred Hill. The show concludes with a series of bright animated pictures.

HULL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Wm. Morton; Manager, Mr. Tom Bogue.—The summer season of sketches, pictures, and songs has met with much success, and will be continued until the end of August. This week, a comedietta, A Wooden Leg, in which Miss Rita Rosslyn and Mr. W. Carriden take part has met with favour.

Alhambra Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. Morton.—A new version of Daudet's Sapho is drawing big business to this house. It is the first occasion on which the play, in any form, has been seen at the East End house. Fanny La Grande finds ample opportunity for Miss Lizzie Montague, who is faithful to Daudet's picture; Mr. Stuart Lomath catches the public taste as Jean; whilst old Uncle Cæsar could have no better representative than Mr. Percy Shaw. The other representatives work hard. The play is excellently mounted, and business is increasing nightly.

ILKESTON. — Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Mr. A. Campbell-Kelly and company are here in A Gamble with Life, Mr. Campbell-Kelly appearing as Neville Marsden; Miss Nana Cameron as Freda, the outcast, does excellently well. The remaining artists are successful.

IPSWICH.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Stead.—Sid Doody and Edie Wright, the Australian comiques, are paying a return visit and received a hearty welcome; Jack Neil is a humorist of Scotch nationality; the Falcons are extremely clever acrobats, and their agility and remarkable feats thoroughly deserve the applause they evoke; Fred Keeton is another comedian, and Edie Veno, an eccentric both in singing and dancing; Richardson Taylor is a ventriloquist, but does also some clever whistling turns; Frank Maura, described as the Mexican Wonder, does some clever balancing; Damerelle and Rutland give a laughable farce entitled House Full; and the Bioscope concludes.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—The attraction here this week is Mr. and Mrs. John E. Tomlinson's company, with The Secrets. Mr. R. Brown gives a manly portrayal of Lieut. Markham; Mr. John Worth is seen to advantage as Nouredin Ali; Mr. Fred C. Palmer is quite at home in the part of Hon. Cecil Cholmondeley; Mr. J. E. Tomlinson makes an ideal Ibrahim Al Murad, a slave dealer; and Mr. Bailey simply revels in the part of Breezy Bill. Mr. H. Woodin and Miss M. Palmer cause much amusement as Peter Wilkins and Winnie Wilkins; and Miss Lizzie Palmer makes an impression as Ismaili, the Christian slave. The scenery and dresses are excellent.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—Big business is being done here during this, the race, week. Gunner Moir is demonstrating his claim to the title boxing champion of England by meeting local champions; Jessie Wilton sings some taking songs; Zenora does some good hand balancing; Ivy Proudfoot sings tuneful melodies; Vere and Royal prove a clever couple, and wind up with characteristic dancing; Kitty Malone appears as the Gibson Girl; Wallan does clever juggling; and Ruffell's Bioscope is once more in evidence.

Oddfellows' Hall.—The Kinematograph entertainment known as The King's Service is paying its annual visit here under the direction of Mr. Ernest Mansell. Miss Maude Evelyn sings several American songs, illustrated by slides.

Springfield Pavilion.—The Motlez are still here. Mr. Basil Spencer appears as a pierrot, and gives some good pianoforte selections; Miss Mabel May is a vivacious dancer; and Miss Nora Ottoway sings charmingly.

Triangle Park.—The Æolian Concert Singers opened here on Monday night, and were very cordially received. The band of the first East Surrey Regiment played during the first half of the programme.

LANCASTER. — Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Another capital programme is arranged this week, at the head of the bill being the Haytors in a very amusing sketch The Plumber. The Society Quartette of singers and dancers have a great reception; whilst Stuart and Evans, comedians, win favour. Theresa De Silva, vocalist, well merited her encore, as also did Gladys Huxley, comedienne. Ariel and Astarte supply a pleasing horizontal bar act, and Frank Coyle does well. The Hippograph completes.

LEEDS.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—An Unwedded Wife makes a first appearance here this week, and good audiences have voiced their appreciation of its many thrilling passages. The principal character of Marion is played in perfect style by that accomplished actress Miss Ethel Van Praagh; the villain, Philip Blackstone, gets a most effective personation at the hands of Mr. C. Lodge Percy; and Mr. George Daiper makes a satisfactory hero. A juvenile part is cleverly done by Little Doris; Mr. E. W. Bretton displays ability in the rôle of Martin Hallet; whilst on the comedy side Mr. J. Edward Whitty provokes great hilarity as a comic policeman, being ably assisted by Mr. Will Casey and Miss Jessie Gillette.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—The leading turn here is supplied by George Auger, the giant actor, and his company of midgets, who participate in a quaint playlet entitled Jack, the Giant Killer. The entertainment is most amusing. Lil Hawthorne subscribes some new items in her best style, and gets the usual enthusiastic reception; a comedy illusion, The Enchanted Iona, is successfully presented by Charles Frazer and company; Frank Bernard and company also have a novelty which is well to the liking of the audience; Barrett and Knowles, in vocal speciality, again do extremely well; Vanando is an entertaining ventriloquist; and of the rest Olive and Owen, Amy Marsden, and David Stewart are particularly successful.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—A dramatic playlet, The House of Terror, is presented in effective style by Miss Beaumont Collins and company, and evokes demonstrative appreciation; Barrington and Grey appear in a pleasing vocal scena with great success; Bert and Dora submit a comedy speciality which is well liked; Arthur Harris is an actor-vocalist of considerable ability; and a feature of the programme is a series of fine Bioscope pictures of the Marathon Race.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—The Brothers Boller lead here with a sensational cycle performance; that smart Hebrew pair, Lowenwirth and Cohan, are again having a successful week; the Brothers Permane submit a skilful and amusing acrobatic performance; a capital musical turn by the Ellimans wins great applause; Cummin and Seaham score with a humorous novelty; Will Vay's Juveniles are applauded for a clever entertainment; Frank Cass and Will Sullivan are both popular in their respective styles; whilst Gena Manon and George Antill also contribute good items to a programme of all-round excellence.

City Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—H. O. Wills, a smart comedian, is prominent here; George Young, a blind musician, is rewarded with applause for his wonderful musical turn; the Three Merrions are comedy entertainers above the average; and Helen Martin is particularly successful with vocal renditions. There is also on show a capital film of the Marathon Race.

LEICESTER.—Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton.—A rousing reception is being extended here to Harry Lauder, who is on a second visit. His song "My Scotch Bluebell" is a great favourite, and is accorded round after round of applause. He finally renders a verse of "Rocked in the cradle of the deep," which discloses a voice very few of the audience ever dreamt this gifted artist was possessed of. Walter Bellonini repeats with special favour his smart juggling act, being assisted by his mirth-provoking assistant Wal; the Three Lloyds excel in their clever and clean turn on the bounding cables, their intricate feats being accomplished in a manner eliciting unstinted applause; Ian Colquhoun, the favourite baritone, is securing his usual warm welcome; Fred Poplar, in a dramatic burlesque, raises hearty laughter; Kitty Wager is a captivating and pretty comedienne; Mazie Hibbs is a capital vocalist and excellent dancer; Will Musgrave entertains with his policeman's song; and the Bioscope is a feature with the story picture A Man in a Thousand, shown in ten tableaux.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—A well-played and popular dramatic episode, entitled The Usurer, is being presented here this week by Sydney Mason and Theresa Moore and company, in which Miss Moore as Irene Dane and Mr. Mason as Herbert Dane display histrionic talent above the average. The original Dancing Gilberts are particularly smart in their novel dancing act; the Fionas are excellent equilibrists and slack-wire artists; the Sons of Toil are very good in their musical speciality act on a number of brass instruments; Harry Luck, with some really funny songs, creates plenty of merriment; the Sisters Varley are capable duettists; and Alma Moller, vocalist, also appears. A special feature of the programme is Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope with the Marathon Race, Cinematograph Evidence, and Walter, the Rural Postman.

The Empire.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. A. Hurley.—As usual, the pictures here are good, and include this week The Law of Honour, Duel after the Ball, The Little Marauders, Wedding in Brittany, A Modern Samson, The Pierrot and the Devil, and A Mountaineer's Flirtation, which are interspersed with turns by Master William Edwards and James Bown, winners of singing competitions held at this hall. Another comic singing tournament is taking place this week.

LIVERPOOL.—Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Sexton Blake has again come to Liverpool, this time to the popular north-end house, where good business has been done. Mr. Horace Hunter handled the title-rôle in a manner which earned for him general favour; Mr. Algernon Syms ably sustained the part of Squire Lovell; a very amusing Tinker came from Mr. Billy Ross; Miss Alma Vincent, as Euphemia Pattacake, helped with the fun; the villainous Randolph Lovell was well portrayed by Mr. Charles East; Mr. John M. East was effective as the burglar, Simon Faggas; and excellent work also emanated from Miss Lily Hammersley, Mr. Bryan Daly, Mr. William Felton, and Miss East Robertson.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Under the direction of Messrs. Edward Lloyd and Frank Adair the favourite Man to Man was presented here thoughout the week. Mr. Denholm Muir did excellently as the Rev. Philip Ormond; Miss Louie Adair very capably held the part of Ethel Maythorne; Mr. Edward Lloyd was a success as George Gordon; in the rôle of the villainous Richard Ellerton Mr. Frank Adair afforded great support. Thanks were due to Miss Adeline Lester for her smart conception of the spinster, Miss Lavinia Dove; and good work was also done by Messrs. H. Holland, Herbert Williams, Clifford Bown, and Miss Evelyn Warde.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Wilkie Bard is the big line here this week, and Millie Hylton, with her latest successes, stands prominent at the bottom of the bill. Both have had a hearty reception. Henry Coutts and company presented a smart sketch, Outflanked; Frederick King and Marie Queen submitted a neat comedy turn; Ethel Whiteside and her piccaninnies are accorded hearty applause; Hans and Lux are a couple of humorous patter comedians; Nellie Stratton, comedienne, pleases immensely; a highly-appreciated musical turn comes from Roma and Romani; and Lilian Lowe sung several songs in pleasing style.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Principal here this week has been Henry Herne's company with an attractive sketch, entitled The Colleen Bawn; Sable Fern brought her latest songs, which were received with every appreciation; Nancy Thornton pleased with several numbers; Ernest Montefiore and company presented the always-acceptable trifle, The Little Colonel; loud laughter followed the work of the humorous Alec Kendal; some pleasing songs were sung by Leah Adell; as a musician the youthful Luigi Salvano showed a deal of talent; and Harry Barclay, light comedian, also appeared.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager Mr. Walter Hassan.—A strong bill has been put forth here during the week, the top place being occupied by George Mozart, who brought his latest funniosities; Hall and Earle, with the amusing trifle, The Chinaman and the Tramp, were particularly diverting; Dorothy Gould had a most cordial reception for her acceptable songs; Driscoll and Felino gave a funny skit, Paddock Life; the Cheers submitted a clever cat show entitled Dick Whittington; some smart dancing was executed by the Three Cunards; as acrobatic dancers the Berthos showed talent; the Sisters Wingrove deserved the applause they received for their duets and dancing; Ferdie's Main-Law aroused a deal of laughter; and contributions also came from B. Babington, comedienne, and Herbert Rule, comedian.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock company here have during the week given Sapho. Mr. Harry Tresham very ably undertook the rôle of Jean; Mr. R. Seath Innes handled the part of Dechelette with every credit; Miss Florence Palmer was a tactful Sapho; Mr. Robert Wilton proved successful as Cesaire; and worthy support came from Mr. E. D. Allen, Mr. Cecil Ravenswood, Miss Lilian Radbourne, Miss Nancy Mitchell, and Miss Emmeline Enthwistle.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—George Robey has been foremost here this week, and proved a big attraction; Ethel Haydon was given a grand reception for her pleasing songs; the Bros. Miller, as gymnastic comedians and burlesque wrestlers, proved exceedingly amusing; a clever all round show came from Daras, comedian, conjurer, dancer, and impersonator of celebrities; the Lyric Quartet rendered some pleasing harmonised picture songs; Cestria aroused endless laughter with his funny juggling and acrobatic duties; the three Sisters Jerome gave a novel act, Aunty's Maid; the singing of the King's College Boys was appreciated; and the Sisters Morgan, duettists and dancers, earned applause.

Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Heading the bill here this week is a particularly accomplished quick-change artist named Owen McGiveney, with a dramatic sketch entitled Oliver Twist, in which he presents several characters; Caban's French circus proves exceedingly pleasing; Dottridge and Instone's comedy company give a smart sketch, Rosie's Birthday Party; as comedy entertainers Bennett and Sterling are well received; Edwin Austin renders a number of popular selections on the concertina; Burns and Bentley provide a smart vaudeville turn; as eccentric acrobats Margit and Lener amuse greatly; Will Owen proves as funny as ever; the Kyasyas give a smart athletic exhibition; and also in the programme are Harry Nelson, comedian; Dancit, "Queen of the Golden Clog"; and Les Zelovas, acrobatic equilibrists.

LLANDUDNO.—Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Miss Emma and Percy Hutchison's company occupy the boards for six nights with Lady Frederick. Miss Mabel Love in the title-rôle is all that could be desired, and she obtains rounds of applause each evening. Sir Gerald O'Mara is capably undertaken by Mr. Patrick Quill; Mr. Robert Minster gives a first-class representation of Mr. Baradine Fouldes; Miss Eleanor Delaporte does justice to the part of Lady Mereston; Mr. E. F. Meads acquits himself creditably as Lord Mereston; Mr. Edward Bonfield is good as Capt. Montgomery; Capt. Gambier is at home in the part of Admiral Carlisle; Miss Lynn Fontanne is chic as Rose; and Miss Beatrice Grosvenor is a good Madame Claude. Lady Frederick is preceded by The Peacemaker, in which Misses Eleanor Delaporte, Lynn Fontanne, and Rita Ward and Messrs. Patrick Quill and Edward Bonfield appear effectively.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Mr. H. F. Maltby's company was here the first part of the week with The Youngest of Three, Fraud, and Sir George of Almack's. On Monday the first-named piece was given. Mr. H. F. Maltby making an excellent George Wendover, acting with power throughout. Mr. Arthur Claremont as Gerald Wendover gave an equally good portrayal; Mr. Wyn Weaver as Philip Radford was well placed; and Mr. Brember Wills was at home in the dual rôle of Joshua Pynne and Paul. Miss Lizzie Maddocks (Annie Dulley) and Miss Florence Wynne (Florence Dulley) were capital as the embittered and dignified sisters; whilst Miss Mara Maltby was irresistible as Lucy Dulley, her charming manner greatly appealing to the audience. Mr. George Grossmith's recitals were announced for Friday and Saturday.

Pier Head Varieties.—Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—The top of the bill is Mr. C. D. Reekie, whose Lancashire drolleries call forth roars of laughter; Mr. Harold Browne possesses an excellent voice, and is a singer above the average; Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe is as entertaining as ever; Miss Edith Heron-Browne does admirable work at the piano; Mr. Donal McDougal renders some good Scotch songs; and Miss Winifred O'Connor is a first-class soprano.

LOWESTOFT.—Marina.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—This house re-opened for the season on Monday with the first of a series of musical comedies, The Merry Widow, which was presented locally for the first time by Mr. Geo. Edwardes's company. The leading parts were carefully treated, and the fine chorus and effects added generally to a capital representation.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—The brilliant weather does not in any way affect the crowded houses at this highly-popular resort, and the excellence of the programmes is well maintained. The British Biograph Company present an entirely new series of pictorial subjects this week, under the experienced management of Mr Fred Gilbert, whose efforts are thoroughly successful in this particular department. The variety bill is headed by the Four Maisonas, musical artists; Prof. Evansio, with his plate-spinning novelty; and Sim Maree, the Indian boy contortionist, in a wonderful act.

MAIDENHEAD.—Pavilion Pleasure Gardens.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gude.—The Cadets have a good programme this week. Mr. Colin Gent sings "In friendship's name" and "If everybody were as kind as you," Miss Adelaide Twort is successful with "The gift" and "Queen of Love," and the two give an excellent rendering of the duet "Flow gently, Deva." Miss Florrie Delamere is redemanded for "Meet me, Jenny, when the sun goes down," and is much applauded for a song and spirited dance, "Come down from that big fig tree." Jack Anders has a smart way with him, and is heard to advantage in "You can't do without a girl" and "Meet me under the clock"; Leo Fallowfield causes roars of laughter with "That pudding" and "Don't be silly," and Will Harris keeps the attention of his audience with "Clap hands, daddy's come home!" and "You mustn't do a thing like that." The concerted numbers are well prepared, "Down in the old cornfield" being particularly well sung. The sketch On the Brain is very amusing.

MAIDSTONE. — Palace. — Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—A good programme includes Mr. Fred Ginnett's company in the equestrian sketches, Rejected Remounts and Dick Turpin, the former causing hearty laughter, while in the latter a well-trained mare is introduced. The Pemms are clever knockabout comedians; Leon and Noel please with their dancing; Miss Dora Daly is a smart comedienne; and others in a well-varied bill include Rudge Whitworth, entertainer; H. E. High, acrobatic skate dancer; Charles Vernon, comedian, and the Bioscope.

MANCHESTER.—Metropole Theatre.—Proprietor, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Andrew.—Herbert Lloyd's company occupy the boards here in the new musical comedy Happy Hooligan. The principals, who include W. H. Lester (Hooligan), Jas. J. Sullivan (Macgregor), John K. Hawley (Guggenheimer), Harry Emerie (Charley Flipp), Lottie Wilson (Widow Johnson), and Rose Lyndon (Rose), all sustain their parts well. The chorus work is good and powerful, and all the songs are tastefully rendered. The dancing is cleverly executed, and the delightful dresses are a feature of the entertainment. The show is given twice nightly, and very well received.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Chas. T. Aldrich, the American quick-change comedian, is the popular top star here this week, and Harry Weldon, "the swell entertainer," shares the honours with some smart eccentric comedy. Russell Wallett, the lady in black, goes well, as usual; a big reception is accorded to Bertha Stuart, a very pleasing Scotch character vocalist; the Warsaw Bros., musical comedians, provoke laughter; and pleasing turns are added by Bessie Butt, soubrette and dancer; the Schisvonys, expert gymnasts; Gracie Grahame, versatile comedienne; and Gipsy Woolf, in The Mermaid of Margate, supported by her Six Sunbeams. The Bioscope shows incidents in the Marathon Race.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Harry Tate and company are here this week in that highly-amusing incident Fishing, and, if possible, are more diverting than ever. King and Benson, as the Messenger Boy and the Soubrette in a clever vocal comedy act, meet with a big reception; the Seven Wulfrunas do some smart acrobatic business in their speciality Fun in a Café; Olgar and Elgar are deservedly well received in a high-class vocal and instrumental act; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden are exceedingly good in a capital sketch; Helen Trix is smart in songs and whistling at the piano; Robb Gilmoure makes a hit with his eccentric style and "corkscrew" dance; and excellent dancing is done by Russell Brandow, a coloured comedian. The vocal items by the choir and up-to-date Bioscope pictures complete.

King's, Longsight.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—La Marseillaise; or, The Story of a Song, is a pretty sketch, well acted by Mr. Walter Raynham, Miss Kate Gurney, Miss Marie Santley, and Mr. Edgar C. White. Martin Conway is a funny comedian, and is well received; Mlle. Naveeda presents a clever illusionary act with great success; the Sicilians sing well, and one in particular plays the mandoline in fine style; Ormonde Penstone is a neat prestidigitateur, and takes well; Mabel Robarts sings pleasing illustrated songs in good style; Victor and Louis are very smart in a vocal comedy act; Victor Courtney is entertaining at the piano; Billy Yeager and Emma Da-Costa dance well; and the Foy Bros. and company are amusing in the sketch Pat in China. Pictures complete.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. Fred Leighton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—An excellent all-round programme here this week includes Arthur Rigby, the popular comedian, and smart company in a delightful miniature comic opera, The Isle of Doma; Jordan and Harvey, those vastly amusing Hebrew dialect comedians, who create endless laughter; and the Achmed-Ibrahim Troupe of Bedouin Arabs, in their astounding acrobatic performance. Other turns, all above the average, are those of Elton and Edwin, banjoists; Jenny Alexander, mimic; Tally Ho! Trio, comedy vocalists; R. C. Matthews and company in the farcical sketch The Honeymoon Baby; Charles Santon, double-voiced vocal comedian; and Haig and Novil, comedy artists, acrobats, and smart dancers. His First Frock Coat on the Bioscope is amusing.

Tivoli. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Minnie Leslie and Edgar Stevens top the bill here this week in a very pleasing vocal comedietta, Love Levels All. The Cattanees are highly diverting in a clever acrobatic act; Wilfred Burnand is an exceptionally good mimic and character impersonator; Jenny Reeve is a comedienne with plenty of go; Marjorie Merle, musical comedy artist, has a good voice; Elsie Claire sings pleasing songs nicely; Pueblo and Cropp are capital dancers; and enjoyable items are also those of Edmunda, singing ventriloquist; and Will Gerton, comedian. Several fine films are shown by Ruffell's Bioscope.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—The Fiddler's Windfall, a neat episode which is being played here with success this week, gives Bosanquet, the well-known violinist, an opportunity of showing how delightfully he can play. The Imperials are good in an instructive exhibition of Ju-jitsu, concluding with a bout of wrestling with a local man; Angelina, who juggles with a cannon ball, is clever; Hilda de Grey is a Tyrolean vocalist of merit; Dolly and Elsie are dainty juveniles who sing sweetly; Harry Zetter, comedian, wins applause for singing and funny business; Frank Sley, assisted by a clever youngster, does well in song and dance; Amos Howard, a coloured artist, dances exceedingly well; Celeste is a marvellous slack-wire walker and bâton swinger; and Francis Hanlon is a dainty singer and dancer.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—Murphy's Affinity, a very amusing comedy sketch, well presented by Rose Atherton's company, is to the front here this week. Nelson's Newsboys sing and dance well; Ted Waite, a comedian of the eccentric order, takes well; Fred S. Peake and company are seen to advantage in a dramatic costume episode, The Hypocrite; and the Days are highly successful as second-sight seers. Other good items are provided by Marcus Boyle, a capital comedian; Ada Whitton, neat male impersonator; the Lovelaces, pleasing song illustrators; and the Camerons, in smart duologue. Tommy and the Policeman's Whistle on the Bioscope is amusing.

Rusholme Pavilion.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Phillips.—The Gay River, "a musical comedy without plot," invented and produced by Messrs. Edwin Adeler and Clifford Morgan, is the attraction here this week. It is played in fine style by the following popular artists, all of whom do well:—Mr. Frank Dunlop, Mr. Bert Byrne, Mr. Charles North, Miss Connie Clive, Miss Nellie Crawford, Miss Harrie Greene, Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss Norah Walker, Mr. Francis Rayne, and Mr. A. Parry. The originally concerted numbers are by Messrs. Arthur W. Parry and Frank Dunlop.

MARGATE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hardy.—This week Mr. Lionel Brough, Miss Mary Brough, and Mr. Tom Craven, with a West End London company, have appeared in a light triple bill, namely, The Lady in Red, The Yarn Spinner, and Milky White. The four characters in The Lady in Red were capably undertaken by Mr. Stephen Adeson (Mr. Johnson) and Mr. Tom Craven (William), their original parts, Miss Clara Milvin (Mrs. Johnson), and Miss Isabel Collier (Cora). The duologue The Yarn Spinner, in which Mr. Lionel Brough and Miss Mary Brough appeared, has been received each evening with roars of laughter. The up-to-date version of Milky White, in which Mr. Tom Craven sustains the name-rôle, is excellently played. Miss Mary Brough, Miss Isabel Collier, Mr. Stephen Adeson, and Mr. Jackson Wilcox contribute greatly to the success of the piece.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Heading the programme this week is The Orange Girl, a tabloid form of the play of Nell Gwynn, presented most successfully by Miss Dolly Elsworthy, who cleverly takes the part of Nell Gwynn. Mr. Roy Redgrave plays King Charles II. well, and the Misses E. Moss and A. Allwood and Messrs. J. Willoughby and Adderley Howard effectively sustain the other characters in the sketch. Irve Hayman and little Marie Montague appear with success in the midnight episode Christmas Eve; and other turns include Mark Leslie, swell coon; the Gilberts, wire walkers; Evelyn Taylor, comedienne; and Maud and Sidney Wood, duettists.

Hall-by-the-Sea.—Sole Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Evans.—Jack Charman, popular vocalist, sings remarkably well; Phern and Phern in their 'phone act are exceedingly good; and Zaleski, the golden spider, is a clever contortionist. Goggin and Davis, versatile comedy acrobats, Rosie Archer, lady mimic at the piano, and the Five Paulastos, comedians, in Fun in a Garden, also contribute to the success of the evening's entertainment.

MEXBOROUGH.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—After the usual vacation this theatre re-opened on Monday night with a strong variety programme. The Bros. Onda, in their comedy three-bar act, make a decided hit; Atroy, the society juggler, is well received; Mlle. Violi is a remarkably clever performer on several instruments; and Will Rain and company submit a screamingly funny comedy act, Motor Maniac. Other artists include Tom Hudson, comedian; Mark Merry, comedian; Pearce and Ward, eccentric comedian and soubrette; Lily Ford, burlesque actress; and Fred Tenby, comedian. A series of up-to-date animated pictures is also given.

New Picture Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. Will Hunter.—Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—The excellence of the programme here is well maintained. This week's pictures include Meeting of the Kings, The Old Actor, The Death-Bed Marriage, Across the Frontier, Two Little Motorists, &c.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—A powerful play entitled The Power of the King is being produced here this week by Messrs. Kimberley, Green, and Hinton's principal company. Mr. Gerald Blake gives an admirable impersonation of the part of Captain Langrage, while as the Crown Prince Oscar some powerful acting is given by Mr. Travis Green. A clever representative is found in Mr. Charles Whitlock as King Vellombrosa; as Lady Annastasia a delightful impersonation of the character is given by Miss Leila Zillwood; Miss Georgina V. France is pleasing in the rôle of Lady Glorina; and Mr. John Firman as General Stenovie, Mr. Milton Dandy as Fritz Tashheim, Mr. Fred Hughes as Capella, Mr. John Campbell as Alberta, Miss Grace Barton as Marget, and Miss Violet Jarson as Rosa are all that can be desired.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—Alice Raymond and players provide the premier turn here this week in a musical extravaganza entitled A Night in Egypt. It is a most delightful turn, and the audiences are quite carried away with the music that is provided. Miss Eugene Magnus and Mr. Lionel d'Aragon's company are exceedingly good in their studies from life entitled Memories; Talberto and Douglas, comedy artists, do well; and Lupino Lane is an excellent comedian and dancer. A clever turn is given by the Bouncing Dillons; and Goodfellow and Gregson, comedy artists, Billie Burford, comedienne, and Tom Yorke, comedian, also add to a capital programme.

Oxford Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—Fred Maxwell and Miss Lois Du Cane have been retained for another week, and are presenting a delightful sketch entitled The Girl I Love. A Hungarian troupe of acrobats are remarkably clever, and Cora Cassellis's impersonation of a Spanish girl in the national song and dance is very fine. Other good turns are also given.

MORECAMBE.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—For the first three nights of the week Mr. Lewis Waller's company, under the management of Mr. F. Clive Ross, appeared in Robin Hood, and were well received. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards gave a fine rendering of the outlaw, and Miss Lilian Stennis was a charming maid Marion. On Thursday and for the remaining part of the week Mr. Brandon Thomas's company was seen in the ever-popular Charley's Aunt, and the cast included Misses Evelyn Grey, Grace Russell, Oliva Glynn, Vere Gerald, Messrs. T. McCausland Stewart, Roy Byford, Hastings Lynn, Basil Lynton, G. A. Seagar, and Sydney Compton.

Alhambra Palace.—General-Manager, Alderman John Gardner.—A good holiday bill has been provided here. The Zano Brothers made a great deal of fun on the triple bars with their business; and Irena and Laura are capable vocalists and dancers. A really smart turn is that of Ruhart, an original burlesque artist. For acrobatic eccentricities commend us to the Brothers Bradshaw, and for genuinely clever hand-balancing the Bonanzas will take a lot of beating. A really comical couple are the Brothers Harrison, comedians, whose make-up is "extra"; the Gus Onlaw Trio are seen to distinct advantage in a novel wire act; Drum and Major purvey comedy in the manner of old hands at the game; a most amusing sketch is presented by Tom Kelso and company entitled The Silly Servant, and the audience fairly revel in it; a smart illusion act is given by Picitt and Lizette, the clever business being carried out in a kitchen set; a great number of birds, rabbits, &c., are produced, and the act is one of the best. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. F. B. Beard.

Winter Gardens.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—The great Morris Cronin and his smart assistants have delighted audiences with their fine juggling work and genuine comedy; Carter Livesey and Lilian Roseberry continue to raise much hilarity in their skit The Would-be Actors; Chas. R. Whittle has been requesting all and sundry to "Put me amongst the girls" all the week, and he has proved a bright turn; the Arnatos are as funny as ever; Fritz Kornan whistles with success; Maxey and Pete make fun on the cycles; Mollie Doon is a dainty comedienne; N. T. Kioto proves himself amongst the cleverest of Japanese equilibrists; and Gillin is "killin'" as a ventriloquial adept.

Central Pier.—Manager, Mr. Emilius Hill.—Topping the bill, Will H. Fox has been a popular success, and his smart patter and clever manipulation of the piano are equally acceptable. The Brothers O'Brien go well in their well-known horizontal bar act; extremely funny is the sketch The Egyptian Mummy presented by Sandy McNab and company; dashing and delightful are applicable terms in referring to the trapeze act of the Sisters Geretti; and there are also in the programme Ray Ford, comedienne; the Lynches, illustrated songs; Alfred Eugene, juggler; Monie Emerald, dancer and songstress.

MORLEY.—Empress.—Lessee, Mr. Maurice Press; Manager, Dr. C. Barrington Clarke.—A capital company has been billed here under the supervision of Serpentello, who has been very popular with his exhibition of contortionism Princess Pauline's interpretation of serio-comedy won warm approval. The Bros. Brookes, comedians, the Sisters Brand, duettists, Herbert Clark, musician, and Abals and Hurst, sketch artists, were the additions to a good company.

Copenhagen.—Women and Wine was Monday and Tuesday nights' attraction, and crowded houses were the rule. Other plays were produced during the week.

NEW BRIGHTON.—Winter Gardens.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—Hundreds were unable to obtain admission to this popular place of amusement on Monday and Tuesday evening, a state of things perhaps not surprising when one considers the really magnificent programmes put forward by the enterprising managers. This week there are no less than ten turns of a very high-class nature, in addition to the band and animated pictures. The Yorkshire Mill Girls score a great success by their delightful singing; Prince Schaboo, a coloured bass vocalist, is also very well received; a remarkably clever performance on several instruments is given by Miss Lillie Luraine; whilst Kinnard, the merry magician, and Mr. Harry Keeble, ventriloquist, both cause much laughter and gain loud applause for their excellent and refined items. Miss Greta Scott is an admirable mandoline soloist; and Miss Caine, described as Oxfordshire's nightingale, sings most delightfully. A quick-change humorous act by Nora and Flora had a fine reception; Herr A. Spiegler charms his hearers with masterly violin solos; and the animated pictures are first-class.

Pier Pavilion.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. W. G. Sutton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Parker.—A musical comedy without plot is the description of The Anglo-Indians, produced this week by the managers, and received with evident enjoyment by the frequenters of the Pier Pavilion. Mr. Kennedy Allen is a popular comedian, and shares the honours of the evening with Mr. A. Johnson, comedian, Mr. Albert Chapman, baritone, Miss Ethel Bryant, vocalist and expert dancer, Miss Lillian Wesson, soprano, and Miss Kitty Kennedy Allen, comedienne. All the ladies and gentlemen of the company work hard, and the result is a pleasant evening. Mr. J. A. Lowe should not be forgotten, for his solos and accompaniments are distinctly good. "The Follies" appeared on Tuesday evening, with great success.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager.—Mr. Wm. Mould.—The principal attraction here this week is a clever magical and second sight performance which is presented by Kahn and Kahn, and has been warmly greeted; Mike and Lena, Dutch comedy artists, have had a cordial reception; Professor Dunning, ventriloquist, introduces an enjoyable act; Messrs. Vasey and Ramsay, eccentric comedians and dancers, are very smart; Mr. Jack North, comedian, is popular; Miss Alice Hayes, comedienne, is well received; Mr. Charles Ruble, comedian, goes well, and the Mouldoscope concludes.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Among the artists this week are the Bros. Ashley, in their clever boxing sketch, entitled Next, Please, which is full of fun, and causes endless laughter; Charles F. Bert as MacBunker, the mountebank, is another good turn; Arthur Ferris and Ethel May, in a musical comedy, Two's Company; Three's ——? deserve every praise; Alfred Graham's Premier Juveniles, in their vocal scena, "A concert on the lawn," Phillips and Merritt, in a musical travesty, "A touch of vaudeville," Sinclair and Parr, with Miss Alice Hollander, Australian contralto, and the Hippo. Bio. complete a pleasing entertainment.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The quaint mannerisms and comicalities of Louie Freear are always provocative of hearty laughter, and as 'Liza, in the sketch, 'Liza's Limerick, she gives an amusing portraiture of a slavey; as an impersonator of celebrities Ludwig Amann is exceedingly clever; Elsie Roby as the slavey at the piano is both entertaining and smart; and the Musical Schafers blend comedy and harmony in their sketch, The Garden of Melody. As funmakers, Rich and Rich are hard to beat, and their item is thoroughly enjoyed; the New York Nippers, dancers, Boden and Bell, juvenile dancers, Nellie Martell, comedienne, and Andy Fagan, comedian, contribute to the entertainment. Excellent films are shown on the Bioscope.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Charles M. Bestic's company, in The Flower Girl, had a capital reception on Monday. Mr. Martin Adeson, in the character of Joe Wheeler, is irresistible, and his singing and acting keep the house in a constant state of merriment; Miss Dorothy Firman, in the title-rôle, Lily, is a delightful singer, and no less successful as a dancer; Miss Florence Wilton as Lizette de Racquet is excellent as a French lady, and she receives much assistance from Mr. Henry Adnes as Alphonse de Racquet; Miss Jeannie Holmes as Miss Greenhill is a realistic suffragette; Mr. Edward Kipling as Reginald Rackit, gives a clever and amusing rendering of a dude; Mr. Robt. H. Howard sings very well as the Hon. Billy Greenhill; and Mr. Alfred Donohoe as Johnny Wheeler is very clever, Catchy music and good dances do much towards success, and an excellent chorus is quite equal to the demands made upon it. The composer, Mr. Wm. T. Gliddon, personally conducts the orchestra.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kilrow.—Harry Champion, the quick and quaint comedian, makes another hit; Kitts and Windrum, in The Cuckoo, present a sparkling turn; Dot Stephens, in her imitations, scores a triumph; Webb and Branston, operatic duettists, sing delightfully; the Saletos provide a smart, refined head and hand balancing act; and Simms and Simms are excellent in a musical comedy turn. Florence Somers is a dainty comedienne; and Fayre and McHenry are capital in dance and cross-talk, The Dottoscope again shows capital pictures; Mac, Greg, and Mac appear with success in a new comedy act.

TEMPERANCE HALL, HORSEDGE-STREET.—The Royal Canadian moving pictures have opened here, under the able management of Mr. Dobie. Two shows a night draw crowded houses. An attractive programme is provided, consisting of both serious and humorous films, including £100 Reward, The Brigands of Calabria, A Sign from Heaven, Ragpicker Caricaturist, and The Duel After the Ball.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company is fulfilling a week's engagement here with The Face at the Window. As the Chevalier Lucio Delgardo Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale is a decided success, and Mr. Scott Leighton is distinctly good as Paul Gouffet; Mr. Arthur Beverley works well as Lucian Cortier, and Mr. Alfred Warne makes the most of Henry de Brisson; Mr. Henri Stewart is quaint and amusing as Peter Pottleberry; Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson sustains the rôle of Marie de Brisson with grace and distinction, and Miss Louie Lenora is a bright and agile Babette.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Douglas F. Bostock.—The place of honour is deservedly given this week to the performing sea lions and seals owned by Cliff Berzac, and Captain Woodward, their trainer, is responsible for as marvellous and as clever a performance as has ever been seen at this house. Another excellent exhibition of animal training is submitted by Paula Peters, whose wonderful group of educated and exceedingly clever ponies, baboons, boarhounds, and fox-terriers gain unstinted praise; Alice Hughes and company score a success with a capital sketch, Star of the Bazaar, which forms one of the most laughable interludes of the programme; Ruby Dahl, in a marionette novelty, The Merry Mannikins, provides a thoroughly enjoyable turn; as a vocalist and mimic Fred Horsfall is greatly appreciated; Naughton and Gold are mirth-provoking comedians and expert dancers; marvellous dexterity is shown by Tom Verne in his roller skating and dancing act; Little Eileen is dainty and refined in her singing and dancing contributions; and the Hippodrome Bioscope furnishes some excellent pictures.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The season opened with a return visit of The Merry Widow, and a packed house assembled on Monday to greet the popular favourite. Miss Clara Evelyn impersonates Sonia, her vivacity and charm receiving due appreciation, and her rendering of the Villya song being clamorously applauded; Mr. Robert Michaels is Prince Danilo, and establishes himself a firm favourite by his breezy style and acting, while the tuneful waltz with the widow was redemanded time after time. As Baron Popoff Mr. Lionel Victor has a stock of quaint sayings which never fail to elicit shrieks of laughter; Mr. Aubrey Standing as M. de Jolidon displays the possession of an excellent tenor voice, which does full justice to the songs falling to his lot; Miss Mary Grey (Natalie) is also an actress and vocalist of ability, being particularly strong in the latter department; the subtle humour of Mr. Tom Redmond as M. Nisch is a cause of continuous merriment.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Cruickshank's amusing and original patter, coupled with diverting parodies on popular songs, constitutes a most attractive turn; Richard Corbin's dogs form an entertainment in themselves, a striking feature of the performance being that the animals execute their human evolutions in the absence of their trainer, who does not appear until the end of the turn; Rappo nad Ella are remarkably skilful in the gymnastic business; Harry Taft is a whistler and raconteur of no mean ability; the Lyric Mummers' vocal contributions are well received; D. W. Watson strikes an original chord with some accomplished cornet and coach-horn playing, and Allsopp and Bekwith and Jerry and Bentley furnish attractive numbers in the comedy line.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—This comfortable hall continues to be well patronised. Blanche and Diacoff head the bill, and in their great cycle whizz delight and highly amuse the audience. Paul Cavalli performs some difficult feats of strength; Tom Joy, comedian, is re-engaged for this week, and his quaint style and funny songs are again causing much laughter. The Royal Quintette of international dancers are graceful, and receive well-merited applause; Daisy Devonport is appreciated for her songs and dance; R. C. Note, comedian, is heartily applauded; Akbar, gymnast, gives a daring performance on the silver-ringed trapeze; Bella Leaburn appears with much success as a comedienne; and the Sisters Clare gain warm recognition for their songs and dances. The Alexandra Biscope is again showing an interesting series of animated pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Bannister Howard's No. 1 company in Florodora is here this week, meeting with an enthusiastic reception; Mr. Fred Eastman scores highly as Anthony Tweedlepunch, his quaint witticisms and business causing great amusement; Mr. Stanley White sustains in imposing style the rôle of Cyrus W. Gilfain; Mr. Basil Mercer plays quietly but most effectively as Frank Abercoed, his song, "Under the Palm," being much applauded; Captain Arthur Donegal is taken in capital style by Mr. Herbert St. John, and Mr. Edwin Oxlee makes a clever study of the small part of Leandro; Miss Lilly is a charming Angela Gilfain, singing her numbers very prettily; Miss Maisie Ellinger is a dashing and comely Dolores, and her vocalisation is of a high order; Miss Edith Housley as Lady Holyrood is admirable, her vocal numbers being excellently rendered.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—Love Rules the World is staged here for the week by Mr. G. M. Copping's good all-round company. The much-injured hero, Harold Kingston, is played by Mr. Richard Vane in manly, vigorous style that quite won the house; the unscrupulous Stephen Blight finds an excellent exponent in Mr. John Cecil; the difficult part of the half-witted Jim Dixey is finely acted by Mr. Sidney Rennef; Mr. Alex Wilson Wynne does capital work as Paul Carruthers; and Mr. Frank Etheridge as Farmer Carruthers is very good. Miss Gertrude Sterroll provides a careful and painstaking study of the heroine, the unfortunate Maud Carruthers; the thankless part of Flo Morton is powerfully presented by Miss Constance Medwyn; Mother Grimble is characteristically portrayed by Miss Annie Brunette; Miss Nellie Freeland is a lively Kitty Snowdrop, and Mr. Matt Russell as Billy Binks is most entertaining.

KING'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Gibbon.—Miss Maud Hildyard and company in The Great Awakening are here for the week. Miss Hildyard's portrayal of Lola Selby, alias Lady Merton, is powerful and well sustained throughout; James Selby, an escaped convict, is played by Mr. Wallis Clark in vigorous, robust manner; Mr. Cecil Gray cleverly doubles the parts of Sir Henry Merton and his son, Jack Merton, and Mr. Stephen Langton furnishes a capital embodiment of Captain Harry Lambert; Miss Fay Garnet-Vayne as Molly Merton is excellent; Miss Cissie Podmore as Selina Worts and Mr. Rule Pyott as Billy Brass are responsible for the lighter side of the drama.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The topliner of a bright and attractive bill is the old favourite Kate Carney, the coster comedy queen, who presented to a full audience her new scena, The Yiddisher Boy, and scored tremendously; Violet Ray, violoncello soloist and soprano vocalist, submitted a very pleasing turn; Cissie Lupino is expert in her speciality dances, and gained cordial approval; Raymond Trio, in refined and excellent dancing and musical act, did well; Dave O'Toole, eccentric comedian, created much amusement by his droll mannerisms; and Jock Walker, comedian and patterer, was very good; another prime favourite here, May Henderson, the dusky comedy queen, gave three of her tuneful and sprightly numbers, and was vociferously encored. Payne's Bio., with some well-defined films, concluded the programme.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Mr. Arthur Roberts and company, with his new farcical sketch, Till Sunday; or, the Girl Who Took the Wrong Towing Path, takes pride of place here, and gained unbounded plaudits. Mr. Roberts enacts three of the characters in his own inimitable style; and Messrs. W. Rokeby, Harry J. Worth, Harry Huddleston, and the Misses May Hallett and Ruby Celeste are responsible for the other clever personations. The Alskarno Trio are brisk and up-to-date in their Risley business; Miss Minnie Mace, a most attractive comedienne and dancer, is well received; Mr. Godfrey James, the tenor-voiced collier, submits a tuneful turn, and is encored; Miss Rose Hamilton, a smart and vivacious comedienne, is highly appreciated; Les Piccolinos, Liliputian wonders, are a capable troupe; Miss Kitty Colyer is excellent in song and dance; Mr. Fred Earle, comedian, causes great amusement by his diverting patter and quaint ditties. The Hippo. pictures, portraying latest events, complete a good bill.

PRESTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. Gilbert Payne and his company are this week presenting the musical farcical comedy The Honeymoon for the first time in Preston. Mr. Chris Ainslie is capital as the irascible Col. Vandyke Brown; Mr. Leslie Erle sings well, and also proves himself an accomplished banjoist in the part of Jack Armstrong. Mr. Fred Fulton is very funny as Archie Mashington, and sings the songs allotted to him capitally; Messrs. Gus Tomlin, Bert Gray, and Fred Bentley, in the respective parts of L'Estrange, Timothy Tubb, and Policeman X.O. all do well. Mr. Gilbert Payne is the life and soul of the piece as Nathaniel Noodle, and works hard and receives excellent support from Miss Rosie Kearns, who creates much laughter as Emeretta Noodle; Miss Celestine Brandon as the heroine Madge Armstrong wins loud applause for her singing. Speciality dances are introduced by the Godfrey Girls, and the chorus contains some sprightly ladies with effective voices. The piece is well received.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Burke, Andrus, and Frisco cause much laughter with the comical mule in their absurdity, Trafalgar Square, London. J. C. Scatter, comedian, has some good songs; Rousby and Rene (Harry and Nell), in their Lancashire duologue, Fine Feathers, take well; the Four Breens, American comedy jugglers, are an excellent turn, their display with the Indian clubs calling forth loud applause. Scott Scott and company in their pantomime, That Awful James, cause much laughter; the Three Royal Temples, including Mme. Louie Gilbert, present one or two operatic selections in fine style; Zeta Grey and company in their musical comedy act, The Lancashire Lass, are old favourites, and score heavily; Louie Hermann gives some good songs; Elliott and Warne (Carrie and Tom) are versatile comedy artists, tumblers, and dancers; Jack Foley, comedian, and Romeo and Juliet on the Bioscope conclude a good all-round show.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Melvin.—The attraction at this theatre is Mr. George Dance's variety company, and good audiences have been secured. The principal items in the programme have been the new musical comedy sketches The Local Amateurs and The Burglars' Ball. Each of these is finely put on, and creates much amusement. Mr. Charles B. Hargreaves (as Joe Smiler in the first-named sketch) and Mr. Billy Stephens (as Swank among the burglars) are particularly successful. The programme also includes Miss Maude Dennis, with her sensational classical dance "The Vision of Salome," and the trick shooting act of Mlle. Leonie de Lausanne and company contains some really marvellous performances with rifles, and elicits thunderous applause. There are also items from Miss Madge Robertson (ballad vocalist), Hugo and Smit (a clever and comical bar performance), Mr. Syd Owen (Scotch comedian), Mr. Eugene Brandt (comedian), and illustrated songs and pictures on the Bioscope.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE AND PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—A bright and pleasant show is The New Girl, presented by Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne's company. Mr. Arthur Poole is a huge success as Colonel Bullett, V.C., and the rôle of the New Girl is finely portrayed by Miss Rosa Bennett; Miss Ivy Leighton also makes a hit as Cerise (a French school girl), and others who are responsible for really good work are Messrs. Ralph Lynn, Edgar McIntyre, and Kenneth Black, Miss Bertha Buckley, and Miss Ruby Vyvian. The piece contains some catchy numbers, and some extremely clever dancing is also seen. The situations into which the amorous Colonel finds himself led are humorous in the extreme. Good audiences have been the rule.

MARINA THEATRE.—Lessees, F. C. Dew and L. Valeriani; Manager, W. J. Attack.—This place of amusement has apparently taken a new lease of life, and under its new title—the Excelsior Picture-drome—is attracting weekly large audiences to its exhibitions of animated photography. Nothing better than the films presented have been shown in Ramsgate, and effective variety items are interspersed with capital effect. The house is run on the twice-nightly principle.

READING. — ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—This theatre will be reopened for the season on Monday next.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. G. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—The Scottish Meisters display their ability here in a vocal extravaganza entitled Ancestral Spirits. The members of the quartette all possess good voices, and sing a selection of national airs in excellent style. They also introduce some Scottish dances effectively. Luis Hardt gives a wonderful exhibition of physical strength; Durham and Ernest's company present an amusing comedietta, An Uninvited Guest; the Sisters Belmont dance very gracefully; Charles Coverdale is a witty comedian; the Brothers Etharien, eccentric comedians, give a very droll turn; Ford and Maxwell are well received; Charles Leighton does some extraordinary things on the piano; and Saxo performs on a variety of instruments. The entertainment concludes, as usual, with some good Bioscope pictures.

REDDITCH.—PUBLIC HALL.—The Universe Animated Picture Company, under the direction of Mr. F. Lee, opened here on Monday last for a short season. The specialities are given by the Dunvilles. There have been good attendances.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thos. Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—A capital programme is presented to the patrons of this popular place of amusement. "The Great Fritz" astonishes the audience by a series of mystifying illusions; Les Valdos create roars of laughter in their absurdity The Eccentric Motor-'Bus Men; Ivey Aberdare is a refreshing comedienne and skilful dancer; Clifton and Gibson, comedians, the Darntons, duettists, and the Empire Bioscope pictures complete the list.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—A Heart's Desire, by Frank Adair, is this week presented by Mr. G. M. Hurst, and draws good houses. Mr. R. F. Stacey cleverly sustains the principal rôle of Lord St. Ives, alias Jim Denman; Orya, a half-caste, is well played by Miss Lily Prescott; Luke Forrest, a blackmailer, is excellently portrayed by Mr. E. Leroy, and Mr. C. King is a fitting exponent of David McCulloch. Mr. Archie Ainsleigh as Eric May, Mr. Victor Howard as Hon. Bertie Beresford, Miss Blanche Leroy as Gwendoline Ross, and Miss Gertrude Gilman as Hon. Elsie Beresford, with Mr. J. Hames (an aged butler) and Miss R. S. Malone (a young housemaid), contribute to a lot of laughter with their comical incidents. Mr. Charles Clark as Bardsley and Mr. Arthur Jones as Gendarme also do well.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Harold Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—My Lady Betty, a romantic comedy episode by Vincent Gordon-Corelli, of the period of 1770, is well played by Frank Elliston, Richard Oliver, and Nellie Stevens. The Satanella Trio of sensational dancers and Continental comedy artists, give an expert performance. A smart acrobatic act is given by Kremka Bros., and Rose Elliott gets much applause for her songs. The excellent programme also includes the following acceptable turns:—Brothers Armstrong, comedians and patterers; Daisy Reed, comedienne and dancer; Ned Grayson, comical instrumentalist; Nellie Moore, clever impersonator of Wilfred Denvers and Gaspard, the miser; and Beau and Belle, in novelty scena Present and Past.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's melodrama A Sister's Sin is fitted into twice-nightly performances, and finds much favour by good audiences. Mr. T. Arthur Ellis as Harold Raymond and Mr. Hugh Carmichael as George Oakley ably sustain respectively the hero and villain; Miss Mabel Scudamore is a charming Minnie Hastings; Mr. W. Percy as Larry Murphy, Miss Edie Macklin as Floss Perks, and Miss Lynn Darlington (who does some excellent singing) as Nell Stubbs, are a very funny trio, who are joined in the laughter-making by Mr. Harry Lindon as Theophilus, and Mr. Ernest Frere as Ikey Moses. Charzel is excellently portrayed by Miss Clara Santley, and Redempta is also good in the hands of Miss Patricia Conaughton; Miss Violet Bates as Jack and Miss Mabel Ray as May Raymond cleverly play the children. Mr. Edward Bikker makes a good study as Walter Hastings.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Lester King.—His First Frock-coat, The Custom Officer's Revenge, The Crazy Conjurer, The Angel of the Village, The Student's Revenge, Smuggling Across the Frontier, When Father Came Home from Switzerland, Sea-birds' Haunts, and other good pictures are given twice nightly to good houses. A benefit was announced for Mr. Lester King on Friday, when several special pictures, &c., were ordered.

SEACOMBE.—IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. James Kiernan; Lessees, The Excelsior Animated Picture Co.; Manager, Mr. George Barry.—In addition to an excellent show of pictures, we have here this week Emil Aspden, comedian and mimic; Carnie Croston, vocal comedienne; and Evelin and Norrie, in a clever and interesting little comedy sketch, entitled Set a Thief.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Miss Annie Hughes' company, in The Mollusc, is the attraction here. Miss Hughes gave a delightful interpretation of Mrs. Baxter, and showed much ability; Mr. Cecil Rose was exceedingly good in the part of the husband; as Tom Kemp Mr. Athol Stewart was most pleasing, and Miss Lilias Waldegrave gave much satisfaction as Miss Roberts.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. Jas. Goodricke.—The Idler is here, played by Mr. T. Greenwood Croft's company, Mr. Herbert Ford taking the title-rôle most successfully; Mr. J. H. Beaumont as Sir John Harding did especially well; Mr. William Atfield as Simon Strong was very good; Mr. Rd. Dalton as General Merryweather was splendid, being well supported by Miss Geraldine Somerset as Kate Merryweather.

THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. L. Holland.—The principal attraction here is Mlle. Sahara, who gives a graceful exhibition of classical dances and a representation of Salome; Ryan and Hall do an excellent comic turn, and are well received; Wee McGregor sings well; the Bros. St. Clair give a good display of footer on bicycles. Other turns include George Blakeney, vocalist; Tom Moore, comedian; Leo and Roland, acrobats; Queenie May, comedienne; Hurman, juggler; and G. Webber, vocalist.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Garside.—Manager, Mr. Fred P. Morgan.—Mr. J. H. Campbell's company in The Little Breadwinner is here. Little Winnie Crisp as Meg shows much ability; Mr. W. M. Lynton as Richard Lawrence is successful; and Mr. Alfred Maurice as Joseph Prior wins recognition for his efforts. Mr Sidney Lynn as Bobby Trott is a favourite.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. Fielding Smith.—The opening took place on Monday last with a programme of first-class artists, full particulars of which appear elsewhere. Bella and Bijou are topping the bill this week, and sustained their reputation in two splendidly-acted sketches, which put the house into a capital humour; Mallia and Bart also shared the favouritism for their comical eccentricities; the Martelloni Family of acrobats gave a highly-finished display of their many abilities, and were recalled; the Sousloffs as whirlwind dancers gave a really fine exhibition, and were most favourably received; Selbo is indeed the King of Clubs, judging from his manipulation of them; the Candy Boys submitted some fine and intricate dancing; The Drink Cure, played by Tom E. Conover and company, fairly brought the audience to concert pitch, and they were also recalled. Mr. Wal Croft sang Scotch songs in capital style, and Anna Kennick sang her coon songs well. The orchestra was under the direction of Mr. F. Kell.

SHEERNESS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors. Sheerness Hippodrome Co.—The Prodigal Son is being played to good audiences this week by Miss Maud Western's excellent company. Mr. F. Dudley makes a typical squire as Sir John Fanshawe; and his two sons, Harry and Jack, are efficiently represented by Messrs. W. A. Buckstone and Claude Seaton respectively. The comedy element is exceptionally strong. Larry McGehan, in the hands of Mr. J. Newton Cowling, is a rollicking, jovial individual, and provides a character-comedy study which the audience thoroughly appreciate. Miss Maud Western as Mary, the housemaid, is an able assistant; Miss Mabel Hall wins deserved sympathy and applause as the outcast, Dick; Mr. John Levey acts with power and emotional ability as Bill Burke; and Mr. J. O. Stevenson makes the character of Ralph Marsden appear sufficiently detestable. Miss Ada Hender ably handles the part of Margaret Marsden; Miss Sophie Reiss is an emotional Nellie Burke; and the smaller rôles are in safe hands.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Manager, Mr. F. R. Griffiths; Local Representative, Mr. Cyril Parkes.—A Suspicious Husband forms a very comical film, and a powerful drama in pictures is Saved by the Telegraph Code; and a beautifully-coloured film is The Goddess and the Spinner. Other pictures include The Two Guides, A Thief by Necessity, Mont Blanc Tragedy, and The Lovelorn Goatherd.

SHEFFIELD.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—For Her Husband's Sake, an interesting new comedy-drama, was played on Monday by Mr. Millar Anderson's company. Miss Mabel Mannering appeared with success as Estelle Baudet; Mr. Robert Faulkner acted with care and distinction as Lieut. Jack Seymour, R.N.; Mr. Millar Anderson was a finished representative of Herbert Grey, the villain of the story; and other parts were distributed as follows:—Joseph Dene, Mr. J. Stafford; Sam Gorgans, Mr. Albert Rogers; Tony O'Neill, Mr. F. Doyle; Petro, Mr. Ryan; Alphonse, Mr. Walter Long; Maria Dene, Miss Maud Townsend; Vic, Miss Gem Lloyd; Eileen, Miss Doris Laine, &c. The piece was effectively staged. The well-known French play Camille was billed for the benefit of Miss Mabel Mannering on Friday.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—After an admirably-played selection from The Mikado by the splendid band, under the direction of Mr. H. Renton-Gardner, the large house on Monday was well entertained by the following artists:—Mr. Walter Passmore and his company, in a whimsical operatic absurdity The Constable and the Pictures; Messrs. Stelling and Revill, the popular Empire favourites, in their funny triple-bar act Comedy and Agility; Mr. Carl Howard, a diverting humorist; Howard and Harris, a comic tramp and a handsome burlesque actress, who do some clever and original dancing; Mr. Tom Lloyd, a laughter-provoking comedian; Miss Jennie Hartley, a pretty vocalist and dancer; Little Keeno, vocalist; Mr. Harry Marte, dancer and vocalist; and Miss Peggy Pryde, full of energy and Cockney humour. Some good comic films were also exhibited.

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—The great American artistic genius, the extraordinary Lafayette, has been retained another week. On Monday he and his talented company appeared in the gorgeously-mounted illusionary extravaganza The Lion's Bride, which was received with thunders of applause by a crowded audience; Hayman and Franklyn, society entertainers, did a smart show, and received well-deserved approbation; Silbon's Circus was a pleasing item. The graceful, pretty, and elegant Mlle. Marjuti made a big success in her act From Demon to Fairy, and other successful performers this week are Mr. Harry Friskey, a comic juggler; Theresa and May, novelty artists; Mr. Percy Farrimond, Marcel, and Boris, Continental Wonders, the Barrascope, and Miss Violet King, pianist and solo violinist.

GRAND THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—The lamp of vaudeville is shining brightly here, tended carefully by Mr. Turpin, and the following artists:—The Steelopolis, champion cake-walkers, Miss Daisy Hicks, the Velma Sisters, Mr. C. Jones, Mr. Harry Royde, the Nicholsons, Raymond, with his popular animated pictures, and the accomplished Sisters Thauban, musical experts. Mr. Turpin has been a year at the Grand, and to mark the occasion he received a little memento in the shape of a magnificent diamond scarfpin, subscribed for by a few well-wishers.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Lessees, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred W. Holmes.—Salida and Vone, the smart coon and the beautiful Créole, are starring here; Reed and Wright, variety entertainers, Harry Starling, comedian, and a series of films by all the famous firms make up an attractive programme. This establishment has been cleaned and entirely redecorated in light tones.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The Private Secretary was presented here on Monday by Mr. Edward Graham-Falcon's company. Mr. Cyril Price-Evans as the Rev. Robert Spalding wins honours by his irresistible fun; Mr. Ben Barnett is an able exponent of Harry Marsland, and Mr. Wentworth Fane gives a vigorous and entertaining portrayal of Douglas Cattermole; Mr. Tom Taylor-Vinson supplies a good rendering of Mr. Marsland, M.F.H., and Messrs. Charles Sims and Charles Clayton amuse by their impersonations of Mr. Cattermole and Mr. Sydney Gibson; Miss Sybil Chester shows ability as Miss Ashford, and wins warm appreciation; Miss Josephine Richards is well suited as Edith Marsland, Miss Winifred Williamson pleasingly enacts Eva Webster, and Miss Camilla Norrys is successful as Mrs. Stead. Messrs. J. Briggs and Sam Rossiter sustain their respective parts with credit.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—The two daily performances here gain hearty support from enthusiastic admirers. The Ten San Tan Girls provide an especial attraction in their vocal and terpsichorean scena entitled An Eastern Slave, which, with its songs and dances alike tastefully executed, gains unstinted applause. Another pleasing scena is Encore, creditably portrayed by the Misses Renee Reel and Ruby Bradfield, much enhanced by clever toe and step dancing; Mr. Geo. Neno, a popular comedian, contributes the funny sketch in The Bunham Beauty Show, and impersonates Mrs. Pimpleton with evident success. He is ably assisted by Mr. Louis R. Morton as M.C.; Eugene and Willie evoke immense enthusiasm by their talented performance as acrobatic double fiddlers; Mr. Will Crackles is entertaining as a comedian and speciality dancer; and Miss Sybil Matthews earns recognition as a vocalist. Comic, pathetic, and dramatic Bioscope pictures at the evening performances prove highly amusing, and the dance programme is gone through, while a capital entertainment is submitted in the Café Chantant, where Mrs. Joseph Carter conducts a ladies' concert party, with Mr. Mashing Dickinson at the piano.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. M. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The London Animated Picture Co., which Messrs. Gooes Bros. successfully presented last week, drew forth applause by their up-to-date entertainment. They have been retained, and the excellent programme of entirely new pictures which they show this week proves delightful and entertaining. By special request the great Ober-Ammergau Passion Play was shown on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, while at the two performances daily illustrated songs by Mr. George Lynton (baritone) are well rendered.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and General-Manager, Mr. R. Singleton.—After being closed for three weeks for cleaning purposes, the Opera House was reopened on Monday, when a new musical play, entitled The Belle of the Ball, was produced, a notice of which appears in another column.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. Roland Yorke's company appears this week in The Old Home. Daddy Dean is a natural piece of character-acting by Mr. J. H. Clyndes; the Lord Avondale of Mr. Roland Yorke is well depicted; Mr. David G. Noble gives an excellent portrayal of the Rev. Eric Armstrong; Hazel Dean is charmingly enacted by Miss Laura Walker; Mr. Fred L. Connynghame as Sam Adams and Miss Mattie Crawford as Pollie Popp are responsible for good comedy, in which they are assisted by Miss Mara Collings, who hits off the character of Bridget Donoghan in good style. The piece is well mounted.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—The Yorkshire Lad in London gives Tom Foy opportunities for his funny mannerisms, which delight the large audience. Marie Santoi and Merry Japs are well received in a Japanese tea-garden; a musical scena, entitled The Deputy, is enjoyably contributed by Orpheus; some good leaping is displayed by Huxter Bros.; Harry Drew sings two good songs; Ernie Mayne creates a favourable impression; and other excellent items are provided by Lily Black, vocal comedienne; Harry Simons, light comedian, and the Bioscope.

TIVOLI, LAYGATE-LANE.—Proprietor, Councillor J. K. Hull.—Harry North, a quaint comedian, has a good reception; Geo. Hope, a tenor, renders two songs to the delight of the audience; Doyle and Gibson contribute good jokes and patter; and the programme is completed by the Tivoloscope.

COSY CORNER, SEA FRONT.—Mr. George Burton's excellent company of comedians still attract good audiences by their bright songs, comedy items, concerted pieces, and an amusing sketch.

STALYBRIDGE.—GRAND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Fioni; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. A. Jackson.—Foremost in this week's programme are Thomas and Taylor, who create much merriment in Fun on the Midland, whilst other meritorious turns are given by Pete and Juno, coloured comedians and dancers; Mollie Augarde, chic comedienne; Friscari, king of jugglers; the Lizette troupe of lady acrobats; George Rae, Scotch comedian; the Clarkes, speciality artists; and others.

ST. HELENS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic. Carnell.—Miss Helen Roberts presents a series of classic dances, her interpretation of Mendelssohn's Spring Song being perhaps the most beautiful; the Stowe Bros. execute some exceedingly clever feats as equilibrists; Arthur Andrews is amusing; and Bessie Travis, the lady ventriloquist, is entertaining. Acceptable turns are also given by Maggie Rimmer, George Acre, and Charlie Craston.

SALADS are rendered very appetizing by the addition of

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE.

It much improves their flavour and enhances their "freshness."

By Royal Warrant to H.M. the King.

STOCKPORT.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—Messrs. Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod's company has entertained large audiences here this week with capital representations of The Prodigal Parson. Mr. Logan Darra acts impressively as the Rev. Tom Godley; Enoch Juggins is capably impersonated by Mr. Alfred Northway; and Mr. Charles Ashwell makes an excellent Ben Jaggins. Phil Drive is a thoroughly amusing character in the hands of Mr. Owen Remonde; Miss Enid Edmi acts exceptionally well as Gretchen; and Fern Godley is charmingly portrayed by Miss Violet Hammersley.

Empire. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black. —The Red Letter, presented by Messrs. Leslie Bell, F. Wilson, G. Graham, and Miss Lily Pearl, is the chief attraction here this week, and has proved highly interesting. Clever and pleasing are Les Bollingers, the Parisian rag painters; Nellie Walton, the singing mill girl, is heartily applauded; Cumminger and Colonna are expert sand dancers; the Three Seabornes are smart acrobats; Spry and Monti, vocalists and dancers, are an amusing pair; and Chas. Cassell, vocal comedian, and Babs Lloyd, coon vocalist and dancer, contribute their share to the entertainment.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—The Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—Mrs. Fred J. Kirke's company this week is presenting the musical drama In Old Madrid. Mr. Leslie Austin scores a success as Frank Lyndhurst; plenty of comedy is obtained from the part of Horatio J. Rogers by Mr. W. T. Hybert; and Miss Edna Clare sustains the part of Violet Lyndhurst capably. The other parts are well filled.

SUNDERLAND.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Grieveson; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Douglas Ettrick, L.Mus., L.C.M.—This week's attraction is provided by Mr. Fred Granville's No. 1 company, in the thrilling drama, It's Never too Late to Mend, which, judging from its reception here, has lost none of its drawing capacity. Mr. Cecil A. Melton plays well as George Fielding; Mr. E. Howard Templeton is a forcible exponent of Tom Robinson; Mr. Charles F. Johnson is adequate as the Prison Chaplain; and Mr. Harry Cane is excellent as the rascally attorney, Peter Crawley. Mr. Edwin Davies enacts the Jewish Levi for all it is worth; and Mr. T. G. Warry, as the aboriginal Kalingaloonger, submits a painstaking study. Miss Gertrude Entwhistle is pleasing as Susan Merton; Miss M. Ashton is successful as Mary; and Miss Millie Wilton capably portrays the part of the victim-waif, Josephs. Mr. Leonard Marshall is responsible for the rôle of William Fielding; and Mr. R. W. Weldon enacts that of Mr. Merton.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Premier honours are divided between Marie Kendall, the versatile comedienne, and Jack Pleasants, a popular comedian. The former strikes a lively chord with her "Taximeter cab," and other numbers; and Mr. Pleasants with his unique humour also finds much favour. Sanford and Lyons, smart patterers and simultaneous dancers, are prominent; Albert Whelan, the Australian entertainer, agreeably amuses his audiences; and others contributing include Irene Rose, in an incident entitled Her First Engagement; Gwennie Hasto, vocalist and dancer; Cole de Losse Duo, in comedy wire act; Steve McCarthy, comedian and dancer; and an exhibition of Bioscope pictures.

SWANSEA.—The Star.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Messrs. Chas. H. Phelp and Ernest Vaughan's company produce, with effect, a new drama, entitled Man or Beast, a detailed account of which is given on another page.

Empires, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—Mark Sheridan is the chief fun-promoter at the Empire this week, and his drolleries keep the whole house roaring; Lottie's Lennox's songs sparkle like her dresses, which is saying a lot; an admirable athletic turn is contributed by the De Wynne Bros.; Spry and Austin are old favourites, and this visit their turn is as humorous as ever; a turn of undeniable excellence is given by Arabella Allen, whose impersonations of Shakespeare's and Dickens' characters are excellent; a talented musical turn is contributed by Ralph and Nellie Howard. Kisby, the call-boy, Adey Spencer, and the Bioscope conclude.

TON-Y-PANDY.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—For the current week Fred Karno's company in two farcical sketches is the attraction. Two shows a night are given with great success. In The Mumming Birds the honours fall to the precocious "boy" in Etons and the intoxicated "Johnnie." Sid Owen and W. H. Downs are both well received in their respective songs, and the other turns are of a high standard of merit.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Stone; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar Harper.—Heading the bill we have Eddie Stidder and Gwennie Dunbar in a clever musical act; Bishop and Vale, eccentric knockabouts, score well; Massons juggles with success, and May Neale and the Neilsons also add to the pleasure of the evening. Excellent pictures include The Black Princess and The Two Brothers.

TORQUAY.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. Herbert Greville's company is here this week in that pretty little comedy Merely Mary Ann. In the title-rôle Miss Jessica Solomon is a great success, and gives a really sympathetic rendering of the part, whilst she is ably assisted by Mr. Martyn Roland, who does admirably as Lancelot; Mr. Stanley Logan as his friend Peter is remarkably good, and Miss Violet Greville makes a typical lodging-housekeeper. The somewhat quaint part of the Rev. Samuel Smudge is in the capable hands of Mr. Robert Entwistle, who certainly makes the most of his opportunities, whilst Mr. Herbert Smale also does well as Herr Brahmson.

Princess Pier Concert Hall.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—"The M.A.'s" Costume Comedy Company occupy the boards here this week, and are doing well. Miss Gladys Robinson has a powerful soprano voice and Miss Minnie Hull is a good contralto; Miss Edith Eatherley at the piano renders some amusing sketches, and provides some excellent fun; Mr. Stanley Ridout, tenor, and Mr. Adolph Fowler, bass, do well, and Mr. Courtney Mayverne introduces some ventriloquial business.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Manager, Mr. A. H. Burdett.—The present is the last week of the Hippodrome season until it is resumed in October next, and the closing programme is a particularly strong one, including, as it does, Carl Hertz in his wonderful illusions; James Fawn, in his latest successes; Flo Cecil, a chic comedienne; Morrin and Cardiff, who repeat their recent successes before Royalty; Lena Leslie, comedienne; and Jack Binns, vocal comedian, as well as the Ruffell Bioscope. Commencing on the August Bank holiday there will be a two months' dramatic season. The first Hippodrome season has proved a remarkable success, and is playing to crowded houses, even in July.

TYNEMOUTH. Palace-by-the-Sea and Summer and Winter Gardens.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—Another excellent week's business is being done here. On Sunday night a concert of exceptional merit was put on, including such vocalists as Miss Ada Crossley and Miss N. Strangham, and a juvenile boy pianist who was quite a treat to hear. The varieties for the week include Gilbert Girard, the clever mimic of musical instruments, animals, &c.; Wright and Lawson, knockabouts, who are very smart; the De Veres' Marionette Theatre, cleverly manipulated and amusing; Les Rubens, the Merry Vagabonds, in Gipsy vocal scena; and Lytton and Band, sketch artists and dancers. The Palace Pictures complete the bill.

WAKEFIELD. — Hippodrome. — Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The Royal Banzai troupe of Japanese equilibrists give a clever performance; the Two St. Johns contribute a good musical and dancing turn; Paul Edwards and Louie Dacre, sketch artists, prove popular. Other turns include Miss Cissie Ferndale, comedienne; Mr. Horace Jones, character-comedian; and Miss Pattie Bella, comedienne.

WARRINGTON.—Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Some excellent pictures are shown here this week, and special reference should be made of those depicting A Trip to Canada, The Customs Officer's Revenge, and The Great Fire.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—Ferguson and Mack head the bill here this week, and their absurdity, The Dimple Sisters, is responsible for convulsive laughter. The Vyponds are delightful entertainers; Miss Vypond charms all with her rendering of "Maggie, the Girl of Dundee," whilst Mr. Vipond scores a brilliant success with his pianoforte solos. Hampton and Bauman are rare exponents of darkey life; Norah Stockelle is a dainty comedienne; Ryder Stone is a capital comedian, his song "Sing, sing" meeting with approbation; W. E. Whittle is a first-class ventriloquist; and Lew Towers, a smart actor-vocalist. Madge Filla, with good singing and dancing, makes many friends. Pictures showing the life of a governess are rare specimens of the photographer's art.

WEDNESBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Mr. F. B. Woulfe's celebrated company is drawing crowded houses here this week in the successful drama Trilby. An excellent interpretation of Trilby is given by Miss Ethel Griffies, and the important and characteristic part of Svengali is in the worthy hands of Mr. F. B. Woulfe; as Gecko Mr. S. Crossley makes a capital study; Mr. L. Manton does remarkably good work as the Rev. Mr. Bagot; the rôles of Sandy McAllister and Talbot Wynne ("Taffy") are admirably portrayed by Mr. Bob Anderson and Mr. Claude Aymond respectively; an effective rendering of the Hon. W. Bagot ("Little Billie") is presented by Mr. C. Melvyn; Miss Mildred Eversleigh makes up well as Mme. Vinard, an das Lady Cornelys Miss Madge Nelson is all that could be desired; well-merited applause is accorded to Miss Louie Adaire for her able embodiment of Lady Alice. East Lynne and Jane Shore are also billed.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Miller.—Another week of pictures is the attraction here, and the audiences are thoroughly enjoying A Tour Through Ireland, £100 Reward, A Cockney Courtship, A Sentimental Thief, Too Old to Work, Wun Lung in London, Caught in his own Trap, and The Vanishing Thief.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Grand Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Nonentities are making their first appearance here and are well received. Mr. Fred Evered was encored for his rendering of "I saw my chance"; Mr. Oscar Mills excels as a humorist; Mr. Roland Foster is heard to advantage in "Alcala"; and Mr. L. F. Summer gives a fine rendering of "Thora"; Miss Louie Counsell sings "My dusky queen" charmingly; Miss Madeline Stone's Irish folk song is well received, and so too, is Miss Linda De Laine's pianoforte solo. Mr. John Lambert shows some very good pictures on the Bioscope.

Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Will Dennis's company is here this week in Little Lord Fauntleroy. Mr. Francis Roberts's impersonation of the Earl of Dorincourt is remarkably fine; Miss Daisy May shows exceptional talent in the title-rôle; Mrs. Errol is well portrayed by Miss Gertrude Netterville; Miss Marion Fawcett is extremely good as Minna; Mr. A. Curtis is humorous as Wilkins; so, too, is Mr. H. Lawrence as Dick; Mr. Hobbs finds a good exponent in Mr. William Lockhart; Mr. G. Roberts is praiseworthy as Mr. Havisham; and the same can be said of Mr. N. Clifton as Higgins.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Miss Mary Neil and Mr. George Kirk and their well-selected company are presenting here this week the drama From Shop Girl to Duchess. Miss Neil as Sylvia Grey adds immensely to her reputation with a fine emotional portrayal of the character; Miss Florrie Grove is a capital exponent of the part of Tilly Dobson; Miss Queenie Lamont wins admiration as Gertrude Haynes; Miss Amy B. Ellis is a great success as the Dowager; and Miss Marie Clavering figures well as Lady Cinderella. Mr. Douglas Cecil sustains the rôle of the Duke of St. Baynum with distinction; Mr. D. Tremayne is a capable Pelham; Mr. Frank S. Strickland performs his part as Gilbert Spate with consummate ability; Mr. Robert Cromwell proves a most humorous apprentice as Tommy Tinkler; and Mr. T. Lionel Ellis does well as Sir Morris Maitland.

The Empire.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Hunt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Marco.—The admirable pictures shown this week include A Story of Treasure Island, A Bad Shilling (depicting a thrilling and dramatic story), The Enchanted Guitar, A Romance of the Fur Country, and many most beautiful coloured films. Miss Ivy Dene, a dainty soubrette and clever dancer, meets with a great reception, and the Gelders (Van and Lily), favourite magicians and entertainers, are very popular conjurers.

WORCESTER. — Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Le Wards.—The Musical Keiths are accomplished and agile musicians; La Dor troupe of acrobats are marvellously daring; Matadors, in A Spanish Bullfight; and the Stanleys, in a musical sketch, are most amusing. La Petite Carlina is equally successful as a dancer and as a quick-change artist; Mar and Kooney and the Danbys are very acceptable as funny men; the Clarkes' "globe-trotting" is very clever; and Karl Edwards' coster songs are very taking. On Wednesday Besses o' th' Barn Band took possession of the theatre, and on Thursday a company of Malvern amateurs produced a musical comedy, entitled The Mummy, written by amateurs, in aid of the funds of the County Cricket Club.

WORTHING.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—A happy selection has been made in Messrs. Frank C. Bayly and Arthur Eldred's company in When We Were Twenty-One. As Richard Carew Mr. Frank Bayly gives a highly finished impersonation; Mr. Arthur Eldred does justice to the character of Richard Audaine; Mr. F. Rawson Buckley excellently portrays the character of Sir Horace Plumley; Miss Margaret Yarde leaves nothing to be desired in the part of Kara Glynesk; and Miss Violet Graham is excellent as Babette. The remaining characters are in capable hands. For Thursday Mr. George Waters' company was announced to pay a welcome revisit, producing The Gay Deceiver.

WREXHAM.—Empire.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jno. J. Scott.—Patrick Playfair, a clever papierographist, assisted by Miss Vera Davis, gives an original paper speciality; and Cliff and Kean, in their comedy and dancing act, meet with an enviable reception. The animated pictures included the sensational Dieppe Motor Race.

THE NATURE OF IAGO.

So much has already been written upon the character of Iago—so begins an excellent article by W. H. Hadow in the Albany Review—that it may seem a needless temerity to add anything to the tale. Every line has been scrutinised, every feature interpreted; there is, it would seem, no corner to which a further explanation can penetrate. And yet, when all is said, the result is not wholly satisfying. The "motiveless malignity" which is Coleridge's interpretation, the "Artist in Tragedy," which is Mr. Swinburne's, both seem to imply that for once Shakespeare has abandoned human nature: that he has described a temperament which is wholly diabolic. Mr. Robert Bridges believes that "the whole thing is impossible": that the Iago presented to the audience is not the Iago who lives among the other characters of the play. Mr. Bradley, though he comes nearer than anyone else to a complete picture, yet leaves one or two points in darkness. It may be worth inquiring whether the facts cannot bear a simpler explanation than they have yet received: whether, when Kean played the part as a human being he may not have been more in the right than Hazlitt who censured him: whether, in short, Shakespeare's "Villain," as the first Folio bluntly describes him, may not be a consistent villain of flesh and blood, rather than an impossible combination of mere malice and hypocrisy.

At the outset of the play he is twenty-eight years of age, which means that he has been about ten years in the service. He is a capable soldier, who has fought well "at Rhodes, at Cyprus and on other ground, Christian and heathen," who has risen to the office of Standard-bearer, and who believes himself to have a claim to that of Lieutenant. Again, he is evidently popular, a genial companion at the canteen, who can take a glass and sing a good song; and, what is more to the purpose, he is the trusted adviser of everybody upon the stage. "Honest Iago," they call him, and when any one of them is in trouble—Roderigo, Cassio, Othello, Desdemona herself, he is the one person in whom they all confide, and to whose counsel they all appeal. It is clear that he has never been found out in any act of treachery or mischief, and, accomplished hypocrite though he be, ten years is a long period for a successful masquerade. Again, he is wholly and inherently selfish: intent on his own advancement, and unscrupulous as to the means of securing it; but there are two qualities which, from a certain form of selfishness, are almost inseperable. The first is a superficial good-nature which likes popularity, and is quite ready to purchase it by gift and service so long as they involve no serious cost. Many of the most selfish men in the world are agreeable, and even kindly, until you cross their interests; then they are adamantine. The second is an instinctive dislike of the sight of pain, except where the temper is made cruel by anger or fear or jealously. It is not pity, it is not compassion, it is a personal feeling of discomfort which is a spurious counterfeit of these. And because the world takes little pains to distinguish counterfeit from sterling, such persons are accredited with a sympathetic disposition when in reality they are only anxious to rid themselves of an annoyance. We have, therefore, but to suppose that, up to the scene which immediately precedes the play, Iago had never found any occasion to sting: that his life had run on a straight course with no rival to remove and no injury to avenge; if this be granted there is no difficulty in explaining his popularity and the confidence which every one reposes in him. He had all the external qualities of "a good fellow," and nothing had as yet occured to bring out the latent evil below the surface. Thirdly, his intellectual power, though extraordinarily keen and subtle, has very obvious limitations. He can treat the immediate situation, he can weave the immediate strand of the plot, with a skill and a dexterity that are almost uncanny; and it is evident as the play proceeds that he takes an intense pleasure in the exercise of his sinister ingenuity. But he has almost no foresight. His plot, as will be seen presently, is from hand to mouth, it constantly puts him to new shifts, it hurries him into a catastrophe of the nature of which he had, when he began, no expectation. His intellect, in short, is comparable to that of a chess player who can make a brilliant next move, but who cannot see six moves ahead.

Fourthly, and this is in some respects the most important point of all, he is "a filthy cynic" in his estimate of women. He simply does not believe in woman's purity, nor does he regard his disbelief as a matter of any moment. He takes the view, which was commonly held by mediæval satire and comedy, that all women are "guinea-hens," that all love is appetite, and that a deceived husband is a target for laughter. He uses the vilest terms when he tells Brabantio of Desdemona's flight, and has evidently no idea that they are offensive. He sets forth his doctrine to Roderigo in an easy, familiar tone, as though it were a commonplace of reasonable judgment. His way of entertaining Desdemona, on her arrival in Cyprus, is to regale her with epigrams upon the unchastity of her sex. And, for climax of testimony, he comes so near to believing in his wife's infidelity that he actually taxes her with it; yet it does not seem to make any difference in his treatment of her.

Such is the character—cold, selfish, unscrupulous, not gratuitiously malicious, impure, and therefore sceptical of purity, keen witted, but almost wholly devoid of imagination—into which there falls like poison a rankling sense of injustice. His friends have applied that he many have the Lieutenancy; it has been given to Cassio, whom, rightly or wrongly, he regards as his inferior. It is idle to inquire (though it has often been inquired) whether his description of Cassio is a fair statement: you do not expect an angry man to speak fairly of a successful rival. The keynote of the play is that he is mortally aggrieved and offended by Othello's action. When Roderigo says:

"Thou told'st me
That thou didst hold him in thy hate,"

Iago answers, not with a plain affirmation, but with a flash of rage:

"Despise me if I do not;"

and then breaks, like a flame, into the tirade about favouritism and neglected merit, which is one of the most genuine outbursts of emotion in his entire part. There is, I believe, no understanding of the play unless we realise that Iago's first motive is a rankling sense of personal wrong. He hates Cassio because he is jealous of him; he hates Othello for having given him cause of jealousy; he makes up his mind to cry quits upon both of them. But it is not a diabolic attraction to evil for evil's sake: it is a very human passion of revenge smarting under injury.

As yet there is not the smallest indication that he wishes or contemplates the death of either. If he had, there were plenty of means at his disposal. He simply wants to hit back: first, to wound Othello without losing his favour; then to degrade Cassio and "have his place." And here comes in the second of his three motives. His desire of revenge, though keen, is not so keen as to obliterate his ambition. He wishes "to serve his turn upon the Moor," but he wishes also that the Moor shall appoint him Lieutenant. And so from the first he stands committed to a double game.

Mr. Frederick Melville has completed a new melodrama, which is entitled Married to the Wrong Man. It will be produced at the Elephant and Castle on Monday.

JOHNSON AND SHAKESPEARE.

It may be said of Shakespeare, writes Hazlitt, that "those who are not for him are against him"; for indifference is here the height of injustice. We may sometimes, in order "to do a great right, do a little wrong." An overstrained enthusiasm is more pardonable with respect to Shakespeare than the want of it; for our admiration cannot easily surpass his genius. We have a high respect for Dr. Johnson's character and understanding, mixed with something like personal attachment; but he was neither a poet nor a judge of poetry. He might in one sense be a judge of poetry as it falls within the limits and rules of prose, but not as it is poetry. Least of all was he qualified to be a judge of Shakespeare, who "alone is high fantastical." Let those who have a prejudice against Johnson read Boswell's Life of him: as those whom he has prejudiced against Shakespeare should read his Irene. We do not say that a man to be a critic must necessarily be a poet; but to be a good critic, he ought not to be a bad poet. Such poetry as a man deliberately writes, such, and such only, will he like. Dr. Johnson's preface to his edition of Shakespeare looks like a laborious attempt to bury the characteristic merits of his author under a load of cumbrous phraseology, and to weigh his excellences and defects in equal scales, stuffed full of "swelling figures and sonorous epithets." Nor could it well be otherwise; Dr. Johnson's general powers of reasoning overlaid his critical susceptibility. All his ideas were cast in a given mould, in a set form; they were made out by rule and system, by climax, inference, and antithesis. Shakespeare's were the reverse. Johnson's understanding dealt only in round numbers: the fractions were lost upon him. He reduced everything to the common standard of conventional propriety; and the most exquisite refinement or sublimity produced an effect on his mind only as they could be translated into the language of measured prose. To him an excess of beauty was a fault; for it appeared to him like an excrescence; and his imagination was dazzled by a blaze of light. His writings neither shone with the beams of native genius, nor reflected them. The shifting shapes of fancy, the rainbow hues of things made no impression on him: he seized only on the permanent and tangible. He had no idea of natural objects, but "such as he could measure with a two-foot rule, or tell upon ten fingers": he judged of human nature in the same way, by mood and figure: he saw only the definite, the positive, and the practical, the average forms of things, not their striking differences—their classes, not their degrees. He was a man of strong common sense and practical wisdom, rather than of genius or feeling. He retained the regular habitual impressions of actual objects, but he could not follow the rapid flights of fancy or the strong movements of passion. That is, he was to the poet what the painter of still life is to the painter of history. Common sense sympathises with the impressions of things on ordinary minds in ordinary circumstances: genius catches the glancing combinations presented to the eye of fancy under the influence of passion. It is the province of the didactic reasoner to take cognizance of those results of human nature which are constantly repeated and always the same, which follow one another in regular succession, which are acted upon by large classes of men, and embodied in received customs, laws, language, and institutions; and it was in arranging, comparing and arguing on these kind of general results that Johnson's excellence lay. But he could not quit his hold of the common-place and mechanical, and apply the genral rule to the particular exception, or show how the nature of man was modified by the workings of passion or the infinite fluctuations of thought and accident. Hence he could judge neither of the heights nor depths of poetry. Nor is this all; for being conscious of great powers in himself, and those powers of an adverse tendency to those of his author, he would be for setting up a foreign jurisdiction over poetry, and making criticism a kind of Procrustes's bed of genius, where he might cut down imagination to matter of fact, regulate the passions according to reason, and translate the whole into logical diagrams and rhetorical declamation. Thus he says of Shakespeare's characters, in contradiction to what Pope had observed, and to what everyone else feels, that each character is a species, instead of being an individual. He, in fact, found the general species or didactic form in Shakespeare's characters, which was all he sought or cared for; he did not find the individual traits or the dramatic distinctions which Shakespeare has engrafted on this general nature, because he felt no interest in them. Shakespeare's bold and happy flights of imagination were equally thrown away upon our author. He was not only without any particular fineness or organic sensibility, alive to all the "mighty world of ear and eye," which is necessary to the painter or musician, but without that intenseness of passion which, seeking to exaggerate whatever excites the feelings of pleasure or power in the mind, and moulding the impressions of natural objects according to the impulses of imagination, produces a genius and a taste for poetry. According to Dr. Johnson, a mountain is sublime, or a rose is beautiful; for that their name and definition imply. But he would no more be able to give the description of Dover cliff in Lear, or the description of flowers in The Winter's Tale, than to describe the objects of a sixth sense; nor do we think he would have any very profound feeling of the beauty of the passages here referred to. A stately commonplace, such as Congreve's description of a ruin in the Mourning Bride, would have answered Johnson's purpose just as well, or better than the first; and an indiscriminate profusion of scents and hues would have interfered less with the ordinary routine of his imagination than Perdita's lines, which seem enamoured of their own sweetness:—

"Daffodils
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath."

No one who does not feel the passion which these objects inspire can go along with the imagination which seeks to express that passion and the uneasy sense of delight accompanying it by something still more beautiful, and no one can feel this passionate love of nature without quick natural sensibility. To a mere literal and formal apprehension, the inimitably characteristic epithet, "violets dim," must seem to imply a defect rather than a beauty; and to anyone not feeling the full force of that epithet, which suggests an image like "the sleepy eye of love," the allusion to "the lids of Juno's eyes" must appear extravagant and unmeaning. Shakespeare's fancy lent words and images to the most refined sensibility to nature struggling for expression: his descriptions are identical with the things themselves, seen through the fine medium of passion: strip them of that connection, and try them by ordinary conceptions and ordinary rules, and they are as grotesque and barbarous as you please. By thus lowering Shakespeare's genius to the standard of common-place invention it was easy to show that his faults were as great as his beauties; for the excellence, which consists merely in a conformity to rules, is counterbalanced by the technical violation of them.

The wedding took place at Birkenhead on the 22nd ult. of Mr. Reginald Grant, the acting-manager of the New Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, and Miss Ethel Roche. Amongst the numerous gifts was a silver-mounted oak tea-tray and a tea set from the staff of the theatre.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, June 18.—Humpty Dumpty has now a second edition at Her Majesty's Theatre, added interest being created by new business and songs by Mr. Bert Gilbert. The booking is still good, but on Saturday next Mother Goose will be revived after about eighteen months' travel all over the Commonwealth.

"The Prince of Pilsen" is enjoying a good time at the Royal, where Mr. J. C. Williamson's other company devote every possible energy to the public's amusement. Mr. Charles Loder and Mr. George Whitehead increase their own popularity, and Miss Amy Murphy and Miss Mabel Morgan prove the value of the native vocal product. Next Saturday Miss Fanny Dango will be the French maid, having happily recoved from her illness, and Miss Alma Barber will be the Edith Adams of the cast.

At the Criterion the Flemming-Day company has hit the popular taste in The Mummy and the Humming Bird. But on the 20th The Morals of Marcus will be staged, with Miss Beatrice Day as Judith Mainwaring and Mr. A. S. Homewood as Sir Marcus Ordeyne, with several new folks to participate in the distribution of parts.

The Tivoli has a very large bill, and Mr. Harry Rickards gives his patrons the best result from his to and fro voyaging in quest of talent. The Deane Tribune Trio, Regoletto Brothers, the Ahlbergs, Baby Watson, Bebe Gourlay, Fred Bluett, Will Lochrane, Marsh Little, Beatrice Mercer, Naomi Tanner, Clarence Tisdale, Alberto, and others appear, to be added to on Saturday by the appearance of the Desmond Sisters.

The Royal Artillery Band from Newcastle (England) arrived on Tuesday, and was welcomed at the Band Rotunda in Hyde Park. The associated bands of city and suburbs—200 strong—met the visitors at the Railway Station, and played them thence to the Park, where the Brigadier-General and several men prominent in public life made speeches of welcome. In the evening the band, under the capital conductorship of Mr. Robert Smith, roused a Town Hall audience to unwonted enthusiasm. Every item was loudly applauded and encored. The soloists were Messrs. McEvoy (cornet), A. Arlom (piccolo), and Smith (clarionet). Mr. P. A. Howells, of Adelaide, directs the venture, and the popular Mr. M. Marcus is touring manager.

The Sydney Philharmonic Society on the 11th gave its first concert, under the bâton of its new conductor, Mr. Joseph Bradley, and perhaps the best performance ever given by the society was furnished to the members and public. Mendelssohn's "Lobegesang" and Beethoven's "Choral Fantasia" were the pièces de résistance, with Mme. Slapoffski, Miss Zara Wolinski, and Mr. Walter Whyte as soloists in the "Hymn of Praise," and Mr. Lawrence Godfrey Smith solo pianist in the Fantasia. Mme. Slapoffski also sang the "Inflammatus," and Mr. Whyte the "Cujus animam" from Rossini's Stabat Mater, both being in splendid voice.

Miss Gladys Alpen, daughter of Herr Hugo Alpen, teacher of singing to the State schools, gave a valedictory concert at the Town Hall. The young vocalist obtained unstinted praise. Signor Addison, Miss Hilda Harris, and Mr. W. Knight, a new tenor from Queensland, enhanced the pleasure of the evening by capitally-rendered selections.

SYDNEY, June 23.—The Morals of Marcus is the Criterion bill, and a very fine interpretation of W. J. Locke's comedy is given, the new man, Mr. A. S. Homewood, proving himself an exceptionally clever actor. Mr. Homewood as Sir Marcus exploits a different rôle from his Italian roué in The Mummy and the Humming Bird, and comes out with great credit. He has with him a consummate actress in Miss Beatrice Day, whose sweet charm as Judith Mainwaring pervades the whole play. Miss Guildford Quin's Carlotta is a strong, forceful characterisation. Mr. W. J. Montgomery makes Sebastian Pasquale picturesque and attractive. Another returned favourite is Miss Nelly Mortyne, who is a formidable Mrs. Ordeyne; Miss Jean Blair makes an excellent Antoinette; and Miss Elsie Clarens' Mrs. McMurray and Mr. J. R. Forde's Stensor are good performances. The play is admirably staged by Mr. Flemming, and tutored by Mr. H. W. Varna.

"Mother Goose" was revived on the 19th by Mr. J. C. Williamson at Her Majesty's for one week. The two comedians, Harry Phydora and Harry Shine, were in their old parts as Mother Goose and her son, and that means roaring fun for three solid hours. Mr. Bert Gilbert was out of the cast. Miss Mabel Morgan replaced Miss Florence Young as Colin, and Miss Nance Maher was Jill, instead of Miss Olive Morell, both being acceptable. Miss Beatrice English filled Miss Celie Ghiloni's place in the singing of Heartsease's music, and Pressy Preston again scored as Gretchen. Next Saturday The Thief, with Miss Margaret Anglin, Mr. George S. Titheradge, and Mr. Dion Titheradge in the cast, will be staged here.

At the Royal The Prince of Pilsen is running strong. Miss Fanny Dango has recovered, and now plays the French maid, while her clever substitute, Miss Alma Barber, now plays the Vassar student, formerly acted by Miss Maud Thorne, on her way to England at present. Miss Dango was warmly welcomed, and the public gave evidence of its love for Miss Barber by applauding her every effort.

The Tivoli welcomed the Desmond Sisters in their charming singing of "The East and West End." They are a judicious addition to Mr. Harry Rickards' bill. Mr. Grafton West, comedian and dancer, appeared. Another new-comer, Mr. Harry Linden, made an instantaneous success in his comedy work. Miss Ida Berridge is a pleasing serio-comic singer, and Mr. Richard Cecil a good baritone. The Gibson Girls returned, and the Deane Tribune Trio, Baby Watson (a furious favourite), and Mr. Fred Bluett help Mr. Rickards' treasury to keep full.

Miss E. Nolan-O'Connor, who made such a success in The Parasites at the Scala last month, has been specially engaged by Mr. Percy Hutchison to understudy Mrs. Brown-Potter in Lady Frederick.

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT AND THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS.

BY

CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.

2.—The Petty Cash Book is described in Chapter I. The totals of the various columns must be posted to their proper accounts in the General Ledger.

3.—The Invoice Journal is the usual columnar one. The totals of the columns are posted to the General Ledger, the details being credited to the personal accounts in the Creditors' Ledger.

4.—The Creditors' Ledger or Bought Ledger is posted from the Cash Book and Invoice Journal. It is advisable to keep a total account in the General Ledger (Sundry Creditors' Account), so that this ledger may be balanced separately.

5.—The personal accounts in the Advertisement Ledger are debited from the Journal. The basis of the Journal entry is obtained from the cards, as described in Chapter I.

6.—The principal accounts in the General Ledger are:—

(1) Share Capital.
(2) House Receipts.
(3) Library Receipts.
(4) Bar Receipts.
(5) Programme Receipts.
(6) Salaries.
(7) Sundry Creditors.
(8) Stage Expenses.
(9) General Expenses.
(10) Production. (A separate account must be opened for each production.)
(11) Bar Purchases.
(12) Bar Account.
(13) Printing and Stationery.
(14) Advertising.
(15) Authors' Fees.
(16) Programme Account.
(17) Plant.
(18) Furniture and Fittings.
(19) Lighting.
(20) Bar Fixtures and Fittings.
(21) Tour Cash Account. (A separate one for each tour.)

The House, Programme, and Bar Receipt Accounts must be agreed with the House Receipts Book. The receipts from Libraries Account, after bringing in outstandings, should be agreed with the Libraries Book.

The Salaries Account should be debited from the Cash Book with the total weekly salaries paid. A Journal entry must be periodically passed to write off those salaries which should be charged to the Bar, Advertising, and Programme Accounts, in accordance with the analysis shown in the Salaries Book. It will almost invariably be necessary also to debit each production with some part of the salaries.

The Sundry Creditors' Account is credited with the amount of the total column in the Invoice Journal and debited with the total of the cash paid, as shown by the Bought Ledger column in the Cash Book. The balance of this account should agree with the total of the balances in the Creditors' Ledger.

The Production Accounts require very careful attention. It is of the utmost importance that nothing but the expenditure actually incurred in the original cost of staging the new piece should be charged under this head.

The value of a production, of course, varies very largely in accordance with the nature of the piece, and it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast lines as to the proper manner in which these accounts should be written off.

The value of the properties, dresses and scenery, after a piece has been taken off, is usually trifling, compared with the original cost. It may happen that a tour is being sent out, and that the original scenery, etc., can be adapted for the tour fit-up. In this case the tour production should be debited and the original production account credited with the estimated value. In any case, the whole of the cost of a production should be charged against revenue during the run of the piece, except where there is very good reason to anticipate a revival. Even in the latter case there would necessarily be a further large expenditure, and the amount carried forward should in all cases be a very small proportion of the original cost. The only basis to work on is the probable length of the run of the piece, and to write off a proportionate amount.

It is usual to keep each production in the books at a purely nominal figure as a matter of record.

The Bar Account, after transferring the purchases, receipts, and salaries, and bringing in the stock, will show the profit or loss on this department. The Programme Account should be similarly treated.

Furniture and fittings are subjected to very hard wear, and must be amply depreciated. This will be readily understood when the cost of carpets and the frequent renewals of the same is taken into consideration.

The Tour Cash Accounts, if kept on the principle suggested in the previous chapter, show at any time the exact profit or loss on any particular tour. A detailed Profit and Loss Account can be obtained from the Tour Book.

Where a Treasury Sheet is used, an account should be opened for the Treasurer, to which should be debited all cheques drawn to him. From the Treasury Analysis Book the expenditure must be journalised, and the balance on the account agreed with the actual sum the Treasurer has in hand.

The remaining books and accounts mentioned above do not call for any special mention.

The results of commercial trading are most readily appreciated when the percentages that the expenses bear to the turnover are compared.

In theatrical affairs these percentages would not convey a true comparison, as there would be large variations depending on the length of the run of a piece.

The best method of comparison is to average the expenses according to the number of weeks the piece is running.

Where this is done it will be found convenient to keep an Average Book, so that a permanent record can be retained.

The ruling shown below will be found easily adaptable to different circumstances. If considered necessary, each department can be treated separately. The specimen ruling shown is for the House Receipts only and expenses chargeable against the same.

A MEDIÆVAL SHOCKER.

"This lurid little play" (remarks Mr. J. A. Symonds) is the phrase by which Mr. Swinburne characterises A Yorkshire Tragedy. No better words could be chosen to convey its specific quality. Like the asp, it is short, ash-coloured, poison-fanged, blunt-headed, abrupt in movement, hissing and wriggling through the sands of human misery. Having dealt with it, we are fain to drop it, as we should a venomous thing, so concentrated is the loathing and repulsion it excites.

"Walter Calverley, of Calverley, in Yorkshire, Esquire, murdered two of his young children, stabbed his wife into the body with full purpose to have murdered her, and instantly went from his house to have slain his youngest child at nurse, but was prevented. For which fact, at his trial at York, he stood mute, and was judged to be pressed to death." This passage from Stow's Chronicle fully expresses the argument. All that the author did was to introduce a few subordinate characters, among whom we may reckon Calverley's colourless and over-patient wife; and to explain the motives of the crime. The play exists in and for the murderer, or rather for the devil who inspires him; for Calverley is drawn as acting under diabolical possession. He has lost his fortune by gambling and loose living in town. His lands are mortgaged. His brother lies in prison at the University for a debt contracted at his request. He returns to Yorkshire in a frenzy of despair and anger; the game of life has been played out; his children are beggars, his wife an insufferable encumbrance; a calenture of murderous delirium seizes him, and he wreaks his rage in a tornado of madness. The action hurls along at such furious speed, the dialogue is so hurried and choked with spasms, that no notion of the play can be gained except by rapid perusal at one sitting. We rise with the same kind of impression as that left upon our sight by a flash of lightning revealing some grim object in a night of pitchy darkness. The mental retina has been all but seared and blinded; yet the scene discovered in that second shall not be forgotten.

Quotation is to little purpose in a case like this. Yet I must support my criticism with some extracts, selected to show in what particulars the realism of this piece differs from that of the last. The husband enters to the wife. Let her, if she wants to keep whole bones in her body, turn her dowry into cash for him to squander:

"Let it be done;
I was never made to be a looker-on,
A bawd to dice; I'll shake the drabs myself,
And make them yield, I say, look it be done."

She goes to do his bidding:

"Speedily, speedily!
I hate the very hour I chose a wife:
A trouble, trouble! Three children, like three evils,
Hang on me. Fie, fie, fie!"

What follows is after the same fashion. Stroke upon stroke, the artist stabs the metal plate on which he etches, drowning it in aquafortis till it froths. Prose takes the place of blank verse in cooler moments of the victim's passion:

"O thou confused man! Thy pleasant sins have undone thee; thy damnation has beggared thee. That Heaven should say we must not sin, and yet made women! give our senses way to find pleasure, which being found, confounds us! Why should we know those things so much misuse us? O would virtue had been forbidden! We should then have proved all virtuous; for 'tis our blood to love what we are forbidden. . . . 'Tis done; I have done't i' faith: terrible, horrible misery! How well was I left! Very well, very well. My lands showed like a full moon round me; but now the moon's in the last quarter—waning, waning; and I am mad to think that moon was mine; mine and my father's and my forefathers'; generations, generations! Down goes the house of us; down, down it sinks. Now is the name a beggar; begs in me. That name which hundreds of years has made this shire famous, in me and my posterity runs out. In my seed five are made miserable besides myself: my riot is now my brother's gaoler, my wife's sighing, my three boys' penury, and mine own confusion."

The only redeeming point in the whole ghastly picture is that, tortured still with appetites and longings, writhing on damnation's rack, this doomed man has yet a thought, if not a tear, to spare his wife's, his brother's, his sons' ruin. But he is caught, like a scotched asp, in the devil's fork. And when chance, at this climax, offers one of his children to his sight, the fury starts up, fanged to strike:

"My eldest beggar!
Thou shalt not live to ask an usurer's bread,
To cry at a great man's gate, or follow,
Good your honour, by a coach; no, nor your brother;
'Tis charity to brain you."

And brain them both he does. First, the boy playing with his "top and scourge." Next, the child in a nurse's arms. A servant hastens in at the noise. "Base slave, my vassal!" Down goes the groom, trampled on, bruised, gored with riding spurs. The devil is up in the man, and off he rides upon a saddled horse to find his last child, feverish for further bloodshed. On the way his nag falls, over-driven, stormed into stupidity. The officers are after him, and he is caught. In the clutch of justice the devil in the man is still unquelled. He snorts out curses. But they bring him home, and confront him with his wounded wife. Then the wretch, delivered of his demon, outcast from mercy, is led forth in silence to his punishment.

WHAT IS A DRAMA?

A drama, writes Mr. William H. Fleming in "Shakespeare's Plots," is "an imitation of one entire, great, and probable action, not told but represented, which, by moving in us fear and pity, is conducive to the purging of those two passions in our minds." Such is Aristotle's definition of tragedy, as translated by Dryden.

Although so old, and referring primarily to the Greek drama, this definition of Aristotle, with some slight modifications, is substantially true of the Shakespearean and modern drama.

One of these modifications relates to the subject of the drama, which, Aristotle says, is "one entire . . . action." He restricted a drama to the imitation of one action, occurring in one place, on one day. This is the Greek law of Unity. Shakespeare perceived that this was neither natural nor artistic. In the physical world time and change are essential elements of evolution. The same is true of the growth and development of a man, intellectually, emotionally, ethically. In each of his dramas, therefore, Shakespeare has depicted numerous actions, occurring frequently in widely separated places, at many different times. He does, however, preserve Unity. These multiform and apparently, but not really, inharmonious elements are fused by the poet into one æsthetic whole.

The law of Unity when applied to the Shakespearian and modern drama implies in it the existence of three specific properties:—

I.—One main action. There may be several sub-actions, but there must be one, and only one, main action.

II.—One hero or one heroine. There must not be more than one of either. Neither must there be both.

To the latter dictum there is an exception. Sometimes the action of a drama is the result of the joint conduct of a hero and a heroine. In such a case the hero and heroine are a dramatic unit. They are like a binary star, two stars so closely situated, revolving together around a common centre of gravity, that they emit one light; or like two streams which join and together form a river. So in a drama sometimes there are a hero and a heroine who are so intimately related, who act in such perfect unison, that the action of the drama is the result of their joint conduct. Examples of such a drama are Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth. With this exception a drama must have one hero or one heroine, but not both.

III.—A drama must portray one great passion. As human conduct is very complex, is the expression of many feelings, thoughts, purposes, there is in a drama oftentimes the portrayal of several passions. One of these, and only one, must be dominant. All others must be secondary, subdominant. This dominant passion may be jealousy, or, more properly, outraged love, as in Othello; ambition, as in Macbeth; patriotism, although misguided, as in Julius Cæsar; love, as in Romeo and Juliet. There must be one and only one dominant passion which sways and controls the dramatis personæ.

Such is the law of Unity when applied to the Shakespearian and modern drama.

Again, Aristotle says, "not told but represented." This goes to the very heart of the subject, and describes, very briefly, but with unerring accuracy, the nature of a drama, whether it be ancient or modern.

The term "drama" is a Greek word, derived from the verb drao, which means "to do, be doing, accomplish, fulfil." It literally means something done, a performance. A drama is the poetry of conduct. Its primary and essential quality is action. It is not simply a narrative of events. If it were it would be an epic. Nor is it only an expression of emotion, passion. If it were it would be a lyric. "What is that which we call dramatic?" asks James Russell Lowell. He answers: "In the concrete, it is that which is more vivid if represented than described, and which would lose if merely narrated."

That which differentiates a drama from an epic or a lyric, in fact from every other form of literature, is that in it the poet expresses his thought, emotion, not so much by words as by action. The men and women who are the medium by which the poet expresses himself appear before us living, speaking, acting. The theme of the drama is man in action. That action is a collision between the hero and the society in which he lives, or between him and the great moral laws which govern the universe.

A drama is a representation—re-presentation—of an action, its causes, its progress, its consequences; as it reveals and affects the doer, and also others within the scope of its influence.

Jack Johnstone, an eighteenth-century actor, was very proud of his patrician acquaintances; and as the Prince of Wales was partial to his Irish ballads, he was a constant member of the jovial societies of the year 1790 and thereabouts. Suett inflated poor Johnstone with the hyperbolical praises that he vowed the Prince had lavished on his singing; whilst he amused Johnstone's associates with very different accounts. Johnstone had one note (E in Alt), which he took very clearly in his falsetto. It was his delight to dwell on that tone an unconscionable time; so much so, that Suett told Erskine that the Prince once coming into his box whilst Johnstone was at his favourite exercise, turned to his friend and said, "I verily believe he has held that note ever since we were here last"—the Prince having been, the week previous, according to Suett, driven out of the theatre by "Paddy's protracted howl."

MORE IRVING MEMORIES.

No artist, says Mr. Walter Herries Pollock in his very amusing and interesting "Impressions of Henry Irving," just published by Longmans, Green, and Co., ever rises, or begins to rise, to the top of any profession or employment amid universal applause; probably there are still plenty of people who, if they spoke out their inmost opinion, would rank Shakespeare with taste and the musical glasses. To the upholders of any individual fame or success there will always be a reasoned as well as an unreasoning opposition. This would seem to be an immutable law, without which the world would be a place very different from what it is, and, ceteris paribus, a much duller place. The opposition, as above hinted, is not usually very slow in appearing, and certainly it was not long after Irving was on the way to greater ventures in London than playing so-called "character parts" and light comedy, sometimes with a dash of something stronger, to the plaudits of critics, public and private, that some persons of much perception, and many who could not be so described, began to find serious faults in his acting. There were some grave and reverend signiors, with every right that intellect could give to express their opinion, who always maintained that he was no actor; but that again was a matter of pure opinion and not of criticism. Among those who said that he acted, but acted in many ways badly, the chief points of objection might be summarised in the word mannerism. This word applies equally to the use of the voice and to the use of the limbs. To facial expression it can hardly refer unless, indeed, that should degenerate into grimacing, a decadence of which, so far as I know, Irving was never accused by any considerable critic. Of mannerism one knows, so far as record can tell, every actor who has won his way to the highest distinction has been in his time accused; nor is the reason for this very far to seek. In this connection it may not be amiss to begin by quoting certain remarks made by Palgrave Simpson, an authority, if ever there was one, on the whole history of plays, playwrights, and actors, as reported in the late John Coleman's book, "Players and Playwrights." People who knew both men may recognise that if sometimes the manner is Coleman's the matter is Palgrave Simpson's.

"An actor who would make a great name," said the speaker, "ought to be a mannerist. No man has ever been a popular favourite in my time unless he was a pronounced mannerist. Charles Young was a mellifluous mouthing mannerist; Charles Kemble was a silver-toned, sententious mannerist; Edmund Kean was a stuttering, spasmodic mannerist; Macready and Phelps were always grim and growling over their bones; Charles Kean had a chronic cold in his head; Keeley was sleek and sleepy; Buckstone was a chuckler, and loose in the text; Ben Webster was always imperfect, and had a Somerset dialect . . . all these actors owed their popularity to their being more or less pronounced mannerists."

It is not likely that Palgrave Simpson put the last phrase quite so baldly, although, according to Murdoch, a justly famed American actor who played at the Haymarket, Macready was recognised as a player of level and high merit, but nothing beyond that, until he deliberately adopted a mannerism of intonation with what were called "Macready pauses." After that, teste Murdoch, he attained greatness. Westland Marston, who had no doubt as to Macready's greatness, described his later method of utterance much as Murdoch did, giving, however, a different explanation of it, and found a special fault in his bearing in moments of repose. Curiously enough this fault was found with an attitude not unusual with Irving, that of standing with one knee bent while the other was rigid. When the grain of salt is added, it will be admitted, probably, that there is a good deal of truth in these pretensions. To the instances adduced it may be added that John Kemble appears to have been always stately and always asthmatic, while he allowed himself strange pranks in pronunciation, as in the well-known case of aitches for aches (in The Tempest). Further, the Times of Friday, Jan. 23, 1807, noticed "Mr. Kemble's revival of" the same play, "only for the sake of protesting against" his "inroads upon the territories of English orthoëpy," while admitting his "appropriate dignity" as Prospero. Recording by the way that he was "hissed every night" for odd tricks of utterance, it was itself inclined to good-humoured merriment, but found indignation stealing in at Prospero's call upon his sarevant Ariel. The great paper dwelt distressfully on his habitual misuse of vowels and of consonants, and of his "excess of distinctness." The brief notice ended thus:—"But we are totally at a loss to account for the two other monstrosities besides Caliban which were apparent on Wednesday night, the perfijjus and the varetshu for perfidious and virtue; and we accordingly throw down our pen in despair." The italics on the final words surely strike a note of grievous hopelessness.

To go further back one is to suppose that Quin's elocution in blank verse was of the most correct and most rotund kind, with, as Mr. Barton Baker says, a "sing-song delivery undoubtedly borrowed from the Parisian stage, where it was the mode during the time of Louis XV., while his action was of what has been termed the tea-pot order; in fact, that his method in blank-verse tragedy was a sublimation of that which was wont, within present memory, to be taught to and learnt by public school boys who figured before an audience on speech days. Of the heretic who, greatly daring, completely overturned Quin's traditions, David Garrick, there is a sort of general idea that he could fly with equal success at any game in comedy or tragedy, and that he had no mannerisms to speak of. On neither point was this in truth the opinion of contemporary critics. Here is a letter, obviously unbiassed, addressed to him by an anonymous correspondent at Dublin in August, 1742.

"The first thing I shall mention (and which I insist upon that you reform) is your false pronunciation of several words, which can be owing to nothing but custom and prejudice in a man of sense, as I am sure you are. The words that I chiefly remember are these: matron, Israel, villain, appal, Horatio, wind; which you pronounced metron, Iserel, villin, appeal, Horetio, and the word wind you pronounced short. I cannot imagine what your objection can be to the letter a, that you should change it into an e, both in the English language and the Latin; or what fault you can find with the English word matron that you should be obliged to make it Greek. Does not Horatio sound much better than the little word Horetio? It is said that Horatius Cocles, when he could no longer withstand the fury of his enemies, leaped into the Tiber. But what did he this for? Was it not for a name? Yes, surely, but never for the name of Horetius."

Other faults were found with Garrick's acting and elocution. In private life conversation Garrick was given to the same kind of inarticulate interjection that in a later generation belonged to Macready, and, moreover, to a slight stutter at the beginning of a phrase. As time went on some touch of both these tricks found its way into his stage representations. He was always sensitive as to caricatures of his acting, and it is reported that he was specially annoyed by Foote's taking off his dying scene in the part of Lothario, whereof the mimic thus rendered the concluding words: "Adorns my tale, and che-che-che-che-cheers my heart in dy-dy-dy-dying."

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Thursday, July 30.—Even during the hot summer months the Parisian cannot do without an occasional première; but, fortunately, these take place in the Théâtres de Verdure (open-air theatres), blessed institutions where the overworked journalist can, whilst attending to his duties, inhale a breath of fresh air. This time we were convened to the Théâtre de Verdure du Pré-Catelan to hear Dalila, a tragedy in four acts and five tableaux by M. G. Constant Lounsbéry; the incidental music by M. Tiarko Richepin. M. Lounsbéry's heroine varies somewhat from the woman described in the Book of Judges. She certainly is the courtesan, anxious to avenge her race on the mighty Samson, but she falls in love with the man whom she wants to slay, and for a brief moment she is caught in her own trap. I say, for a brief moment, for the death of her brother, killed by Samson, reminds her of her oath, and from that moment the hero is doomed. In the opening scene, laid at Gaza, we see the Israelites cruelly ill-treated by the Philistines, and their hope centred in Samson, who alone can save them. Samson meets Dalila, and, unheeding his fiancée's warnings, is fascinated by the Philistine girl's beauty. In the ensuing tableau the Philistines order Dalila to discover the secret of Samson's supernatural strength, and hand him over to them. Aijah, her favourite brother, implores her not to accept this mission, but Dalila has sworn to accomplish it, and she will not break her word. She then meets Samson, loses her heart to him, and follows him as his humble servant. The third act shows us the Market-place at Gaza Samson appears, carrying on his shoulders the body of a youth he has just killed, and Dalila recoils with horror when in these mangled remains she recognises her brother Aijah. Mad with rage, she vows to avenge his death. When next she meets Samson her love once more takes the upper hand, but, perceiving his cloak stained with her brother's blood, she no longer hesitates, and, having cut off Samson's hair, delivers him to the soldiers hidden behind the tent. The scene of the final tableau is laid in front of the Temple of Dagon. Dalila is cheered by the Philistines, and Samson arrives, led by the faithful Rebecca, his fiancée. On seeing the man she betrayed, Dalila throws herself at his feet and implores to be forgiven, whereupon Samson takes her hand, assures her of his forgiveness, and enters with her into the Temple. After a few moments the huge building collapses. Samson rushes out. Both he and Dalila are wounded to death. With her last breath she calls him, and, groping his way towards her, they are united in death. Despite its shortcomings, the work, which was well received, reflects the greatest credit on the author. It was, moreover, admirably acted by M. de Max, an impressive Samson, and Mlle. Cora Laparcerie, a delightful Dalila. Mlles. Barjac, Clade, and Sarsenne, and MM. Mitrecy, Cautier, and Thierry were also excellent in their rôles.

I informed you that the Opéra intended to produce Monna Vanna, M. Maeterlinck's masterpiece, for which M. Février has written the music. In fact, it was decided that the work should come immediately after the Crépuscule des Dieux. Now, however, M. Maeterlinck has intimated to the Opéra management, through his lawyers, that he forbids the production of the work "under the existing conditions." What are these "existing conditions"? It is rumoured that M. Maeterlinck had insisted on Mme. Georgette Leblanc singing the title-rôle, a condition which MM. Messager and Broussan had accepted. It seems that these gentlemen have now changed their minds, and want to entrust the part to another artist, which would sufficiently explain M. Maeterlinck's anger. If—which is probable—Monna Vanna does not see the footlights at the Opéra, its place will be taken either by La Forêt, by MM. Laurent Tailhade and Savard, or by a new ballet by MM. Aderer and Salvayre.

The Palais-Royal announces for this week a revival of Trois Femmes pour un Mari, the amusing vaudeville by M. Grenet Dancourt.

The Ambassadeurs announce for Saturday next the première As-tu vu mon nu? the new revue by MM. Max Viterbo and Jules Moy. The strong cast comprises MM. Dranem, Moricey, Alberthal, Frey, and Mertel, and Mmes. Foscolo, Melsa, Yina, Narcy, Lange, Nini, Février, Jeanne d'Alma, &c.

Among the most interesting events during the summer season are the performances at the Théâtre Antique at Orange, which never fail to draw a large concourse of strangers. The fêtes this year will last three days, i.e., Aug. 8, 9, and 10. They are under the management of MM. Paul Mariéton, Antony Real, and Boduel. As usual, the principal rôles will be interpreted by the best artists of the Comédie-Française. The programme is particularly interesting. On Aug. 8 will be given Iphigénie, with Mmes. Weber, Delvair, and Roch, and MM. Albert Lambert, Paul Mounet, Dorival, and Duparc; Le Cyclope, an adaptation by M. Léon Riffard; and the Greek dances in the ballets of Alceste and Orphée. On Aug. 9 Médée, by M. Catulle Mendès, with Mme. Segond-Weber and M. Albert Lambert; and Le Roi Midas, an antique comedy by MM. Paul Souchon and André Avèze, with MM. Paul Mounet and Mlle. Provost. On Aug. 10 Les Burgraves, with Mr. Mounet-Sully and Mme. Segond-Weber.

At the instigation of M. Bérenger, the prudest man in France, proceedings were taken against those music halls where ladies exhibited themselves insufficiently clothed. Mr. Bérenger, who as a Senator has rendered invaluable services to his country by the excellent laws proposed by him, and carried through, thanks to his energy, has one weak point. Exaggerated décolleté upsets him; and as to the nude, the very thought of it makes him blush all down his back. When, therefore, he heard that in some of the halls artists showed themselves "en nature," he caused inspectors to visit the different places and the matter to be placed in the Public Prosecutor's hands. The tribunal showed itself severe. The managers of the Folies-Royales and Folies-Pigalle have been acquitted, but severe penalties befel the others. M. de Chatillon, manager of the Little Palace, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment and £8 fine, whilst Mlles. Bouzon and Depelley, who took part in the show called Griserie d'éther, received for their share fourteen days' imprisonment and £2 fine under the First Offenders Act. Similar penalties were meted out to the others.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, July 27, the Drama, entitled "A WRECKER OF MEN."

In spite of the heat, a goodly audience assembled to witness A Wrecker of Men, in which some sensational scenes are contained. Mr. Thompson Carruthers distinguishes himself in the comparatively small part of Eric Melville; Mr. Eric Campbell as the gigantic "slogger," Jim Murley, handles the part in a forceful manner; Mr. Milner Noble is a wily Phrosaphaus; Mr. J. Arsdell Wilson scores as the silent servant, Railton; Mr. Arthur Robinson makes the most of the part of Guise Strange; and Mr. Douglas Campbell is good as the Hon. Reggie. Miss Florence Melrose Millett plays well as Risca Mallison, the woman with a past, the evil nature of the part being maintained to the end. Miss Gwendoline Talbot is a gentle Doris Melville; and Miss Beatrice Reynolds is grotesquely humorous as the slavey, Vavasole Slopper. At the finish of the play the Elephant Bioscope is much appreciated.

Mr. Percy Norman's company, in A Woman Worth Winning, has drawn large audiences to the Metropole Theatre, Gateshead, during the week.

GRAND THEATRE, HULL.

The Grand Theatre, Hull, which will be re-opened on Monday, has undergone important improvements in the few weeks it has been closed.

Messrs. Morton have very cleverly retained all that was beautiful in the old decorative scheme, and strengthened that which was weak. The handsome modelling of the fronts of the balconies, the imposing proscenium and ceiling, designed in the Louis XV. style, and intended to represent Dresden china, have been brought into pretty and effective prominence, the colours used being cream, gold, and salmon pink picked out with crimson. The pretty panel over the proscenium is still retained.

A warm, comfortable, yet broad effect has been secured by the introduction of the same colour scheme in the wall decorations on all the tiers, from pit to gallery.

The stalls have been entirely reseated, and with a soft carpet the acme of comfort has been secured for the patrons of this part of the house. The rich maroon velvet hangings harmonise admirably with the general decorative scheme, which throughout is harmonious and a pleasant contrast to the usual cream and gold and sky blue form in many houses of entertainment.

In the electric light installation on the stage, the system adopted is the very latest, and carried out under the rules of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, and conforms with the latest Corporation requirements. The wiring is on the three-wire system (Corporation supply) from main distribution boards to a two-panelled board on prompt side of stage, and thence through sub-distribution boards to the different circuits. All the wiring has been drawn into welded steel tubing, the latter being efficiently earthed ensures the maximum of safety possible, inspection and drawing-in boxes being liberally distributed over the system. The introduction of a unique system of "dimmers," of the well-known Lyons' liquid resistances, makes it possible to produce sunset and moonlight effects by the gradual lowering or raising of the lights on the stage, and also the coloured illustration of daylight converging into sunset or moonlight, or the gradual growth of daylight after night to early morn. The switchboard is the conception and device of Mr. Lyons, of Messrs. Tetley and Co., Salford, Manchester, the well-known theatrical switchboard experts. The elaborate wiring system has been carried out by the local firm of W. H. Porte, Pryme-street, Hull. In all there has been used in the installation 10,000ft. of conduit tubing and four miles of wires and cables. Not only this, the stage, which with the settling of the new building had got a little out of the plumb, has been readjusted and laid afresh with "traps" and mechanical contrivances galore, that will be a pleasure and a delight alike to the dancer and the acrobat. Among the minor alterations at the front of the house are the provision of a box office on the ground floor in the entrance vestibule; an extra room on the first floor for gentlemen sitting on the O.P. side of the house, and the installation of Corporation as well as National telephones.

The act drop takes the form of a pair of old tapestry curtains. Each curtain has a woodland scene in a decorated panel surmounted on a deep ornamental dado. Mr. Bogue has been most happy in his choice of subject, and the picture possesses quite a Gobelins effect. The artist has discarded the usual mode of painting, and had recourse to aniline dyes.

The autumn season begins on Monday, when the Belle of New York will pay a welcome return visit with Miss Hebe Kneller as Violet Grey and Mr. Frank Lawton in his original part of "Blinkey Bill."

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

DURBAN, June 27.—Theatre Royal.—Sub-Lessees, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.—Wheeler's London Gaiety company in continuation of their season at the above theatre presented The Blue Moon during the past week. Miss Alice Pollard in the rôle of Chandra Nil was dainty and charming; as Lady Brabasham Miss Mabel Medrow acquitted herself admirably; Miss Ivy Louise and Miss Lilian Bell were skilful exponents of the parts of Evelyn Ormsby and Millicent Leroy; Mr. Frank Wheeler as Moolraj kept the audience in roars of laughter, and Mr. Charles Willoughby as Private Charlie Taylor was quite a favourite. Mr. W. Clark made a typical Major Callabone, and was much in evidence. Mr. Ernest Anderson did well as Bobbie Scott, and Mr. H. Hancock as Captain Jack Ormsby deserves eulogy.

DURBAN, July 4.—Wheeler's London Gaiety company appeared in the pantomime The Forty Thieves during the week. Mr. Frank Wheeler as Ali Baba was irresistibly funny; Mr. W. Clark as Ali's wife hit off the humour of the part to perfection, while Mr. Charles Willoughby as a Scotch Cassim Baba was a distinct success. Mr. W. A. Hassan took the part of Edward, the donkey, and his antics caused continuous laughter. Miss Alice Pollard as Ganem sang and danced with great success. Miss Lilian Bell scored immensely in the part of Morgiana, and greatly added to the success of the production. Miss Mabel Medrow made a commanding Abdallah, and won considerable commendation. Mr. Lago Clifford represented Hooliman, the American company promoter, to perfection. Mr. H. Hancock as Hassarac, and Mr. Anderson as Beda Baba performed their respective parts successfully. Others deserving of special mention are Miss Ivy Louise as Haidee, and Miss Belle Fairley as the Fairy Queen. The pantomime was well mounted and dressed.

Mr. Tubby Edlin has, by arrangement with Messrs. W. and F. Melville, signed an agreement with Mr. Harry Roxbury to tour for him his latest success, The Cowboy Millionaire. Mr. Frederick Melville has presented Mr. Edlin with a handsome gold hunter watch, suitably inscribed, and naturally he is very proud of it. This year, with Messrs. Adeler and Sutton, Mr. Edlin has been singing his own songs, and has written, with Mr. Willmott Fowler, a song for Mr. Malcolm Scott, "The figure eight," for which a big success is anticipated.

"MAN OR BEAST?"

Romantic Drama, in Four Acts, by Charles H. Phelps, played for the First Time at the Star Theatre, Swansea, on Monday, July 27.

Lord Newton ..... Mr. Fred Newland
Hon. Jack Newton .... Mr. Wilford Dewhurst
Sir Richard Tremere ..... Mr. Ernest Vaughan
Col. Bruce Anderson ..... Mr. Frank Hertie
Capt. Donald Macdonald.. Mr. Chas. H. Phelps
Christopher Sharp ..... Mr. W. Boyling
Lothario Sinclair ..... Mr. Alf Kitson
Dr. Watson ..... Mr. Frank Rogers
Pat O'Brien..... Mr. Fred Gresham
Inspector Gresham..... Mr. John C. Gray
Annitta ..... Miss Florence M. Daly
Marie ..... Miss Cissie Clarke
Lettie Fairfax ..... Miss Marie Pemberton
Lady Constantine Winscope
Miss Winifred Lester
Bella Newton ..... Miss Irene Carrington
Rosie Newton ..... Miss Madge Douglas

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Phelps has succeeded in giving to the melodramatic stage a drama that should go far, for it is well written, and its plot is skilfully worked out. The story travels along familiar lines. Sir Richard Tremere, the nephew of Lord Newton, having wrongfully accused Jack Newton, the son, of theft, gets his lordship to disinherit him, and as a consequence Jack leaves the country. With Jack out of the way, the unscrupulous nephew's course is clear. He gets Lord Newton to make him his heir, and, having succeeded, proceeds with the assistance of Annitta, an Indian nurse whom he is supposed to have married, slowly to kill him. The process taking too long, and Lord Newton having made a fresh will giving his son everything, Sir Richard makes a strong bid for the estates by strangling the unfortunate nobleman. Jack comes home, and, finding out that his sister Bella had been betrayed by his cousin, urges Sir Richard to marry her. A quarrel arises, and in the encounter that ensues Sir Richard gives Jack a blow and leaves him for dead. Bella having meanwhile married Colonel Bruce Anderson, Sir Richard threatens to tell the Colonel that Bella was his cast-off mistress unless she gets her sister, Rosie Newton, to marry him. Bella consents; but just as Sir Richard's plans are on the eve of being accomplished Jack turns up, and with the aid of Annitta, whose jealousy has been aroused, puts everything right, and the play concludes in the orthodox way.

Mr. Ernest Vaughan has an unenviable part in that of Sir Richard Tremere, but he enacts it with great ability, and was largely responsible for the success of the production. His villainies were ably assisted by the Indian woman, Annitta, who was carefully portrayed by Miss Florence M. Daly. The arduous part of Bella Newton was powerfully represented by Miss Irene Carrington, who fully deserved the appreciation that was given her; Miss Madge Douglas made a delightful Rosie Newton, who, in addition to acting prettily, sang excellently; the Hon. Jack Newton was endowed with manly fervour and vigour by Mr. Wilford Dewhurst; and Mr. Chas. H. Phelps as Capt. Donald Macdonald made the most of his part. Humour was plentifully provided by Mr. Fred Gresham as Pat and Miss Cissie Clarke as Maria. Mr. Frank Hertie's impersonation of Colonel Bruce Anderson could not be excelled. All other parts were in the hands of a carefully-selected cast. The piece was dressed and mounted admirably.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, BIRMINGHAM, OUTING TO TEWKESBURY, JULY 26.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE OUTING.

Mr. Lester Collingwood's fifth annual Alexandra outing took place at Tewkesbury last Sunday. The arrangements, which were in the hands of Mr. Fred Bernardo, were on a lavish scale, and from a meteorological aspect also it was the day of the year. The party, which numbered 110, staff and friends, was regaled with choice fruits, sandwiches, and refreshment on the way to Worcester, and on the boat to Tewkesbury reminiscences of the last Alexandra pantomime were "discoursed" on the piano by an accomplished lady member of the staff. With other diversions the journey was made wholly joyous. After the dinner at the Bell Hotel, Mr. Collingwood proposed the health of the King, as one who is proud of his loyalty to Royalty; Mr. J. Penzer (Upton's) proposed the "Alexandra" fittingly, and the toast of the day, "The Chairman," was proposed by Mr. A. W. Matcham, of the Empire, who expatiated largely on Mr. Collingwood's "determined" policy and many virtues. Mr. Tom Guest responded for the visitors, and Messrs. Edward Foster (Grand), Fred Bernardo, and others "spoke" a "piece." The afternoon was enjoyed in beautiful sunshine, and after the party had been photographed by Mr. Parkes (of Parkes and Groves), tea was partaken of. The return journey on the boat was enlivened with more harmony, reinforced by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lyons, of the Hippodrome. Birmingham was reached in good time, at 9.45. Amongst those present were Miss H. E. Powell, secretary; Mr. W. T. Guest, assistant acting-manager; Mr. W. S. Jones, stage-carpenter, &c. There were also present Mr. Edward Lauri, Miss May Beatty, Miss Beatty, Mrs. Matcham, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wallis, Mr. A. Bushell, Mr. Jas. McConville, Mr. Chas. Price, Captain Gooch, Mr. Harry Cleveland, Mr. Machin, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. A. Forsyth, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Thompson, and many others.

The Germans are prominent in everything appertaining to scientific chemistry, and in this direction Englishmen in general, and Londoners in particular, are shortly to be given an opportunity of seeing daily at work, and using the most up-to-date appliances, two of the best chemists in Europe. For the International Rubber and Allied Trades' Exhibition, which is to be held at Olympia in September next, a complete working laboratory is being brought over at great expense from Berlin. It will be under the care of Drs. Markwald and Frank, whose names are known all over the Continent, and they will daily demonstrate the treatment of rubber in all forms.

KINGSTON THEATRE IMPROVEMENTS.

The Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, which has been closed for eight weeks for extensive structural alterations and redecoration, will reopen on Monday night, when Brewster's Millions will be the attraction. Those who visit it on that occasion will scarcely recognise the interior of the cosy little playhouse, which has always been one of the most popular on the outskirts of London, so great has been the transformation. Alterations, designed with the object of gaining more room and of securing greater convenience to playgoers, have been carried out on a most extensive scale and at considerable expense. Hitherto it has been necessary for patrons of the orchestra stalls to pass through the dress circle—an arrangement that never worked with satisfaction. Now a new passage has been constructed at the side which will remove this difficulty, whilst the space thus saved has been used for the erection of more seats. A new entrance to the green room has been made in place of the one situated awkwardly near to the entrance of the orchestra stalls; a new entrance into the pit has also been made for the convenience of those paying early-door prices. The roof, which began to show some defects, has been taken away, and a new and even more handsome one erected in its place, whilst many other structural alterations of lesser importance have also been carried out. New tip-up seats, handsomely upholstered in purple velvet, have been placed in the dress circle and orchestra stalls, both of which have been thickly carpeted; whilst in the stalls two wide gangways have been cut through the seats, which will doubtless be immensely appreciated when persons are going out or coming in. New seats, upholstered in blue velvet, have been placed in the pit, where the absence of central gangways—always a desideratum—has been remedied by the provision of one opposite each entrance. Besides being a great convenience to habitués, these gangways will be of great use in case of panic or fire, a circumstance that happily never has happened, and it is to be hoped never may. New divans, beautifully upholstered, have been placed in the foyer, new hangings of purple velvet have been provided for the boxes, the green-room has been enlarged, and the band space has been increased so as to accommodate the largest company of musicians likely to be required for any musical play. Perhaps the greatest of the improvements effected is the provision of a new fireproof screen, which will always be under the control of one of the staff during every performance and can be lowered automatically by simply touching a lever. Upon the face of it has been painted a very faithful representation of the famous Lion Gates at Hampton Court Palace—a very familiar object to Kingstonians—which has been skilfully executed by Mr. George Miller, the theatre's resident artist, who has also repainted all the stock scenery. There is also a new double curtain and drapery, the latter being of deep purple velvet lined with blue silk. It was not necessary to do anything to the Royal County's excellent stage, which has always been capable of accommodating anything travelling, and has frequently been eulogised by managers. It only remains to be added that the whole of the interior of the house has been repainted and redecorated with the most pleasing results. The style is what is known as the Adams style, the prevailing tint being old gold and cream in the lower parts, slightly increasing to a lighter tint as it ascends, and the effect is most charming. Mr. Peter Davey, the courteous, painstaking, and thorough managing-director, who has personally superintended the alterations every day during the recess, has devoted much care and thought to the scheme of decoration, and deserves to be highly complimented on the result. As an instance of this, it may be mentioned that special wall-paper of a particular colour and design had to be manufactured in order to fit in with the general scheme. Altogether the Kingston playhouse is now one of the most luxurious in the kingdom, and playgoers in the riverside town may well be proud of it. The alterations have been carried out by Mr. F. H. Gosling, of Kingston-on-Thames, and the furnishing by Messrs. A. R. Dean and Co., of Birmingham.

For the coming season Mr. Davey has secured some of the biggest of the London attractions, whilst in future, in addition to seasons of first-class London dramatic and musical companies, there will be seasons of high-class varieties, twice nightly, an experiment which it is believed will be much appreciated by Kingston audiences, the personnel of which has largely altered since the theatre was built twelve years ago.

AMUSEMENTS IN BRUSSELS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRUSSELS, July 28.—All the theatres here are closed until September. Summer managements have taken possession of the Olympia and the Eden Theatre, cinematograph exhibitions and a few singing turns making up the programme.

The Molière continues its melodramatic season. Grange and Chiboust's Voleuse d'enfants is on the bill just now.

The Alhambra remaining closed during the summer months, the Palais d'Eté is the only attraction of our capital; the winter garden makes it the coolest place in Brussels, and crowds of tourists flock there every night to enjoy a very good show: Miss Darwin and her trained cats; the comic singer, Carman; the Sharpshooters, Dervinne, Welling, and Dervinne; Marco Belly and his amusing giving away of conjurer's tricks; Cordua and Maud on the double wire; Miss May Blossom and Geo, in a very neat, funny, and clever bit of eccentric dancing; Thérèse Renz, the world-renowned equestrian; Lucette de Verly, in her latest successes from Paris; the Uessems, a fine act of juggling and acrobatic feats, which pulls the house down; and last, but not least, Spinx, the "safe" man, who being properly locked in a safe by some of the audience, comes out of it in a few seconds.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The weekly meeting of the council of the Actors' Association was held at 409, Strand, on Tuesday. Present: Mr. F. J. Arlton (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Chris Walker, Edmund Gurney, Cecil Brooking, Fewlass Llewellyn, and Clarence Derwent; Misses Agnes Imlay, Marion F. Lind, and Lucy Sibley, and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary).

The minutes of meetings held on July 21 and 23 were read and confirmed.

The secretary read letters from Miss E. Farmer on behalf of Miss Rosina Filippi, also a letter from Mr. F. Topham, and was instructed to write to that gentleman to the effect that the council cannot go back on their decision made last week, arrived at after a careful deliberation and enquiry, and after hearing both sides. The secretary read a letter from Mr. Lawrence Derrick with reference to his address being withheld from a manager, and was instructed to write to Mr. Derrick explaining the matter. He also read a letter from Mr. Richard A. Greene, tendering his resignation from the council, and was instructed to write to Mr. Greene to the effect that the council would rather he retained his seat.

The hon. solicitor reported that the summonses, Miss Elvin v. Seaman and Mr. Barnet v. Seaman, were heard on the 22nd ult., at the Bloomsbury County Court, and a verdict given in favour of the two plaintiffs. The defendant did not appear. The solicitor reported that the summons, Morland v. Monck, came before the Registrar at the Westminster County Court on the 23rd ult., and a verdict was given for the plaintiff. The defendant did not appear. He also reported that he had had an interview with Mr. Grove and advised him.

The report of the finance committee, which met on Monday, was read and accepted.

The council interviewed Miss Irma Fielden with reference to a member, and a vote of thanks was passed to Miss Fielden for her help and the trouble she had taken. Mr. Charles Francis was elected a member.

The secretary reported six engagements made since last meeting of the council.

It was decided that on and after Aug. 4 the rooms were to be closed at 8 o'clock, and the secretary was instructed to put up a notice to that effect.

The following suggestions were read and answered by the Chairman as follows:—Suggestion: I respectfully suggest to the members of the council that they (while members of the council) should not be entitled to accept engagements made through the agency of the council. Answer: It would be unfair to take from members of the council their right to obtain engagements through the ordinary methods of the agency. The council indignantly repudiate any suggestion of favouritism, as no member of its body has taken an unfair advantage of his or her position to obtain an engagement. They wish to have it thoroughly understood that the secretary alone knows the particulars of each engagement before it is put on the board, and that the members of the council have no opportunity of finding out about engagements, except by the same means as ordinary members. In consequence of the gravity of the suggestions implied, the council request the member to attend before them next Tuesday.

Suggestion: It would be a good thing if the A.A. could be open on Sundays. Touring members who have "waits" for several hours during a journey would derive great benefit therefrom. Answer: The council thanked the member for her suggestion, but could not see their way to comply with it at present.

The secretary was instructed to put up a notice that the rooms would be closed on August Bank Holiday.

The secretary asked a question with regard to next year's "Year Book," and received instructions to obtain estimates.

A letter which had been drafted in answer to a paragraph which appeared in the Referee was handed to the secretary, with instructions to send same to the editor of that paper.

The council gave the staff leave to have ten days' holiday each, and the secretary was given instructions to arrange the details.

ACTORS' UNION.

At the usual committee meeting of the Actors' Union the following were present:—Messrs. H. Tripp-Edgar (chair), Royce Milton, J. W. Braithwaite, Orlando Barnett, D. Lewin Mannering, A. Maitland Stapley, Paul Lovett, Bruce Lindley, Fred F. Loyd, Cecil G. Calvert, Frank Gerald, Lennox Pawle, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary). Letters were received from Messrs. Harry C. Momber, J. Hastings Batson, Henry Bedford, George P. Lester, and W. Ruddle Brown. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The secretary having read a letter from a member, asking whether the A.U. could advance him his railway fare to join his company, it was decided to advance him ten shillings for the purpose indicated.

The committee have decided that the Union shall be represented at the 41st Annual Trades Union Congress, to be held at the Mechanic's Institute, Nottingham, on Sept. 7 next and during the week.

Two candidates were elected members, and the resignation of a member was accepted.

The usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union was held at the Hummums Hotel on Tuesday afternoon, Mr. J. W. Braithwaite presiding over a gathering which included Messrs. Alfred J. May, William Macready, Jerrold Heather, Fred Jacques, Tom J. Taylor, Fred D. Daviss, G. Edward Dunstan, and Percy Edsall; and Mesdames Maud Kirwan, Carina McAllister, Ethel St. Barbe, Violet Lawson, Walter Bentley, Gladys H. Walton, Annie Barclay, Maud Henley, Eva Lumley, Irene Moncrieff, Marie E. Robertson, Kitty Marion, Margaret Densmore, Constance Berkeley, and May Conrade. The subject of the new clubs was discussed, and Mr. Macready urged that special endeavours be made in the autumn on behalf of the Union.

Doggett's Coat and Badge—the legacy of a once-famous Drury Lane comedian—was duly competed for on Monday, when the race for the distinctive badge and the monetary reward was rowed on the Thames between London Bridge and Chelsea. The six competitors were Alf. Geo. Wm. Curtis (Bermondsey), Chas. Lewis (Lambeth), George Thomas Jeffries (Erith), James Graham (Erith), Henry Jas. Wm. Ivey (Limehouse), and Henry Ambler (Richmond).

Just below Vauxhall Ivey's boat was overturned, and the occupant, being seized with cramp, was rescued with difficulty. The race was won by four lengths by Graham. Jeffries was second, Curtis third, and Ambler fourth.

Mr. Story-Gofton, who has been giving recitals at Brighton and the London suburbs, as well as lecturing on "Mont Blanc" at the Franco-British Exhibition, has been re-engaged by Miss Ellen Terry for his old part of the Rev. Leslie Rankin in Bernard Shaw's play, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. This makes Mr. Story-Gofton's third consecutive engagement with the famous actress, whose tour commences at the Aquarium Theatre, Great Yarmouth, on August Bank Holiday.

Copy of Testimonial.—To Chemical Cleaning Co., 6, Argyll-street, W.—July 30, '08, from Hippodrome, Birmingham. Gentlemen,—Dresses to hand to-day. I am delighted with same.—Yours faithfully, Josie Bickford.—[Advt.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

Under the auspices of Miss Violet Osmund this new musical play by A. Norden, with music by E. T. de Banzie and Michael Dwyer, was presented here on Monday evening, and, notwithstanding that the climatic conditions were greatly in favour of outside amusements, there was a large attendance of "first-nighters" to witness the initial peformance, which was accorded a very hearty reception. Considerable interest was taken in the play, which was produced under the personal direction of Mr. Alexander Loftus, and it is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that this gentleman acted in a similar capacity when The New Barmaid—which has met with such phenomenal success—was produced at this theatre fourteen years ago.

Although there is plenty of good material for the artists to work upon, there is not much that is new in the conception of the play, which may be briefly characterised as a modern, or rather a revised version, of the well-known fairy tale of Cinderella. The rise of the curtain introduces us to the exterior of Farmer Jones's farm, where the young squire, Sir Francis Lake, arrives, and falls in love at first sight with the farmer's charming daughter Poppy, who has two elderly stepsisters, Alice and Mary, who endeavour to force their amorous intentions on the Squire. The love affairs of Poppy and Sir Francis are, however, more seriously interfered with by the Squire's steward, James Forster, who sets a trap and makes it appear that Poppy has stolen a purse of gold, and further endeavours to malign the heroine, in the interest of his sister Lucy, for whom he has matrimonial designs with the Squire.

In the second act Poppy is left in the interior of the farmstead, whilst her father and two stepsisters betake themselves to the masked ball, which the Squire is giving to the tenantry in the hope of again meeting the farmer's young daughter. Poppy is despondent at being left behind, but is rescued by the Squire's valet, Timothy Timkins, who produces a handsome costume for Poppy, and disguising himself as a lady, acts as chaperone.

Scene 2 in this act is very pretty, and shows the exterior of the Squire's Manor House by moonlight, where Poppy arrives in the brougham drawn by four of the smallest ponies in the world. The third act includes a reception at the Manor House and a masked ball, where the Squire, owing to a conspiracy on the part of the designing steward—who has arranged that the costumes of his sister and Poppy shall be alike—mistakes the former lady for the latter, and proposes marriage to her. When at a given time the guests unmask the mistake is discovered, and the lovers are united.

First and foremost amongst the artists is Mr. Johnnie Schofield in the part of Timothy Timkins (Tibbs), valet to Sir Francis. There is no lack of merriment when he is on the stage (and he is seldom off); his quaint humour and mannerisms are irresistibly funny, and created roars of laughter. Mr. Schofield certainly has abundant opportunity for his display of whimsical comedy, of which he takes full advantage. Possessing an attractive personality, together with a good voice and clear pronunciation, Miss Gertrude Melville was very successful in the rôle of Poppy, which she depicted with vivacity and a natural charm which appealed to the audience alike in an histrionic and vocal sense. Miss Maud Terry delighted the audience by her artistic impersonation of Queenie Trevor, a suffragette, which she played in a spirited and clever style, introducing some effective vocalism; Sir Francis Lake had a fitting and admirable representative in Mr. Robert Hyett, who enacted the part with great credit; Mr. Llewellyn C. Hughes, in the character of the Squire's friend, Bobbie Fletcher, lent very ample support both in acting and singing, and was well placed; Mr. James Chippendale is also very acceptable as Farmer Jones, a somewhat thankless part, which was portrayed perhaps a trifle too heavily; as James Forster, the steward, Mr. E. W. Chewd acquits himself with much credit, and was sufficiently vindictive and austere; his sister Lucy is ably undertaken by Miss Vera Grafton, who appears to advantage in a small part; the two step-daughters, Alice and Mary, have praiseworthy representatives in Miss Mary Earle and Miss L'Estrange respectively, who make the most of the "business" allotted them; Miss Clara Casey and Miss May Hawthorne were sprightly dancers; whilst Mr. Frank Collins as Showman Jack, Mr. Jack Hale as the Coachman, Mr. E. Osborne as the Footman did well; and the Directoire Girls, Miss Penrhyn and Miss Cartwright, in the Parisian Directoire dresses, created attraction.

The play—which will probably have a successful run—is splendidly staged and lavishly dressed, and some of the songs given by the principals are both topical and catchy.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, July 27, the Play in Four Acts entitled FOR LOVE AND THE KING."

Mr. C. Watson Mill and his No. 1 company are scoring a meritorious success here this week in For Love and the King. The well-executed setting and the elaborate and costly dresses and military costumes combine to create an attractive picture, and make more effective a well-written play; and the author, Mr. Watson Mill, who is also in the cast, deserves congratulations on his production, which is received with every sign of approval. As Jarval, a young English soldier, Mr. Mill offers a powerful study, imbued with manly vigour, and secures a strong hold on the audience. Mr. John Burton gives a very good rendering of the part of Michael Obrenovic, a miser and revolutionary. That of Vladimir Obrenovic is in the capable hands of Mr. Henry Earlesmere, who achieves distinction; Mr. T. W. Dunscombe as Prince Uros Dragomir is well suited to the character; Mr. Geoffrey Chate is clever and diverting as the Duke Fernand Dragomir; Carl Oppenheim is ably portrayed by Mr. Jim K. Wood, who is responsible for much hearty laughter; Mr. Frank Lyndon essays the rôle of King Kara Dragomir with success, and the same may be said of Mr. Arthur Trail as Kosta Marko. Miss Joan Ellis plays Natila with earnestness and pathos; Miss Marie Ault does ample justice to her impersonation of Grazia Obrenovic; Edith Meredith is delicately depicted by Miss Frances Tierney; Miss Laura Munro makes an excellent Princess Milania, and Miss Rosalind Tate gives a good reading of the rôle of Princess Athene. Valuable assistance is also rendered by Mr. G. H. Organ, Mr. A. H. Leslie, and Mr. D. Adams.

A CHAT WITH HENRY TAYLOR.

No doubt the news that Mr. Henry Taylor, who for over a quarter of a century has held the reins of the only theatre in Crewe and is now relinquishing his control, will be viewed by many professional people with astonishment, and by not a few with regret, inasmuch as his close and intimate relationship with many touring managers and companies has almost invariably been of the pleasantest and happiest character. It is now that Mr. Taylor finds the weight of years and other business engagements of such a pressing character that this change has been most reluctantly made. In 1881 he saw an opening for the establishment of a dramatic house in Crewe—a town he adopted as his home when the population was only 15,000—and he took the opportunity to convert (if one may be allowed the term) the Catholic chapel, which was being disused owing to the erection of a new church for that body, into a theatre, which he named the Lyceum, and which was visited and utilised by many of the then leading travelling managers from time to time. It was, however, soon found that the building was too small to meet requirements of playgoers, and a limited company was formed. Of this company Mr. Taylor became a shareholder, and was appointed manager, and he held the post for some years, afterwards becoming the lessee. In the early days there was much opposition to the establishment of a theatre by a class of people who had no sympathy either with actors or theatrical managers. Many of the then evident prejudices were removed, and the Lyceum then continued to be patronised not only by the large working-class population, but by the "upper ten" of the district.

On the attainment of his twenty-first year of management Mr. Taylor was the recipient of a valuable silver service and an illuminated book-testimonial expressive of admiration from his many local and professional friends. These were presented at a banquet at the London and North-Western Railway Co.'s Hotel in the presence of a large and representative company. On the occasion of the visit of Miss Bateman (Mrs. Crowe) to the old theatre the audience were so enthusiastic as to insist on drawing that lady's carriage to the railway station en route for Dublin, on the evening of the Friday on which Lord Frederick Cavendish was assassinated in the Phœnix Park. No performance could, of course, take place, and the body of the deceased gentleman passed through Crewe on the following Sunday morning en route for London.

Mr. Taylor's successor is Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett, of the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, and the Opera House, Burton-on-Trent, who is completely changing the interior of the theatre, and will commence his management on the ensuing August Bank Holiday. That gentleman has been granted the transfer of Mr. Taylor's full licence, and will no doubt enjoy a large share of public patronage. Mr. Taylor has a fund of interesting stories of his experiences, some of which he hopes to treat our readers to at a later date.

THE NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 27, the Drama entitled "THE LIGHTHOUSE ROBBERY."

It was on Dec. 31, 1906, that The Lighthouse Robbery was first produced in England, being given a week's trial at the Lyric, Hammersmith, and proving distinctly attractive. It caught the eye of Mr. E. H. Knight, well known in connection with The Grip of Iron, who acquired the English rights of the play, and, having had it Anglicised and altered in various details, is now sending it on tour. The alterations do not affect the main plot, which deals chiefly with the doings of a hero of the first water, who effects three thrilling rescues from drowning. In the course of the piece he is robbed and turned out of house and home, but eventually comes into his own and marries the girl he had loved all through the play. The success of the production on Monday was never for a moment in doubt, and a crowded audience greeted the piece enthusiastically throughout. Miss Hilda Baynton quite excelled herself as Rose Prescott—the part she originally created in England—and plays it in a sweet and charming manner; Tom Manly is sustained by Mr. Stanley Bedwell, to whose sincere and earnest acting no small measure of the play's success must be attributed; an exceedingly good character study is given by Mr. Herbert Lewis in the part of David Morris; Mr. Wilfred Mansfield does well as the villain, James Hammond, and his father, William Farren, is interpreted by Mr. H. Wallace Curnock, who also acts as Mr. Knight's manager on tour. On Mr. Willie Reid's shoulders as Sam Kidder falls the task of making practically all the fun, and he proved quite equal to his responsibilities. As Mrs. Manly Miss Francesca Strickland is good; Miss Maggie Stewart gives a lively interpretation of Ruth Manly; and little Ethel Lovett proves herself a clever child in the part of Little Nellie. The scenery throughout is excellent, and particular mention must be made of that in Act. II., the change from the interior to the exterior of a lighthouse being most effective. All the scenery has been painted at Mr. Croke's studio adjoining the Lyric, where Mr. Harry Drury is principal artist.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MLLE. DU ROCHE.

Mlle. Du Roche, who has established herself as a favourite with music hall audiences and in pantomime, commenced her career fifteen years ago, when quite a child, in the production of Robinson Crusoe at the Aquarium Theatre, Brighton, and each succeeding year found her playing important parts in pantomime. For two years (1900-1 and 1901-2) she was Fairy Queen with Messrs. Eglington and Little's pantomime Red Riding Hood. During Christmas 1903-4 she played principal girl, viz., Miss Muffett, in the Bo-Peep pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Hanley. The next Christmas season (1904-5) found her as principal boy in Dick Whittington at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End. The rôle seemed to exactly suit her personality and ability, and during Christmas 1905-6 she played Prince Perfect in Cinderella at the Theatre Royal, Barnsley, and in the following year Daniel Defoe's hero in Mr. John Hart's pantomime production—Robinson Crusoe—at the Theatre Royal, Bradford. Last season she donned the Lincoln green of Robin Hood in Mr. Fred Granville's pantomime Babes in the Wood, in which she scored her usual success. Mlle. Du

Roche, who is possessed of a sweet and flexible soprano voice, considers her vocal gifts to be hereditary, as her mother, who is of Welsh descent, possessed a beautiful voice, and Mlle. Du Roche's early childhood was spent in the beautiful Vale of Llangollen, where she sang as a child in a Welsh choir. She has obtained her present position by sheer hard work, having, in conjunction with her husband, played in drama, musical comedy, and comic opera. For two years she worked a double turn, viz., a singing and dancing act, as The Stanleys with her husband, Mr. Arthur Stanley, who is now successfully running a troupe of boys known as Stanley's Urchins. For the last three years Mlle. Du Roche has worked a single turn with great success. She is well booked up on the halls, and looks forward to further success.

MISS DAVIES WEBSTER.

After work with Sarah Thorne, study with Hermann Vezin and Emil Behnke, with Angelo (for fencing), Mons. Petit, and Cæsare Smeraldi (for acting without words), &c., &c., and after complete failure to be even interviewed by a London manager, Miss Davies Webster gave up her ambition of walking on at a London theatre, but some successful performances with amateurs secured an engagement in a fit-up répertoire company. She played Juliet, Portia, and juvenile leads in the Carte comedies. Other engagements for lead in drama, and for Pauline in The Lady of Lyons, followed. In 1890 Miss Webster played Klydone in a poetic play of her mother's, In a Day, at a

Terry matinée. Mr. Stephen Phillips was in the cast. Too inexperienced to derive much advantage from so early a London début of that kind, she nevertheless secured some encouragement from the critics, who especially praised expression and by-play. After Terry's followed many melodrama leads on tour. Then, anxious to get Shakespearean work, Miss Davies Webster declined an offer of a fourth re-engagement in the tour she was playing lead in, and took a smaller engagement in the Osmond Tearle company, playing Nerissa, Duchess of York, Valeria, Second Witch, &c.; and, as Mrs. Tearle's understudy, the Queen, in Hamlet, and Emilia. The latter part she has since played with Murray Carson, and in Mr. R. C. Buchanan's Hermann Vezin tour; whilst she has understudied the Queen in Forbes-Robertson's Lyceum season. After the Tearle tour there was a long break in Miss Webster's continuous work, owing to need for her at home. During this time she took all work she could get in town. This included special weeks at suburban theatres, her own "Dramatic Evenings" in West End suburban halls, and the Lyceum engagement. When able to tour again, her first important engagement was as Esther Coventry, in One of the Best, played by her then, and in later engagements, over 300 times. Other engagements have been as Niobe (two tours with Mr. W. P. Seddon's company, one with Mr. Drew Mackintosh), Lady Marchant in A Bunch of Violets, the Duchess in Moths, and Lady Sneerwell in Miss Fortescue's company, Mrs. Cortelyon (The Second Mrs. Tanqueray) in Miss Lucy Wilson's Pinero Répertoire company, and many others. Also, in London, Miss Pringle in Naughty Nancy, at the Savoy; Miss Cudlin, in A Maid from School, Terry's; Mrs. Quickly in a Botanic Gardens season of Mr. Patrick Kirwan's. Miss Webster has played about 250 parts, so all cannot be recorded. Some important parts are Galatea, Cynisca, Olivia (in Twelfth Night), Stéphanie de Mohrivart in Forget-Me-Not, and Mirandolina, in her own adaptation of La Locandiera—Mine Hostess.

MISS MARION LIND.

Miss Marion Lind is the daughter of the late Lieut.-Col. J. B. Lind, a distinguished officer who fought in the Indian Mutiny and was with Nicholson on the Ridge of Delhi. On her mother's side she also comes of a family which has done service in the East, for her grandfather, the late Sir John Davis, Bart., K.C.B., was the first Governor of Hong Kong.

Miss Lind's dramatic experience would appear to date from her nursery days, when she played the leading parts in plays written by her elder sister, and performed in the Theatre Royal of the nursery. Later on, in Exeter, she was one of the most talented members of the Exeter Dramatic Society, with which, some years before, Miss Vanbrugh had been connected before she went on the stage. Since she went on the stage Miss Lind has ranged the whole scale of dramatic experience, and her great forte is her versatility. She complains that most managers of to-day are unwilling to believe that an actress can be both pathetic and good in comedy. She has often had great difficulty in getting a manager to entrust her with a comedy part, solely because she has proved herself so excellent in a pathetic part. In her opinion, an actress should be able to run the whole scale of emotion. Amongst Miss Lind's experiences have been those of playing in comic opera and pantomime, understudying some of the leading actresses in London, being the persecuted heroine in more dramas than she can count; of taking parts in South Africa which have been created by such different artists as Julie Opp, Gertrude Kingston, and Maude Millett; and touring in England in parts associated with Miss Fannie Brough, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, and Miss Nina Boucicault.

Amongst the parts Miss Lind has played may be mentioned Rosalind, Portia, Viola, and Juliet; Fanny Brough's part in The Man from Blankley's, Lady Curtoys (Wheels Within Wheels), Julie Opp's part in A Man of Forty, Gertrude Kingston's part in The Manœuvres of Jane, Joanna in Mice and Men, Esther in Caste, Mrs. Goldfinch (A Pair of Spectacles), Olga Nethersole's part in A Fool's

MRS. ALFRED MELLON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I was most pleased to read in The Era of Saturday last, July 25, your admirable article on Mrs. Alfred Mellon (undoubtedly the most accomplished and versatile actress of her day). Whether in domestic drama, farce, or burlesque I have never seen her surpassed, if equalled, and I have witnessed her impersonation of all the characters mentioned in your columns, and was present at the old Adelphi when, under the management of Mr. Frederick Yates, she made her début in Chas. Selby's duologue, Antony and Cleopatra, in connection with Edward Wright, the popular comedian. My principal object in penning this note is to correct an error in the paragraph which followed the well-deserved eulogium, which stated that Nicholas Nickleby was first performed at the Adelphi in 1875. It was first performed at the old Adelphi Nov. 19, 1838, with a cast of quite exceptional quality, for each character was so perfectly represented that it really appeared as if the author had written the parts for the Adelphi artists, so life-like were they represented—Ralph Nickleby, Mr. Cullenford; the handsome John Webster as Nicholas; Newman Noggs by the great character actor O. Smith; Browdie, Harry Beverley, a famous Yorkshire comedian; Squeers, Wilkinson (known as Little Wilkinson); Mantalini, the versatile manager, Frederick Yates; and Poor Mike by Mrs. Keeley. Other characters according to their position in the play were equally well represented.—Yours faithfully,

Charterhouse, E.C. JOSEPH A. CAVE.
July 29, 1908.

[The statement in the article was correct. The version referred to was Andrew Halliday's. The 1838 production was of an adaptation by Edward Stirling.—ED. of The Era.]

Of Norris, an actor who died in 1776, the following singular story is told:—"Twelve years after Norris's death Mrs. Barry was acting in the town in which he died the character of Calista in The Fair Penitent. In the last act of the tragedy, where Calista lays her hand upon the skull, she was suddenly seized with an involuntary shuddering; she fainted, and was taken to her lodgings. During the night her illness increased, and on the following day, recovering her senses, she anxiously asked whence the skull had been procured which had been used on the preceding night. Upon inquiry, the sexton told her it was the skull of a Mr. Norris, an actor, who was buried in the corner of the churchyard. It proved to be her husband. The shock killed her; she died six weeks afterwards."

The Merchant Taylors Scholarships, £40 per annum, was gained by Miss Audrey Richardson (violinist). The Andrew Carnegie Scholarships went to Miss Grace Hawkins and Master Lionel Stanton; and the S. Ernest Palmer Scholarships to Mr. R. J. Stannard and Muriel Herbert.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham, having assisted at the celebration of the 250th night of The Mollusc at the Criterion, left London on Wednesday for Ems, where he will enjoy a brief holiday. Sir Charles will take up his dramatic work at the New Theatre in September, when he will produce Mr. Roy Horniman's adaptation of his own novel "Bellamy the Magnificent." Former esteemed associates of Sir Charles will be found in the cast chosen to support him, the company including Mr. Yorke Stephens, Mr. Richard Lambart, Mr. Stanley Pringle, Mr. Vane Tempest, Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Sarah Brooke, Miss Marguerite Leslie, Miss Honey, Miss Dupong, and Miss Alice Beet.

The new comedy by Hubert Henry Davis, in which Miss Mary Moore will play the principal part at the Criterion, is entitled Lady Epping's Lawsuit. The piece is in three acts, one of which is laid in a Law Court. Among the company engaged are Miss Grace Lane, Miss Norma Whalley, Miss Elfrida Clements, Miss J. Evelyn, Mr. Sam Sothern, Mr. Ferdinand Gottschalk, Mr. Berte Thomas, Mr. Frederick Volpe, and Mr. Eric Lewis.

It is good news to learn that Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore have just purchased from Mr. Clyde Fitch a new three-act comedy, entitled A Happy Marriage, in which there are excellent parts for both artists. It seems, therefore, dependent only on the enduring attractions of the plays in which each popular performer is singly to appear as to when they will be seen again in the same programme.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh will produce the American play The Man on the Box at the Pier, Eastbourne, on Thursday. The same occasion will witness the staging for the first time of a new one-act play by W. W. Jacobs and Horace Mills, entitled Admiral Peters, taken from Mr. Jacobs' story of that name.

Mr. George Edwardes will begin his two weeks' season with the Gaiety success, The Girls of Gottenberg, at the Adelphi, on Monday, Aug. 10. Mr. Edmund Payne will appear in his original creation of Max Moddelkopf, but a new Mitzi will be found in Happy Fanny Fields, the clever variety comedienne, whose appearance in a rôle quite apart from her clever Dutch characterisations gives additional interest to what will undoubtedly prove a popular revival. The cast will also include Miss Thelma Raye, Miss Maisie Gay, Mr. Fred Allandale, and Mr. Lawrence Grossmith.

The Editor of The Era (Mr. Frank Desprez) wishes to thank those who have written to congratulate him on his silver wedding and to whom he has not replied individually. An omission from the list of presents published last week was that of a handsome pair of silver candlesticks, the gift of Lady Violet Greville, the authoress of An Aristocratic Alliance, which was produced by Sir Charles Wyndham at the Criterion in the March of 1894.

Mr. Arthur Collins has completed the work of casting the new autumn drama at Drury Lane, which is again from the pens of Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, and is due in September. The play, which is as yet unnamed, is in four acts. The principal parts are in the hands of a strong company, comprising such popular artists as Miss Eva Moore, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Albert Chevalier, Mr. Basil Gill, Mrs. Lancaster Wallis, Miss Marie George, Mr. Vincent Clive, Mr. Arthur Poole, Miss Lucy Sibley, Mr. Fred Grove, Miss Irene Smith, and Mr. Oscar Adye. Rehearsals will commence shortly.

Miss Lena Ashwell, invigorated by a well-earned holiday on the Sussex coast, is busy rehearsing for her provincial tour of nine weeks, which will begin on Monday at Buxton. The company supporting Miss Ashwell is identical with that which has already earned such a high reputation at the Kingsway Theatre, and includes Miss Frances Ivor, Miss Gertrude Scott, Miss Beryl Mercer, Mr. C. M. Hallard, Mr. Dennis Eadie, and Mr. Norman McKinnel.

During the progress of the tour Miss Ashwell will rehearse a play of serious interest, written by Mr. Wilfred T. Coleby, who made his début as a dramatic author with that clever little sketch of East-End life The Likes o' Me. The new piece, which affords Miss Ashwell a congenial rôle, will be produced by Mr. Norman McKinnel, and should make its appearance at the Kingsway during the first week in October. Firm in her confidence in new authors, by the way, Miss Ashwell has just secured a comedy from yet another of "the great unacted," which will see the light at the pretty little theatre in Great Queen-street in due course.

The popularity of Miss Cicely Hamilton's clever comedy, Diana of Dobson's, is proved by the fact that it will be performed by no less than four different companies in the United Kingdom during the autumn, while America, Australia, and South Africa will also have an opportunity of making the acquaintance of the volatile draper's assistant.

Success immediate and complete has attended Mr. Percy Hutchison and his company in the first production of Brewster's Millions at Bournemouth. On the first night there were thirty-nine calls, and on the second thirty-one, the wonderful ship scene causing a great sensation. It is stated that such enthusiasm has never before been heard in the Bournemouth Theatre. Every night the audience refused to leave the theatre until demands for a speech had been gratified. In spite of the tropical weather the theatre has been crowded, and it looks as though the records of thirty-seven plays produced by the Hutchison management will be beaten.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison on Monday open their fifth annual Brighton season at the West Pier. For two years past they have broken all previous records there, the number of persons paying for admission during the four weeks' season reaching 42,000. The record for one week was held by Miss Lilias Earle and Mr. Percy Hutchison in Peter's Mother, over 12,000 people crowding into the West Pier Theatre during the week.

This year the Hutchison season opens with Mrs. Dot, with Miss Decima Moore, Miss Emma Hutchison, and Mr. Frank Lacey in the cast; for the second week Mrs. Brown Potter, supported by Mr. P. C. Cuningham, will appear in Lady Frederick; the third week Peter's Mother makes its fourth visit to Brighton, Miss Lilias Earle again playing the title-rôle, supported by Mr. Eille Norwood and Mr. Vivian Guilbert; and Mrs. Ponderbury's Past brings the season to a close. The company includes Mr. George Mudie, Miss Annie Stalman, and Miss Florence Wix. Owing to the heavy nature of the production, Mr. Percy Hutchison will not be able to stage Brewster's Millions at the Pier, but will visit the Royal in November.

A new play is promised from the pen of Mr. Hall Caine, who has entered into a contract with Mr. M. V. Leveaux and Mr. Derwent Hall Caine for the production in the provinces in the early spring of an entirely new piece. This, it should be added, is not the dramatisation of The Manxman which is shortly to be produced at the Lyceum.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree is now enjoying a holiday at Harrogate, where he has taken a house for some weeks. He has decided upon Saturday, Sept. 5, as the date of the production of Faust at His Majesty's. Among the distinguished visitors to Harrogate are also Mr. and Mrs. Fred Terry (Miss Julia Neilson) and family. Miss Neilson has made rapid progress towards recovery since her recent illness due to overwork, and playgoers may look forward to welcoming her return to professional work thoroughly restored in health and vitality.

"If We Only Knew" is the title selected by Mr. Harry Nicholls for his new romantic play, which is shortly to be produced. The music is by Mr. John Crook, the composer of Peter Pan. The forthcoming tour is being rapidly booked up.

Our birthday list this week includes the name of Mr. Fred Wright, sen., who, if not actually the father of the English stage, is certainly the oldest performer on the active list. Mr. Wright is eighty-two on Thursday, and that he retains his dramatic powers in a full degree was proved by his performance with Mr. Martin Harvey's company at the Adelphi last year and on the subsequent tour. Mr. Wright took a prominent part in the Actors' Orphanage Fund Garden Party at the Botanic Gardens last month, when he presided over Miss Phyllis Broughton's stall, where the winning confections in the hat-trimming competition were exhibited. May he long remain in the profession to the service of which he has devoted the work of over half a century.

Mr. Alfred Lester, who has been away this week on holiday, resumes his part as the Bo'sun in Havana at the Gaiety on Monday evening.

Miss Gertrude Irving, who has for some time past been living in retirement, has been engaged by Mr. Gaston Mayer to play the part of Mrs. Wiggs in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch until Mrs. Madge Carr Cook joins the tour. The company opens at Folkestone on Monday next. Miss Irving, it may be recalled, was for several years leading lady with Mr. Wilson Barrett's companies, playing such parts as Nellie Denver in The Silver King and Bess in The Lights o' London, both in this country and in America. Miss Irving also extensively toured with her own company in Baffled, an adaptation by Mr. Geo. P. Hawtrey of "Parma Violets."

Mr. William Greet, whose companies have for many years toured the provinces with such distinction, will enter upon West-end management with the production on Thursday, Sept. 3, at a theatre yet to be named, of Harry and Edward Paulton's three-act farce, The Old Firm. The piece will have a preliminary canter at Newcastle and Hull, the initial production taking place in the former town on Aug. 17.

Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw heads the cast of The Old Firm, and will be the senior partner of the firm of Nichols and Nichols, and Miss Florence Lloyd will have the part of a lady commercial traveller. The cast will also consist of Messrs. Clayton Greene, Frank Tennant, Ernest A. Douglas, Richard Golden, George West, and Atheling Farrar, and Miss Beatrice Ferrar, Miss Gladys Mason, Miss Alice Beet, and Miss Constance Hyem.

"Charles Osborne" (Mr. Charles Bolton) passed peacefully away on Wednesday morning in his eightieth year. He died from an internal complaint, after a tedious illness lasting four or five months. He was once connected with The Era, and contributed to our columns a number of articles. He was the author of The Face in the Moonlight, A Midnight Marriage, The Old Forge, and other successful dramas and farces. He was originally a clerk in Twining's Bank, and was a member of the Yorick Club, and a great friend of the dramatic profession.

Miss Gertie Millar sails next Saturday by the Lucania to take up her original part in the New York production of The Girls of Gottenberg. Mr. Lionel Mackinder and Mr. James Blakeley, who appear in the same piece, have already left England for New York, together with Mr. J. A. E. Malone, who is to superintend the American production.

The Moody-Manners Opera Company will open their season of grand opera at the Lyric on Aug. 17 with Die Meistersinger, which will be given for the first time in English. Among other works which will be included in the répertoire will be Tannhäuser, Lohengrin, Tristan and Isolde, Faust, Il Trovatore, Lily of Killarney, Madame Butterfly, in which Madame Fanny Moody scored a remarkable success last season, and The Star of the North, one of Meyerbeer's less known operas.

Mr. Charles Manners is contemplating the production, during his season at the Lyric, of some new works, although his experience in the past does not warrant his relying to any extent on the eagerness of London opera-goers to hear new compositions by native composers. During the summer, however, Mr. Manners has been negotiating with Miss Smyth, with regard to a production in this country of the Wreckers, and he hopes in the near future to present this work to a British audience, which will thus be enabled to judge for itself instead of being obliged to be content with reports from Prague or Vienna.

The growth of the National Opera Union brings nearer to realisation Mr. Manners' long-cherished scheme for establishing English opera on a solid and profitable basis. Meanwhile the society opera season at Covent Garden is to be followed by a season for music lovers at the Lyric, with popular prices, ranging from one shilling to seven-and-six. The operas will be mounted with new scenery, and no pains have been spared to ensure historic correctness of detail. The principal tenor of the company is Mr. Philip Brozel. The chorus consists of seventy singers, and there are fifty instrumentalists in the orchestra.

The front of the house staff at the New Theatre indulged in their sixth annual outing on Sunday, when an excursion to the sea was enjoyed. An early start for Margate was made from Victoria Station at eight o'clock, the popular watering-place being reached soon after ten. A bracing brake ride preceded dinner, which was discussed at the Hotel Arcadian, and a boat trip to Dover and back was then undertaken. The return journey from Margate was begun at seven o'clock, town being reached before ten. With such a programme there can be no question as to the unalloyed pleasure of the whole party.

Mr. W. H. Denny, so well known in connection with former Savoy triumphs, has returned from America, where he has established himself as one of the leading comedians. He has been engaged by Messrs. José and Young for their forthcoming tour to play the part of Pharaoh in that highly successful comic opera Amasis. Other well-known artists engaged for this production are Miss Winifred O'Connor for the title-rôle and Miss Mabel Burnedge to play the part of Natis, together with Messrs. Edward McKeown, Frank Wood, Walter Brodie, Arthur Stroud, and Fred Hudson. The chorus will be exceptionally strong, and Mr. J. Van Henvel, who conducted the long run at the New Theatre, will again hold the bâton. The management has been entrusted to Mr. E. L. Furst, who represented Mr. Edouard José during his Spanish répertoire tour some few months ago.

Mr. George Alexander, with his customary kindness, has placed the St. James's Theatre at the disposal of the committee of the Royal National Orthopædic Hospital for a matinée, to be held in the last week of October or the first week in November, on behalf of the special appeal for £25,000 which that institution is making to complete its new buildings in Great Portland-street. The details of the programme have not yet been completed.

"Straight from the Shoulder," the modern melodrama, in four acts, which is to go on tour under the auspices of Mr. R. A. Roberts, the famous protean actor, will be produced at the Grand, Brighton, on Monday, and will have its introduction to London at the Broadway, New Cross, the following week. The name of the author has not yet been revealed, but as Mr. Roberts is the writer of all his own sketches which have won such renown at the variety theatres, it may be taken that his prolific pen is not altogether dissociated from the new work designed for the dramatic stage.

Mr. G. P. Huntley's new musical play, which he has written in collaboration with Mr. Herbert Clayton, will be called The Honourable Phil, and will be produced at the Hicks Theatre on Oct. 14. The score is by Mr. Harold Samuel, additional numbers being furnished by Mr. Ralph Allison. The author claims for the piece that it deals with the nicer side of life, and tells a simple but effective story. The action passes in France, and with the exception of the title-rôle, played by Mr. Huntley, and his valet, allotted to Mr. Horace Mills, all the characters are foreigners. The cast will further include Miss Eva Kelly, Miss Elsie Spain, who has recently made a hit in Pinafore, and Mr. Clayton.

The attractiveness of Lady Frederick has been fully endorsed on the first production of the play out of London. Mr. Percy Hutchison's No. 1 company opened on Monday at the Grand Theatre, Llandudno, to a packed and enthusiastic audience, Miss Mabel Love, who plays the title-rôle, meeting with an overwhelming reception, being called and recalled after each act. That clever actor Mr. Robert Minster also received individual recognition in the leading part. Miss Love wore some beautiful creations, and Miss Eleanor Delaporte was likewise elegantly arrayed. The entire production calls for hearty congratulations to Mr. Percy Hutchison, to whose steady and thorough rehearsals a large measure of the success is due.

Mr. Philip Leslie has been engaged to support Miss Decima Moore on tour in Mrs. Dot. This will be Mr. Leslie's first appearance in the provinces since his return from Australia, and his Freddie Perkins should make him as many friends in the country as did his Harry Bronson in The Belle of New York.

The phenomenal success that has attended the production of Mr. Walter Howard's romantic dramas at the London Lyceum has induced Mr. Oswald Brooks, of the Grand, Swansea, to give a "Walter Howard Season" of two weeks, beginning on Monday next at his theatre. The first week will be devoted to the popular author's Midnight Wedding, and the second to his hardly less successful play Man and Wife.

Mr. Reginald Payne, the popular comedian, who is having a successful tour of ten halls with his wife in a pretty vocal scena, has again been secured by Messrs. Paumier and Howard, and will have an important part in the autumn tour of The Prince and the Beggar Maid.

Mr. Herbert Sleath's South company of A White Man opens to-night at the Lyceum, Newport. Mr. Frank E. Petley will play in Mr. Lewis Waller's rôle of Jim Carston, a part that should suit this young actor admirably.

The Grand Theatre, Mansfield, will re-open for the season on Aug. 10 with My Sweetheart. On the occasion of the flower show at Pleasley, near Mansfield, last Saturday, Captain Cecil Clayton, the managing-director of the Grand Theatre, gave a successful balloon ascent. During the afternoon the wind was rather strong, but about six o'clock captive ascents were able to be given, these proving so popular that it was close upon nine o'clock when the Captain was able to sail right away.

Mr. Alfred Northway and Mr. W. V. Garrod's new play, A Country Girl in London, will be produced this evening at the Theatre Royal, Macclesfield, which has lately undergone extensive structural alterations. Equipped with new and elaborate scenery, properties, appointments, specially composed music, and a fine plant of new printing, played by a powerful company, and produced in what is practically a new theatre, everything augurs well for the success of the venture. The Prodigal Parson, under the same spirited management, has now reached the 130th consecutive week of an unbroken tour, and is playing to capital business everywhere.

"The Power of the Cross" and A Fight for a Throne start their fourth and second tours respectively next week—the former at Carlisle, and the latter at Keighley. Both pieces are under the direction of the author Mr. Geo. A. De Gray, who has booked an excellent tour, extending to next Whitsun. The Power of the Cross will be equipped with a fresh plant of scenery, executed by the West Riding Scenic Studio, and every promise of continued prosperity is presented.

The re-opening of the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, after extensive alterations and improvements, is announced for Sept. 7. The box-office will be opened three weeks beforehand, and all seats will be bookable in advance. The first production will be a new humorous pastoral by Charles McEvoy, entitled When the Devil was Ill.

Miss Horniman's company, under the direction of Mr. B. Iden Payne, will include most of the old members, and in addition there will be several new faces, including Miss Darragh, an American actress of great ability, Mr. Jules Shaw, &c. When the Devil was Ill is announced for a fortnight's run, and will be followed by other interesting productions.

Mr. George Traill has been re-engaged by Mr. Bertram for Colonel Sir Henry Curwen in The Breed of the Treshams. The piece starts on its fourth year of tour under the Bertram management at the Theatre Royal, Norwich, on Monday, on which occasion Mr. Traill will play the part for the 465th time.

Mr. George Unwin's new one-act play, The Way Out, will (subject to the Lord Chamberlain's approval) be produced at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Monday. The cast includes Mr. Fred Coyners, Mr. Legai Robinson, Miss Ida Scott, and Miss Lorna Lawrence. The novelty will precede Tom, Dick, and Harry, which is paying a return visit to that town. Mr. Unwin has undertaken the booking of Mr. Ernest Chesney's companies, commencing with Wedded to Crime, which has been successfully touring for some time past, and has been commissioned to write a new comedy sketch for a well-known comedienne, and to take charge of a new production, particulars of which will be announced shortly.

Mr. Martin Harvey, in fulfilment of promises made, will begin a brief tour on Aug. 17, prior to the commencement of his season at the Adelphi. He will visit Llandudno, Buxton, Harrogate, and Middlesbrough, devoting a few nights to each. A feature of this necessarily short tour will be the special revival of Eugene Aram.

Miss Edith Blande has had to refuse an offer from Mr. Frederick Melville to play the heavy leading part in Her Forbidden Marriage, having already signed with Mr. Mark Blow and Miss Ida Molesworth for a special week, to play Princess Claudia, in From Slave to Princess, to be produced by them at the Kennington Theatre on Monday.

Mr. Hugh Fleming, who has been acting as general-manager pro tem. for Baron Harriss's Prince of Pilsen company, resumes his duties in advance at Llandudno this week. At the termination of the present tour Mr. Fleming concludes eight years' association with The Belle of New York and Prince of Pilsen companies.

The engagement of Mr. Harry Cane by Mr. Tom B. Davis for Miss Evelyn Millard's production at the Garrick Theatre has been cancelled by mutual arrangement.

Mr. W. Watkin-Wynne, the Australian actor, will produce at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, on Monday, August 10, a new domestic drama, in four acts, from his own pen, entitled Light in the Darkness. A strong cast has been engaged, including Messrs. Alfred Beaumont, Arthur Rodney, H. Elmore-Frith, Charles L. Ludlow, Herbert Lloyd, Frank Stuart, Norman Clark, W. Watkin-Wynne, Miss Maud Buchanan, Miss Beatrice Western, Miss Agnes St. Clair, and little Marjorie Lawrence, the clever child actress. Elegant scenery has been painted by W. Dewhurst, jun., and the whole production is under the experienced direction of the author.

The Shakespeare, Clapham, which this week was devoted to the staging of a new play, will witness the production next week of a drama called The Girl with the Angel Face. The piece will be presented by Mr. James Willard's company.

Mr. C. St. John Denton has secured for Denton, Bode, and McKenzie, Ltd., the Australasian rights of the successful comic opera Tom Jones, which they will produce in conjunction with Messrs. Meynell and Gunn next year. The Belle of Mayfair, recently produced by this firm at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, was eminently successful. They hold options on two important forthcoming musical productions, and will send out an entirely new comic opera company at the conclusion of the present engagements. The enterprising entrepreneurs are also producing pantomime on an elaborate scale in Melbourne this coming Christmas, Miss Meredith Meredro, who was so successful in the pantomime at Drury Lane last year, being engaged as principal boy.

Mr. Powell James, having concluded on Saturday last a summer tour of Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's Lucky Durham company, has been re-engaged by them as manager for their Leah Kleschna company, which commences on Monday at the Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, a long tour extending through the autumn.

Mr. Fred Bernardo vacates his post as acting-manager at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, this week, to take up his accustomed position with Mr. Lester Collingwood's When London Sleeps company on tour. Mr. Bernardo will be away from Birmingham until next March, being entrusted with Mr. Collingwood's London production of The Babes in the Wood.

Mr. Henry de Solla has been engaged by Mr. William Greet as stage manager for his new production of The Old Firm, which is to be staged at Newcastle on the 17th inst., preparatory to its introduction to the West End.

Mr. Henry Tweedie, the well-known business-manager, desires to correct an erroneous idea which exists that he has retired from the profession. This is very far from being the case, for he is anxious to secure an engagement this autumn. Election registration work has filled his time for some months, but that has now ceased, and Mr. Tweedie is entirely at liberty.

Mr. Alexander Loftus has every reason to congratulate himself on the production of The Belle of the Ball at the Opera House, Southport, on Monday, as from start to finish the success of the play was never in doubt. The book is by L. Norden, with music by E. T. de Banzie and Michael Dwyer. Handsome scenery has been painted for the production. Mr. Johnnie Schofield has been allotted a part that fits him like a glove, and while he is on the stage there is not a dull moment. The miniature ponies and brougham are the same as those which recently appeared before His Majesty the King, and the dresses, by Mme. Etole, Mrs. Penny, and Mme. Moelle, of 2, Rue Provence, Paris, with uniforms and hunting suits by Morris Angel, leave nothing to be desired.

Owing to the demands made upon his time by the tour of The Belle of the Ball Mr. Loftus has been compelled temporarily to terminate the travels of The New Barmaid, which has had a record run of four and a half years' continuous tour. He will send this evergreen comedy out next year, starting August Bank Holiday, with new scenery, dresses, &c.

Mr. A. Hamilton Warden finished on the 18th ult. at the Elephant and Castle Theatre a tour of over three years with A Woman's Past, H. F. Housden's successful drama. After a short rest, the play will go on the road again, and will ere long be succeeded by a new drama by the same author. Miss Maisie Hanbury, Mr. Warden's charming leading lady of the above tour, will be in both plays.

An elaborate system for heating and ventilating the house has been introduced by Mr. J. M. Chute at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, which reopens on Monday. The new scheme has been framed on scientific principles combined with practical experience. Originally there was an enormous ventilator in the roof of the stage. This, instead of drawing off the impure air, caused a strong downward current, which flooded the theatre as soon as the curtain was raised. Now intakes have been formed at floor level on three sides, and the pure air coming in will pass directly on to radiators, which can be heated up to any degree necessary.

A network of hot-water pipes has been installed beneath the stage, and with all the passages adequately heated it will be possible to bring the temperature up to any height required. In order to provide a constant supply of fresh air the outer wall of the auditorium, in places more than 2ft. thick, have been pierced dozens of times, while the old chimneys have furnished excellent shafts for drawing off vitiated air, aided, when needed, by electrical fans.

The radiators will be employed only in cold weather, and it is by a continuous change of the atmosphere that the temperature will be kept down in the summer. To still further counteract the effect produced by the raising and lowering of the curtain, many of the ventilating shafts will be automatically opened or closed at the same time.

Miss Mary Anderson (Mme. De Navarro) was the recipient of numberless congratulations on the occasion of her birthday on Tuesday. The famous actress, who retired prematurely from her professional work on her marriage, lives in the quiet, old-world village of Broadway, in Worcestershire, and has for neighbours such well-known figures in the artistic world as Mr. Edwin Abbey, R.A., Sir Hubert Parry, and Mr. Alfred Parsons, A.R.A.

Mme. de Navarro emerges from her retirement only to give her services in the cause of charity. She is among the influential patrons of the recently-established Guild of Catholic Actors, and though she was unable to be present at the matinée at Daly's given in May last, her kindly interest in the movement was shown in a number of medals blessed by the Pope, and brought from Rome personally by Mme. de Navarro for presentation to all who took part in the entertainment.

The Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, has been selected by the Reception Committee of the Iron and Steel Institute of the United Kingdom for the entertainment of its members, and already 1,000 seats have been secured for the Tuesday evening's performance, which is to be given by Mr. George Edwardes's Merry Widow company, the attraction secured for that week. Happily, this large booking of seats makes no strain upon the resources of this handsome and palatial place of entertainment, which is by far the largest in the district, seating comfortably 3,500 people.

The Grand Opera House, which is described by many managers who have visited it as "a West-End theatre in the provinces," was only a few weeks ago chosen by the Grocers' Federation for their evening's entertainment, the entire building being bought outright for the members visiting the Conference. Mr. Martin Harvey, who is a big favourite at this theatre, makes his fourth visit very shortly.

Miss Go-Won-Go Mohawk, the popular Indian actress, who has completed her farewell tour of the English provinces with her drama Wep-ton-no-Mah, sails to-day for America by the s.s. Mesaba from Tilbury.

The Royal Albert Institute, Windsor, the only place of entertainment in the town, is reopening after extensive alterations and redecorations. The house has been entirely reconstructed, and arrangements have been made for the reception of first-class companies.

Mr. William Lockhart, who has just concluded a three months' tour with Little Lord Fauntleroy, opens on Monday with Mr. James Welch in When Knights were Bold at the Opera House, Blackpool, playing his old part of the Dean.

"Mrs. Dot," which is now running so strongly at the Comedy Theatre, will be produced on Monday at Brighton by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison. Miss Decima Moore will play the title-rôle.

The Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, re-opens to-night with Mr. G. P. Huntley in Mr. Popple. Mr. Graham has been putting his "house in order" during the recess with new fittings, lacquerings, carpets, and hangings, &c., whilst the proscenium front and circles have been entirely redecorated and refurbished.

Messrs. Herbert Skardon and H. Sherwood Martin open the autumn tour of The Way of the World, at New Century Theatre, Motherwell, on Monday, with a strong cast, including Messrs. Clarence Temple, J. P. McBride, D'Arcy Kelway, Augustus Hammond, Victor Gordon, H. Sherwood Martin, Pat Quinn, and Charles Slater, and Misses Doris Brooks, Violet Vivieene, Marie Marah, Nellie De Lacy, and Ethel Wynne. Scenery and effects have been made specially for this production, rendering it one of the finest mounted dramas on tour.

"Her Marriage Vow" commences its second year of tour, by a return visit to Mr. and Mrs. Garside's popular theatre, at Scarborough, which the King, when Prince of Wales, was wont to favour with his patronage. Special interest attaches to the occasion, inasmuch as Mr. Garside will resume his original part of Gilbert Carlton, in which he has made such a hit. He has been residing in Scarborough for the past three months, and has become very popular with all classes, visitors and residents, who frequent the historic old Royal.

Mr. Paul Gilmore, the American comedian who has made such a success in connection with the Frohmans, Litt's Players, Miss Henrietta Crossman, and Mr. Jules Murry, and is to star next season in The Boys of Company B, is spending a few weeks at the Hotel Metropole, Brighton.

Mr. Gelderd has been engaged by Mr. and Miss Hutchison for the leading part (Gerald Halstane) in their Mrs. Dot company. Last autumn, it will be remembered, Mr. Gelderd made a conspicuous success with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in her répertoire.

"The Power of Lies," the domestic drama by Mary Ford, produced at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, on Monday last, will go on tour under the direction of Mr. Charles R. Hardy. Miss Ford, the authoress, desires to express her sincerest thanks to Mr. Marshall Moore, the producer, for his clever work, to Mr. Jules Camens for his beautifully-painted scenery, to Mr. Michael Connolly for his excellent music, and to the ladies and gentlemen who so earnestly portrayed their respective parts.

"The Woman from Russia," a drama, in four acts, by Fred G. Ingleby, was produced for copyright purposes at the Theatre Royal, Jarrow, on July 25.

"King Harry's Revel," which will be held on Thursday and two following afternoons at Scriby Hall, Bawtry, will be supported by a cast in which the aristocracy will be largely represented. The East Gardens looked very beautiful at the first dress rehearsal, which was held last week, and the stage, which is a hundred yards long, was a mass of gorgeous colour. The dances are of great historical interest, and have been carefully rehearsed.

A great improvement has been effected at the Corn Exchange, Hertford, by the provision of a permanent stage, in lieu of the temporary platform which had to be erected on every occasion when the hall was required for theatrical purposes. The stage is 35ft. wide and 25ft. deep, and has been fitted with the regulation sloping floor. Two rooms at the rear have been set apart as dressing-rooms, and additional rooms have been provided in the basement. A passage has been constructed under the platform, thus affording facilities for reaching either side of it.

The lighting of the Corn Exchange is also much improved, an elaborate system of electric lights having been introduced. A new floor has been laid over the entire Exchange, and the gallery has been provided with raised seating. The cost of the work is about £685, the money for which will be provided by a loan, and in order to meet the repayments of principal and interest the Corporation have raised the scale of charges for the use of the Corn Exchange thirty per cent.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Sir John Hare.

"Sir John Hare," says the writer of "Musings Without Words" in Blackwood's Magazine for August, "is not merely a comedian of rare accomplishment. He has also proved himself among the best managers of his time. Above all, he is an actor-manager who has not always cast himself for the best part. Never once during the many years in which he conducted the fortunes of the St. James's Theatre did he subordinate the general welfare to his own ambition. In management, as in acting, he aimed only at an artistic presentation. More than once he resigned a part which suited his talent that he might keep a more watchful eye upon the stage. We can only remember one performance—As You Like It—in which his taste was at fault, and Shakespeare, be it remembered, lay far outside his province. For the rest, his mounting of plays was as reticent as his acting. 'Nothing too much' was his guiding principle, and he has marked the limits of theatrical decoration so clearly that his words should be written up in every green-room of the world."

Edmund Payne at Oxford.

"During our season at Oxford," says Mr. Edmund Payne, in "Some Stories of Practical Jokes" in Cassell's Saturday Journal, "we experienced considerable trouble from the students, the majority of whom seemed to have the strangest ideas of humour. We happened to be there on the fifth of November, and, before a house full of embryo B.A.'s and M.A.'s and A double S.'s, we acted as targets to those serious playgoers, who spent the best part of the evening in flinging crackers at the heroine, squibs at the hero, 'rousers'—a very fierce firework this—at the villain, and a mixture of cracker-squib-rousers at the rest of the company. This part of the performance was not mentioned on the programme, so that, deeming discretion better than being burnt in fourteen places by a mixture of 'Brock and Pain's best,' we closed the theatre for a couple of nights and went to the barracks.

"Writing of students reminds me of some of the efforts of humour the Oxford men used to indulge in in those days when I was putting on weight, and saving five bob a week out of thirty 'whites.' One of their favourite side-splitting, jaw-breaking mirth-provokers was to march twelve abreast down the public highway and clear the road. To an actor whose watch has gone wrong, and who is three-quarters of an hour late in consequence, and has to run a mile, change, dress again, and 'make-up,' and be on the stage in five minutes, this 'road-clearing' performance was great fun. I used to love it.

"Personally, I found the students most entertaining, though to be sure they caused me, in one way and another, to do a lot of extra hard work; but that, perhaps, was my own fault It came about in this way. My burlesque entitled Caliban was produced at Oxford, and for some reason or other—modesty, as I have said, is one of my greatest charms—it ran for five whole weeks. In fact, it made the hit of the season. I introduced a song called 'Bob up serenely' from 'Olivette.' This song made a huge hit, and in order to keep the game alive I used to warble fresh topical verses nightly. Indeed, I was simply overwhelmed with topical verses. Members of Balliol College would send me an instalment; a quarter of an hour later another batch of beautiful efforts would reach me from Jesus College; and altogether I used to find myself pretty well every day overstocked with topical stuff—sometimes good, often bad—but generally awful."

Sievier on the Stage.

"Arriving at Dublin," says Mr. Robert Standish Sievier in his Autobiography, "I presented myself to Mr. Egerton, the stage-manager of the Theatre Royal, who in due course introduced me to the lessee, Mr. Michael Gunn, one of the best-natured and most straightforward men it has been my good fortune to meet throughout the world. The opening play was to be Hamlet. There was to be a first piece, and, what was more important, I was to play in it. It was one of the old-fashioned farces, and I was cast for the servant. I attended rehearsal, and inquired for my part. This rather annoyed the prompter. Let me here mention that the old-fashioned prompter was, as a rule, an irascible, dusty person, always wearing a stale shave and a frayed collar (with a broken button-hole), which ticklingly irritated his generally well-worn-out patience. His trousers always appeared too long and wrinkled at the ankle, while his unpolished boots matched his sombre tall hat, which gave one the idea it had had the moth in it at least a couple of seasons back. His shirt? Well, I have described enough. Standing by his little table, the rehearsal progressed. As last my entrance was called, and again I asked for my part.

"The little prompter answered with a venomous sting in his tones: 'Your part, sir—your part is this—when this gentleman says "I will ring for the servant," you enter, and placing the things on the tray, exit with them as you came. I assume you can do that?' I remember my answer, and it has often since been repeated to me. I replied: 'Your assumption does me honour. I trust I can aspire to it, but I cannot answer your question off-hand. Permit me to rehearse it.' That dirty little prompter and I were friends from that moment.

"To show how the uninitiated may fall into a trap by betting, I will here explain how I was nearly caught. When I knew I was cast for the servant, I made a bet of five shillings with an actor called Edward Major, who was our leading juvenile, and was cast to play in the first piece, that I would play two speaking parts on the opening night. He knew I had not a speaking part in the farce; I thought I must have. Of course, I had lost, but I can assure those who are behind the scenes that there is as glorious an uncertainty on the stage as on the Turf.

"The night came. Teddy Major gave me the cue, and on I went. Distracting the audience with some 'business,' he sidled towards me with a sotto voce, 'Eh, laddie—you can leave the dollar on the table, if you like.' This was a cue I had not heard at rehearsal, and before Teddy Major knew where he was I looked him straight in the face, demanding, "Did you say, sir, I was to give the cat the left milk, and the piece of sugar to the canary?' The audience yelled. He was bursting with laughter himself at my consummate audacity, but he replied, 'Take away the tray and attend to your business.' 'Business, sir, certainly,' I replied, adding in similar sotto voce, 'I've won, and you can put the dollar on the table if you like,' and spilling the milk all down my clothes, I ejaculated, as I wiped it up with the napkin, 'Poor puss, poor puss,' and again the audience roared. I had fairly beaten Major, and handing me two half-crowns—one was a 'property' one, in other words, there was no property in it—he said, as I reached the door with the tray, 'James, you have missed your profession; you should have been an actor. You can go now.' 'Thank you, sir; but I might say if you joined the constabulary it would give you the only chance of taking me up,' and I made my exit amidst roars of laughter. That Irish audience knew the farce from A to Z, and followed our gag more keenly than the play itself."

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

"THE POWER OF LIES."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Mary Ford, produced for the first time at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, on Monday, July 27.

Lady Margaret Harden .....Miss Mary Ford
Charlotte Barton .....Miss Ella Henderson
Phyllis Harden ....Miss Gladys Ford-Howitt
Ruth Carson .....Miss Lillian Williams
Mrs. Elkington .....Mrs. Williams
Kattilana Flyblow .....Miss Davis
Nurse Blair .....Miss Mary Farmer
Servant .....Miss Ida McKenna
Sir George Harden.....} Mr. Otto Minster
Geoffrey Carson .....}
Mr. Isaacs .....Mr. T. W. Ford
Dr. Bletchley .....Mr. Marshall Moore
Joe Barton .....Mr. Herbert Russell
Lord Robert Gordon .....Mr. Dudley Stuart
Ring Master .....Mr. Ivan P. Gore
Detective Hamilton ....Mr. Harcourt Bailey
Warder .....Mr. W. H. Ordish
Hospital Porter .....Mr. James Admans
Tommy .....Mr. Chantry

The action of this piece begins in an hotel at Rotterdam, where Sir George Harden and his newly-made wife are staying for their honeymoon. A letter arrives from Sir George's sister Ruth, who had married unhappily, beseeching him to go to her as she is dangerously ill. Sir George hastens off, but scarcely has he departed than there enters a vulgar woman named Charlotte Barton, who staggers Lady Harden by asserting that she is the wife of Sir George by an earlier marriage, producing a certificate in confirmation of her claim. Preceding the baronet to England, we make acquaintance with Geoffrey Carson, Ruth's ne'er-do-well husband. Under the name of Sir George Harden, whom he greatly resembles, he had in the past espoused the woman Barton, the ceremony, however, having been performed by his associate, Isaacs, habited as a clergyman. We also meet Joe Barton, a ferryman, who is none other than the husband of Charlotte, who thought she had got rid of him by dosing his cup of tea.

Sir George makes his way to his sister's cottage, only to hear her cry for help, and, rushing in, finds that her brutal husband has thrown her into the river. Sir George grapples with Geoffrey, but is stunned by a heavy blow. Struck by the resemblance which he bears to the injured man, Geoffrey resolves to impersonate Sir George and to annex his estates. The scheme works smoothly. Sir George, found in his assailant's coat and hat, is arrested and sentenced to a life term for the murder of Ruth, despite the fact that she is rescued by the ferryman and restored to life. Isaacs is convicted as an accessory and also sent to penal servitude.

Between the first and second acts eighteen years are supposed to elapse, during which time Carson, discreetly remaining abroad, enjoys as Sir George Harden his ill-gotten wealth. The real Sir George has meanwhile escaped from prison, and has taken up his old profession of a doctor. Carson, returned to England, makes his appearance at Lynthorpe, the estate of a Mrs. Merton, whose wealth he covets. He is nevertheless struck by the prepossessing appearance of her daughter, to whom he does not hesitate to make love. Isaacs, too, has escaped from gaol, and confronts Carson with demands for money, the villain's discomfiture being increased by the advent of Charlotte, who proceeds further to blackmail him, though her claim to be his wife is considerably weakened by the appearance of her husband, Joe Barton.

Carson visits Mrs. Merton, who is really the bride of the first act, and is recognised by her as the man to whom she was married. She cherishes a love for Sir George, but her affection is destroyed when Carson asks for her daughter's hand. She reveals her identity as his wife, but when Carson declares his intention of claiming marital rights he is contemptuously rejected. The villain grows insistent, and there is a struggle; but suddenly a commotion is heard outside, and through the curtains of the window is seen the head of a lion, which has escaped from a neighbouring circus. Carson draws a pistol and aims at the beast, who springs upon him and inflicts serious injuries ere he is shot down by his pursuers. Carson is conveyed to the neighbouring hospital, where one of the nurses is found to be no less a personage than his wife Ruth. Carson is placed upon the operating-table, and when the bandages are removed Ruth recognises her husband, and declares that the wounded man is not Sir George Harden. Realising that his end is near, Carson confesses to his deception, and stabs Charlotte Barton to the heart. The madman then takes a flying leap from the window, and is subsequently brought in in a mangled condition. The real baronet, however, soon appears in the person of a mysterious medical man, who, pulling off his false beard and wig, reveals himself as Sir George Harden, and takes his faithful wife to his arms.

The play is carefully represented by competent artists. The authoress is scarcely true to herself in the matter of delivery, and her dialogue is not always heard, but she embellishes her trying scenes with dignity, quiet force, and refinement. The arduous dual rôle of Sir George Harden and Geoffrey Carson furnishes Mr. Otto Minster with dramatic opportunities of which he makes the most. He thoroughly maintains the sinister character of the evil-disposed Carson, his acting being embellished occasionally with a grim humour that is appreciated. A refreshing impersonation is that of the daughter, Phyllis, played with charming coquetry by Miss Gladys Ford-Howitt, who thoroughly looks the character of the dainty schoolgirl just blossoming into womanhood. She derives admirable assistance in many agreeable light comedy scenes from Mr. Dudley Stuart, who plays with crispness and sincerity as the jealous Lord Robert. Mr. Marshall Moore, upon whom devolves the responsibility of production, gives a well-studied and consistent portraiture of the kind-hearted Dr. Bletchley; and a much-appreciated performance is that of the Jew Isaacs, played with comic resource by Mr. T. W. Ford. Miss Lillian Williams reveals elocutionary gifts in the part of Ruth Carson, and gives a clever rendering marked by genuine dramatic skill. As the designing Charlotte Barton Miss Ella Henderson proves herself an effective low comedienne with a real sense of humour; and admirable aid to the fun is given by Mr. Herbert Russell, who is a thorough favourite as Joe Barton; Mr. Chantry, a diminutive comedian, also acting drolly as the call-boy. Miss Ida McKenna makes a comely and painstaking maidservant, and Miss Mary Farmer is equally commendable as a hospital nurse. The piece, which is presented by Mr. Charles Hardy, has the advantage of new scenery, well painted by Mr. Jules Camus, and of effective music from the pen of Mr. Michael Connelly.

The education of Rich, manager of Lincoln's Inn Fields and Covent Garden Theatres, had been grossly neglected, consequently, though he had a good understanding, his language was vulgar and ungrammatical. He had contracted a strange and rude habit of calling everybody "Mister," which gave rise to an unmannerly bon-mot by Foote. Rich having called him "Mister" several times, Foote grew warm, and asked him the reason of his not calling him by his name. "Don't be angry," said Rich, "for I sometimes forget my own name." "That's extraordinary," replied Foote, "for though I know you could not write it, I did not suppose you could forget it."

A CHAT WITH WENTWORTH CROKE.

Mr. Wentworth Croke will be responsible for nearly 200 artists this autumn with his six touring companies that start out on Monday Bank Holiday. In spite of his great responsibility as managing-director of the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, and proprietor of the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, he has issued his tour card for the autumn 1908 and spring 1909, the total number of towns that will be visited being over 250.

Mr. Croke's principal company in The Prodigal Son will re-open at the Marlborough Theatre, Holloway, to-day, for seven nights and two matinées. Mr. Hugh Montgomery will again play Magnus Stephensson, the second company starting out on Boxing Day. The Bondman company will commence on Monday Bank Holiday at Great Yarmouth with a powerful cast. Mr. Croke's three companies of the new version of The Christian will open on the same date at the Theatre Royal, Leeds, the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, and the Alexandra Theatre, Ilfracombe respectively. Mr. Henry Renouf has been engaged to play John Storm in the North company.

A replica of the original productions at the Lyceum and Drury Lane Theatres has been painted by Ernest Howard, in addition to the effects and dresses as used in London.

So great has been the success of the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, that Mr. Croke's bookings run into the autumn of 1909 without a vacant date. His patrons will be presented with all the best class dramatic productions touring.

Mr. P. Howard Sturgess, who has represented Mr. Wentworth Croke in his provincial companies for the past five years, has been appointed general-manager for Mr. Croke's enterprises.

Mr. Wentworth Croke's management of the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, is both enterprising and far-seeing. He has entered into an arrangement with Mr. Tom B. Davis, by which Mr. Croke and Mr. Davis will jointly run the pantomime season at the Shakespeare Theatre for the coming Christmas, and for two or three seasons to follow. Mr. Croke and Mr. Davis have been jointly interested before in musical comedy ventures, so that it is only suitable that they should be jointly interested in the exploitation of pantomime. For the coming season the subject is Jack and the Beanstalk, with Miss Ada Reeve as Jack. The book is being written specially by Mr. James Hewson, with the view to fitting Miss Reeve with a part worthy of her talent. The scenery and costumes are receiving the most careful personal attention of Mr. Davis, and everything is being specially designed and made for the production. Some very important scenes will be supplied by the resident artist of the Shakespeare Theatre, Mr. T. Holmes, and the stage will be under the direction of Mr. E. T. Steyne, who has been responsible for some of the most successful pantomimes produced in Liverpool.

MR. WENTWORTH CROKE.

Special music is being composed by Mr. Guy Jones, who made his successful début as a composer in London with the recent production of The Gay Gordons at the Aldwych Theatre. Mr. Guy Jones is proving himself a worthy successor as a composer to his brother, Mr. Sydney Jones, whose name will be for ever famous as the composer of The Geisha. Mr. Fred Allandale, who made such a distinct success in Aladdin at this same theatre, will be on hand with some good songs with tuneful choruses.

Another important engagement is that of Mr. Dan Crawley as the Dame. Mr. Crawley has secured popular success in nearly every big town in the kingdom, but it remained for Mr. Croke and Mr. Davis to bring this genuinely funny artist to Liverpool. The Brothers Griffiths have been engaged to make their first appearance in pantomime in Liverpool, and Mr. Lauri de Frece will also be of the company.

A veteran actor of the old days once expressed his extreme dislike as to what he was pleased to term "the sham wine-parties" of Macbeth and others. He had grateful memories of the rather obsolete Scottish melodrama of Cramond Brig; for in this work old custom demanded the introduction of a real sheep's head with accompanying "trotters." He told of a North British manager who was wont—especially when the salaries he was supposed to pay were somewhat in arrear, and he desired to keep his company in good humour and, may be, alive—to produce this play on Saturday nights. For some days before the performance the dainties that were destined to grace it underwent exhibition in the green-room. A label bore the inscription: "This sheep's head will appear in the play of Cramond Brig on next Saturday night. God save the King!" "It afforded us all two famous dinners," said the veteran. "We had a large pot of broth made with the head and feet; these we ate on Saturday night; the broth we had on Sunday." So in another Scottish play, The Gentle Shepherd of Allan Ramsay, it was long the custom on stages north of the Tweed to present a real haggis, although niggard managers were often tempted to substitute for the genuine dish a far less savoury if more wholesome mess of oatmeal. But a play more famous still for the reality of its victuals, and better known to modern times, was Prince Hoare's musical farce, No Song, no Supper. A steaming hot boiled leg of lamb and turnips may be described as quite the leading character in this entertainment. Without this appetising addition the play used never to be represented. There is a story, however, which one can only hope is incorrect, of an impresario of Oriental origin, who, supplying the necessary meal, yet subsequently fined his company, all round, on the ground that they had "combined to destroy certain of the properties of the theatre."

"THE MAN OF HER CHOICE."

Drama in Four Acts, by Ada G. Abbott, played for the first time in London at the Broadway Theatre, Deptford, on Monday, July 27.

Everard Hilderson .....Mr. John Lester
Berkley Hilderson .....Mr. Ernest R. Abbott
Kingsley Hilderson .....Mr. Herbert Morgan
Barry Hilderson .....Mr. Frank Stephens
Morris .....Mr. Edwin Keene
Miss Penelope Hilderson Miss Blanche Stanley
Mrs. Manx .....Miss Marjorie Tennant
Eliza .....Miss Florence North
Napoleon .....Billy
Barbara Linley .....Miss Ada Abbott

Miss Ada G. Abbott, the authoress of The Man of her Choice, originally produced at the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, on June 24, 1907, under the title of The House of Shame, is to be complimented on having produced a well-written and constructed play, in which considerable skill in characterisation is evident, and which contains telling lines and situations and comedy business in abundance. The head of the "house of shame" is Everard Hilderson, owner of the mortgaged Thorpe Royal, where all four acts take place, a widower with three sons, Berkeley, Kingsley, and Barry. The two elder, like their sire, are worthless scamps—the eldest a drunkard; Kingsley a sneaking scoundrel; and the youngest, Barry, a youth home from school because his precious father has not the money to pay the fees. Also of the household is Barbara Linley, the squire's ward, a joyous maiden of some sixteen summers, who, with Barry for a chum, makes things pretty lively at Thorpe Royal. She has a fortune of some £80,000, and it is the Squire's intention that she shall marry Kingsley, and thus enable him to pay off the mortgage. When Berkley hears this, he insists that, if the girl marry, she shall at least have her choice, and to the annoyance of Squire Hilderson and his second son she prefers Berkley. Berkley makes it very evident that she shall be his wife in name only, and also that his father shall not touch a penny of her money, and after the family have retired for the night indulges in his taste for strong liquor, and eventually falls on the floor drunk. Young Barry naturally is upset that Barbara should marry his dissolute brother, but keeps silence, and the act ends on his coming into the room and helping Berkley up to bed. In the second act Berkley and Barbara have been married a few weeks, but both pursue their old style of living—Berkley getting drunk and Barbara indulging in innocent tomboyish pleasures with Barry. The squire and Kingsley endeavour to get Berkley to persuade Barbara to sign a deed entitling her to her marriage portion, but he flatly refuses; and he also tells the girl on no account to do so in his absence. The desperate couple hit on the plan for breaking her in by ill-treating Barry, and whip the lad within an inch of his life; but he will not cry out, as he knows Barbara would sign the deed rather than he should be further punished. When Berkley returns unexpectedly from a ride he demands that Barry shall be let out of his room, and there is a pathetic scene when the tortured lad is brought in. The act concludes with the loyal young wife kissing Berkley and appealing to him to give up drinking, and his better nature is aroused, he realising what a worthless fellow he is. In the third act Kingsley decides to make love to Barbara himself, and then tries to get her to sign the deed; but he mistakes Barry (who disguises himself in one of Barbara's frocks and his aunt's wig for a joke) for the girl. Barry is terrified, and tells Berkley, and the latter, feigning drunkenness, overhears Kingsley endeavouring to get Barbara to go away with him. He then tells Barbara that she is not his wife. The marriage was illegal, and he only pretended to marry her to save her from Kingsley. In a fit of fury Kingsley then says that he has ruined the girl, as she will now be known as his (Berkley's) mistress, and in an exciting episode that ensues falls to the ground lifeless. The squire denounces Berkley as his murderer, but Barbara swears he is innocent. As she is his wife, her evidence cannot be taken, but when it is explained that the marriage was illegal the squire is again confounded. In the last act Berkley really marries Barbara to save her good name, and ere the curtain finally falls she discovers that she is very much in love with him, and will not let him go out of her life, as was his intention.

Much of the success of the play was owing to the excellent all-round acting of the company (Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's), many of the cast being the same as in the original production at Cardiff. Miss Ada G. Abbott, not content with writing the play, undertakes the principal female part of Barbara Linley, a character in which she is seen to decided advantage. In the lighter phases of the rôle, where Barbara, aided by Barry, indulges in all kinds of tomboyish pranks, the actress was particularly happy; and she also thoroughly realised the serious side of the character, especially in the scene with Berkley, where she implores him to give up drinking—a performance triumphant, on which the accomplished artist can be heartily congratulated. Mr. Frank Stephens also came very well through his arduous task of enacting the youthful Barry, pathetic in the extreme being the scene where Barry is brought in after his flogging. He also skilfully indicated the boy's devotion to his girl chum, and his loyalty and affection for his brother Berkley were likewise excellently suggested. An easy and thoroughly sound portrayal of Berkley is given by Mr. Ernest R. Abbott, his depiction of drunkenness never being over-accentuated, and his acting throughout being most convincing. The unthankful part of Kingsley is carefully and capably undertaken by Mr. Herbert Morgan; and Mr. John Lester, who also has an unpleasant rôle in the unscrupulous Everard Hilderson, is also responsible for a finished and quite satisfactory performance. The many comedy scenes are safe in the hands of Mr. Edwin Keene, a quietly droll exponent of the amorous butler, Morris; Miss Marjorie Tennant, as Mrs. Manx, the harassed elderly housekeeper; and Miss Florence North, a quaint-looking domestic, in love with Morris, the trio working admirably together, and creating abundant merriment. Mention must also be made of the excellent portrayal of Miss Penelope Hilderson, a sour old spinster, who contributes to the hilarity of some of the comic scenes, by that experienced and versatile actress, Miss Blanche Stanley. Billy, Barbara's canine companion, and the terror of Miss Penelope, plays his part to perfection. The play is admirably staged.

Lamb relates how he once saw Elliston, sitting in state, in the tarnished green-room of the Olympic Theatre, while before him was brought for judgment, on complaint of prompter, "one of those little tawdry things that flirt at the tails of choruses—the pertest little drab—a dirty fringe and appendage of the lamp's smoke—who, it seems, on some disapprobation expressed by a 'highly respectable' audience, had precipitately quitted her station on the boards and withdrawn her small talents in disgust. 'And how dare you,' said the manager, 'how dare you, madam, without a notice, withdraw yourself from your theatrical duties?' 'I was hissed, sir.' 'And you have the presumption to decide upon the taste of the town?' 'I don't know that, sir, but I will never stand to be hissed,' was the rejoinder of Young Confidence. Then, gathering up his features into one significant mass of wonder, pity, and expostulatory indignation—in a lesson never to have been lost upon a creature less forward than she who stood before him—his words were these: 'They have hissed ME)' "

A THEATRICAL "SEND-OFF."

A dainty dinner party was made the means at the Boulogne Hotel, Gerrard-street, on Sunday last of wishing "bon voyage" to the newest enterprise of Mr. R. A. Roberts, who, without deserting the variety theatres, is embarking upon a dramatic venture with Straight from the Shoulder, a new piece which starts its career at Brighton on Monday next. At the head of the table sat Mr. Roberts, and the other end was graced by the presence of Mrs. Roberts, who all unseen is no unimportant factor in the protean sketches which have won her husband such wide renown. The assembly also included Mr. Arnold Bell, Mr. Charles Boult, the business-manager of the company, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Child, Miss Beatrice Burdette, Mr. Leonard Clarke, Mr. Fred Beck, Mrs. Wilde, Miss Edie Casson, Mr. Matthew Boulton, Mr. Geo. Fisher, Mr. Edgar White, Mr. A. C. Armstrong, Miss Beatrice Moore, and Mr. Percy Murray, of the Stock Exchange, and Mr. Charles Hallett, also of the Stock Exchange and a prominent member of the Vaudeville A.D.C.

A recherché repast was served in admirable style, the menu including a "Bombe en surprise à la Straight from the Shoulder," which consisted of the sudden appearance of a block of ice, upon which a limp lion composed of cream, stood passively while a number of fireworks exploded around him. Cordiality and good-fellowship reigned throughout, and the note of the assembly was emphasised when Mr. Bell, with uplifted glass, gave expression to the following sentiment—"May the tears of friendship as they fall crystallise and form jewels to be worn by those we love!—Straight from the Shoulder."

After dinner Mr. Boyd rose to thank their manager and manageress for the excellent entertainment which they had given them to mark the starting of the "Governor's" first theatrical tour in Great Britain. They all hoped great things from the tour. That it would be comfortable he had no hesitation in saying; if it was not, it would be their own faults. In the ordinary way a theatrical combination were sometimes treated to a dinner at the end of the tour, but seldom at the beginning, and he hoped it would not spoil them. He thought it would not, but, on the contrary, would do them all good.

Mr. Roberts said, in reply to his old friend and manager, Mr. Boult, who was going to look after the business interests of Straight from the Shoulder, he would take the opportunity to offer his reasons for sending out a theatrical company. The question had been asked why had he dared to embark upon such a project, but he would say that it was in order to satisfy an ambition which he had long cherished. He had been on the stage since he was a boy, and had experienced both the rough and the smooth; but he was born with an ambitious brain, and if he did not satisfy it he did not think he would rest in his grave. If the enterprise was a failure, then the money would be lost; but if on the other hand success crowned their efforts, he would be able to go further and do greater things for the regular stage. It had given him great pleasure to rehearse the company, and he was pleased to feel that during the arduous work he had not had occasion to raise his voice once. Mr. Roberts referred to the presence among them that night of Mr. Arnold Bell, an actor of great experience and standing, who had paid them the compliment of attending. Mr. Roberts recalled a story of his more youthful days when he was playing responsibles at 30s. a week. He acted everything from property-man to harlequinade, and if there was nothing to play he played that. On one occasion the manager, who had an important part, wanted to go off for a refresher, and said to a member of his company, "I want a drink; you take the second scene and follow me off up stage; Roberts, you as a beginner, can come and pay!" It was more than a pleasure for his dear wife and himself to receive their friends, both inside and outside the profession. As he had explained, his reason for starting on his enterprise was to satisfy his ambition; but another motive he had was to be an employer of labour artistically, and thus to benefit his brother artists on the dramatic stage.

Called upon for a speech, Mr. Arnold Bell said it was no uncommon occurrence in the old days for companies to start out with a celebration such as they were enjoying that night. It was a graceful compliment too seldom paid nowadays, and it showed that their employers had confidence in them—a confidence that he was sure would be well repaid. Though like Mr. Roberts, he was a "waxer," and was at present in the halls, he had been nearly twenty years a manager, and had learned that the better they treated their companies the more work they got out of them. Treat them like men and you get men's work; but treat them like dogs and you get dogs' work. He sincerely wished prosperity to Straight from the Shoulder, and hoped that after that Mr. Roberts would get another success "straight from somewhere else."

The evening was rendered further enjoyable by a number of songs and recitations given by those present. Mr. Roberts delighted all with some diverting imitations of a professional coinpalmist, and with humorous reminiscences of his youthful days, and Mr. Arnold Bell, in addition to reciting a stirring definition of "fame," delivered most impressively the Curse speech from Ben-My-Chree. Mr. Child gave a clever dialect recital of "A Tale of a Tog," and contributions were also made by Mr. Fred Beck, Mr. George Fisher, and Miss Beatrice Burdette, who presided at the piano.

Though no objection has been made to Mr. Rutland Barrington's clever "gag" in the new Savoy production re the Beresford incident, and no one has detected a "resemblance" to any living admiral in the Sir Berkeley Wynne of The Flag Lieutenant at the Playhouse, the Lord Chamberlain has sometimes interfered to stay any direct stage portraiture of eminent characters. Thus Mr. Buckstone was prohibited from appearing "made-up" as Lord John Russell, and Mr. A. Wigan, when performing the part of a French naval officer some five-and-twenty years ago, was directed by the authorities to reform his aspect, which too much resembled, it was alleged, the portraits of the Prince de Joinville. The actor effected a change in this instance which did not much mend the matter. It was understood at the time, indeed, that he had simply made his costume more correct, and otherwise had rather heightened than diminished his resemblance to the son of Louis Philippe. Mlle. Mars, the famous French actress, decided upon defying accuracy of costume, and declined to wear a powdered wig in a serious part. Her example was followed by Rachel, Ristori, and others. When Auber's Gustave, ou le Bal Masqué was in rehearsal, the singers complained of the difficulty they experienced in expressing passionate sentiments in the powdered wigs and stately dress of the time of Louis XV. In the masquerade they were therefore permitted to assume such costumes as seemed to them suited to the violent catastrophe of the story. They argued that "le moindre geste violent peut exciter le rire en provoquant l'explosion d'un nuage blanc; les artistes sont donc contraints de se tenir dans une réserve et dans une immobilité qui jettent du froid sur toutes les situations."

So great was the success of The Flower Girl at Birkenhead that an immediate date was offered for the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, which Mr. Charles M. Bestic had regretfully to decline, the holder of the booking not being able to release him.

AN AMATEUR ENTERTAINMENT.

In Mr. Philip Treherne's novel, "Miss Chesterton's Decision," an amusing description of an amateur outdoor concert occurs. Mr. Marflete is a rich Philistine, who is present with his family: The tables in the tea tent were packed as closely as possible, and the Marfletes found some difficulty in securing an empty one. As they entered the tent, Lancelot Niton concluded a stirring recitation, entitled "The Murder of Deadman's Gully," with an intensely dramatic gesture, his eyes flashing, his forefinger pointed in Mr. Marflete's direction. The last lines rang out—

"The knife flashed white in the moonlight; ah, God! then it supped blood-red,
And there in the desolate gully lay Jimmy, the scout, stone dead."

"Depressing kind of thing," said Mr. Marflete. "Why will they always recite horrors? This tent's very crowded and stuffy. I wish we'd returned to Pinewood for tea; we shall never be attended to. They've only four waitresses for all these people."

"I do hope Mr. Niton will recite again: he's so good," said Ethel. "Don't you remember, Dolly, we saw him at the Reality in 'The Mendacious Mrs. Madden'?"

"Yes, I remember," replied Dolly. "I enjoyed the play very much. Did you see it, Mr. Meyerbach?"

"Can't say I did, but I only go to musical pieces. I'd sooner sit through three acts of a burlesque than one scene of comedy."

"Has anyone got a programme of the concert?" asked Mr. Marflete.

"It simply says in the souvenir," replied Chesterton," that 'A variety concert will take place under the direction of Mr. Lancelot Niton. Many well-known artistes have promised their services.'"

Mr. Marflete made frantic signals to one of the waitresses, and at last she came and received orders for tea and bread and butter.

"I call this very badly managed," he muttered. "No programmes, and the waiting is abominable, and such waste of time spending a fine afternoon in a stuffy tent."

"I saw a boy at the door selling programmes," suggested Ethel.

"My dear girl, why didn't you tell me?"

"They were sixpence each, papa."

"Then I certainly shouldn't have bought one. If this concert was properly managed there'd be a programme card on every table."

"They seem to take rather a long time between the turns," remarked Meyerbach. As he spoke, Niton appeared on the stage, and announced that Mr. Bainbridge would oblige with some imitations.

Mr. Bainbridge walked jauntily on, faced the audience, and smiled on them comprehensively. "Ladies and gentlemen," he shouted, "with your kind permission and attention I will endeavour to give some imitations."

"What a voice the man's got!" said Mr. Marflete.

"My first will be a pack of hounds in full cry," and he proceeded to make a deafening noise, stamping about the stage and cracking a dog-whip.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Marflete, "I wish he'd stop. I shall have a headache for the rest of the evening."

Faint applause greeted Bainbridge's efforts.

"My next," he roared, "will be an express train running through a tunnel." This imitation proved noisier than the first. Then followed unrecognisable renderings of leading actors. It was difficult in this instance to distinguish Tragedy from Comedy. He completely drowned any attempts at conversation, and terrified the village organist, who officiated at the piano, by his vigorous methods.

"If that's a sample of the well-known artists," said Meyerbach, when peace was restored by Bainbridge's exit, "I can't say much for Niton's powers of selection."

"This tea's scarcely fit to drink," growled Mr. Marflete. "I call the tea concert an imposture. If that man had gone on howling and stamping I'd have left the place."

"The noise was unbearable," said Chesterton. "Imitations are unsatisfactory at the best of times; it would be difficult to imagine a more dismal performance. I consider such a display of noisy tomfoolery an insult to the intelligence."

Mr. Niton appeared again and introduced Mr. Bartley, the world-renowned prestidigitator, who performed some simple card tricks, placed a rabbit in a tall hat, waved the hat in the air, and the rabbit disappeared; then discovered innumerable flags in the interior of the hat, besides an unlimited quantity of variegated ribbon; finally, he walked up to Mr. Marflete and said, "Excuse me, sir, but are you aware of the rabbit?"

"Go away," said Mr. Marflete, "and don't come bothering me."

The conjuror stretched out his hand, and apparently produced the rabbit from Mr. Marflete's coat pocket. Roars of laughter greeted the accomplishment of this trick.

"I knew the rabbit was there," said the conjuror, "and was afraid it might possibly inconvenience you, sir. This one's always running away; I can't keep him on the stage."

Mrs. Marflete and the girls joined in the laughter, and Meyerbach hid his face in his handkerchief. Chesterton, however, gazed sternly at the conjuror, who instantly remarked, "Excuse me one moment, please, but the Union Jack seems to have found its way into your pocket. One has to be very careful on these occasions; people are so patriotic nowadays. There! that's better." He waved the Union Jack round his head, and departed in triumph for the stage.

"Infernal insolence," exclaimed Mr. Marflete, purple with rage. "I felt inclined to knock the fellow down. I see nothing to laugh at; there was nothing clever in the trick; he had the rabbit and flag up his sleeve the whole time."

At the Opera House, York, the Empire Comedy Four delight all this week in their musical entertainment with comedy of a high order. In Down South Frank Gala and May Morris appear to the greatest advantage, and give a neat turn; Bostock's Baboons are extremely clever; and Netty Janowsky's acrobatic act is a popular item. Sketches which go down well are given by Lisle and Ford, Day and Knight, and Rell and Butt; whilst Jack Rae, gymnast, and Tom Cowley, a neat dancer, contribute pleasing turns.

A great stroke of misfortune has befallen the refined little band of al-fresco entertainers known as the Frolics, who had pitched their tent at Golder's Green, outside the terminus of the Charing Cross and Hampstead tube. They had, with some trouble, duly obtained the licence, the railway company, who had let them the site, had been at pains to assist them with electric light in their extensive marquee and had well advertised on the railway the performances, and everything pointed to a prosperous season; when of a sudden the superior landlords—the Ecclesiastical Commissioners—pointed out to the railway company that a clause in the lease forbade any amusements being given on their land. And so the Frolics, who had invested their little capital in the venture, have been given till Monday next to quit! Much sympathy is felt for the troupe, which consists of Misses Isa Miller and M. Jolley and Messrs. O. Fishwick, J. W. Bruce, William Simms, and Franklin Miles, all well-known names in the concert and theatrical world.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

STRATFORD EMPIRE.

Broad Cockney humour should be welcome, if anywhere, in London's eastern suburb; and consequently My Pal Jerry, as presented by Mr. Lew Lake's company, is this week being hailed with delight. The staunch patrons of the popular parts of this well-appointed variety theatre are not too insistent on the score of probability in the Central Criminal Court scene, where those irrepressible burglars, Jerry and Nobbler, certainly upset all preconceived ideas of police-court procedure, and they don't ponder too deeply over the convicts' revolt at Portland, leading to the escape of the pals, while undoubtedly their sympathies are extended to Nobbler at the death of Jerry in the final scene. Mr. Bob Morris and Mr. Lew Lake as Jerry and Nobbler respectively supply unique sketches of submerged Cockneyism, and they are adequately supported by a number of auxiliaries.

Mr. Gus Garrick is cordially received, and he quickly has the audience on the best of terms with some racy stories. Afterwards he gives imitations of the styles of different variety entertainers, being very successful as an immobile comedian and as a bustling Londoner. His depiction of a comic Scot and burlesque of a Continental dancer are equally good. Tennyson and Wallis are clever cross-talk comedians, whose turn is very welcome. Included is a smartly-written duet, "When you get old," which permits of the introduction of up-to-date topical verses, which the audience readily perceive and applaud. The Twin Andersons supply a merry act, quite rollicking in flavour, and with a dash of piquancy added by the novelty of changing for their second contribution merely behind a screen on the stage. The singing of the sisters wins plenty of applause, whilst the popularity and cleverness of their skipping-rope dance is unquestioned.

Miss Edie King, a pretty and sprightly comedienne and dancer, scores heavily with her first song, "Domino," which tells of a venturesome damsel who has a gay time while hiding her identity under a pink domino, and in her second item, "The art of fascination," she displays marked vocal and terpsichorean ability, which fully merits the recognition bestowed upon it. The Coloured Meisters are in great favour with their unaccompanied part singing, and their concluding feline number fairly brings down the house. The Sisters Grovini are a trio of graceful and lissom young ladies who perform a number of difficult and clever acrobatic and tumbling feats with a neatness and dexterity which call forth unstinted praise; and Miss Mena Brae is very successful with a coon ditty, which is followed by a Dutch song and sabot dance. The Bioscope pictures are, as usual, a prominent feature, this week's series including a laughable farce, Grandfather's Pills. The orchestral selection is Déplace's "Amiette," which is rendered with much expression under the bâton of Mr. Albert Whipp, Mus.Bac.

Mr. E. J. Macdermott, whose third week of office it is as acting-manager, looks well after the comfort of those "in front," and Mr. F. C. Cockerill is the courteous assistant acting-manager.

At the Palace, Walthamstow, the holiday attractions will include Lucky Jim, by Margaret Parker and company, and George Leyton in Lucknow, Edward Frisby, Devon and Earle, A. Slater, Francis and Alfred, Constance Mori, Allis and Cassati, Harry Russon, and the Bioscope.

MANIFESTATIONS AT THE ALHAMBRA.

The last word in the art of materialising from space seems to be spoken this week at the Alhambra, where Mr. and Mrs. Tomson are presenting a séance called The Mystery of Mysteries. The genuineness of the entertainment is vouched for by the Alhambra management, who have provided both a dressing-room for the chief performer and the cabinet wherein the trick is performed. On Monday Mr. Alfred Moul appeared on the stage, and claimed that of all the novelties presented during his management at the Alhambra this was the greatest. The materials for the dressing-room and the cabinet used had all been made by the Alhambra staff, and would be built up in view of the audience. He assured his hearers that there were no trap-doors in the stage, which would moreover be covered by two carpets to make communication further impossible. He carried in his hand a length of black gauze, which he said had been sent him twenty minutes before by the costumières of the theatre. In the presence of a committee of ladies selected from among the audience, Mrs. Tomson would disrobe, and habited only in the veil would enter the cabinet to go through her performance.

The undertaking was strictly adhered to. Six ladies and six gentlemen from the audience, having taken their seats on the platform, a frail structure was built up by the stage-hands in full view of the audience, and a small cabinet, to which curtains were attached, was put up by the same means, and furnished with a parrot-perch and several bird-cages. Having been introduced to the audience, Mrs. Tomson immediately retired to the temporary dressing-room, accompanied by the ladies' committee, and in a few minutes emerged clothed only in the veiling. She entered the cabinet, the curtains were drawn, and after a few minutes they were pulled aside, showing a parrot on the perch and the cages occupied by fluttering love-birds. Again the curtains were closed, and on being reopened revealed a gorgeous bouquet of flowers in a vase. For a third time the curtains were drawn, the house darkened, and within the cabinet was seen the figure of a woman dressed in airy robes of white, who sank lower and lower till she almost disappeared through the floor. Then Mr. Tomson entered the cabinet, and after a few passes which suggested that the lady had been under mesmeric influence, brought forward Mrs. Tomson, now again clothed in the black veil, to acknowledge the plaudits of the audience.

The performance is of a most baffling character, and the elaborate precautions taken to obviate any collusion from either above, beneath, or around renders the mystery more impenetrable than anything ever before offered.

At the Tivoli on Monday important additions to the company will be Carlton Macey and Mane Hall, in A Timely Warning, a character comedy sketch from America. Harry Tate and company, Bertha Stuart, Will Evans, Frank Harwood, Harry Leybourne, Alexandra Dagmar, the Bensons, Forman and Fannan, Wilkie Bard, Jose Collins, in her Spanish scena, the ever-popular R. G. Knowles, Miss Millie Lindon, Fred Karno's delightful Mumming Birds, and Max Waldon will complete the holiday bill.

The first outing of the London Coliseum took place on Sunday last. The party, numbering fifty-six, under the care of Mr. H. Crocker, the popular Coliseum stage-manager, assembled at Charing Cross Station at eight a.m., and started cheerily off for Merry Margate town. On arrival, boating, bathing, and brake rides were indulged in, and at 12.30 all gathered at the West End Hotel, where a splendid luncheon was in readiness, which was done full justice to. Everybody having satisfied the "inner man," and excellent photos being taken, sports took place. Mr. C. Dundas Slater, manager of the Coliseum, and Mr. H. Pryme, assistant-manager, were unavoidably absent. After a thoroughly enjoyable day, the whole party returned to town by the 7.45 train, arriving in high spirits at Charing Cross at eleven p.m. Much credit is due to Mr. J. Higson, who had charge of the arrangements, for the admirable manner in which he conducted the little outing, which was so successful that the Coliseum are to have a trip up river later on.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. R. A. Robinson (chairman) presiding.

LICENSING SESSION, 1908.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had considered what arrangements should be made for their annual sittings, as the Licensing Committee, to hear applications for licences for music, music and dancing, and stage plays. It has been the practice in past years to hear the applications for licences for places north of the Thames at the Clerkenwell Sessions House, and those for places south of the Thames at Newington Sessions House. They had been informed, however, that on the dates which would be convenient for them to sit at Newington the courts would probably be required for the criminal sessions. They accordingly recommended that the whole of the applications should be heard at Clerkenwell Sessions House on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6 and 7 next. The recommendation was agreed to.

DRURY LANE THEATRE.

The Committee reported that they had considered drawings submitted by Messrs. Pilditch and Co., showing the proposed method of reconstructing the stage portion of Drury Lane Theatre. It is proposed to omit the wall dividing the stage into two portions, to construct the flies, the bridge over the back of the stage, and other portions in steel or steel and concrete, to replace the iron doors at the back of the floors of the scene dock, the basement, and ground alterations. The Committee recommended approval of the proposals, provided that certain conditions be complied with. Agreed to.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

The Committee, having considered a drawing submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing a proposal to convert cellars on the o.p. side of the pit at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, into a pit refreshment saloon, and to provide a new door to the existing saloon on the prompt side, which is to be used as a stalls saloon, recommended approval of the arrangements. The recommendation was approved.

THE NEW THEATRE.

The Committee approved of drawings submitted by Mr. W. G. R. Sprague, showing a proposal to build a new block of dressing-rooms, and to extend the stage on the north side of the New Theatre, St. Martin's-lane. The recommendation was agreed to.

THE TIVOLI.

The Committee having considered a drawing submitted by Messrs. Wylson and Long, showing a cinematograph chamber proposed to be constructed outside the roof of the Tivoli, Strand, recommended that the arrangements shown be approved. The recommendation was carried.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.

The Committee having considered drawings submitted by Mr. F. Curzon, showing a proposal to remove certain machinery used for handling scenery from the floor of the flies to brackets fixed in the fly walls at Wyndham's Theatre, recommended its approval. Agreed to.

The sitting of the Council lasted from 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday until 8 a.m. on Wednesday. At its rising the Council adjourned for the usual summer vacation.

The above photo of the H.E.C.C. was taken on the occasion of the match with Moss Empires' Head Office at Elms Park, Walthamstow. The club has had a very pleasant time up till the present. During the season they have played the Tivoli, His Majesty's, and the Theatre Royal, Stratford, and hope to have more contests before the close of the season.

At the Alhambra on Bank Holiday the newcomers will be Mlle. Bresina, a piquante French singer, and Tom Nawn and company in a comedy sketch. Steidl still heads the bill. La Belle Leonora has recovered from her slight indisposition and is back in the new edition of Sal, Oh My! which, in its fifth month, is still delighting the Alhambra audiences. Equally attractive is the entente cordiale divertissement, The Two Flags, with Pomponette and Julia Seale. J. W. Winton, the amusing ventriloquist; and Franco Piper, who seems to have a greater command than ever of the banjo, are also engaged; and Mr. and Mrs. Tomson's manifestations are as mysterious as ever.

Miss Rose La Harte made her first London appearance at the Coliseum, on Monday last, singing "Moon Bear Lucia" and "Starlight Suc."

Mr. Peter Adair writes:—"I am about to show the world there is an athlete at the age of sixty-six going to do something equal to any performance or feat accomplished at the Stadium. I am going to walk, fair heel and toe, 1,305 miles on the road, viz.: on next Friday I start from the Hercules, Kennington-road, at 1.30 p.m., to Land's End, a distance of 305 miles, and after resting one day start from Land's End and walk to John o' Groats—nearly 1,000 miles—and endeavour to make a record for all time for old and young. I already hold the record for the same journey for veterans, having accomplished the journey in 1904 inside twenty-eight successive days, beating Dr. Deighton's time by three-quarters of a day. I invite any walker, pro. or amateur, to contest the journey with me."

Longsight Wakes.

This celebrated Manchester suburban fair was well maintained by John Collins (lessee of the ground), who exhibited his fine set of galloping horses and the twin ships in the air; P. Collins and Son with their magnificent new show, Wonderland II.; Mander's Star Menagerie, Westwood's giant boy and girl show, Hibbert's racing birds, S. Mercer's miniature motors and varieties, Cordwell's throwing games, R. Dixon's variety games and pannum stalls, Hughes and Martin's shooters, and other shooting ranges, throwing games, side shows, and stalls by the caterers on this circuit.

Lion Tamer Attacked.

During the performance at Purchase's Menagerie at Hurstpierpoint on Friday evening, July 24, the lion Wallace savagely attacked Marco the celebrated lion trainer.

After the usual display of expert training, and just as Marco was leaving the cage, the animal made his attack, severely lacerating the trainer's leg. Help was immediately at hand, and Marco was conveyed to a surgeon close by the menagerie, where his wounds were at once attended to. We understand that Marco is progressing favourably.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

Mi Narom.—The holding capacity of the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton, is estimated at about 3,700, and the seating accommodation at 2,800. The capacity of the Gaiety, Birmingham, is put at close upon 4,000, of which about 2,350 can be seated.

M. (Edinburgh).—Perhaps the most comprehensive Life of Edmund Kean is that of J. F. Molloy, published in two volumes by Ward and Downey, London. It is written in narrative form, and includes interesting references to many of the famous actor's contemporaries.

Miss L. Gray.—L'Amour Mouillé; or, Cupid and the Princess, was produced at the Lyric Theatre on April 5, 1899; Florodora on Nov. 11 of the same year. Miss Evie Greene made her London début on the occasion of the production of the first-named piece. Several years previously she had toured in leading musical comedies and comic operas.

William Swinbourne.—The late Sims Reeves, the famous tenor, died at Worthing Oct. 25, 1900.

A. C. (Blackpool).—He will be a Scotsman.

Mrs. F. G. Kimberley.—A one-act piece entitled Was She to Blame? by Henry Louis Bedford, was produced in front of The Fascinating Miss Kemp at the Opera House, Crouch End, on Dec. 5, 1904.

Inquirer.—Not a whisper of the rumour to which you refer reached us. The report furnished by our correspondent was that the lady topped the bill during the week, and was warmly received for her popular songs.

G. V.—We have some remembrance of the interview alluded to, but cannot recall the name or date of the publication in which it appeared. A letter addressed to the lady, who is now staying at Harrogate, might obtain the information desired.

Arthur Williams.—The piece referred to was called Il Trovatore; or, the Gipsy's Vengeance. We are unable to give you the exact constitution of the cast, but the company engaged included Messrs. William Searle, John Hudspeth, B. Hughes, W. Travers, W. Harmer, H. Lindon, and C. Johnson, and Miss Augusta Clifton, Mrs. H. Lindon, Miss Pettifer, and Mrs. Moreton Brookes. A piece called The Tempest of the Heart was produced at the East London Theatre on March 18, 1868.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

Zanello, Mr. A.

A Question of Return.—Elated Comedian (buoyed up with the applause of an indulgent audience) to manager: "Look 'ere, guv'nor, I shall want an increase when I come back." Unsympathetic Manager: "Quite so; but when do you come back?"

At the Kursaal, Bexhill-on-Sea, the White Viennese Band plays daily during the week, and Mr. Carl Harmon provides an additional attraction here with his smartly-worked marionette and Punch and Judy show. The figures are very cleverly worked. His entertainments are given twice daily. They are very successful, and are to be continued next week.

At the King's Theatre, Gateshead, Ford and Barrass, legmania dancers and vocalists, are starring here this week; Diamond and Beatrice, in a musical speciality, are warmly applauded; Ray and Calden are successful in a refined comedy act; Joe Humphreys, vocal comedian, makes a hit; and Maxford and O'Neill have some really humorous gags; Benson and Rose, in a comedy duologue, and May B. Brilliant, comedienne, are pleasing items in a capital programme.

The attractive Bank Holiday programme at the Crystal Palace will include three variety shows to be given in the centre transept at 12.30, 3.30, and 7.15 p.m. The artists will include Kyoto, in a new and original comedy Japanese pot-pourri act; Oto, a thoroughbred performing pug dog; Texas Hattie, described as America's greatest tight-rope artist; the Tiger Lily, a wonderful dancing acrobat; Clack and Clack, novel comedy lady barrel jumpers, introducing Rosie, the marvellous barrel and table jumper, blindfolded; the Two Dominoes (clown and donkey); and Misses Elsie and Lily Judge with their trick cockatoos, parrots, and macaws.

Karno's comedians will be seen in the theatre in His Majesty's Guests at three and seven. Arthur Lancaster, the man with the iron hands, and champion hammer swinger of the world, will at intervals during the day give exhibitions of trick hammer swinging. Besides a host of attractions in the grounds, including military bands, boating, fishing, cricket, bowling, &c., there will be a balloon ascent at 3 p.m.; and, commencing at the same hour, the Annerley Bicycle Club will hold a great meeting on the cycle track. The Mexican Exhibition and village are sure to prove a big attraction, while at Leadbetter's the baby elephant alone is worth a visit. At night Messrs. Brock will give one of their fine displays of fireworks, for which there is no extra charge. On Aug. 8 and following Saturdays special displays of fireworks for children will be seen, including a set piece "This little pig went to market."

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.

For Sustaining the Voice.
Invaluable for ACTORS and SINGERS.
Indispensable for PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Gentlemen,—For sudden affections of the Bronchial Organs I use and most cheerfully recommend "Brown's Troches." They are regarded as most eligible, convenient, and indispensable by numerous artists of my acquaintance, BOTH IN EUROPE AND AMERICA. They seem to act specially on the organs of the voice, and produce a clear enunciation.—Yours truly (Signed), Marie Rose Mapleson.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1908.

THE STAGE FOR WOMEN.

The diversity of opinion as to the desirability of the stage as an occupation for females is very remarkable; and that indefatigable snapper-up of inconsidered trifles, Tit-Bits, has been eliciting advice to those about to act from various quarters. The success of the individual counseller appears to have little to do with the opinions given. No one could have had a career of more continued prosperity than Miss ADA REEVE; yet in a letter which we recently published she considered it her "duty to discourage amateurs from entering a profession already very much overcrowded."

"An idea prevails," continued Miss REEVE, "that if a girl possesses average good looks and a fair voice, she is fully equipped to secure fame and fortune on the stage. Most of our great actors and actresses have served a long and arduous apprenticeship from childhood in the minor theatres before being even heard of in London. The road to success on the stage is long and difficult to travel; it runs through the vale of tears and disappointments."

On the other hand, Miss JULIA NEILSON (Mrs. FRED TERRY) and Miss LILLAH MCCARTHY (Mrs. GRANVILLE BARKER) do not consider that the stage is any more overcrowded than other professions for women. "Look at the splendid field one has," says Miss MCCARTHY. "Not London or England only, but abroad—Australia, Africa, Canada—oh, everywhere one finds theatres, and where there are theatres there is the need for actresses. Mind you," continues Miss MCCARTHY, "I mean real, qualified artists—not the girl with the pretty face and figure and an inordinate vanity. If I knew a girl who was just leaving school, I would advise her to train for the stage, if she felt she had any sort of aptitude for it. Let her join a school or classes, and work steadily for three years at music—I regard a knowledge of this as the very first essential—elocution, and voice production, dancing, and fencing. At the end of that time she will have acquired sufficient knowledge of these branches of her art to be able to put them into practical use. Of course, every pretty ingénue cannot mature into a leading actress, but for those that are merely such the theatre is a ten years' profession."

Miss JULIA NEILSON speaks favourably of the stage as a calling for women. "I must say I do not see why a girl," she says, "given talent and the necessary perseverance, should not be as successful on the stage as in any other profession open to women. Talent will tell, you know. My husband and myself are constantly on the look-out for young, fresh talent in the ranks of our company, and several of the present fairly prominent members were 'walking on' with us a little time ago. Of course, if a girl is friendless, and wholly dependent on her earnings, she will find it a hard struggle to live compared with the girl of means; but there, again, her position would be the same anywhere else. I should be quite willing for my own daughter to go on the stage if she showed any decided talent for it. Without this she would be sure to fail."

Miss LENA ASHWELL thinks the stage a very good profession "for the kind of girl who wishes, or is obliged, to make her own living, who is possessed of considerable personal attractions, charm of manner, a good voice, an iron constitution, a determination to 'get there' in spite of difficulties, and, above all, a sense of humour."

Miss SYBIL CARLISLE attaches great importance to personal attractions. "Be pretty if you can," she says. "That is my advice. It seems especially important to actresses in this country. I have noticed in the United States, and in France particularly, that natural talent without good looks frequently stamps the successful actress. But in England it is generally otherwise, and here you do not often see a really successful actress who is not handsome, do you? But I should say to any young girl, do not be dazzled by the glare of the footlights unless you are fairly sure of yourself. Our profession is so terribly overcrowded."

Miss ETHEL IRVING says the stage is "shockingly" overcrowded, and Miss MABEL HACKNEY is of the same opinion. Miss HACKNEY recommends the music-hall stage as the finest training-school for a young actress. "There," she says, "they have no stage-manager to teach them how to get their effects. Good or bad, the artists have to stand or fall by themselves, and they have to attract and hold a moving audience."

In England, at present, opinion on sex questions is in a transition state. We have gone beyond the immured and guarded treatment of the French ingénue; but we have not yet attained the free and untrammelled, do-as-you-please-and-take-the-responsibility system of the American damsel. The ideal which is most common is that of the young girl who is preserved from the hardships and temptations of life in return for suppressing her natural instincts and abilities and conforming to a type. The brood-mare ideal is naturally that of nine women out of ten—a brood mare with a comfortable paddock, good pasture, and no hard work to do. The "brood-mare" ideal is that also of every man whose income is sufficient to allow him to keep his daughters in ease and comfort.

When, for financial reasons, this ideal cannot be adhered to, fine feelings have to go to the wall. The commonest case of this kind is that of a doctor or other professional man who dies leaving his family unprovided for; and there is no more pathetic spectacle than that of an intelligent young girl, brought up on the "brood-mare" principle, in entire ignorance of the world and its ways, confronted with the necessity of getting a living without any preparation, or the least idea how to set about it. We all know what is the life of the average young lady of the upper middle classes. A little lawn tennis, a little gentle gardening, and a good deal of novel-reading and "practising" on the piano—practice that, in contradiction of the proverb, never seems to make perfect—and much visiting and flirtation—such is the way in which the "brood-mare" ideal is carried out. The method is quite practical; it is the method which has been found by experience to "answer" in the preparation of eligible middle-class wives.

It is from this point of view that the stage as a profession for girls is usually regarded; and regarded, quite logically, with horror and dismay. For what can be more cruel than to train an animal for one course, and then require it to be equal to the emergencies of another? To ask a young girl whose ears have never been outraged by an oath or a coarse expression to go out into a world where both are, unfortunately, quite common; to expect a person who has never done a hard day's work in her life to do six every week and to travel on the seventh day; to take an individual who has eaten of the daintiest and slept on the cleanest, and oblige her to accustom herself to chance cookery and queer couches, and to the worry, the "racket," the anxiety, and the mortifications which must be endured by everyone who has to get his or her living—this is inhuman indeed. When the fowls in LA FONTAINE'S fable were asked with what sauce they would like to be eaten, they answered that they would rather not be eaten at all. But necessity knows no law; and when a young lady brought up on "brood-mare" lines has no means it is for her only a choice of evils. She can become a barmaid, and be on her legs eighteen hours a day for twelve shillings a week and her board and lodging; she can go into a factory, the objections to which course are obvious; she can become a type-writer, a machine working a machine; she can be a teacher, a calling which without a special gift and love of the work is, to say the least, laborious; or she can go behind a counter or enter domestic service. In all these callings she will meet with the same unpleasantnesses in different forms; and she will always be handicapped by the fact of her sex. It is only a question with what sauce she prefers to be eaten. If she follow Mr. BERNARD SHAW'S advice and join Mrs. Warren's profession, she will discover that Mr. SHAW knew nothing about it, and greatly over-estimated its openings and advantages. The stage, for the majority of actresses, is a harassing, exacting, exhausting, and often disappointing calling. But the born actor or actress has the inestimable consolation of the enjoyment which is given by the work itself, by the exercise of function. These are the people whom we want to get on the stage; and to keep off it, by every statement of its trials and troubles, the persons who wish to amuse themselves, to occupy their idleness, or to gratify an empty vanity. For these girls, emphatically, the stage is not the proper place; and it is they, and they only, who "overcrowd" it.

"BUTTERFLIES."

Miss Ada Reeve's æsthetic production of Mr. W. J. Locke's play Butterflies, the 100th performance of which took place on Wednesday evening, seems to have caught the fancy of that class of playgoer addicted to "indulgence" in musical comedy. For one thing, Miss Reeve is herself no inconsiderable attraction, for she brings character and grace and charm to every part she essays. Another reason of the success of the piece may be attributed to the prettiness of the scenes and the witchery of the dancing. Miss Reeve's portraiture of Rhodanthe is marked by that engaging archness and fascinating vivacity which has in the past won her so many admirers. Her songs "I want someone to be fond of," "Lapland," and "Many years ago" are rendered with the delightful expression and distinct "character" which have assisted in the making of one artist's fame and fortune. The part of Christopher Podmore, originally played by Mr. Fred Edwards, is now in the hands of Mr. George Giddens, who gives us a most entertaining account of the manner in which Podmore is lured from the paths of strict moral rectitude as understood by the Peckham Puritans to the brief enjoyment of an ephemeral existence in a world unhampered by such deadly dull respectability. Mr. Frank Wilson is now seen and heard to advantage in Mr. Hayden Coffin's part of Max Risadore, and his rendering of the song "The memory of a kiss" gives evidence of great vocal talent. Mr. Lauri de Frece is intensely quaint and comical in the rôle of Yarker, the chauffeur, and his verses concerning the unhappy wight who "had never been in a farm before" are most diverting. Mr. Roy Sydney now takes the part of Peter, "the young man without a penny," acted previously by Mr. Kenna Lawson, and Mr. Sydney's rendering is all that could be desired. No more pleasing representative of Widgery Blake, otherwise Puck, could be desired than that afforded in the person of Mr. W. Louis Bradfield, whose magnificent vocal powers are exercised with good effect upon the song "The girl with the clocks." Miss Iris Hoey and Miss Stella St. Audrie continue to delight Apollo audiences as Elsie and Nora Podmore respectively, and the other rôles have able interpreters. The novelty in the piece is the new classical dance, entitled "La Naissance du Papillon," which is performed with remarkable poetic grace by a very young but very talented dancer, Miss Phyllis Monckman, who appears in fanciful garb as a butterfly. Miss Monkman should certainly be heard of again, and her exceedingly attractive terpsichorean efforts are a feature of the third act, which wins for the youthful artist unbounded applause.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

In the second performance of Faust on Thursday evening, July 23, there were two changes in the cast, the part of Faust being undertaken by Mr. Zenatello and Mephistopheles by Mr. Marcoux. Mme. Edwina again impersonated Margherita with the same results as on her first appearance; another year's study as actress and singer at least is required, a beautiful voice only is not sufficient for so difficult a rôle as Margherita. A fine performance of the hero was given by Mr. Zenatello, the music being beautifully sung; but Mr. Marcoux's Mephistopheles was not entirely satisfactory. Mr. Sammarco again appeared as Valentino, and the rest of the cast was the same as on a previous occasion. Mr. Panizza conducted.

The fifth, and in many respects finest performance of Verdi's gorgeous opera Aida was given on Saturday, July 25, at Covent Garden, before a large audience. With only one exception the cast was the same as before. Mr. Nivetti, the French artist, who created such a good impression by his Mephistopheles in Faust, appeared as Ramfis on Saturday night, and by his fine voice and artistic style increased the good opinion already formed. Mr. Nivetti's High Priest was a dignified and imposing personage. Miss Destinn was once again a superb Aida, her singing of "Ritorna Vincitor" being received with a storm of applause. Amneris is one of Mme. Kirkby Lunn's finest creations, and the splendid cast was completed by Mr. Scotti's excellent Amonasro, Mr. Radford's King, and Mr. Zenatello's dramatic Radames. Mr. Campanini conducted, and orchestra, chorus, and scenic effects were equally perfect.

MR. DAN GREGORY has been making a gratifying success at Pagel's Circus, Pretoria, and his violin-playing and comicality have been favourably mentioned by the local press.

AT the Paragon on Monday a leading attraction will be Joe Elvin in Riding to Orders. Other important engagements are those of the Markies, in From Pavement to Stage; Munroe's Black and White Comedy Team; Thos. E. Finglass in character negro songs; Emma Don, character comedienne; Miss Beaumont Collins and Co. in the one-act dramatic playlet The House of Terror; Lilian Lowe, ballad vocalist; Memora, the living encyclopædia; King Leo, ventriloquist; Lillie Langtry, comedienne; Nellie Stratton, comedienne; Jessie Star, lady Scotch comedian; Lambert and Glover; and Viviana and company in their Toy Shop dancing scena. That admirable and astonishing juggler Paul Cinquevalli will be a great attraction, and some interesting views will be shown by Ruffell's Bioscope.

Two new turns will be added to the Empire Theatre programme on Monday. Miss Emma Francis will introduce her clever and artistic troupe of Arab boys, and Messrs. Warren and Brockway, musical comedians, will supply some up-to-date American novelties. After the Opera, the little tabloid drama which Mr. Arthur Bourchier has introduced to Empire Theatre patrons, is one of the greatest successes ever presented there, and Mlle. Adeline Genée's appearances in Coppelia have lost nothing of their charm. On Monday Mr. Hayes, the winner of the Marathon Race, watched his own struggle for victory on the Bioscope, and was vastly delighted with the completeness of the pictorial representation.

ON Sunday last the staff of the Grand, Gravesend, had their annual outing. Leaving Gravesend at 7.20 a.m., they journeyed to Brighton, where they arrived at 10.30. After a pleasant morning dinner was served at the Devon Restaurant, thirty-eight sitting down. During the afternoon the party drove to Devil's Dyke, and on their return partook of tea. The chair was taken by Mr. T. W. Wright, the manager, and Mr. Leslie, the acting-manager, occupied the vice-chair. A vote of thanks was passed to the directors for their kindness, and Brighton was left at 7 o'clock, arriving at Gravesend at 10 p.m. after an enjoyable day.

"THE PROFESSOR'S SECRET," a new sketch which deals with the machinations of an old Jew who poses as a professor of sciences, but is a consummate scoundrel, has been secured by the Wellesley and Deveyne enterprises, and will be produced by them at the Ealing Hippodrome on Monday. For the title-part Messrs. Wellesley and Deveyne have engaged a young American Hebrew character-actor—Mr. Leslie P. Paget—and a cast of exceptional talent has been secured. Striking scientific experiments and mechanical effects will be introduced; and the piece will be liberally staged. The Professor's Secret is from the pen of Louis Dagmar—in private life Mr. Frank Bentz, Press-manager to Mr. H. B. Irving.

THE NEW TIVOLI.

At the seventeenth annual general meeting of this company, held at the Tivoli on Wednesday, the report of the directors was carried unanimously. The net profit for the twelve months ended that date, after providing £5,833 2s. 5d. interest on mortgage and debentures, amounts to the sum of £15,468 12s. 2d. In January last an interim dividend of £4 per cent. (less income tax) was paid. The directors now recommend the payment of a further dividend of £6 per cent. (less income tax), equal to £12 10s. per cent. for the year. After the payment of this dividend and bonus the directors propose to deal with the surplus by supplying £5,000 to the General Reserve Fund, making £20,000 to the credit thereof, and carrying forward the balance to the current year's accounts. Mr. Henry Tozer was re-elected chairman, and Mr. John Baker, chartered accountant, of Eldon-street House, E.C., was elected auditor for the ensuing year.

Mr. Henry Tozer, as chairman, said:—We congratulate you, the shareholders, upon another satisfactory year's working—indeed, one of the most successful in the history of the company. The accounts we have presented to you show a net profit for the twelve months ended June 30 last (after providing for interest on the mortgage and debentures) of £15,468 12s. 2d. In January last an interim dividend of £4 per cent. (less income tax) was paid. The directors now recommend the payment of a further dividend of £6 per cent. (less income tax) for the half-year ended June 30, 1908, together with a bonus of 2s. 6d. per share (free of income tax)—equal to £12 10s. per cent. for the year. After payment of this dividend and bonus the directors propose to deal with the surplus by applying £5,000 to the General Reserve Fund, making £20,000 to the credit thereof, and carrying forward the balance to the current year's account. The need of a substantial surplus and reserve fund was never greater than at the present time.

Besides the increased competition—keener than ever—there are such considerations as the licensing question, and from time to time necessary structural alterations and improvements to be borne well in mind. It is not certain that the present confiscatory Licensing Bill will affect our property, although when a predatory legislative spirit triumphs even temporarily over reason it is well not to be too confident that such properties as the Tivoli holding the magistrates' liquor licence may not be somehow affected. I may repeat what has been stated here before, that the percentage of refreshments consumed shows some slight diminution year by year. It amounts to a very few pence per head, and even this small percentage includes, besides cigars, a large amount for mineral waters, tea and coffee, and other non-alcoholic liquors, which conclusively indicates that "necessary refreshment" and not "drinking for drinking's sake" is the essential and logical reason for the existence of this licence. With regard to the other licence, that of the London County Council for music and dancing, we are on the best of terms with that distinguished municipal body, the only outstanding item out of ninety-six requirements which were served upon us about two or more years ago having just been amicably settled.

The questions of limiting the numbers admitted to each part of every music hall which the Council pressed upon us at the beginning of the present year has recently been discussed between its committee and ourselves in a friendly spirit, and I am happy to announce to-day that they have taken a broad, common-sense view of this important question, and have just communicated their decision that "if a house when full can be cleared in three minutes"—as we have contended—"it is satisfactory evidence that the exit accommodation is all that can be reasonably required, and are prepared, therefore, to accept provisionally the proposal that in any case it is unnecessary to place any restrictions on the number of persons admitted."

We purpose satisfying the London County Council Committee as to the sufficiency of our facilities and the rapidity with which our audience can quit the auditorium, and I venture to express the opinion that the London County Council will cordially recognise that we share with them a paramount regard for the complete safety, as well as a thorough entertainment, of the public.

No other disturbing questions at present exist to affect the even and prosperous working of this return. We may, in fact, be said to be "at peace with all men" upon any really important matters. But it must be remembered that to maintain peace we should always be prepared for war; hence our reserve fund should be maintained, and from time to time added to as the profits permit. The profits of the past year show a substantial increase upon last year. Although we have not taken quite so much money, we have spent less.

This practically sums up the observations which it is my pleasurable duty to make to you. I may perhaps mention that the mortgage interest shows a slightly increased charge owing to the mortgagees having availed themselves of the opportunity of the high rate of interest ruling in the money market last year, when the mortgage of £60,000 had to be renewed, to require an additional ½ per cent., which, after strong protest and argument, we felt obliged to submit to. I would add, what I said at a previous annual meeting, that had the present policy of an average 10 per cent. dividend (with occasional bonuses whenever justified) been adopted from the commencement, there would have been £60,000 available for paying programmes which for a long time to come we have arranged, and of other measures we have taken, and are taking, to safeguard your interest. I doubt not that, subject, of course, to unavoidable considerations which we cannot control—such as the prolonged hot weather of this summer—we shall continue to be able to declare satisfactory dividends and strengthen in every way the position of the Tivoli Company from year to year.

I now beg to move "That the directors' report and accounts for the year ending June 30, 1908, recommending a dividend of 6 per cent. (less income tax) for the half-year ended that date, also a bonus of 2s. 6d. per share (free of tax), together equal to 12½ per cent. for the year with the dividend already paid, placing £5,000 to the General Reserve Fund, and carrying forward the balance to the current year's accounts, be and are hereby adopted."

The motion was carried unanimously.

AT the Canterbury on Monday the list of artists engaged includes Little Tich; Viviana and company in their Toy Shop dancing scena; Mooney, Holbein, and company in a comedy sketch; the Four Eugenes, aerial gymnasts; that quaint comedian Dan Crawley; Will Evans in a "farcical, dramatical, operatical, surgical, operation," entitled The Villian of the Piece; or, The Bloodthirsty Bounder of Battersea; Fred Sheppard, vocalist; Kitty Wager, comedienne; Lambert and Glover (Helen and Fred) in the absurdity The Wrong Room; Alexandra Dagmar, comedienne; Lilian Lowe, ballad vocalist; Fred Poplar, comedian; and Harry Conlin, comedian. Haley's pretty musical scena, The Garden of the Girls, will be an attraction; and Ruffell's Bioscope will show some up-to-date pictures. Chas. Worland's company will appear in the sporting and dramatic sketch Black Against White, with Mr. Andrew Jephtha (the welter-weight champion boxer), Mr. Wilfred H. Benson, and Miss Mabel Wynn in the cast.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

THE STORY OF A LOAN.

At the Clerkenwell County Court on Thursday, Jane Ive, administratrix of the estate of the late Albert Robert Ive, of Broadway, Crouch End, sued Geo. Mitchell, of Amherst-road, N., for £22 as money lent to the defendant by the late Mr. Ive.

Counsel for the defendant said his client was occupied in a commercial house in the city, and, following his fancy and to add to his income, he also ran a small musical comedy. The late Mr. Ive was also connected with the latter company, and travelled about with it to work the limelight. About November 17th last Mr. Ive asked Mr. Mitchell if he could repay £20 which he (Mr. Ive) had advanced some time previously. Mr. Mitchell replied that according to the terms of the loan he was entitled to a month's notice to repay. Mr. Ive, however, pressed for repayment, and a few days later, when the company assembled at Cannon-Street Station for departure to Dartford, where they were booked for a performance, Mr. Mitchell approached Mr. Ive, and handed him a paper package containing twenty sovereigns, saying, "Here is the money I promised you." Mr. Mitchell did not get his I.O.U. returned, as on the following day Mr. Ive was taken ill, and became unconscious, in which state he remained until his death.

Defendant gave evidence bearing out his counsel's statement. He said that for some time he ran the comedy company, and in that connection he was known as George Elmer. In March of last year he borrowed the £20. He was to pay interest of 20 per cent. and was to repay at one month's notice. On Nov. 17 he paid the money to Mr. Ive at Cannon-Street Station, and on returning from Dartford he asked for the I.O.U. Mr. Ive said, "You will have it if I have not lost it." That was the last he heard of it, as Mr. Ive was taken ill the next day. When Mr. Ive put the money in his purse he said, "It is nice to have a friend like this," and shook the purse.

Harold Marsh, musical director of the company, said he saw the money handed over. When Mr. Ive was handing it round the railway carriage it caused some comment amongst the company. Some asked for a loan, and another one said, "Let me smell it." (Laughter.) Mr. Ive said, "You can look but you cannot touch." (Laughter.)

Defendant's wife and several members of the company gave similar evidence.

Mrs. Ive said her husband freely discussed his affairs with her, and he told her of the loan, but never that it had been repaid. She felt sure that the receipt of such a sum as £20 would have been mentioned to her, but although they were talking together for some time on the night it was said to have been paid, he did not speak of it. After his death she found the I.O.U.

His Honour said it had been proved up to the hilt that the money had been repaid, unless there had been not only gross perjury, but a gross conspiracy. He gave judgment for the defendant with costs.

A "HUNGARIAN" Bank Holiday is to be enjoyed at Earl's Court on Monday. Special and elaborate preparations have been made for the great gala at the Hungarian Exhibition on that day. Given fine weather the gardens and grounds, now at their summer zenith, will prove a veritable pleasure resort by day and a brilliantly illuminated fairyland by night, all to be enjoyed at a cost of one penny an hour. If, however, the weather be unpropitious it will be found that never has this popular centre of London been better catered for in the way of shelters, attractions and entertainments.

FOREMOST comes, of course, the great Bostock jungle and arena, where Mr. Frank C. Bostock, "The Animal King," true to his American training and methods, will throw open the doors of the Empress Hall simultaneously with the opening of the Exhibition gates. For twelve hours an attractively assorted continuous programme will be given, and all the famous collection of savage beasts, strange birds, venomous reptiles, &c., including Consul I., the human chimpanzee, Wee Wee, the smallest horse in the world, the glass-eyed lion, the alligator with the broken jaw, the baby sea-lions, and the sacred tattooed beast will be available to visitors.

IN the beautiful al-fresco summer ballroom, which is free to all, dancing on the maple floor will go on from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m. There will be playing of tuneful selections and melodies in various parts of the grounds and buildings by no fewer than five British and Hungarian bands and orchestras, H.M. Irish Guards, Hungarian Cadets, Racz's Tzigane, Miskolczy's Hungarian Gipsies, and Groves' Quadrille Band. Uninterrupted merriment and amusement are assured by the Chute, Ice Caverns, Coal Mine, Auto-Rail, Ballooning, Pharos, Cinematograph, Bush Maze, and a full measure of other interesting features.

MR. ALFRED BUTT has prepared a strong programme at the Palace Theatre on Monday. Miss Maud Allan will give her new dances, selected from and illustrative of Tschaikowsky's tuneful "Casse-Noisette" series; and Mr. Walter C. Kelly, now entering upon the final weeks of his London season with his amusing Virginian Judge monologue, will also make some changes in his entertainment. Quite new to England is La Belle Oterita, a very prepossessing young Spanish singer and dancer; she is also an instrumentalist, her guitar solos being extremely popular in Spain. Mlle. Juliette's educated sea-lions with some fresh tricks form another attraction; and the return is announced of those capital eccentric acrobats Spissell Brothers and Mack. Miss Beatrice Lindley, another artist who has temporarily deserted the regular stage for variety, will give a number of imitations of the various styles of popular players. Other artists appearing will be the Brothers Egbert, Nipper Lane, Miss Eileen Douglas, Bromley and Fontein, and Miss Alice Ellison. An important feature will be the inclusion for the first time of the famous Urbanora animated pictures, which are generally acknowledged to be amongst the finest of their kind.

FOR Bank Holiday week at the New Brighton Tower Theatre, in addition to the Towerscope, which is furnished by the Welsker Bros., of Liverpool, an exhibition of up-to-date pictures, the programme will include the Four Scoreys, comedy musicians and contortionists; Miss Mollie Doon, an exceptionally clever young vocalist and dancer; and Messrs. Herbert and Lisbon, the trick dancers and comedians. The management of the Tower give entrance to the theatre now free to all who pay the admission fee to the grounds, but reserve a number of seats at 3d. and 6d. each. This arrangement has proved very popular.

THE profits of the Palace Theatre, Ltd., for the year ending July 26, subject to audit, amount to upwards of £43,000, and after deducting interest on mortgage, there remains a balance of £40,000. The directors propose to write off the amount expended on carrying out County Council requisitions, &c., amounting to £5,000, leaving a balance of £35,000. To this amount must be added the balance brought forward from last year, amounting to £15,250, making in all a total of £50,250. An interim dividend at the rate of ten per cent. has already been paid, and the directors recommend the payment of a further dividend at the rate of thirty per cent. per annum (making twenty per cent. for the year), and leaving to be carried forward to next year a balance of £32,250.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Sir H. Edward Moss, the Chairman of Moss' Empires, Ltd., has been telling in Pearson's Weekly "how he climbed the ladder." The dates of events range from 1852 to 1908. In one of the columns the following facts are enumerated:—"Gave much thought as to how I could become the Laird of Middleton, Midlothian. Quitted family roof tree. Started out on tour with a piano and one companion. Lost the capital, and retired from management. Managed a diorama of the Franco-Prussian War. Noticed an advert. in local paper stating that a grand piano would be given away to the first caller at an address in Campbeltown. At once sent a man and cart for it, and, to my surprise, got the piano. Thereby hangs a tale. Laid foundation of my fortune by opening the Gaiety, Edinburgh. Audience for first half hour consisted of a solitary pressman. First carnival at the Waverley Market, Edinburgh. Rent then £150; now pay £2,000. President of Entertainment Committee of the King's Coronation Dinners to the poor."

On the other side of the ladder are the following statements:—"Born Manchester, 1852. Started to learn the piano under protest. Educated Edinburgh, Glasgow; music training under Mr. Andrew Banks. Went to Greenock as general manager and chef d'orchestre of my father's theatre—the first theatre of varieties at Greenock. At Greenock. Also Saturday nights with company at Port-Glasgow and entertainments at watering places and holiday resorts. Uphill fight at first, but when things at their worst conceived the bold idea of bringing London stars to the Gaiety, the fortunes of which were soon afterwards assured. During this time purchased the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, and also the lease of the Tyne Music Hall, and christened it the Gaiety. Edinburgh Empire built and opened. Before and after this building and opening Empires all over the country. Created Moss' Empires, Ltd. Invaded London. Opened the London Hippodrome. Made a Justice of the Peace and Deputy-Lieutenant for County of the City of Edinburgh. Decorated by the Shah of Persia. Knighted.

The Music Hall Home committee desire to thank Mrs. O'Brien, of Rule's, Maiden-lane, for box collections of 17s. 9d.; Mr. George Harris, of Hippodrome, Portsmouth (per Fred Neiman) for the amount of £2 8s. 6d., being box collections during a few weeks; and Mr. Stubbs, of the Equestrian, Blackfriars-road, for his kindness. Benj. Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, would be glad to receive any men's old clothes or boots; also any cards that are still out with money upon them. Ten old professionals are still being cared for by the fund. The next committee meeting will be held on Thursday next, at twelve o'clock, at the Palace, Camberwell.

Entries for the Music Hall Sports will now be accepted, and will be received until the first post on Tuesday morning. Prizes have been received from Mr. Masters, Mr. Gibbons, and several others.

Mr. J. W. Curzon, manager of the Curzon Sisters, writes:—"As a number of somewhat exaggerated reports have appeared as to the recent accident to the Sisters Curzon (the Flying Butterflies) at the Manchester Hippodrome, and there seems a disposition in some quarters to blame Mr. Oswald Stoll and myself for allowing such a performance, will you kindly allow me to state briefly the facts? The act has been performed without the slightest mishap for two and a half years at American and other halls, and at the London Hippodrome so recently as a week ago. Under normal conditions, therefore, although 'daring' it is not 'dangerous.' After entering into the Manchester contract I became aware that the local Hippodrome not only gave two shows a night but three matinées, a total of fifteen shows per week. The Sisters had never played more than two performances in one day; and believing that three might be too severe a demand on the strength of my wife and sister-in-law, I asked that they should be excused from the afternoon performances.

"This Mr. Stoll agreed to, but, unfortunately, the permit did not reach me until after the matinée performance on Tuesday had been given. At the subsequent evening show—a moment before it should have ended—the younger of the Sisters fell and fractured a small bone in her wrist, and sustained a severe shock; she did not, however, sustain concussion of the brain, as has been reported. There is no doubt now that my sister-in-law was physically unfit for the third performance; but, plucky artist that she was, she did not want to disappoint her public. I am glad to say that she is going on well, and I shall be grateful if you will allow me to thank our many friends for their kind enquiries, and especially to recognise the kindness of Mr. Stoll and his various assistants."

Mr. James Wright, the theatrical representative of the London and North-Western Railway Company, desires us to correct an error that crept into the columns of the Referee in reference to the subject of the fresh railway concessions to bands of touring artists. It was stated that "breaks" in the journeys would be permitted, but this is not so. The new arrangement—which comes into force on January 1st, and which has been agreed to by all the railway companies—will grant the privilege of the three-quarter fare rate from point to point, with no break on the journey, to bands, concert parties, travelling orchestras, minstrels, handbell-ringers, and so forth. By this concession such parties as those referred to will enjoy the same economical benefits as those which have been for some time past granted to theatrical companies—a concession, we venture to say, that will be greatly appreciated by those in whose behalf it is made.

Lord George Sanger's freehold property, the grand Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate, is to be sold or let on lease for five, seven, or ten years. The property includes the magnificent ball-room, measuring about 250ft. by 50ft., the theatre of varieties, commodious refreshment bars, and a billiard saloon, the whole being fully licensed. Also on the property are charming rustic promenade gardens and a big area of land adapted for sports of every description.

An offer was made to Dorando Pietri, the hero of the Marathon Race, by Mr. Harry Goodson, Mr. Harry Day's able lieutenant, to appear for a week at two or three London music halls. Dorando accepted the offer apparently under a misunderstanding, and signed a contract to that effect. When his Italian friends explained the position to him he tried at once to break his engagement. Having failed, however, to obtain his release he consented to appear on condition that the amount mentioned in the contract should be handed over—half to the Italian Hospital in London and half to an English hospital.

Signor Dorando appeared on Monday night at the Hammersmith Palace, the Oxford, and the Tivoli Theatres. After the depiction of the race by the Bioscope the Italian hero came forward, dressed in the knickerbocker suit he wore on Saturday at the Stadium. He said: "I thank the British public from my heart for their fair play, and the kind appreciation with which they encouraged me and the other competitors between Windsor and the Stadium. Whatever happens to me, I shall never forget their kindness."

The Pavilion, Abertillery, is closed for renovation, but will open next week. Everything is being done to make the house comfortable, and the standard of talent is being raised weekly.

Mr. Mark Lorne, for the last eighteen months acting-manager at the Mansfield Hippodrome Theatre, has been appointed to a similar position at the Grand Theatre.

Mr. Frank Coyle will next week be paying his annual visit to the Alhambra, Morecambe. He is a prime favourite amongst the Yorkshire Tykes, being one himself. Mrs. Coyle and Miss Violet Coyle and "Aunty Coyle" will be present on this occasion.

Mr. John George Silvester Holmes, the genial "giant" who acts as doorkeeper at Pickard's Museum, Trongate, Glasgow, was married on the 23rd ult. in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church there, and the ceremony attracted some attention, especially as General Tom Thumb was expected to have officiated as best man. Indisposition, however, prevented this, but an enterprising cinematograph operator took films of the giant and his bride as they left the church.

That very original comedian Tom Joy should have given a trial turn at the Pavilion on Monday, July 27, but Mr. F. Glenister being away on his holiday, Mr. Joy received a telegram asking him not to come up to town. Ten minutes after he had received the wire Mr. J. Diacoff, the manager of the Alexandria, Pontefract, secured Mr. Joy, at a large increase, for another week.

Messrs. Beanland and Emerson have secured a long lease of the Albert Theatre, Brighouse, and will re-open the house on Monday as a high-class variety theatre. They intend to present drama and musical comedies occasionally, booking only first-class companies. The theatre has been entirely renovated, and a complete system of electric lighting is now being installed. Messrs. Beanland and Emerson have appointed Mr. T. P. Duignan, late of the Empire Theatre, Belfast, and Hippodrome, Blackpool, acting-manager.

Much ingenuity is displayed by Mr. A. E. Pickard, of the Panopticon, Glasgow, in the designation he gives himself on his daybills and advertisements. One week these read "Impresario—A. E. Pickard, Unlimited"; next week he is Enterpreneur, then Director of Ceremonies, Man at the Wheel, Captain of the Ship, &c., &c. Lately he has been figuring as Canadian Explorer and Big-game Hunter, commemorating his holiday in the States and Canada recently.

The newly-constructed Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, including a Grand Hotel and five shops, with every modern improvement, recently carried out by Mr. Frank Matcham, architect, and accommodating 2,000 people, is to be sold or let on lease. The only cause of sale is the fact that Lord Geo. Sanger is now in his 81st year; but the veteran showman can be interviewed at the Hall-by-the-Sea during the next month, and afterwards at Park Farm, East Finchley, N.W.

Mr. W. Townsend Collins's sketch, The Sheriff and the Rosebud, which we noticed on its production at the Manchester Hippodrome, in June, was put on at the Shepherd's Bush Empire, on Monday. The piece is adapted from a story by Horace A. Vachell. Mr. Lionel Atwill distiguished himself in the part of the Sheriff, and Miss Ida C. Morgan made an excellent impression as Sadie. The sketch was extremely well received.

The new Hippodrome, Scarborough, which was designed by Mr. Frank Tugwell, of Scarborough, the whole of the reconstruction being carried out under his personal supervision, was opened on Monday by the Mayor of Scarborough (Mr. Valentine Fowler). Miss Marie Peacock, daughter of the managing-director, sang a verse of the National Anthem, and Mr. Frank A. Tugwell, the architect, presented the Mayor with a gilt key. In the excellent variety company which appeared were Bella and Bijou; the Martellonis, lady acrobats; Mallia and Bart, Continental eccentrics; and those very rapid dancers, the Sousloffs.

Mrs. Fioni's enterprising management of the Blackpool Hippodrome received further recognition this week. On Wednesday the Mayor, Mr. James Battersby, J.P., and Mrs. Battersby, accompanied by the Deputy Mayor, Mr. Councillor Hill, J.P., Mr. Henry Singleton, J.P., of Poulton, and Miss Singleton, Mr. and Mrs. Bibby and friends, paid their first visit to the Hippodrome. One of the features of the programme was an animated picture of a trip from Blackpool to Lytham, introducing scenes at the Blackpool Agricultural Show, the Waterloo Bowling Handicap, the Manchester Chronicle Cinderella Children's Holiday Camp, The Fairhaven Lake, the Golf Links, the Tennis Court, and the beautiful Green Drive. Amongst the artists appearing were the Brothers Obo, laughing comedians; Arthur Astill, whistler and mimic; and Will Doran and company. At the conclusion of the programme the Mayor and Mayoress complimented Mrs. Fioni on the excellence of the entertainment.

The new Hippodrome at Middlesbrough is rapidly approaching completion. During the past week good progress has been made, and it is proposed to open the building on the 17th inst. The Hippodrome is situated in High Wilson-street, which is practically in the centre of the town, and runs off the main road. It is about two minutes' walk from the North-Eastern Railway Station. The building is of red pressed bricks, with an ornamental terra-cotta frontage. The height of the building inside is 54ft. to the gallery, and from the auditorium 45ft., the total height of the building from the floor to the roof being 76ft. The auditorium is 80ft. by 75ft. 6in., and the extent over all is 132ft. in length and the width 105ft. The proscenium opening is 41ft. wide and 31ft. high, the total length of the stage being 76ft. The flies are 22ft. above the stage, and the grid 49ft. above. Altogether there is seating accommodation for 2,500 people, and the holding capacity is 3,000.

There are two boxes—one on each side of the stage. Special precautions have been taken in the event of an outbreak of fire. The dressing-rooms number fourteen, and everything for the comfort of the artists is being made. A new feature in connection with this music hall is a corridor which will accommodate 400 people outside of the building, and who may shelter when the weather is inclement. There is also a glass cover in the front of the main entrance in High Wilson-street. Only one refreshment bar is provided, and that is at the back of the circle. The building has been constructed to the designs and plans of Mr. G. F. Ward, architect, Birmingham, by Messrs. Parkinson and Sons, Ltd., contractors, of Blackpool. The place is being admirably decorated by Messrs. A. R. Dean, of Birmingham, and electric fittings, motors, switchboards, &c., are being fitted by Messrs. Thomas Rooke and Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne. The electricity is to be supplied by the Middlesbrough Corporation. Mr. Fred Inchcliffe, of Leeds, has been engaged as musical-director. The directors of the theatre are Mr. J. Price, of Carlisle, and Signor Pepi, of Darlington. The prices of admission to the hall will be the same as at other local music halls.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death of Mr. Harry Lundy, formerly manager of the Oxford Music Hall, and later of the Royal, Holborn. The sad event took place at Farningham, Kent, on Wednesday morning. A brief biography appears elsewhere.

Mr. Leon Bassett, who has for the past ten years held the post of musical director at the Camberwell Palace of Varieties, terminates his engagement to-day to take up the position of musical director at the Oxford, commencing on Monday. Mr. Bassett is highly popular throughout the music hall profession, as well as among the general public, and has the good wishes of a host of friends.

Mr. Bransby Williams concludes his tour of Moss' Empires this week. He has hardly in any week ever repeated the same show, making some change at each performance, and is glad to record a great success. From Monday next he is resting with his family at his house at Selsey. He will resume work, after his holiday, at Douglas, Isle of Man, where he will appear for two weeks. He will be unable to accept tempting offers to return to America owing to his engagements and to his appearance in pantomime at Bristol.

Mr. Albert Chevalier, who has an excellent part in the new drama at Drury Lane, has been re-engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll for a special fortnight at the Coliseum, commencing on Monday. He is to appear as Turby in a condensed version of the old farce The Goose With the Golden Eggs, which he has played in 300 times on tour. This will be for the first week of the engagement; for the second he will enact Achille Talma Dufard, in Behind the Scenes, a condensed version of The First Night. Messrs. E. W. Garden; Harry Brett, Arthur Brankston, Bertie Baxter, and Misses Mabel Garden and Daisy Irvine will support Mr. Chevalier in the amusing piece.

Mr. Harry Williams, well known in Australian and American variety circles, who has been so dangerously ill in London, is returning to Australia per s.s. Omrah, Orient Co., Mr. Harry Rickards having generously paid his passage and presented him with a cheque. In addition to thanking Mr. Rickards, Mr. Williams also wishes to express his debt of gratitude to Mr. Horace Wheatley and those of his Australian friends who so kindly rallied round him and helped him to attain convalescence at Bournemouth.

Miss Lil Hawthorne, who has travelled all over the world, had a curious experience in Germany. When she first came over to England she had her two sisters with her, and they were known as the Sisters Hawthorne. Though they could not speak German they accepted a contract to appear at Hamburg; but when they tried to get out at the railway station there the sagacious police for some reason put them under arrest. As the police were hospitable as well as sagacious, they lodged the pretty sisters in a comfortable cell to ruminate at leisure over their misdeeds. Miss Lil, however, kept repeating "Hansa Saal"—the name of the music hall where they were to appear—so someone with more perception than the others telephoned to the manager there and everything was soon put right. It was hardly a cordial reception to the city, but the police evidently thought that they were spies.

Mr. George Gray will pay a welcome return visit to Hackney Empire next week, when he will give The Fighting Parson. Mr. Gray tells a most amusing story of an experience in a certain Scottish town. He was playing The Road to Ruin, and the pathos of the play was almost spoilt by the number of yelling infants who had been brought in by their mothers. Mr. Gray's kind heart could not suggest that children in arms should be barred, but he hit on a novel plan. On the following day he and several of his company scoured the town in a search for chemists' shops. Eventually they bought up all the babies' comforters, commonly known as "teats," they could lay their hands on, and in the evening Mr. Gray stationed two men each at the pit and gallery entrances. Every woman carrying a child was presented with a "teat," with the result that during the rest of the week The Road to Ruin was not disturbed by squalls.

Mr. Leon Bassett, who will take up his position as musical-director at the Oxford on Monday, has a great reputation as a maestro, having started his career under that fine conductor Edwin Bosanquet, at the Canterbury, when that house was the most popular in London. Among other appointments which Mr. Bassett has held is that of leader for the late Dan Godfrey. He was musical-director at the opening of the Blackpool Tower, and also at the Gaiety, Chatham, where he remained for four years, the Croydon Palace, and the Palace, Camberwell, at which last establishment he has been engaged for ten years. One of Mr. Bassett's chief features is his method of utilising the harp, a practice which was only usual in the orchestras for grand opera purposes.

When a week or so ago the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Birmingham Gaiety Theatre of Varieties was held, it was reported that the result of the year's trading would not allow of the payment of a dividend, and a long discussion took place on the offer of the directors to place their resignation in the hands of the shareholders with a view to the board of directorate being composed mainly of Birmingham gentlemen. It was eventually decided to adopt this suggestion, and the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday morning in order that the question of the reconstitution of the board might be further considered. There was again a good attendance of shareholders, and ultimately the following directors were appointed to act for the ensuing twelve months only:—Messrs. F. A. Badman, Harry Lewis, F. Bird, and J. M. Bruce. Mr. Lewis is appointed chairman, a position he occupies at the local Theatre Royal

In the course of the second performance at the Grand Theatre, West Hartlepool, on Saturday last, the opportunity was taken by the staff to present to Mr. Harry Burns a small token of the regard and esteem in which he is held by them, and in recognition of his having concluded the lesseeship of that popular hall of entertainment. A gold-mounted fountain pen from the staff and a gold-mounted cigar-holder from a well-known patron were presented to Mr. Burns by Mr. Harry Thorpe (of Thorpe and Coe), who, in the course of a neat speech, alluded to Mr. Burns's popularity as caterer for the amusement of theatre-goers in the Hartlepools. Mr. Burns, he said, was always courteous to the artists and staff, and he was sure that everybody with whom he became associated, either professionally or socially, joined in their congratulations.

Mr. Burns, amid lond cheers, suitably acknowledged the kindness of his friends. It had always, he said, been his aim to provide them with an entertainment of a high standard, and from the support he had received he believed that his efforts were highly appreciated. Now that he was leaving them, he sincerely hoped that when he opened with his new venture—at the Hippodrome, Stockton—he would be equally well supported. The Hippodrome, Stockton, he said, in conclusion, would be opened on Aug. 3. The proceedings concluded with the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow," the audience joining in heartily.

Some three years ago, on the advice of Mr. Harry Masters, Mr. John Lawson made the experiment of playing three sketches per week at one hall. So successful was the innovation that Mr. Lawson has been playing a répertoire of sketches ever since. It will be noticed that the idea has been copied by many, but without success, not having the material. Mr. Lawson scores by the fact of his having W. W. Jacobs, Louis N. Parker, Cecil Raleigh, and J. Spencer Sutcliffe as authors for his various works. On his return to town Mr. Lawson will produce a new episode from the pen of Mr. Sutcliffe, whose sketch, Pigs in Clover, has made such a hit on the Stoll tour.

Miss Kitty Ransburn, the "Girl in Black and White," who is on tour with popular songs which, she is careful to state, are her own property, has been specially engaged for pantomime by Mr. Geo. Brydon Phillips. She will appear at the Oxford on the 10th inst.

Mr. Fred W. Fitt, part proprietor and manager of the Norwich Hippodrome, is, and has been for some time past, a councillor for the city of Norwich. The term of his office expires in November of this year, and he is offering himself for re-election. We wish him every success.

Scottie, of Scottie's Waifs, was enabled to give 1,287 poor children of Battersea a good breakfast on Saturday by reason of the number of post-cards he sold during the week. He hopes to improve upon that number at the Surrey Theatre to-day.

The sketchette, Find the Lady First, performed by Miss Adele Levey and Mr. Charles Leverton, was a great success at the Empress, Brixton, at a matinée on Wednesday, and was retained for the rest of the week.

That clever society entertainer, Miss Ethel Walker, has been making an excellent impression at the Pavilion, Newcastle, and a local paper describes her as a "chic personality that pleases everybody."

Miss Lillie Lassah, who is making a great success at Blackpool this week, has been engaged by Mr. Bannister Howard as principal boy in the Crystal Palace pantomime, Robinson Crusoe.

Mohamed Ben Mohamed and his nine genuine Souasa Arabs left Stalybridge on Sunday, 12.10 p.m., and arrived at Cologne the next day in time for a matinée, which was certainly quick travelling.

Mr. Billy Downes, comedian, late "Newman and Downes," and later "Downes and Langford," was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Association on Sunday last. Griff, in the chair, performed the ceremony.

Miss Rose Moncrieff's company in the new sketch The Curate, by Rass Challis, has made a great success this week at the Battersea Palace, and the merits of the little play are keenly appreciated.

Miss Bertha Stuart, the favourite Scotch vocalist, concludes to-night a brilliant success on the Moss-Stoll tour, and opens again with them next year. On Monday she will appear at the Tivoli and Euston, remaining in London for seven months.

Syd May, the mimic, opened at the London Coliseum last Monday, and at the conclusion of his afternoon turn was offered thirty weeks' engagement to tour America.

Mr. John Baker, F.C.A., of Eldon-street House, E.C., was unanimously elected auditor of the Tivoli Company at its annual general meeting on the 29th ult.

The Arthur Gallimore Trio will return to London on Monday after five months' tour, including the Continent. They will go to America in 1909.

Miss Kitty Clinton, another recruit from musical comedy, has been very busy this year with the Moss-Stoll, Gibbons, Macnaghten, and Syndicate halls, and has been engaged by Mr. Lester Collingwood as principal boy in his pantomime of 1908-9.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. France (Miss Edith Stewart), who have recently been spending a well-earned holiday at Deal, have returned to London and resumed work with their popular sketch The 100 to 1 Chance. They will commence a month's exclusive engagement at the Oxford with it on Monday.

Miss Madge Temple, the charming Fenella in the operetta of that name at the Coliseum, is delighting good houses at the Euston with her "Kiss" song and "Esau, take me on the see-saw," both numbers being given with all possible expression and piquancy by this cultured vocalist, who is repeating triumphs won at the Oxford and Tivoli.

Dunning and Kahn and Kahn have arranged to tour with Mr. Willie Frame's concert party in Scotland in 1909 and 1910. The two artists are friends of twenty years' standing. Mr. Dunning will present several novelties in the course of the tour, and is looking forward to the trip as a pleasant change from the halls.

Miss Carrie Swain, who makes her first appearance in London at the Coliseum on Monday next, after a great success in America, made her first decided hit in Australia with her performance in Cud the Tomboy, a protean play, which found much favour at the Antipodes. A lucky investment in mining stock added to the financial good fortune of Miss Swain, and for the past few years she has been residing in Paris. A tempting offer from an American manager has induced Miss Swain to emerge from retirement for a short time, and she is realising her one ambition, to appear before a London audience. Miss Swain has a fine voice, and is a very clever dancer.

Ever since the classic Marathon Race was won—and lost—controversy has raged round the name of Pietro Dorando as to the precise manner of his arrival at the Stadium, and as to the amount of assistance he received before reaching the tape. Nothing, however, but photography can settle the point beyond dispute, and at the Empire—whose management has obtained the sole West-End rights of all pictures taken inside the Stadium—a film is shown every night depicting every detail of Dorando's entry into the Stadium and his struggle round the building to the tape, interrupted by his unfortunate collapses. It may be added that the entire progress of the race from Windsor to the Stadium is recorded by the Empire Bioscope.

On Monday morning the decree in the divorce suit, Funk v. Funk, was made absolute by the President, Sir John Gorell Barnes, in the Divorce Division of the High Court of Justice. The suit, it may be remembered, was brought by the wife, Mrs. Florence Funk, professionally known as Miss Florrie Gallimore, against the husband, Florian Funk, better known as Florian Fretelli. The grounds of the suit were allegations of adultery and cruelty, and the decree nisi and costs and custody of the child of the marriage was pronounced by the President on Jan. 14 last. Mr. W. H. Armstrong, of 1, Renfrew-road, Lambeth, acted for the wife (Miss Florrie Gallimore), the petitioner. The suit was undefended.

A mass meeting will be held, under the auspices of the International Artists' Lodge, at the Hotel Provence, Leicester-square, to-morrow (Sunday) evening at 7.30. Mr. Robt. Steidl will preside, and a full explanation of the events which led up to the boycotting of the Apollo, Dusseldorf; Reichshallen, Cologne; Olympia, Dortmund; Colosseum, Essen; and Thalia, Elberfeld, by the International Artists' Lodge, the Variety Artists' Federation, and the White Rats of America will be given (in English) by Mr. Wm. Berol, special I.A.L. delegate from Berlin. On Tuesday, at noon, Mr. Berol will speak at a specially-convened meeting at the V.A.F. and M.H.A.R.A. offices, 46, Sydney-street, Manchester. On Wednesday he will be heard at a special meeting at the V.A.F. Agency, Adelphi Hotel, Blackpool. On Thursday Mr. Berol will travel to Liverpool, and will explain the cause of the dispute between the Continental artists and Directors at a special meeting to be held at the new M.H.A.R.A. and V.A.F. offices, 21, Houghton-street.

Mr. Albert Voyce presided at the 570th meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.R.A. on Wednesday at the offices of the Association. He was supported by Messrs. Fred Herbert, F. Albini, Harry Bancroft, Sid Bandon, R. Abel, W. H. Atlas, Jack Collinson, Fred W. Millis (V.P.), Bernard Stavordale, John Alexander, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). By a ballot of the committee it was decided to present an illuminated address to Mrs. Egerton, who has represented the Association in Liverpool for many years, and is resigning the position on the opening of the new branch office. With regard to the letter sent to certain members by the secretary last week asking why they had not attended the weekly meetings, it was settled that those who had not replied should be considered to have resigned in accordance with the rules. Two members attended before the committee and made explanations regarding the loss of a concession, and various cases of applications for refunds were dealt with. The weekly financial statement, which was passed, showed a cash total of £37 4s. and thirty-three new members.

Mr. C. J. Carter, the prestidigitateur, has been appearing for a week in Hong Kong, where he played to capacity business every night. He opened on Saturday, June 13, at the local Lyceum Theatre to a house crowded to the doors, the receipts being $1800, and the seats were sold in advance for a week. One year more will complete Mr. Carter's trip all over the world. His route lay from Shanghai, through Tientsin, Pekin, Tsingtau, Vladivostock, Manchuria, Kobe, Yokohama, and Tokio, Japan, thence to Singapore.

Mr J. R. Huddlestone, the manager of the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, was married on Monday at St. Anne's Parish Church, Blackpool, to Mme. Frieda Rocca-Kaczka, of Nice, and formerly of Paris. The ceremony, which was fully choral—the singing being led by a surpliced choir—was performed by the Rev. H. E. Butler (vicar of St. Anne's), who was accompanied by the Rev. Chambre Vaughan (Silverdale, Staffs.). The bride, who was given away by her eldest brother, M. Henri Kaczka, was attired in a lovely Empire gown, with semi-court train of dark salmon-coloured Liberty silk trimmed with old lace, the upper portion being handworked. She wore a broad belt of black satin with long streamers down the back, at the ends of which were gold tassels. Her hat was a delightful creation; it was a large black picture hat with huge black ostrich plumes. She also carried a lovely shower bouquet of pink carnations and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by two little girls as bridesmaids—Miss Henriette Kaczka (niece of Mme. Rocca-Kaczka and daughter of M. and Mme. Gustave Kaczka) and Miss Amy Bannister (daughter of Mr. T. Bannister, of Banastre Holme, St. Annes, mutual friend of bride and bridegroom)—who were dressed in white lace, with hats to match trimmed with blue silk. They carried pretty baskets of pink roses. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. T. Bannister (St. Annes and Blackpool) as best man, and Mr. C. R. Hardman (of South Shore), one of the directors of the Winter Gardens Company, acted as groomsman.

The church was crowded with guests to the number of over 100, and, in addition, there were also over 400 employés from the Winter Gardens, inclusive of the members of the popular ballet The Belle of Andalusia. Thirty Winter Gardens attendants formed a guard of honour from the church gates to the entrance of the church, and saluted as the party passed along. The church was beautifully decorated by Mr. T. Heaton, head-gardener at the Winter Gardens. A reception was held near the font after the ceremony by Mr. and Mrs. Huddlestone, accompanied by M. and Mme. H. Kaczka and M. and Mme. G. Kaczka. When the French guests came along each lady and gentleman saluted the bride and bridegroom with a kiss on either cheek and wished them every happiness.

A banquet was afterwards given at the Grand Hotel to over 100 guests, and the health of the bride and bridegroom was proposed in a short speech by Mr. C. R. Hardman, and was eloquently responded to by the bridegroom. Mr. James Pearson (chairman of the Winter Gardens Company) proposed the healths of the families of the bride and bridegroom, and commented on the loss one family had sustained and the gain the other had received. Mr. H. Kaczka (the eldest brother of the bride), M. G. Kaczka, and Mr. Jos. H. Huddlestone all responded. The toast of "The Ladies" was proposed by Mr. Hebben, and responded to by Mr. Harry Bannister.

The employés and girls of the ballet made the journey to St. Annes in special cars supplied by the Blackpool, St. Annes, and Lytham Tramways Co. The members of the choir and the bellringers were invited to the Opera House in the evening. Amongst the guests were Mr. Badman, Mr. and Mrs. T. Bannister, Miss Annie Bannister, Mr. Harry Bannister, Mr. Bottomley, Mme. Brunet, Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Butler, Miss Casson, Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Cox, Mrs. and Miss Girdlestone, Mr. Jos. H. Huddlestone, Miss Huddlestone, Miss S. A. Huddlestone, Mrs. Wm. Huddlestone, Mr. Percy Huddlestone, Miss Rosa Huddlestone, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Hardman, Mr. Ernest and Mr. Harold P. Hardman, Mr. Otto Herger, Mrs. Hebden, M. and Mme. Henri Kaczka, M. and Mme. Gustave Kaczka, M. and Mme. Maurice Kaczka, M. and Mme. Lucien Kaczka, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Marlor, Mr. B. H. Marlor, Mr. and Mrs. Nickson, M. and Mme. Oller, Miss Patton, Mr. and Mrs. Peace, Mr. and Mrs. Pearson, Mrs. and Miss Rothwell, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith, Mr. G. R. Sims, Mr. and Mrs. J. Tiller, Mr. Keble Howard, Mr. C. E. Hands, Mme. Zertho, Mr. and Mrs. Firth, Dr. and Mme. Malaussena.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Huddlestone afterwards motored to the Lake District for the honeymoon, the guests spending the evening in the Winter Gardens, dining and supping in the Renaissance Salle-à-manger, and enjoying the programme in the pavilion, where one of the pictures shown on the screen was that of Mr. and Mrs. Huddlestone. There was hearty applause, especially when the orchestra at once commenced Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The march was also repeated, in place of the usual music, for the final spectacle of the ballet.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Mr. Harry Luck—who is, by the way, not related to the celebrated troupe of pantomimists of the same name—has been inundated with letters asking if his comic song, "Stick it, Jerry!" is obtainable. The number is being placed on the market by Messrs. Francis and Day.

On Saturday night last a scene perhaps unparalleled in the history of the Isle of Man was witnessed at Douglas. It being the close of what is known as "the Glasgow Fair Week," the spacious harbour piers from morn to midnight were thronged with thousands of Scots, with sweethearts, wives, and bairns, all eagerly struggling for the steamers that had been chartered to bear them back to Scotland, and with one accord they were all singing at the top of their voices the ditty Miss Florrie Forde has made the song of the year on the island, to wit, Murphy and Lipton's "Oh, oh, Antonio!" Messrs. Francis and Day are printing the number by the hundred thousand, and now huge orders from Blackpool for the song in its "Sixpenny Pop" form show that the mainland is being bitten by the latest craze in the world of popular song.

Miss Winifred Hare has stayed her triumphant progress round the Stoll tour to snatch a week's well-earned rest. The gifted artist will then complete the tour with a further fortnight, and will then again add to the delights of London. She is delighted with the success of Hermann E. Darewski's "It's better than being a Carnegie," and prophesies that the song will be sung everywhere in Britain before the year closes.

At the Euston during the current week some of Messrs. Francis and Day's songs have loomed very largely. Mr. G. H. Elliott at both houses has charmed all by his artistic rendering of "Sue, Sue, Sue, I'm very much in love with you," and "If the man in the moon were a coon," and Miss Madge Temple's beautiful voice has been heard at its best in "Esau, take me on the see-saw." Miss Cissie Thompson, who has likewise been scoring heavily here, will shortly exploit two new numbers issued by Mr. David Day's firm.

Miss Eileen Douglas will make her reappearance at the Palace on Monday with two new songs, entitled "Rosie's young man" and "Little girl, will you marry me?" from the pens of those clever writers, Fred W. Leigh and Henry E. Pether

Miss Norah Emerald, who is deservedly numbered among our most popular singers of chorus songs, has secured from M. Witmark and Sons the singing rights of "Mr. Man, Man, Man." The song has been greatly in evidence at the Paragon during the current week.

Austin and Cowan, whose delightful singing has been appreciated at home and abroad, scored an enormous success at the Empire, Islington, last Monday night by their artistic rendition of the beautiful song "Star of my life."

The summer season often gives the first impetus to the song which will be popular during the coming pantomimes. "Way down in Colon Town," the characteristic Southern number with which Mr. Andie Caine is making a phenomenal success, has already been secured for a number of the leading London and provincial pantomimes.

M. Witmark and Sons introduced to the British public the peculiar instrumental number "The Mosquito Parade," which has probably been played by every orchestra in Great Britain. They have again been fortunate in a successor to that quaint number in "Teddy Bear's Picnic," which is to be found on nearly every programme this summer, and bids fair to be even more popular.

"Dorando," a song and waltz, by Miss Florry Cooper, will shortly be published, while the enthusiasm for the hero of the Marathon Race is still warm.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's sparkling comedy song, entitled "The little bit of girl inside," which will be specially "featured" by Miss Carrie de Mar on the Percy Williams' circuit, in the U.S.A., early in October, has this week been acquired for publication by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter. Miss de Mar will also sing this song, together with three other compositions, all from the pens of Harrington and Powell, viz., "The windy day girl," "Gentle maiden," and "Winkie Winnie," at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, where she opens for an exclusive engagement in November next.

Miss Josie Collins, fresh from provincial triumphs, will open at the Tivoli, Strand, on Monday next, where her répertoire will consist of two striking numbers (both published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.), entitled "My Cuban Girl" and "My Pyramid Girl." Miss Collins has already arranged to specially "feature" both of these highly successful numbers in pantomime next Christmas. Miss Katie Marsh is also singing "My Pyramid Girl" at the Empire, Portsmouth, on Monday, and Miss Blanche Vincent is singing "My Cuban Girl" at the Empire, Liverpool.

Three of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s songs will be "on top" for the delectation of holiday-makers at the Oxford on Monday next, to wit, "Parasol for two," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, and "Will you be my Valentine?" by Harrington and Powell, both of which will be rendered by Miss Madoline Rees and Messrs. Harrington and Tabrar's most successful song, "Make haste and send me on a girl," sung by Miss Aimée Roberts.

So great is the success which Miss Kate Carney has achieved with Messrs. Paul Pelham and Herbert Rule's latest big "winner," "From Poverty Street to Golden Square," which she will be singing at the Hippodrome, Brighton, on Monday next, that applications for pantomime permissions for this taking number have poured in upon the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. thick and fast. Miss Florrie Forde is one of the notable artists who have already secured this number for pantomime (at the Theatre Royal, Bradford).

Miss Marie Lloyd will be displaying her latest gorgeous frock in her latest sensationally successful song, "The Directoire Girl," by John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell, at sunny Margate next week, where she will be nightly appearing at the local Hippodrome. Rarely, if ever, has the trade demand for a song been so swift and heavy as in the case of this number, which forms No. 107 of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s "Sixpenny Successes" series.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell are exceptionally busy executing special American orders for songs just now, and are proud of the fact that they number among their many clients such "stars" as Mesdames Anna Held, Alice Lloyd, Lucy Weston, Carrie de Mar, Laddie Cliff, and many others who have "made good" on the other side. Harrington and Powell have had many offers, baited with tempting monetary considerations, from American publishers anxious to exclusively handle their songs, but they prefer, at present at all events, to "keep an open mind" on the subject.

Jean Macduff, the female Scotch comedienne, is making a great success nightly with her latest song, "I'm getting married in the morning," at Rathbone Gardens, Portobello. The song was sung for the first time last Friday, and made an instantaneous success, Miss Macduff having to respond to enthusiastic encores.

CHAT WITH MR. GEORGE LEYTON.

It is only a few weeks since there was held at the Old Ranelagh Gardens, Chelsea, a fête in aid of a fund for the relief and assistance of our veteran warriors. The thought of that successful function brings recollections of the services for a similar worthy object rendered by Mr. George Leyton, the well-known actor-vocalist, whose name is strongly connected with a very noble cause. Mr. Leyton's methods of procedure are as sound as the results therefrom. When visiting a town he at once makes inquiries from the local authorities—police, guardians, &c.—for any veteran who may be under their notice. The most deserving—which is determined by his history and close examination of his discharge sheet—has then a benefit on his behalf. Mr. Leyton relies on the sale among the audience of the words in the stirring songs in his répertoire, chiefly his famous "Boys of the Chelsea School," for proceeds to the fund. Copies of the sheet are sold at the small price of one penny, and £30 is no uncommon sum to realise from a large hall in a week. The manager or some other responsible person is appointed trustee of the total sum, out of which, until it is exhausted, the veteran is allowed from ten shillings to £1 per week. So far the aggregate amount which has been distributed by Mr. Leyton to Crimean veterans throughout the country is £3,060.

Mr. Leyton is to still further exert himself, for there was arranged to take place last night, at the Oxford, a performance partly in aid of the Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans, under the patronage of Lord Roberts, Lord Cheylesmore, the Council of Lord Roberts's Veterans' Fund, Sir George White, the Lord Mayor, and the Sheriffs. The arrangements in connection with it included the presentation by Mr. Leyton, with the assistance of veterans, of his latest military scena, The Last Muster.

It has been for some time Mr. Leyton's desire to consolidate a fund so that weekly pensions might be made to Crimean veterans, and thus their poverty would be a thing of the past. This point was embodied in the story of Mr. Leyton's exertions on behalf of the old soldiers which was placed before the King, who caused an acknowledgment to be sent to Mr. Leyton, His Majesty evincing considerable interest in the scheme. With the subject of this sketch military playlets are a speciality, and therefore he can carry on his work for the Crimean soldiers with each new one. In this direction one of Mr. Leyton's previous sketches, entitled The Wreck of the Birkenhead, was eminently successful.

Among what might be called Mr. Leyton's "literary relics" a letter, dated June 15, 1907, and signed by fourteen veterans, is particularly prized by its possessor. It reads as follows:—

"To Mr. George Leyton.

"Sir, We, the undersigned veterans of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny, consider it our duty to return thanks for the efforts you so generously make in our behalf. Rest assured, we fully appreciate your kindness in the endeavour to brighten our homes in these our remaining days here, and not one of us is under 72 years, and cannot expect to remain much longer in this world.

"That you may have every success in life is the earnest wish of—"

(Here follow the signatures of the aged men.)

To such a document as this and many others of a like character which have been sent to Mr. Leyton a pathetic interest will attach in years to come. When the veterans whom Mr. Leyton has helped have passed, in the course of nature, to the Land o' the Leal, that gentleman's retrospects will surely be of a pleasant character when he remembers that he did his best to comfort the declining years of men who had fought valiantly for their country, and were not too happily circumstanced before this aid was granted.

But Mr. Leyton has done more than collect money for the cause he has so much at heart. He has furnished money for the payment of the expenses in connection with the burial of several veterans, whose last resting-place might otherwise have been of an exceedingly unpretentious character so far as the outward indication of the places where heroes reposed was concerned. On other occasions Mr. Leyton has employed money and influence to remove old soldiers from the workhouse into an environment which implicated less stigma.

Herbert Lloyd's Happy Hooligan company opened their season at Oldham last week with great success. Of the many musical numbers introduced, none was more successful than the stirring march song, "Here comes the minstrel band," which was produced with special novel drum effects, and can safely be said to be the song hit of the piece.

Little Tich will make a welcome return to the Oxford on Bank Holiday. Joe Elvin and company will appear in Deaf; Amba Austa, in Oysters and Clam; and the incomparable Paul Cinquevalli, a great favourite at the Oxford, is also engaged. Wilkie Bard, whose voice has fortunately mended, after many painful throat operations; France and Stuart, in 100 to 1 Chance; Clarrissa Talbot and Harry Pearse; Selbo, a clever juggler; H. L. Martine, a clever shoe dancer; Aimée Roberts; Dan Crawley; the Eight College Girls; T. E. Finglass; the Warsaw Bros.; Madoline Rees; Venie Clements; Victoria Monks; and George Leyton, in The Last Muster, make a very powerful company. Mr. Leon Bassell will take up the direction of the orchestra from this date, in place of Mr. Ernest Bernhardt.

"PEDLAR SAM; OR, A DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH."

Sensational Sketch, produced at the Camberwell Empire, on Monday, July 27.

Samuel Jefferson ..... Mr. Frank Hardie
Harry Denby ..... Mr. J. C. Goodman
David Fagg ..... Mr. Arthur Stratton
Jack Sharp ..... Mr. A. N. Body
Madge Denby ..... Miss Irene Carlton

This powerful and interesting playlet held the attention of the audience throughout on Monday on its reproduction by Mr. Frank Hardie and his company at the Empire, Camberwell, and is an excellent specimen of the miniature melodrama so popular at the halls. The principal character is Samuel Jefferson (Pedlar Sam), an amusingly loquacious but kind-hearted Yankee, who makes his appearance at Stony Creek, California, and quickly sets about doing good. Harry Denby, a hard-working gold-digger from the "old country," has been robbed of his little store of wealth—some 200 dollars—and his wife, Madge, suspects that her husband's partner, David Fagg, a ne'er-do-well, is the culprit, although Harry will not believe ill of his "chum." Pedlar Sam has met Denby's little boy near the Creek, and tells Harry and Madge that the youngster will not live unless he gets back to his native air. He also advances them the money for his passage to England, telling them that it is the remembrance of his own son that prompts the kindly action. He then relates how he had gone to New York to see his boy, and found him in an hotel dying, and how he learns that the murderer was David Fagg. He has sworn to be revenged, and has tracked Fagg to Stony Creek, and when Madge tells him that the scoundrel is in a neighbouring drinking den he goes off to find him. Fagg appears, and tries to rob Madge of the 200 dollars given her by the Pedlar, but just as he is about to kill her Jefferson, who is "always on the spot or somewhere darned near it," turns up, and she is saved. When she has gone into the house Pedlar Sam proceeds to settle accounts with his son's murderer, and although he could easily kill him with a revolver, decides on a fair encounter, and the couple have a fight with bowie knives. Disarming Fagg, the Pedlar again has him at his mercy, and again refrains from taking what he thinks a mean advantage, and the fight is renewed without knives. Just as the Pedlar is about to give Fagg his quietus some of the latter's chums appear, and Jefferson is overpowered, brutally ill-treated by Fagg and his gang, and finally secured to a stake to await his execution. Madge, of course, comes to his rescue, and this time Pedlar Sam makes no mistake in his treatment of Fagg, shooting him with a revolver which Madge had in her possession. The acting of Mr. Frank Hardie in the important part of Pedlar Sam largely contributed to the success of the production, the many humorous and sage remarks of the medicine man creating much merriment. Very impressive also was his recital of the speech in which he describes how he found his son in New York; and his encounter with Fagg was realistically enacted. Mr. J. C. Goodman did the little that he had to do as Harry capably; Mr. Arthur Stratton excellently portrayed the brutal Fagg; and Miss Irene Carlton was quite satisfactory as Madge Denby.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

Strong and well-diversified programmes are waging a more than successful fight with the sultry weather, and as a consequence seats are at a premium in this popular hall. Mr. R. A. Roberts is at the top of the bill this week, playing on alternate evenings Dick Turpin and Ringing the Changes. The former, which was presented on the evening of our visit, is from the pen of Mr. Roberts himself, and forms a capital medium for the display of his gifts as a protean actor. Five characters figure in the cast, all of which are portrayed by Mr. Roberts. They include Turpin, a Bow-street runner, a Yorkshireman, Sally, and the daughter of a nobleman he had held up previously. The speed with which he effects his changes of costume is remarkable, and in addition tribute must be paid to the exceptionally complete way in which the different characters are represented, Turpin, the Yorkshireman, and Sally being character-studies of great excellence. It is needless to say that the audience speedily recognised the value of his performance, his reception at the close being enthusiastic. Anthony Holt, in illustrated songs, proved himself to be the possessor of a powerful voice, singing "She waited by the deep blue sea" and "Good-bye, sweetheart" with great taste and skill. Happy Tom Parker, comedian and dancer, made one of the hits of the evening, singing no less than three songs, "It does make me feel funny," "Keep in the same position," and "I don't know if I'm on my head or my feet," with great effect, and his dancing is also very smart. The Cumberlands gave a particularly smart cycle act, requiring great strength and agility and an equal amount of skill, and their reception was deservedly cordial. Percy Honri proved how effective an instrument the concertina is for solo work in a selection from the overture to Maritana, splendidly performed, the audience doing their utmost to induce him to give an encore. Verne and Voyce in a skit, The Fly Far-man, present an amusing trifle containing dialogue and singing, both being much to the taste of the house. The Sisters Pine, in a musical-comedy act, do well and gain much applause; the Leonards, in Point Duty, a comedy singing act, make a good impression, the gentleman being a good comedian; the Lukushimas, Japanese entertainers, are a skilful and accomplished troupe, the efforts of Otara San, a lady foot equilibrist, being singularly clever. The house was very lavish in applause, which was fully earned. The Bioscope is good this week, and Mr. Fred Camp's orchestra gives as an overture an excerpt from William Tell.

CHARLES FISHER "POCKET OPERA" CO. AT DARLINGTON.

The Charles Fisher "Pocket Opera" Co. are the "star" turn this week. This company, if our memory serves us correctly, were the first to produce "miniature operas" on the variety stage, and although extensively copied, this company still reigns supreme, judging by their performance of a condensation of Il Trovatore last night. "Well staged, excellently acted, and delightfully sung" was the popular verdict, and this magnificent trio of voices thoroughly deserved the loud and enthusiastic applause which greeted their efforts.—Northern Echo and Star, July 28, 1908.

At the Canterbury Little Tich will head the bill next week, Will Evans and Black versus White being big stars. A very attractive programme will be provided. Fred Lambert, Poplar, Lambert and Glover, Fred Sheppard, Mooney and Holbein, Harry Conlin, Vivian and company, in The Toy Shop, Lilian Lowe, Dan Crawley, Shalsy's Garden of Beautiful Girls, Kitty Wager, Alexandra Dagmar, the Four Eugenes, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

At the Euston on Monday the programme will include the names of J. Leopold and company, in The Houseboat, Millie Lindon, Slobrig's Automatons, Bertha Stuart, Eight College Girls, Anthony, Edith Evelyn and company, Dave Carter, Harry Rogerson, Little Victoria, and Amy Clevere.

DEATH OF HARRY LUNDY.

Mr. Harry Lundy, whose death at Farningham on Wednesday morning we have to record with deep regret, began his business career with Mr. Newson Smith, the well-known entertainment accountant, and for some time attended to the checking of the accounts of the London Pavilion. He subsequently undertook the reform of the checking arrangements at the Alhambra, Blackpool; and then, for two years, was manager of the Canterbury under Mr. Payne. This was followed by a four-and-a-half-years engagement in a similar capacity at the Oxford, where Mr. Lundy introduced many successful songs and sketches, including the successful Over the Sticks with Joe Elvin, and Leslie Stuart's "Soldiers of the Queen," sung by Mr. Albert Christian. He then returned to the Alhambra, Blackpool, where he controlled affairs for nine months, after which, in the December of 1901, he undertook the management of the Royal, Holborn, which he caused to be rapidly renovated and redecorated, and produced there the celebrated sketch The Fighting Parson, with Mr. George Gray in the title-part, and also The Road to Ruin, in which that gentleman also appeared. Mr. Lundy was a director of the Glasgow Pavilion; and he engineered many successful ventures in London and the provinces. The deceased was taken ill at Lambeth on Tuesday, and was removed to Farningham, where he died from heart failure. The funeral will take place at Farningham Church to-day at 12.30 p.m.

THE LATE MR. HARRY LUNDY

THE FORESTERS'.

A particularly bright and entertaining programme is submitted here this week to the patrons of this well-conducted establishment. Miss Gertie Lewis, male impersonator, is one of the latest recruits, and bids fair to become popular; she has a pleasing manner, and is a good dancer. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, in the comedy sketch True Blue, supply an enjoyable turn. The gentleman is a genuine humourist; his gags and witty retorts keep the house in a continual ripple of laughter. He is capitally supported by the lady, her clear pronunciation being a special feature. Mr. Harry Merriless, Scotch comedian, possesses a good voice and sings well a parody on "True till death," his second song, in a lady's garb, being "Gang awa' Wullie," which is well received. Miss Josephine Crook, in illustrated songs, is a great favourite, her rendering of "Where is my boy to-night?" and "On the flip-flap" suit the audience to a nicety; Mr. Fred Burton, in a musical speciality act, is entertaining, and displays his abilities by performances on numerous instruments; Kenway and Emerey do a good turn, their little skit, She Would have a Soldier, being amusing. Brien McCulloch and company in the sketch After Balaclava are effective. The story deals with an old Balaclava hero, who, with his wife, are in extremely poor circumstances, and vainly try and obtain outdoor relief from the workhouse. The rent being due, their few chattels are taken, together with the old veteran's medals. At a meeting of the guardians, the doctor, who is kind-hearted and generous to the poor, is remonstrated with and accused of wasting the ratepayers' money. The old couple arrive, and both die in the guardians' room. Mr. Brian McCulloch has a capital make-up and plays the veteran admirably throughout; Miss B. Fielding as the wife acts with tenderness; as the Doctor, Mr. E. Cwttrim is decidedly good, and the character of Clement Flint, a guardian of the poor, is ably portrayed by Mr. W. H. Brougham. Hewson's Æolians, vocalists and dancers, are a bright combination, the blending of their voices, together with some capital dancing, obtaining for them a hearty reception. Cegar and Elgar, comedians, in Ye Days of Olde, are distinctly novel, and with some better material should certainly become favourites. They are possessed of real talent. An interesting competition is taking place this week. Twenty snapshot photographs are exhibited at each performance, and any person in the audience whose photograph is displayed receives five shillings. On the night of our visit there were several lucky recipients of the rewards, which are paid on the stage. Many interesting films are shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux, Baby's Playmates being specially diverting. Mr. Carl Hamlin leads his tuneful orchestra in masterly fashion.

The Marlborough Theatre, having been cleaned and redecorated, reopens to-day with The Prodigal Son. A striking list of autumn bookings include The Merry Widow, The Girls of Gottenburg, Oscar Asche and Lily Brayton, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Miss Hook of Holland, The Gay Gordons, F. R. Benson, The Sins of Society, and The Prince and the Beggar Maid.

At a special meeting of the Cardiff Watch Committee on the 21st ult. an application was received for the transfer of the licence of the Theatre Royal from Mr. Robert Redford to Mr. Balmain, of London. It was stated that up to that time Mr. Balmain had not produced the licence, and there was no request for a transfer from Mr. Redford as holder, two conditions that ought to be observed before the transfer was granted. It was decided, subject to the production of the licence and a written request from Mr. Redford, and also to a favourable report from the medical officer of health and head-constable being received, that the necessary transfer be granted.

At the South London Tom Leamore will return to the scene of many triumphs on Bank Holiday, and F. Wynne and company will present their powerful scena The Light at the Window. Others engaged are Hallam and Stanton, Selbo, La Danseuse, Hinton and Wooton, in their bicycle act, Barrie Lupino, and Ada Cerito.

MAUD ALLAN'S ADVENTURES.

Miss Maud Allan, like Miss Minnie Hauk and other American celebrities, has been captured by Indians in her youth. "I was five years old," she says in the Weekly Dispatch, "when we moved from Canada to San Francisco. In our party were my mother and father, my nursery governess, and myself. The train had stopped somewhere to take in water. It was not even a station—just a halt amid miles upon miles of apparently deserted plains. A number of Red Indians came up to sell baskets, moccasins, beads, and trinkets to the passengers. My mother was chatting with some friends, and my governess let go my hand for a moment to look at the curios. I am told I was a very pretty child. I had fair hair and blue eyes, and as I looked at the strangers with childish curiosity they returned my stare. Two of them exchanged remarks in a gutteral undertone.

"The next moment I was caught up and being rushed off in the arms of one of the squaws at a tremendous rate. The suddenness and unexpectedness of it must have dazed me for the moment. At any rate, I did not cry out. What would have been my fate but for the sharp eyes of a railway official I do not know. The Indians have been known to hold children to ransom. There are several cases known in which little girls have been stolen to become a kind of goddess or queen to some particular tribe. The passengers were getting aboard the train when my mother and my governess simultaneously missed me. There was a great outcry. Then one of the conductors espied two squaws scuttling away across the prairie, and with them a glint of golden hair. 'There she is!' he cried.

"At once my parents, the passengers, conductors, and I believe even the engine-drivers, streamed across the long grass after the flying squaws. For a moment or two the Indians held on. One or two of the men following us had drawn revolvers, but whether they would have fired or not is doubtful. There would have been too much risk of hitting me. My captors found themselves being overtaken and dropped me. A few moments later my mother—herself little more than a girl, for she married early—was tearfully hugging me to her breast. Of course, a great deal of this I have learned since. But I believe it was a very near thing. It might easily have been thought that I had got into the train with one or other of the passengers. It the train had left it is doubtful if ever I should have been rescued alive.

"I was passionately fond of the water, and could swim and dive like a beaver. This accomplishment on one occasion stood me in good stead. When I was nine years old a party was picknicking near the swift and dangerous Russian river. There was a part of this river where bathing could be had with safety if care was taken, and here our party went in to bathe. Among the bathers was a woman who carried her baby in with her. Somehow or other she got out of her depth in a part of the river where the current runs fast and strongly. She held the child above her head and cried for help. My companion and I at once rushed to her. I succeeded in getting the baby out while my companions saved the woman.

"Then there was an occasion before this when I had a narrow escape from being trampled to death by a horse. My own pony was sick, but rather than be baulked of my ride, I took up one of the carriage horses. I don't know whether it was the indignity of being ridden instead of driven that affected my mount, but suddenly on a hillside he was doubled up by a spasm of rage or colic. Had I been riding my own pony I should have clung on to his neck, but the big horse's neck was too far away from me, and before I knew what had happened I was under the brute's hoofs. I was picked up bruised and almost senseless.

"Then dogs have always had a fancy for biting me. This is most ungrateful on their part, as I love them and all animals. I was bitten several times as a child, once very badly by a Newfoundland, and since I have been grown up I have been bitten twice—once by a dachshund, the other time by a horse. The latter incident was rather amusing, although I failed to perceive the humour at the time. I was crossing the Nollendorf Platz in Berlin, and had to pass in front of a cab horse having its dinner. Perhaps I knocked against its can—they feed them with cans there—perhaps it thought I had nefarious designs upon its meal; but, anyway, it suddenly reached out and gripped me by the arm.

"Fortunately it was winter and I was in furs, so its teeth did not penetrate my skin, but the pain was considerable, and I yelled. The old cabby was having his dinner on the box-seat—a flask of brandy, a cube of brown bread, and a roll of sausage. The horse, startled by my cry, backed suddenly and violently, mercifully freeing my arm. The shock of the collision sent cabby's flask, bread, and sausage flying in all directions, while he himself proceeded to do a sort of circus act on the horse's back, to the accompaniment of a torrent of German oaths. I don't think I ever saw a man more surprised in my life."

On Sunday last the staff of the Empire, Hackney, held their annual outing. Numbering about sixty, they met at Liverpool Street at 8.30 a.m. and entrained in two saloons specially engaged, leaving by the 9 o'clock for Clacton, which was reached by eleven o'clock, after a most comfortable run down. The party on reaching Clacton soon settled themselves to making the day as enjoyable as possible. Soon some were seen trying their hardest to emulate Woolfe, others going for drives, and some to the boats, after which every one turned up at the Palace by the Sea for dinner at 1 o'clock, all looking as fresh and cool as the proverbial cucumber, and seemed by the way they manipulated the knives and forks that they meant no good to the roast chicken and beef, let alone the roast duck and other good fare provided.

The dinner was served in a capacious and well-arranged saloon overlooking the sea, the tables being laid out in sumptuous style. The usual toasts, "The King" and "Royal Family" and "The Firm" having been given by Mr. Percival, the greatly esteemed manager, and seconded by his able lieutenant Mr. A. Trussell, the party adjourned to the grounds at the rear of the Palace and were photographed, giving the man of the lens rather a lively time. The party then dispersed to make the afternoon as enjoyable as the morning. Three brakes were chartered to take them for a lovely fifteen-mile drive in the country, re-arriving at the Palace about 5 o'clock in time for a welcome tea. They then sought various ways of passing the time left before meeting at 8.30 for the homeward journey.

Thanks to the fine weather and the indefatigable efforts of the president, secretary, committee, and stewards, the day was acclaimed by one and all to have been one of the most successful outings ever held by the Hackney Empire. The president of the outing was Mr. Percy Percival (Manager); secretary and treasurer, Mr. A. Trussell (Assistant-Manager); committee, Messrs. Greco, Poland, and Redman; stewards, Messrs. Esau, Watchorn, and Harriss.

At the Hammersmith Palace on Monday will appear Lew Lake, Cockney comedian, in the farcical absurdity Bloomsbury Burglars, Maxford and O'Neill, Lottie Siegenberg, Little "Tich," Bourne, Austin and Cowan, Fred Earle, Tony Black, Carl Rosino, Roches' Comedy Circus, Josephine Crook, Ethel Dove, Archie Royer, Talbot and Pearce, Piquo, Allsopp and Bekwith, and Ella Shields.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

OLYMPIC GAMES IN THE STADIUM.—Messrs. Pathé Frères have several series devoted to the now historic athletic events which have for the past few weeks created so much interest, and even excitement, in London. We are informed that the firm has been granted the sole rights for taking cinematograph pictures within the Stadium, and a specially fine set has been secured depicting the Marathon Race. This, of course, shows Dorando's gallant but unsuccessful efforts for securing the coveted prize, his various falls in the Stadium itself, the arrival of the next competitor, Hayes, to whom was awarded the chief prize, as well as the entrance of the other contestants. This particular Marathon series starts with the parade of the runners before the Princess of Wales, the start at Windsor, the run through Wembley, Hayes and Dorando leading, and the entrance of Dorando first into the Stadium. The writer was afforded the privilege, on Thursday afternoon, of seeing these pictures at Messrs. Pathé's establishment in Charing Cross-road, and he can only speak with unqualified praise of them. The final efforts made by the plucky little Italian competitor, Dorando, give us several pathetic scenes, and the production is one that is bound to become exceedingly popular. The Marathon Race, it should be mentioned, forms the fourth of the Stadium Sports series issued by Messrs. Pathé Frères, and the following series deals with the prizes and shows us the nominal winner, Hayes.

THE STADIUM SPORTS.—The three series not already dealt with furnish magnificent views of other scenes that have occurred in connection with the Olympic Games. The first part shows us the opened ceremony, performed by the King, the general salute, the march-past of the athletes, the mass drills, a swimming match, high diving, high jumping, Danish ladies' display, and water polo (Belgium v. Holland). In the second series the events dealt with are the throwing of the javelin, the tug-of-war (England v. America), archery (ladies v. gentlemen), throwing the discus (Greek style), and the final of the tug-of-war. The third series depicts a steeple-chase, high jumping, pole jumping, high diving, and water polo. With the concluding two series the previous paragraph deals.

PATHE FRERES' PAVILION AT THE FRANCO-BRITISH EXHIBITION.

MESSRS. PATHÉ'S building in the Franco-British Exhibition has been, during the past few days, visited by, among other notable personages, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the Duke of Westminster, and Miss Ellen Terry, all of whom expressed their pleasure at what they saw.

THE SPECTRE furnishes several dramatic scenes. Pierrot, having fallen desperately in love with a lady who laughs at him, steals from the bootmaker (his master) an old stocking full of gold, which he intends giving her to propitiate her. Upon the bootmaker discovering the theft, Pierrot grows reckless and strangles him, after which he goes to his lady-love and offers the gold and his heart. Yet he feels the ghost of his victim dogging his footsteps wherever he goes, and he runs away in the night in the hopes of shaking the idea from his mind, but he is unable to escape the remembrance of his crime, and he expires in a fit of remorse.

UNDER A CROCODILE SKIN is a most laughable Pathé production. A burglar, having been disturbed whilst ransacking a house, hides under a crocodile skin, and withdraws slowly before the very eyes of the terrified policemen. After disturbing the whole neighbourhood, he climbs up a wall in spite of the bullets which flatten themselves on his thick skin, without hurting him in the least, enters a flat, from which he removes all the valuables, and leaving the now useless crocodile skin behind, he startles all his pursuers by his change of shape.

AN INTERRUPTED IDYLL.—Here again we are treated to the comic side of life. A gentleman of an aggressive temper is courting a lady in a public garden, when an old gipsy comes and offers to tell them their fortune. The gentleman is irritated, and he sends away the old woman with harsh words. As she goes she tells him that all sorts of evil will befall him. From that time on, his lady-love, being very impulsive and fickle, has many a whim, each of which places him in a most ridiculous position. Then a young coxcomb plays all sorts of tricks on him, and he is finally left in the garb of a ragged beggar.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

THE Charles Urban Trading Company's output of subjects this week surely establishes a record even for this noted firm of publishers, and where all are of the usual excellence and photographic quality, we regret that space will only permit notice of the topical films published.

THE QUEBEC PAGEANT.—We are authorised to announce early next week the production of a unique and comprehensive series depicting this brilliant and impressive spectacle on the Heights of Abraham. The occasion and surroundings lent themselves to vigorous and magnificent reproduction on the kinematograph, and the Urban operators took every advantage of the privileges and courtesy extended to them by the authorities. Photographic portrait views of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and other distinguished personages present will, it is hoped, add their quota to the historic value of this gorgeous spectacular reproduction.

GOODWOOD RACES.—Urban cameras, during this annual Sussex fixture, enjoyed privileged and unique positions by special permission of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, and, favoured by glorious weather, particularly good results were secured. The presence of the King and Queen and Princess of Wales, with a distinguished party from Goodwood House, imparted great éclat to the proceedings, and the principal events, the fashionable crowds, and the beautiful surroundings go to the making of a highly successful motion picture reproduction.

OLYMPIC REGATTA AT HENLEY.—Again the Urban Company scores in choice of most excellent positions for their purpose. The whole length of the course from starting-point to finish is under command, and the first international meeting ever held on these historic waters is splendidly depicted, as are club lawns with their fashionable habitués, the houseboats, the crowds of well-dressed people lining the banks, the spirited contests for supremacy, and all that goes to the making of a highly successful reproduction of a river event.

THE DOVER PAGEANT.—The last topical subject calling for special notice is a reproduction of the gorgeous pageant now being held at the ancient Cinque Port. Admirable groupings, effective costumes, delightful dances, historic and interesting episodes, 2000 performers and appropriate surroundings serve splendid kinematographic purpose. Four sections of this pageant are prepared, each complete in itself, and the whole forms a subject of photographic merit which every exhibitor would do well to secure.

THE numerous Urban dramatic and magical subjects published this week will receive attention in our next issue.

ON Monday six new Urbanora animated pictures will be exhibited at the Palace Theatre. Mr. Charles Urban's six new subjects will include the latest scenes of the two great sporting events of the moment, Goodwood and Henley of 1908, his cameras enjoying privileged and unique position at the Sussex fixture by special permission of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. Two important "travel" series will be From Quebec to Niagara, via St. Lawrence and the Thousand Islands, and A Run on the Rhodesian Railway, from Umtali to Beira, traversing the famed Amatonga Forest and encountering ground game of all descriptions, including elands, wild goats, cattle, baboons, &c. Another remarkable and exclusively Urban subject, and one which will delight students of ornithology, will be the set of pictures illustrating the Haunts and Habits of Wild Birds, which were exhibited privately to the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, and their party at Urbanora House a week ago. Specially taken by the famous naturalists Messrs. Richard and Cherry Kearton, these films will furnish the spectator in ten minutes with optical information based upon the assidious watching and waiting of many months.

THE Charles Urban Trading Co. are becoming quite noted for their excellent portraits of celebrated artists. We have one before us of Mr. R. G. Knowles; it is a fine, light study, entitled "Reflections," by their clever artist Mr. Chas. Wyrall.

Gaumont Company.

THE QUEBEC PAGEANT.—The magnificent spectacle which was enacted on the Heights of Abraham, Quebec, during the Prince of Wales's visit to that city has been placed on permanent record by the Gaumont Company, who enterprisingly obtained the exclusive cinematograph rights at a very heavy fee, and have produced what will be voted the best of the long list of excellent pageant pictures which they have secured. Photographically the picture is excellent. We hope to publish further details in our next issue.

MARATHON RACE.—Gaumonts secured a complete picture of the Marathon Race from start to finish. The film was shown at the Coliseum, the London Hippodrome, and Shepherd's Bush Empire the same night. The operators were enabled to get a very close view of the Princess of Wales giving the starting signal, and the subject has also an excellent feature in a picture of Dorando outside his apartments in Church-street, Soho, the moral winner of the race, posing specially for the camera.

MOVING IN.—The same company has placed on the market a very fine representation of Herbert Darnley's music-hall sketch Moving In, which was specially performed by Mr. Darnley's company for the occasion. The sketch is a great favourite with the patrons of variety theatres, and describes the trials and troubles of "moving in." Everything goes with a dash, and the scenes are uproariously funny.

BLACK AND WHITE is a clever and original subject. Grotesque figures appear in white on the curtain, and we are treated to a few minutes of delightful humour.

CATCH ME IF YOU CAN is an extremely fine trick film by Gaumonts. The way Johnson uses his bag is nothing short of marvellous. He steals a safe which disappears into a bag, and afterwards he eludes his would-be captors in a most remarkable way. When caught, he calmly produces the safe from the bag and makes off. We see in the end how he has the best of his pursuers.

GAUMONTS have also a pretty fairy story film, THE LEGEND OF NARCISSUS. This is the story of a man who refuses all the approaches of the beautiful nymphs who have fallen in love with him, and is at last turned into the flower, which bears his name, by the gods for admiring his own image.

MR. ROBT. W. PAUL has found it necessary, owing to the development of the kinematograph business, to secure a general manager for this department, and has appointed Mr. J. W. Smith to this position. Mr. Smith is well and favourably known to every exhibitor, having until now managed, under Mr. Will Barker, the business of the Warwick Trading Company. Previous to this he was with Mr. Paul for about six years, before which he was with Mr. Walter Gibbons, who made so well known the Bio-tableaux exhibits with the Randvoll machine; with David Devant, now Maskelyne and Devant, and Horace Chester, the lecturer whose dioramic effects with the triple lantern Mr. J. W. Smith worked. Thus he has a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the up-to-date showman, as well as extensive experience in taking scenes at home and abroad. He is an enthusiastic kinematographer, and boasts that he has never yet failed to fulfil a promise to a prospective customer or disappointed an exhibitor in the delivery of a film.

INVENTIONS.

APPLICATIONS.

14,837.—Louis Henri Huet, of London. Improvements in and relating to apparatus for taking or reproducing animated pictures.

15,011.—Scott King Alexander, of Doncaster, Yorks. Means or apparatus for conducting a music-hall or similar turn.

15,072.—Alfred Hester and Charles Lichfield, of Nottingham. Improvements in spring guns.

15,074.—William Marriott Beasley, of Handsworth, Stafford. New or improved recording target.

15,111.—Crompton and Co., Ltd., and Alan Williams, of London. Improvements in apparatus for raising and lowering stage scenery and the like.

15,140.—Albert Lewis Davis, of London. Improved means for operating and driving gramophones and cinematographs and causing them to run in synchronism one with the other.

COMPLETE SPECIFICATIONS ACCEPTED.

19,519.—Hill and Williams. Sights for small arms of the type known as air guns.

25,939.—Urry. Certain kinds of air guns.

26,630.—Weeks. Theatre curtains, drop scenes, and the like.

28,002.—Konrad and Baumgartner. Driving gear for a band displaying term days, pictures, and the like.

6,229.—Electric arc lamps for theatrical and other stages.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

4,176.—Phonographs.—Klenk, H., and Krebs, H., of Hanau-on-the-Main, Germany.

A phonograph or gramophone, having mechanism (1), record (2), sound-box (4), tone-arm (5), and trumpet (7), is enclosed in a casing provided with sounding-boards (8, 8a), on the latter of which is mounted a series of strings (11), which are directly or indirectly vibrated by the sound waves issuing from the trumpet (7). The strings are connected to a block (10), carried over a bridge (12), and secured to hooks (13). The trumpet (7) may be connected by a strut (19) with the bridge (12), as shown in Fig. 5, to directly vibrate the strings. Doors (15, 16) are provided for the sound-board and strings, and a hinged flap (17) for access to the phonograph. The strings may be struck separately by hand or by a pianoforte action from keys (21) to reinforce the sound of the phonograph. In the modification shown in Fig. 5 the phonograph is combined with a zither.

4,429.—Phonographs, kinematographs. Conade, M., of Paris, France.

Relates to the synchronous driving of phonographs and kinematographs by the application of an apparatus described in a former patent specification. The transmitter (1) is driven either in conjunction with one of the devices (9) to be run in synchronism, or by an independent motor, the others (8) being run by motors receiving alternating polyphase current from the transmitter. Both devices are started at a registration mark, and are gradually speeded up.

3,915.—Heating by electricity. Reynolds, A., of London.

The air of theatres, music halls, and rooms is heated by the passage of a current through powdered carbon, or through a mixture of powdered carbon and material of greater resistivity enclosed within walls of carbon or iron, provided with radiating gills and with or without a lining of electrically insulating but thermally conducting material. In Fig. 1 two concentric cast-iron cylinders (b) are fitted with a non-conducting lining (d). The space between the cylinders is filled with the carbon mixture, and contact is made by electrodes (f). An insulating-partition (e) causes the current to travel up and down the cylinder. Gills (*b*1, *c*1) are fitted to increase the radiating surfaces. In alternative arrangements the current flows between annular electrodes at the top and bottom respectively, or between vertical rod electrodes. The apparatus may be used for heating water.

South Wales Echoes.

MESSRS. DOONER AND SON at Mountain Ash have a beautiful picture of the Marathon Race from Windsor to the Stadium, which is proving very popular. A very pretty effect are three floral swings, on which the Misses Dooner do a pleasing turn; they sing a very catchy song with a swinging chorus, which won them great and deserved applause. Mr. Boyce, actor-vocalist, is a very smart turn, and scores a great success. Mr. S. White, of Tunnel Railway fame, has a good programme for the holidays at Pontypridd. With his new Bioscope show Mazoni, the handcuff king, is the chief attraction. Messrs. Wadbrooke have arranged a monster fête at Pontypridd for the August holidays. Some of the newest films will be exhibited for the first time in the town. Mme. Melita, who is an expert dancer, heads the variety programme, and is proving very popular.

Astwood Bank.

ASTWOOD BANK is a large village in Worcestershire, three miles from Redditch, thirteen miles from Evesham, nine miles from Droitwich, five miles from Alcester, and eight miles from Bromsgrove. The chief industry is the making of needles. Population about 1,700. Good place for circuses, menageries, galloping horses, &c. Portable theatres do extra well here during winter months.

AT Astwood Bank we have had Strickland's steam gallopers, park swings, shooting saloons, striker, &c.; Herbert's pony roundabouts, swing-boats, bottle battery, cocoanut sheets, &c. At the Red Lion field, Astwood Bank, we have had Scott's Circus, which gave two first-class performances.

Badsey.

AT Badsey were Mr. T. Scott, of Worcester, with steam gallopers, park swings, shooting saloons, cocoanut sheets, &c.

Honeybourne.

AT Honeybourne were Strickland's galloping horses, park swings, bottle shooter, and other numerous amusements.

Bollington Wakes, near Macclesfield.

HERE for the Wakes were:—E. Holland, electric jumping horses, racing motor-cars, and juvenile swings; Farrer's premier exhibition of animated pictures; Winchester ranges and cokernuts by W. Dobson and J. Jones; stalls by Colclough and Winsper; and a variety of small amusements by Beech, Clought, Hall, Jecks, Humphries, and Groom.

Mansfield Midsummer Fair.

This year was blessed with glorious weather, and the shows, roundabouts, and fairground novelties all did excellent business. The shows were those of Messrs. Arthur Twigdon, Holland and Sons, and John Proctor. The machine list included A. Twigdon's gondolas, Hall and Proctor's motors, Proctor's helter-skelter tower, and Hall's juvenile motors and horses. Shooters, throwing games, and variety stalls by Messrs. Hall, Hazard, and local caterers.

The City of Ripon New Bye-laws.

The city authorities, in order to preserve the people's rights in their ancient pleasure fairs and public holidays, have recently remodelled their old bye-laws. It will be remembered that under the old bye-laws there was no exemption for the fairs. This point of weakness was seized upon by a contankerous citizen to compel the Corporation to stop the music at the fairs.

After consultation with the executive committee of the Showmen's Guild, it was found that the only way out of the difficult situation was to formulate new bye-laws, specifically exempting the days of the fairs from their provisions. This has been done.

By the courtesy of the Town Clerk of Ripon, we are able to give our readers a full copy of the new bye-laws that affect the show business. We believe it is the first time in bye-laws that the days of the pleasure fairs have specifically mentioned.

TOUTING.

"No person shall in any street or public place for the purpose of selling or advertising any article or obtaining custom tout or importune to the annoyance or obstruction of passengers.

"No person shall, in connection with any roundabout, show, exhibition, or performance, placed or held in any street or on any vacant ground adjoining or near to a street, make or cause to be made any loud and continuous noise by means of any organ or other similar instrument to the annoyance of residents or passengers.

"Provided always that the two foregoing bye-laws shall not apply to the fairs or feasts hereinafter mentioned, or the day preceding or following any such fair or feast, namely:

"The fairs or feasts held on:
January, the last Thursday.
May, the 13th and 14th.
June, the first Thursday and the Friday following.
August, the first Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and the Saturday preceding.
October, the first Thursday.
November, the first Thursday and the 23rd day of that month."

"Out on the Deep."

Bostock Jungle Baby Sea-Lions Born at Sea for Earl's Court.—A rare zoological sight may, after to-day (Tuesday, 28th inst.) be seen by the public daily in the great Bostock Jungle at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court. It is nothing less than the nursing by two cow sea-lions of their sleeky sucklings born in mid-ocean during the Transatlantic voyage from the Bostock Jungle in New York to the Empress Hall. When shipped from Coney Island no addition to the passenger list of the crowded liner was anticipated, and it is now a moot point between Mr. Frank C. Bostock and the steamship company whether two extra fares should not be charged. The births took place within five hours of each other, and the "boy" and "girl" have never left their mothers' sides since. The quartette are placidly pleased with their surroundings in the coolness of the big pool of the Jungle, and their manner is almost human.

Bilston Wakes.

The annual fair here is being held on a piece of land two or three minutes' walk from the centre of the town, and is well patronised. Collins's Wonderland, with its imposing front, beautiful organ, and outside novelties, proves a source of attraction to adults and juveniles alike. Inside some fine, steady pictures are shown. At the time of our visit Life in the Far West, An Awkward Situation, and A Comical Faces Contest were the chief. Other shows present are the Egyptian Hall of Mystery, Birche's midget show, the Lurlines (aquatic performers), Prince Perrara (Indian magic and tery, Birch's midget show, the Lurlines (aquatic the machine novelties are Collins's racing cockerels, the twin steam yachts, the Canadian helter-skelter, and G. Ford's, Chaplain's, and Cordwell's miniature horses. There is also a good supply of the usual swings, shooters, and throwing games.

Somersetshire News.

The fête and gala season is now in full swing in and around Bath, and several of the leading West of England showmen are to the fore with a capital array of all the latest electrical and mechanical machines, amongst others being Marshall Hill's Fun City, Heal's gallopers, Symonds' World's Fair, Jennings' steam roundabouts, and Chipperfield's Bioscope.

Roundabout Rides.

For the Cottage Hospital.—Mr. Jacob Studt, whose gorgeous steam motor tracks, galloping horses, bioscope, "helter-skelter," &c., attracted such crowds to the vicinity of Maidenhead Moor last week, very generously offered the entire takings of his motor-track and galloping horses on Friday evening for the Maidenhead Cottage Hospital, notwithstanding that he had been put to the expense of engaging the Town Band for the week owing to an objection to the playing of his fine organ. Mr. Studt expressed a wish not to handle any of the takings, and asked the hospital authorities to kindly attend and "run the shows." The following were most courteously received by Mr. Studt:—Messrs. H. J. Mount, J.P., T. G. Wyatt, J. H. Manlove, and H. Parsons (Cookham Dean), and Nurse Tompsett, from the hospital. These put in a lot of time at the show, and took the money from those who patronised the motor-track and galloping horses. The financial result was most gratifying, the total amount taken and given to the hospital being £23 11s. 10s. The amateur "showmen" and the "show-lady" spent a most interesting time, and seemed to enjoy their novel occupation. The committee of the hospital are grateful to Mr. Studt for his generosity, and Colonel Muir (the acting hon. sec.) has sent him a letter of thanks on behalf of the hospital authorities.

Greenock.

Lord John Sanger's Circus, which is on tour in this district, visited here on Wednesday of last week, and gave two performances to delighted audiences. One of the most interesting items of the programme was that given by the troupe of performing elephants; La Belle Fondants, in their musical wire act, were greatly appreciated; Zampo and Clown, the elastic bounders, provided an amusing turn; the Airlees gave a sensational trapeze act; the Austins appeared with success in a double jockey act; the Maro troupe of acrobatic equestrians cleverly executed a number of daring feats; and Cyclo performed the astounding feat of supporting and balancing two ponies playing sea-saw, and also allowing a motor-car to run over his body.

During last week there has been a large concourse of showpeople at Kidwelly. In the Fairfield Mr. H. Steel Parry's Bioscope did exceedingly good business, and could have well stayed another week. He was accompanied by Mr. Daniel Evans' amusements. In the Hillfield (the old original Fair field of the seventies) Messrs. Thos. Hill and Sons had a large crowd of followers, including the South Wales Boxing Saloon, &c. Times are very good in this district just now.

Penzance Corporation and the Showmen.

The Cornishman of July 23 has the following interesting note:—"With commendable prudence the communication to Penzance Town Council from the Showmen's Guild was referred to the Market Committee without being read in open Council. It is a matter which requires tactful handling, but given tact there is every reason to hope and expect that all differences between the Council and the fair people will easily be adjusted. Councillor Hill, alluding to a show proprietor's advertisement complaining that no answer had been received to certain proposals, pointed out that no answer could be sent, seeing that this was the first meeting of the Council since the communication had been received. True, but there is no law to prevent an extra meeting being held, or to prevent a committee, or the Mayor, from sending some sort of reply. If a matter is urgent enough to require immediate action there is usually a way out of little ceremonial difficulties; but apparently the showmen's letter was not considered of an urgent nature. The Mayor assured the Council that some of the statements in the advertisement are incorrect."

Knottingley Feast.

This interesting Yorkshire town kept its feast last week, and had for its entertainers Messrs. Tuby and Sons, with their superb coliseum of varieties and up-to-date animated pictures; Vicar's portable Theatre Royal; Hobson's cinematograph; Tuby and Son's motor-cars and galloping horses; Fisher's steam swings; Bronnan and Tuby's shooters; and varieties and stalls by Messrs. Doubtfire, Calver, Walker, Shaw, Fisher, Walser, and others.

Dewsbury Feast.

The best concerns on the Yorkshire round were at this great Yorkshire fair. The mere recital of their names will at once show its importance and its popularity with showpeople and the show-loving public. The great cinematograph shows were those of Howden and Sons, E. Farrar, and Farrar and Tyler; Lewis, the American snake king, exhibited his coterie of pythons and trained serpents; White's miniature animal jungle, J. Westray's small menagerie, E. Ball's midget marvels, Holdsworth's fine art show, and Mrs. Rhodes' novelty booth completed the array of exhibitions. Equally important and imposing were the machine novelties at the feast. These were J. W. Waddington's, Marshall's, Aspland's, Williams's, Holdsworth and Pedley's, P. Collins's, J. Corrigan's, Redfearn's, Gavan's, D. Johnson's, Proctor, Clarke, and Richards's motors, gallopers, "Porker's" Cake-walk machine, tunnel railway, helter-skelter towers, steam and manual swings, juvenile and gem horses, &c.

The other attractions of the fair were shooters, throwing games, varieties, and stalls by Messrs. Seed, Holdsworth, Richards, Jameson, Watson, Clarke, Rhodes, Blake, Vanner, Steward, Turner, and many others.

Westward Ho!

News from the west of Kingsbridge Fair is to the effect that it is being supported by Messrs. W. C. and S. Hancock, with the well-known aggregation of fairground novelties, and Messrs. Haywood, with juvenile motor-cars, and Harker, with shooting range, &c.

Jones's variety show and cinematograph theatre was the principal attraction at St. Austell last week.

News from Scotland.

At Johnstone for the fair week the following entertainers were present:—McIndoe and Wingate, with cinematograph theatres; John Wilmot, with switchback, motor track, and galloping horses; Walter Wilmot, with helter-skelter; Steavenson, with big boats and swings; J. Wingate, with bicycle circus; Wright and Sons, Sheeran, Smith, Moore, and others with shooters, variety frames, and stalls.

Guild Subscriptions, 1908:—Mr. Fisher, 7s. 6d.; Mr. Frank Wood, 5s.; Mr. W. H. Doubtfire, 5s.; Mr. W. H. Jennings, jun., 5s.; Mr. Campbell (Greenock), 1s.

Hollinwood Wakes.

Owing to the clash of dates Hollinwood this year coincided with Longsight. This prevented a number of the concerns taking both places—the usual thing being for Longsight to follow Hollinwood. At Hollinwood were the shows of Kemp and Clarke, the machines of Whiting, Hurst, Mitchells, Harrison, and others, and stalls and throwing games in abundance by a crowd of enterprising caterers.

Guild Meeting at Longsight.

One of the best-attended meetings ever held at Longsight took place on Sunday last in the Parish Room near the wakes ground. After the Guild service, at which the Rev. F. Norburn read the lesson and the Guild Chaplain preached, the business meeting began, and was attended, among others, by T. Hurst (Hon. Secretary), Robert Dixon, S. Mercer, R. Ingham, P. R. Collins, and H. Hibbert. The Rev. T. Horne, in a short address, explained the provisions of the Movable Dwellings Bill, and the negotiations he had carried on with the promoters for the possible amendment of the measure. Messrs. Hurst, Dixon, Hibbert, and P. R. Collins made extremely valuable and practical suggestions, and it was resolved that a general meeting of the Guild committee be held prior to the reassembling of Parliament for the Autumn Session, when the Movable Dwellings Bill will come on again for discussion.

Manchester's New Bye-Laws.

The Rev. T. Horne and Mr. T. Hurst paid a visit to the Town Clerk's offices at Manchester Town Hall on Monday last, July 27, and carefully considered the new bye-laws. The nature of the bye-laws is fully indicated in the following official notice:—

"CITY OF MANCHESTER.
"BYE-LAWS WITH RESPECT TO TENTS VANS, SHEDS, AND SIMILAR STRUCTURES USED FOR HUMAN HABITATION.

"Notice is hereby given that the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of the City of Manchester acting by the Council of the said City, did on the first day of July, 1908, make and adopt certain bye-laws with respect to Tents, Vans, Sheds, and similar structures used for human habitation under and by virtue of the powers contained in Section 9 of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885.

"And Notice is further hereby given that it is the intention of the said Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens, at the expiration of one calendar month from and after the date of the first publication of this notice, to apply to the Local Government Board in pursuance of Section 184 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for confirmation of the said bye-laws.

"And Notice is hereby further given that for one calendar month at least from and after the date of the first publication of this notice, and before such application to the Local Government Board, a copy of the said bye-laws will be kept at the office of the Town Clerk, Town Hall, Manchester (being the office of the said Council), and will be open during office hours thereat to the inspection of the ratepayers of the said City, being the district to which such bye-laws relate, without fee or reward.

"Dated this 15th day of July, 1908.
"WM. HENRY TALBOT, Town Clerk."

After the most careful reading and examination of the new bye-laws the officials of the Guild found nothing to which exception could reasonably be taken. In fact, for years past showmen have strictly complied with the rules of health and sanitation embodied in these bye-laws.

We understand that the Corporation have been driven to secure the powers of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885, in order to deal with certain classes in the suburbs of the city who wanted to live in sheds and in old tramcar bodies and railway carriages fixed up in garden allotments or on waste land.

Showmen have readily complied with every request and suggestion of the health and the sanitary officers of the Corporation. Not so these squatters on the land. These people have to be taught lessons of health and sanitation, and the power of the law must be brought to bear upon them.

We should like to point out in this relation how great are the powers that corporations already possess under the Public Health Acts, the Notification of Infectious Diseases Act, and the Housing of the Working Classes Act. Every security for public health and sanitation is given by these laws. The statute book is already full of the most effective safeguards of public health. All of these apply to showmen in their movable dwellings. It is this fact that makes showpeople indignant at the class legislation of such proposals as the Movable Dwellings Bill, and the crude and ignorant fanaticism of would-be reformers who class the healthy homes of the showman with the "rags and sticks of a gipsy tent."

The Rev. T. Horne and Mr. Hurst, in acknowledging the courtesy of the Town Clerk in affording them full facilities to examine the new bye-laws, said that, speaking for the showmen of Great Britain, they found nothing in the proposed bye-laws that they objected to, or that showmen had not at all times willingly complied with.

Harry Banford's Accident.

TO THE EDITOR SHOWMAN WORLD.

Sir,—Numbers doubtless of the readers of the Showman's World would be grieved to read of the accident to the above deservedly popular artist, although relieved to read that he was progressing. Many, perhaps, will be interested to know that in a letter I have received from him he says he is getting on, although it may be a few weeks before he is able to resume business; and that it has very greatly consoled and comforted him to receive such a number of visits and kind letters from friends and well-wishers. I may add that it is a comfort he richly deserves, for a more genial, hard-working, and painstaking entertainer could not be found, nor a warmer-hearted one. He says he hopes to be with us at St. Giles' Fair. I hope so, too, for he is one of the institutions of our grand old fair, and he has won his way to the hearts of crowds of visitors and Oxford people, and would be missed almost as much as the beautiful show he accompanies, or its highly-esteemed and respected proprietor, who, with Mrs. Ball, has done, and continues to do, all in his kind power for the sufferer. I have the honour to remain, sir, very faithfully yours,

T. S. WHITING.
